Our Assistant just returned from the third quarterly round of his district, is full of hopeful anticipation. The outlook for the Gilbert Haven School of Theology subscription was never more promising. On his subscription book, Bro. Albert has already secured pledges amounting to $144.50, distributed as follows: at Opelousas $6.75, St. Martinsville $15.50, Washington $48.75 and at New Iberia $73.50. These amounts will be payable at the fourth quarterly conference. Other charges on the district that have not had the chance to subscribe in advance will have equal chance in paying in the cash on the fourth round. Let all friends of education get ready to inscribe their names upon these subscription books, they form together, a good roll of honor. The whole conference has a hand in this work. Let the laity and ministry faithfully do their whole duty, and last year's grandest showings will be excelled. Let all work as never before; for daylight is about to break upon New Orleans University. Dr. Hartzell, in a recent letter to our Assistant says: "I have the plan for a splendid building for New Orleans, and it must be built next year."

Thank the Lord for Methodist preachers! The report of the committee on Sabbath observance at the Cincinnati Conference, was a grand "lifting up of the standard" against the spirit of Sabbath desecration that is so demoralizing society and exerting its baneful influence in the church. We think the acme of defiance to the Fourth Commandment has been reached in this country. The reaction has begun; let Methodism not fail to be in the van in this reform.—Western.

Editorial Correspondence.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

"Reforms," it is often said, "do not go backward." God's work in His church and in the world is in the highest sense a reform—it can not go backward. There may be times when it seems to be retreating, but it is only in appearance. The unseen hand of God is pushing on, and He is separating His servants for service and putting them in place, and gathering in his forces for a mighty onward movement. There are certain things behind that we need to forget, and earnestly lay hold of the things before us. The church at Terrebonne is going forward; it is forgetting the bitterness that is behind, and reaching on, gathering up forces led by the hand that makes no mistakes, and there can be no doubt as to its future. The pastorate of Bro. Carr has thus far been a success. New and substantial brick pillars have been placed under the church, and now the trustees have cash in hand to pay for the ceiling and we suppose that ere this is read the work will be complete. At the quarterly conference the reports were all in order. The class collections have increased more than one hundred per cent, during the past two years; there has been a large increase in public collections; at the same time there has been a blessed revival of religion by which the church has been strengthened and encouraged. Sabbath morning we talked to an attentive congregation. Our visit at Terrebonne was pleasant. We had a good home with Bro. Granville Wooten. We know that many church members are worldly and that some of the ministers are timid, but nothing is to be gained by an undue criticism of either class. It may be true that there is a crying need for a little more moral hickory, both in the private and public life of our people. There are too many conversions of the lower sort; conversions that are of men and to men. We want less of these and more and more of the higher kind. We need the regeneration of the Holy Ghost, so there takes possession of us a stubborn, uncompromising Christian spirit. May God give us a mighty increase of men in the pulpits, and of men and women in the pews who shall be free from that willowy, loose-jointed spirit found in so many of our churches. We need the stubbornness of a genuine faith.

No one acquainted with the members of the M. E. Church in Morgan City can for a moment question their loyalty to the church or their devotion to Christ. Some churches are waiting for others to come and help them, but this church of about thirty members is wonderfully building itself, and shaming some larger ones in the amount of money raised. The old seats so hard to sit upon have been removed, new and comfortable ones take their place; and now they propose to put an addition of fifteen feet on the length of the church and erect a bell tower. The lumber is on the ground for the same and the frame nearly ready to be put up. The amount of money raised by this church thus far this year amounts to over twelve dollars per member. The reports at the quarterly conference were well prepared.

What is most needed in the Methodist churches at Houma, Terrebonne and Morgan City is a revival of religion. Before each of these churches is the sad and startling fact that the masses are unsaved. Somehow they are not reached. It is easy to say they ought to be saved, and that the church must go after them. But who will go? Think of a Methodist preacher, backed with from two to six local preachers, four or five exhorters, from three to ten class leaders, and from thirty to one hundred members, preaching, exhorting, praying and singing three full months and not a single sinner saved. This ought not so to be. Believe it or not there is an awful responsibility resting upon pastors and churches, and we think that there needs to be [illegible] perfect consecration, and more [illegible] of aim. It would not be out of place for the minister to talk [illegible] with and to himself. [illegible] "What is the end of [illegible] shall I arrange [illegible] shall I say, and [illegible] How can I present this truth so as to help make the great battle now going on between truth and error, holiness and sin, a great victory for the Lord Jesus?" As it relates to the preacher, the fire must be shut up in his bones; his heart must burn to give utterance. Then his words will be tremulous with life, his very soul will go out with them, and they will become as the hammer breaking the heart of stone. C.

On account of sickness in my family I failed to attend the third quarterly conference on my district [illegible]. The pastors [illegible] assisted by my [illegible] F. Marshall, of [illegible] Church, New Orleans, and Rev. S. E. H. Morant, of Alexandria. From these brethren I learned that the churches above were all doing well, and showed many signs of future promise. Leaving New Orleans Friday, Aug. 31st, at 7:25 a. m., aboard the Morgan Louisiana & Texas R. R. cars, and sweeping through the country at the rate of 25 or 30 miles per hour, at a little after 3 o'clock we were in Washington, in the parish of St. Landry. In this parish, which is almost half as large as the State of Connecticut, and nearly twice as large as Rhode Island, we have only three permanent established [illegible] with two additional ones in process of building up, while in Rhode Island we have fifty or more churches. Rhode Island, with only half [illegible] territorial area as the parish of St. Landry, has a population of about 300,000, while the parish of St. Landry with a soil far superior to anything to be found in Rhode Island or anywhere in New England, has only 40,000 inhabitants. Hence there remains any amount of elbow-room for many more of our churches, as well as for increasing population in this state [illegible]. In Washington we have a good work. The quarterly reports showed marked improvements. Few charges in the conference can exhibit a better spiritual and financial condition. Here we [illegible] subscribers for the [illegible]. Quarterly meeting [illegible] were collected [illegible] paid to the [illegible] [illegible] schools [illegible] this charge are [illegible] promising. terly visit reveals slow but steady and permanent growth. During this fall it is expected that a lot of ground will be secured upon which we hope to be able to start building this winter or early next spring. At Waxia Bro. T. Larkin is holding the fort and dispatching and leading skirmishing detachments that are extending our lines beyond. Our church is the strongest in that section. Bro. Larkin takes great interest in the Sunday-school, and teaches a day school in addition to his pastoral work. Some of our brethren might profit by his example. Bro. Strode, on Washington circuit, has not made any particular progress in the development of his work this quarter, but is holding his own, with promises for future expansion. In these five appointments we have a membership of about 400, with an additional following of about a thousand or more. Every section of the parish is now open to the church. May the Lord give us the men and means to occupy it. A.

PERSONAL

—Mr. Gladstone has visited Denmark and dined with the royal family.

—The friends of the late Rev. Dr. Lovick Pierce have just placed over his grave, at Columbia, Ga., a beautiful monument.

—Bishop Harris has changed the appointment of W. H. Thompson, of the Michigan conference, from Charlotte to Central church, Lansing.

—On account of ill health Rev. J. L. Park has been compelled to give up the presiding eldership of Memphis district, Central Tennessee Conference.

—Minor M. Elmore, city editor and one of the proprietors of the Daily States, died last week of malarial fever. He was a young man, highly esteemed, and a journalist of fair debility.

—Junius Brutus Booth, son of the famous actor, and brother of Edwin Booth, and John Wilkes Booth, died at Manchester, N. H. on the night of Sept. 17th. He was born in Charleston in 1821.

—A mass meeting at Wesleyan Hall, elected the following delegates to the Louisville convention. P. B. S. Pinchback, A. J. Dumont, J. A. Gla, J. M. Vance, L. D. Herbert, W. S. Wilson, Parker Loving, F. Wright.

—Rev. Charles H. Lawton, pastor of the Methodist Church at Santa Paula, California, died at that place, September 5th. He was transferred from the Cincinnati to the Southern California Conference three years ago.

—We were happy to see Dr. Dean, President of New Orleans University, in our office again. He reached the city last Sabbath (having been delayed at Cincinnati), [illegible] in the evening, with [illegible] fully his usual vigor, at First St. Church. From the latter part we judge that he is in condition for immediate and energetic work. Let the rooms of the University be crowded next Monday (Oct. 1st). His daughter, Miss Mary, comes with him to take charge of the Music Department.

—The many friends of Rev. Dr. H. R. Revels, will be pained to learn that in consequence of his failing health, and that of his family, he has had to resign the Presidency of Alcorn University at Rodney Miss. This he says he ought to have done two years ago. In a personal note to our Assistant he says: "I shall move my family to Holy Springs, Miss., just as soon as my wife's health will allow." It is not age that affects the doctor, but overwork in the educational interest of our people. After a season of rest and recreation, we hope for the doctor perfect restoration to his accustomed health and vigor.

—Mr. Henry Villard, instrumental in building the Northern Pacific Railroad, was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1835. His father sat upon the supreme bench of that kingdom, and educated his son at the university. When Mr. Villard came to this country, he studied law at Belleville, Ill., but soon adopt journalism as a profession. His first conspicious engagement was to write up the Lincoln and Douglas controversy. He became prominent as a war correspondent. His wife is a daughter of the late William Lloyd Garrison. Mr. Villard became connected with railway matters in 1874, as a representative of German bondholders of railway securities.

—The Rev. Calvin Pickett, of the Tennessee Conference, is now in the vicinity of New York city, vigorously pushing his work as President of the Centennial Endowment Fund of the Central Tennessee College, and also as the Financial Agent of Seay's Chapel (formerly known as St. Mary's Church) in Nashville. This new church is a neat brick edifice, and will be the handsomest house of worship owned by our brethren of color in Nashville. It received its new name, by the unanimous vote of the trustees, in honor of the Rev. John Seay, a venerable member of the Tennessee Conference, who has given $100 to the building fund. Brother Seay is now in his 9th year. He was an itinerant in the days of Bishop Asbury, and has been an active minister almost ever since. At the division of the Church in 1844 he fell within the bounds of the Church South, but at the close of the war hastened to reunite with the mother Church of American Methodism. He has been a consistent and generous friend of the colored race, and has since the war contributed about $10,000 to the temporal relief of the freedmen, and to the various enterprises of the Methodist Episcopal Church for their spiritual and educational benefit.—N. Y. Advocate.

Rev. Elijah Henderson: "Bellaire Circuit Camp meeting of the Second M. E. Church, Lexington Conference, commenced August 12th, and continued over three Sabbaths, with great success. Rev. Joseph Courtney, presiding elder of the Ohio District, preached Sunday, August 19th. I feel to thank the good Lord for so wonderfully blessing us, and for the kind and brotherly manner of Rev. J. M. Monroe, of the Christian Church; Rev. Mr. Porple, of the First Church; and Rev. Mr. Taylor, pastor of the South Bellaire Methodist Church, who preached and labored with us. Our success financially was good, as figures will show, a total of $353,36 receipts, expenditure $140.15, balance realized $213.22, to apply on our church indebtedness.

A group of papers descriptive of scenes from several novelists, including Hawthorne, George Eliot, and George W. Cable, will appear in The Century for 1884. Harry Fenn, Alfred Parsons, and Joseph Pennell will furnish illustrations.

The October Number of Harper's Magazine is remarkable for the number and excellence of its illustrations. The frontispiece is a masterly engraving from Gilbert Stuart's portrait of Washington. This illustrates the opening article "Last Days of Washington's Army at Newburgh," by J. T. Headley. The article contains a fine engraving from Gilbert Stuart's portrait of Martha Washington. The second part of F. D. Millet's "Dalecarlia" is full of interest, with characteristic illustrations. Mrs. Z. B. Gustafson contributes a paper on Nicaise de Keyser, of Antwerp—the greatest of living Dutch painters. Mrs. Rose Hawthorne Lathrop's novelette, "Prisoners!" is concluded. Horse Farming in Kentucky, with especial reference to the trotting-horse, is by William Henry Bishop. Colonel Higginson continues his American History Series, with a chapter on the Revolution, entitled "The Dawning of Independence." Tighe Hopkins contributes a romantic story, "The Wood-Nymph." Phil Robinson, under the title of "Saunterings in Utah," describes some wonderful natural curiosities in the neighborhood of Salt Lake. The Editorial Departments are full of timely and entertaining matter. The publishers announce the conclusion of "A Castle in Spain" and the beginning, shortly of a new novel of startling interest, by William Black, entitled "Judith Shakespeare."

The high character of the Popular Science Monthly is vigorously sustained by its October issue. Of its fifteen articles there is none which will not repay careful reading, and few which something new and valuable can not be learned. The present state of thought in regard to the nature of life is well reflected by Paul R. Shipman, on "Matter Living and Not-Living." Dr. Bayard takes a hand in the conflicts of the medical schools, to show that "Homœopathy" is a science. Dr. Abraham Jacobi has an elaborate article on "The Historical Development of Modern Nursing." "Clothing and the Atmosphere," by Radau; "The Chemistry of Cookery," by Professor Williams; and "The Alcohol-Habit," by Dr. Oswald, in his series on "The Remedies of Nature," are of practical worth. Those of more purely scientific interest are the "Cyclones and Tornadoes," "The Colors of Flowers," "Vegetating Animals," "How the Earth was Peopled," "The Liver-Fluke in Sheep," "The Savings of Science," etc. There are a portrait and biographical sketch of the celebrated hygienist of Munich, Dr. Max von Pettenkofer, and criticism and miscellaneous information in the editotial departments. The October Monthly is a kind of scientific book that will be permanently valuable, and this is wherein it differs from most of the other magazines. New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

The Wheelman for October has "A Song of the Wheel," and an abundance of miscellany with illustrations. Terms $2 per year.

S. S. PARKER, Wellington, O., says: "While crossing Lake Erie, I gave it to some passengers who were seasick, and it gave immediate relief."

A Curious Problem.

One of our Western friends thinks it would be a curious problem for a woman to find out from mankind what is really expected of her. Man adores helplessness, and complains that it ruins him. He talks about economy, and raves over spendthrifts. He decries frivolity and runs away from brains. He pines after his grandmother, who used to make good pies, and falls in love with white hands that can't. He moans over weakness, and ridicules strength. He condemns fashion theoretically, and goes for it practically. He longs for sensible women, and passes them by on the other side. He worships saints, but is careful to send them all to convents. He despises pink and white women, and marries them if he can. He abuses silks and laces, and takes them into his heart. He glorifies spirit and independence, but adores the little vines instead of the oaks. What would the critical lords have, if they could have it all their own way?—Christian at Work.

A strong and sensible writer says a good, sharp thing, and a true one, too, for boys who use tobacco: "It has utterly spoiled and utterly ruined thousands of boys. It tends to the softening and weakening of the bones, and it greatly injures the brain, the spinal marrow, and the nervous fluid. A boy who smokes early and frequently, or in any way uses large quantities of tobacco, is never known to make a man of much energy, and generally lacks muscular and physical, as well as mental power. We would particularly warn boys who want to be anybody in the world, to shun tobacco as a most baneful poison."

[illegible] Pratt, of Connecticut, says: "I do not believe that a nation controlled in its government by rum-sellers and rum drinkers can long exist as a republic, and to that condition this country is fast approaching. Our political conventions, our national, State and local elections are largely controlled by the organized forces of liquor dealers and liquor drinkers. I know this to be an unwelcomed truth, nevertheless, and we may as well face it first as last."

Several years ago a Maryland farmer and his wife granted the [illegible] of a traveling stranger and gave him a [illegible]. He told a story that interested them, and they allowed him to remain as their guest for several months. At last a cable message, which he had long said would come, was delivered, and he departed for Europe. He has lately sent his hostess and her husband a draft for $10,000.

The Wesleyans are doing a noble work all over the West Indies, and some of them are eloquent preachers, having congregations averaging 1,200. The churches are in most cases large and commodious, having good parsonages, well furnished, and the ministers well paid.

How Shall I Pray?

Father, how can I thus be bold to pray
That Thou shalt grant me that, or spare me this?
How should my ignorance not go astray,
How should my foolish lips not speak amiss
And ask for woe when fain they would ask bliss?

How shall I dare to prompt Thee, the All-wise,
To show me kindness?—Thou art ever kind;
What is my feeble craving in Thine eyes
Which view the centuries vast, before, behind,
And sweep unnumbered worlds like viewless wind?

Thy goodness ordereth what thing shall be,
Thy wisdom knoweth even my inmost want;
Why should I raise a needless prayer to thee,
Or importune Omnipotence to grant
My wishes, dim, short-sighted, ignorant?

And yet I come—for Thou hast bidden and said,
But not to weary Thee, or specify
A wish, but rather with this prayer instead:
"O Lord, Thou knowest; give it or deny;
Fill up the cup of joy, or pass me by."

Just as Thou wilt is just what I would will;
Give me but this, the heart to be content,
And if my wish is thwarted, to lie still,
Waiting till puzzle and till pain are spent,
And the sweet thing made plain which the Lord meant.

According to experts, there is something beyond calculation in the speed of steamers. Two boats may be built simultaneously from the same model, with every effort to make them precise duplicates as to shape and machinery; and yet one will prove faster than the other. Why this no one can tell. The Mary Powell has for the last fifteen years been the swiftest on the Hudson river. During all that time she has never been beaten. Time and again an exact counterpart has been built, with everything copied as the best mechanics and facilities could do it, but none of these has turned out as the original. Experience has been the same with yachtsmen. They order copies of the swiftest craft, or combine the supposed good points of several, and nine times out of ten are disappointed in the result.—Boston Journal.

The London Truth says: "Can we not take example by the United States? That country wisely never interferes except when its own interests are directly menaced. And what is the result? It does not squander money on a huge army, its three per cent. stock is quoted at a higher price than our consols, its artisans are laying by money, its agricultural population acquires homesteads, and the great republic is prospering beyond all other countries."

Methodists and Baptists are given to talking about their "little sister"—the Protestant Episcopal Church. Well she is little in one sense, but not as small in another as some others that we wot of. Episcopalians pay for Foriegn Missions 50 cents apiece; Southern Methodists, 17 cents; Southern Baptists, 5 cents.—S. C. Advocate.

"It can be worked out only on the basis of the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount," said President Haygood recently of the freedman question. So is it true of the temperance issue.

The colored clergymen of the Protestant Episcopal Church have formed an organization among themselves and will hold a separate annual congress for discussion of their work.

It Will Cost You Nothing.

To get an honest medical opinion in your case, if you suffering from any chronic disease, as Consumption, Neuralgia, Catarrh, Rheumatism, etc., from Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 Girard street, Philadelphia, who are making wonderful cures with a new treatment for chronic diseases. Write to them and give a clear statement of your case. They will answer promptly as to your chances of relief under their new Vitalizing Treatment. It will cost you nothing, as no charge is made for consultation. If, however, you do not wish to consult them at present, drop a postal card asking for their pamphlet, in which you will get a history of the discovery, nature and action of their new remedy, and a large record of cases treated successfully. Among these cases you may find some exactly resembling your own.

The remains of Admiral Pierre were interred at Marseilles, the funeral oration being delivered by Admiral Krantz.

The Methodist Episcopal Churches of Liberty and Smithfield streets, this city, were favored last Sunday with a visit from Mrs. Baldwin, so long one of our missionaries in China. She spoke in the interests of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society. Her addresses were intelligent, exceedingly interesting and full of profit. After years of acquaintance with and hard labor among the Chinese, her estimate of them is very different from that of the sand-lotters in and out of Congress. Her account of the success of missionary labor in that mighty empire was full of encouragement, and her proof of the advantages and necessity of the work now doing by the women of the Church, was such as to convince every one of its value who might be troubled with scepticism upon the subject. We wish every Christian woman could obtain access to the facts, for it seems as if nothing would prevent co-operation in this great enterprise, one of the sublimest of the century.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Why be discouraged? All good men had to wait for what might truly be called success. There was Moffat in Africa. Five years he labored at Kuruman, preaching the gospel through an interpreter. There were no signs of conversion. Five more years he lived and toiled among the natives, having learned their dialects. Still no followers. Then his patience began to be rewarded. At last there were tears for his preaching, then repentance, and numbers made profession of faith. It was that the missionary had waited long for, and with thankful heart he set himself to the gigantic task of translating for them the Bible. This finally completed, he waited for death with the same old fortitude. And now that God has taken him home, we shall not forget his words spoken in old age: "Had he a thousand lives he would give them all again in the same good and holy cause."—Chicago Standard.

A Young Man's Case.

MR. S. S. HODGES, Jr., of No. 147 Park street, Lewiston, Me., relates the following personal narrative, May 14th, 1883: "About fifteen months since I had a severe attack of typhoid fever, was very lame, and confined to my bed for eleven weeks, and when the fever left me I was in a very debilitated condition. My back and loins seemed to have no strength, and I had no vitality or appetite. I tried various kinds of medicine recommended by my friends, but found they did not improve my condition. I was induced to try Hunt's Remedy, which has been used with such great success here in Lewiston that it has a very enviable reputation of being a most reliable medicine. I purchased one bottle, and can date my improved health from the time I commenced using it, and my progress continued very rapidly; I gained in strength, and experienced less pain in my back, my appetite increased, and after using three bottles my pains were all gone, and my health entirely restored, and I can most heartily recommend Hunt's Remedy to any who may need a true remedy for debility, kidney or urinary troubles."

A Good Mechanic.

MR. L. J. JONES, of No. 10 Charles Street, Portland, Me., writes us these convincing facts, May 11th. 1883: "I have for several years been troubled with liver complaint and indigestion, and have suffered at times terrible distress, and have tried many different cures, so called, that have been recommended from time to time. I one day noticed in one of our papers the testimonial of a person that had used Hunt's Remedy and been cured of diseases similar to mine. I purchased a bottle of one of our drug stores in Portland, and before I had used the first bottle found that I was improving beyond my expectation; have used in all six bottles, and have no trouble from indigestion no distress or pain in my back as I formerly had; and since I have been cured my wife has used it for kidney trouble, and it has cured her. We can both say that Hunt's Remedy is a blessing to any one who is troubled with kidney or liver diseases, or indigestion. We gladly recommend it to our friends or to any sufferers from liver or kidney diseases, and you can use this letter as you may choose for the best interest of suffering humanity."

DEAR EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my brother. He belonged to Ed. Cook, in Boydsville, Tennessee, and was taken by him to Texas, and sold. His name was Roland. I belonged to Dr. McConnell, who married Cook's sister Louisa. Our father was George, and belonged to Elijah Bennett. Mother was Sarah, and belonged to Widow Cook, near Boydsville. There was eleven of us in family. Alfred, Henderson, Harriet, Huldy, Riley, Anthony, Betsey, Jordan, Violet. Address me at Baton Rouge, La.

DAVID COOK.

MR. EDITOR—I arrived Sept. 4, when I found all of my kin people but my two sisters. I had not seen any of my people in 14 years. I have enjoyed myself and preached eight times. Seventy-five souls have professed faith and joined the church in Holmes county since I have been here. I will leave for my home in Texas Sept. 17. I am a brother of Rev. Mark Shepard, of Durant, Miss. I wish to find my sisters, Emily and Emma. My oldest sister was sold to a Mr. Kinnow, at Crystal Springs, when a small girl, and his mother named her Betty because she had a daughter named Emily. She carried her to Jackson, and I have not heard of her since. Brothers were Mark and Henry, and mother was Jane, and we were sold to Tom Allen. My other sistor left her Jan. 16, 1863, and married Jack Baishi, in Holmes county, Miss. He was killed, and she married Carter Weaver. Address me at Athens, Texas, or Mark Shephard, Durant, Miss. B. J. HOUSTON.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Plantation Melodies —AND— REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.

Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, eyes varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy. "These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

DR. JOHN BULL'S Smith's Tonic Syrup FOR THE CURE OF FEVER and AGUE Or CHILLS and FEVER. AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.
The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.
The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.
These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:
1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.
BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.
The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.
WE DON'T SELL TO PEDDLERS. Dealers Supplied Wholesale at Liberal Discount.
ALL EYES SUITED. Persons residing at a distance who may wish to procure these Spectacles can send for a circular containing description, prices, etc., and directions for insuring a perfect fit, and have them sent by mail, by addressing

On that occasion the chapel was filled from pulpit to door with church and society members, friends and fellow-citizens of Bro. Willis, who held him in the highest esteem. The hymn, "And Must I be to Judgment Brought," was sweetly chanted by the church choir, after which Presiding Elder P. Landry gave a sketch of the life and character of the deceased. The Sun.

NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read THE SUN during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.
We are credibly informed that people read, and like THE SUN for the following reasons, among others:
Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.
Because people have learned that its remarks concerning persons and affairs [illegible] a practice of telling them the exact truth [illegible] of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. The Sun has absolutely no purposes to serve save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.
Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that THE SUN is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.
Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robesonism and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, THE SUN stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interests of the people against the ambition of bosses, encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.
All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that THE SUN is the best religious newspaper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party, and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worthy of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of THE SUN discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to his individual liking.
If you already know THE SUN, you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. If you do not already know THE SUN, you will find it to be a mirror of all human activity, a storehouse of the choicest products of common sense and imagination, a mainstay for the cause of honest government, a sentinel for genuine Jeffersonian Democracy, a scourge for wickedness of every species, and an uncommonly good investment for the coming year.

Editorial Notes.

The temperance men of Louisiana should move as one body in their assaults upon the liquor traffic. It is advisable to form societies and at once communicate and co-operate with the State Temperance Alliance on the basis of equal membership and representation.

The New York Independent, commenting upon an article from Rev. Mr. Hunnicutt in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, justly says: "A more thorough going appeal for the continuance of barbarism in the South could not have come from the mind of a heathen chief in central Africa." Poor Hunnicutt!

Roman Catholicism is not dying out in Louisiana. The Morning Star of the 25th inst says: "There are in this State not far from two hundred priests engaged in clerical labours of every character." We have been told by one of the leading Protestant clergymen of this city, that there were no pastors in New Orleans more faithful in their pastoral work than these priests. They know their people.

The proposed teachers' institutes, to be held under the direction of State Superintendent Fay, should be largely attended by all now engaged in teaching or who expect to teach, either in the public schools or elsewhere. We realize that Superintendent Fay is limited in the scope of his duties, but believe that he is actuated by the spirit of a professional educator in the desire for promote the cause of public education. Let all his efforts in that direction be duly seconded and appreciated.

It arouses a keen feeling of national disgrace to know that the courts and juries of the capital city are so surrounded by corruption and tainted by suspicion that citizens are compelled to seek legal justice elsewhere. A vigorous pursuit of the civil service reform policy will drain Washington of much of its [illegible] element and deprive [illegible] of their lucrative [illegible]. The government should be allowed to remove the remaining State House trials to some other city where juries may be drawn of a more wholesome kind.

The prompt action of Postmaster General Gresham in the Louisiana Lottery matter is heartily approved all over the country. The company having obtained an injunction from [illegible] court to restrain Postmaster [illegible] of New Orleans from withholding its money orders and registered letters, Gen. Gresham directed that Mr. Merchant confer with the U. S. District Attorney and take steps for the removal of the case to the Federal Court, where we hope officials will proceed with due expedition and obtain an early decision.

Senator Blair, of New Hampshire, in a recent lecture before the American Temperance Union in New York City, took strong grounds in favor of national prohibition. He urged that legislation was the only feasible solution of the liquor problem. Unless liquors were forbidden by law little could be done. Federal legislation was needed. The United States Government had control of all commerce—interstate and foreign. There was the great power. We must stop the movement of whiskey, keep it from crossing State lines. This would help in the solution of the temperance problem.

We bow reverently in honor of the noble man whose story is here told: Akron, Ohio, Sept. 24—John Bull, the engineer of the Thunderbolt passenger train on the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio Railroad, died to-day from the injuries received in the recent collision with a freight train at Tallmadge. He could have saved himself by jumping, but he thought of the passengers, reversed his engine and set the air-brakes. Having checked the train, he started the engine ahead under full steam. It broke loose from the cars and received the shock of the collision. The passengers were unhurt. He lived at Galion, and was the oldest engineer on the road.

Associate Justice Field, of the U. S. Supreme Court, has rendered a decision at San Francisco, in respect to the rights claimed by Chinese born in Hong Kong to land in the United States. The object of the law was to exclude Chinese laborers from coming from any part of the world. The fact of being born in Hong Kong does not constitute a Chinaman a British subject. The restriction act would be defeated by any other construction; it declares that any Chinese person found unlawfully within the United States shall be removed therefrom by direction of the President to the country from whence he came—not necessarily to China, but to the country he came from.

This is a late dispatch from the capital of Iowa: "The members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union attended many polling places at the amendment election in June, and the day was made notable by the fervor and persuasiveness of the women. A circular has just been issued by the State officers of that body advising the same general attendance at the polls on Oct. 9. The women also propose to have the children in the procession with banners, mottoes and temperance songs, to have lunch tables for the voters of the right tickets, and to work to make the most votes for prohibition, and impliedly for the Republican ticket." Oh that the women of the South might be moved with the same holy spirit of true womanhood, and defend their homes from the dreadful invasions of intoxicating liquors! Many of them do sympathize with temperance work but are troubled by obsolete notions of their "proper sphere" of duty. All effective work must begin at the ballot-box, the exponent of the popular will, and the presence of women in the vicinity cannot but help to the exaltation of righteousness.

The Colored National Contion.

The colored national convention met in Louisville, Ky., on the 24th. Rev. A. M. Green, of Louisville, was chosen temporary and Fred Douglass, permanent president. The following is an outline of Mr. Douglass' speech:

Referring to the old days of slavery, he passed quickly to those better and brighter days which brought freedom, education and enfranchisement. Referring to the causes leading to the convention, he said:

"No reasonable man will ever object to white men holding a national convention when they are in our condition and we in theirs. Examples are plentifully abundant where the whites have hated the blacks, bordermen the Indians, the Negro the Chinese, and vice versa. We must move as a people toward the goal of prosperity and education. Now that we are free we must be like free men—take the reins in our own hands and compel the world to receive us as their equals. This city, metropolitan in size, cosmopolitan in ideas, is still not free and liberal enough in its opinions to receive us as equals in public buildings and hotels. This is why we are now sitting in a national convention. We have been given numerous platforms, but we are still in the same condition. What we want is not words, idle epithets in our praise, but actions. We have never been helped, but assistance comes from all sides to help us in our downward course. If we come as cart drivers or servants we are received, but when we come as scholars or statesmen the color line is raised.

"The colored man is of an oppressed and abject race in the United States. Trades' Unions refused him admission, mechanics refused him as an apprentice, and when he dies the same old contempt follows him. He is spurned from the gates and compelled to seek a resting place of his own. If he applies for admission to colleges or aspires to education and profession the race line is drawn. That is what we are here for; to raise this line, and make us the equals of the whites. The cause lies more in the diseased imagination than in any other belief. We are here to see to it that men of our color accused of crime shall have a fair trial; that all these outrageous lynchings be stopped. Our business is to organize for our rights and for a redress of our wrongs.

"Some say that we should not hold this convention, for it menaces the Republican party. Parties are made for men, and not men for parties. My hat was made for my head, not my head for my hat. If parties do right, stand by them; but when they do not uphold their principles as laid down in their platforms, down with them—follow no party blindly. We have learned how to talk and let us speak for ourselves about civil rights. Every man is the sole proprietor of and lord of his own house, but when any place is opened for the public everybody recognized as a citizen by the law has the right to enter. This does not make men equal; talent and intelligence are always triumphant."

"When I speak to an intelligent man five minutes I forget all about his color. Now about political equality. I never was a politician. I began my career as a pleader for the aggrandisement of my race, and I am not afraid to tell what I think about all kinds of equality. This stamping out of black Republicans of the South has been done in the face of the Republican party. This convention should implore Congress for a restoration of justice and for the abolition of this most detestable state of affairs. Make the Constitution practically what it is theoretically, and there will be an end to all this filth of ballot-box and to all the injustice of the color line.

"The New York Evening Post makes a great mistake when it says: "Be modest; you have been but 20 years out of bondage." These officeholders are afraid of our aspirations. We shall never cease to be a despised and excluded class as long as we are shut out from political preferment. We cannot ignore the fact that to this is to be attributed the degradation of our race. Elevate one of our class to the Vice Presidency or to a position in the Cabinet, and our equality shall have been established. We are not prepared as yet, but let us aspire to these positions, which we can fill. We hold it self-evident that a nation made up of all varieties should not be governed by one class. Where there is a ruling class there is a subject class, and when the day comes when this nation is governed by one class it ceases to be a government of the people, for the people and by the people."

The following named persons were chosen vice presidents: George Washington, Alabama; S. J. Hollingsworth, Arkansas; J. B. McGinnis, Delaware; W. C. Chase, District of Columbia; W. A. Pledger, Georgia; W. T. Scott, Illinois, Rev. Dr. Sweetzer, Indiana; Alfred Fairfax, Kansas; Henry Scroff, Kentucky; L. S. Martinet, Louisiana; A. V. Cooper; Maryland; W. R. Gamble, Nebraska; G. H. Ruffin, Massachusetts; C. H. Tandy, Missouri; Z. G. Sterret, Minnesota; Congressman J. E. O'Hara, North Carolina; Sam J. Tousen, Ohio; H. Price Williams, Pennsylvania; H. L. Shrewsbury, South Carolina; W. H. Young, Tennessee; Mack Henson, Texas; G. M. Arnold, Virginia; G. W. Hollinger, West Virginia; J. W. Birney, Wisconsin; Secretary, J. M. Gregory; assistants, L. Y. Holland, A. S. Richardson, G. H. Clark and W. G. Robinson.

The convention adopted the following address. "1. That we are grateful for and rejoice in the miraculous emancipation that came to our race 20 years ago. The shock of embattled arms was the lullaby of a nation born in a day. We do not, we cannot forget, the great sacrifice of women and heroic men, who made possible the struggle in which treason and slavery were consigned to a common sepulchre; nor would we be unmindful of the measure of devotion and patriotism to the nation in war for the preservation of the nation.

"2. We are not insensible to the fact that the Congress of the United States has spread upon the statute books many laws calculated to make us secure in our rights as citizens, nor would we be forgetful of the magnificent amendments to the Constitution intended to render forever impossible the crime of human slavery.

"3. We do not ask any more class legislation. We had enough of this; but we do believe that many of the laws intended to secure us our rights as citizens are nothing more than dead letters. In the Southern States, almost without an exception, the colored people are denied justice in the courts, denied the fruit of their honest labor, defrauded of their political rights at the ballot-box, shut out from learning trades, cheated out of their civil rights by innkeepers, common carrier companies, and left by the States to an inadequate opportunity for education and general improvement.

"4. We regard the labor question, education and sound moral training paramount to all other questions. We believe that question, especially in the South, needs recasting, and that plantation credits and mortgage systems should be abolished, and honest labor should be remunerated. The land holders of the South should recognize that this question is to be solved by encouraging the Negroes to industry, frugality and business habits. By inciting them to habits of thrift, by assisting them to acquire an interest in the soil, by paying them honest wages for honest work and by making them contented and happy in the land of their nativity. The white men and owners of the soil in the South can settle the question of labor and capital between white and black. We believe that a broad, comprehensive system looking toward the education of young colored girls, so that they may become intelligent and faithful women, and young colored boys may learn trades and become useful men and good citizens, should be inaugurated. The religious and moral training of the youth of our race should not be neglected. The hope of every people is adherence to sound social, logical and ethical principles. The moral element in character is of greater value than wealth or education and this must be fostered by the family and encouraged by the pulpit.

"6 The Freedman's Saving Bank and Trust Company was established to receive the earnings of persons heretofore held in bondage and the descendants of such persons. It was established by the government, and thought solvent. In changing the charter the trustees transcended their authority and thereby made themselves liable. The government in appointing special machinery to close the insolvent institutions violated the United States statutes on bankruptcy, and should, therefore, reimburse the creditors of the bank.

"7. The distinction made between white and colored troops in the regular army is un-American, unjust, and ungrateful; white men can enter any branch of the service; colored men are confined to the cavalry and infantry service. And in appointment of civilians to the regular army all believe it to be the duty of the President of the United States to consider the claims of colored men. This distinction is carried into the navy as well.

"8. It is not our province to dictate a policy of action for our fellow-citizens in the several States. It is a matter that their circumstances and patriotism should shape.

"9. As a race struggling and contending for our political and civil rights we are not unmindful of the efforts of Ireland to gain her rights, and we extend to our Irish friends profound sympathy and our best wishes.

"10. We earnestly desire the abolition of the chain gang or convict system, and the admission to trades union of men of our race and employment in commercial pursuits.

"11. In nearly every State in the Union, both North and South, the people of our race are not allowed to enter freely into the trades or gain employment in higher walks of life. This is unworthy of our institutions and hurtful to the reputation of our country at home and abroad.

The National Colored Men's Executive Committee met after adjournment of convention and organized by the election of W. A. Pledger, of Georgia, chairman; Geo. W. Arnold, of Virginia, secretary. The object of the committee is to carry out the principles enunciated in the address of the convention.

New Orleans business men are entering fully into the work of preparation for the great cotton exposition. Now if they will enter as fully into the spirit of the times, and give us an exhibition of honesty at the ballot-box, it will be well for them and the entire country. The time has come for the reform. —Inter Ocean.

A few days ago an officer in the English army made a dynamite belt, fastened it to his body, and blew himself to atoms.

Notes From Chattanooga.

Our city is fast gaining prominence as a desirable center for convening ecclesiastical bodies, representing the different denominations operating in the State. Last year there were three Methodist annual conferences held here, and it is understood that the present month will add two more to the list, with the Central South conference of the Congregationalists and the Baptist Association to follow later in the fall.

In line with the industrial growth of the place, which is attracting so much attention abroad, larger and more handsome church buildings are coming into existence. After some delay, work on the new First M. E. Church, Dr. J. J. Manker, pastor, has been resumed. The completion of the structure, which cannot be far remote, is looked forward to with much eagerness as the crowning event of our struggle to erect fine churches in keeping with the demand of the times. The Presbyterians have recently laid the corner stone of a new and costly edifice which promises, also, when finished, to prove an ornament to the city. The Mt. Purem Baptist Church, a frame structure, which was completely demolished by the storm sometimes ago, is being rebuilt. It will be ready for use in a few days. Our brethren, of the M. E. Church, South have recently erected the parsonage which was burned to the ground not long since. It was occupied by Rev. Mr. Bays. They have also built another church, in the northern portion of the city. It seems to be their aim to sieze upon every favorable locality where a numerous and wealthy population can be found without convenient church accommodation. They believe in the policy of sustaining a net-work of appliances adapted to the wants of a diversified community. That's going for the masses, in cities at least. The public schools have opened with a larger attendance than ever before. The want of more room is keenly felt. The colored children are to be better provided for in the future. A commodious building intended for their use is now in course of erection. The authorities delayed taking steps in this direction until the better informed of our people had become justly indignant at their tardiness. Another building of the same kind, in a different portion of the city is needed in order to make the accommodations more easily accessible, especially to small children who ought not be required to walk a great distance to school through all sorts of weather. The property purchased by the Freedmen's Aid Society for the Central University is beautifully situated, commanding a survey of most of the city, and suburbs for miles around. I have not learned when the work of putting up the buildings will begin. Nothing could have been more reasonable than the discussion awakened by the SOUTHWESTERN relative to the question of admitting persons to the proposed school; and all other schools of the church, without any reference whatever to color. Your advocacy in favor of the effectual removal of the color-line barrier which some would set up to debar our people from privileges to which they are justly entitled will no doubt win. It is Christ "like in its uncompromising fairness, striking at what Dr. Buckley styles an "outrageous inquity," and a "crying shame."

The free delivery system which came into operation Sept. 1st, seems to be giving general satisfaction. One colored man is on the carrier force. Strenuous efforts were made by the police a while ago to suppress Sunday traffic which had grown so common, and it appeared at one time that they would succeed, in a measure at least; but alas, it is now tolerably clear that they have been beaten. Saloon-men are a power everywhere. They fear nothing but the ballot in the hand of the intelligent, dram-hating voter. That is the only weapon that can cleave them in their blood-stained and murderous strong holds, and until it executes its mission, we shall not be able, I fear, to see one day out of seven everywhere observed as a day of religious rest and holy worship.

There is evidently, among us, a growing disregard of the sacred binding nature of the marriage contract as was shown by a recent publication in the Chattanooga Daily Times, revealing the startling fact that there are now pending before the courts in Hamilton County alone, more than one hundred applications for divorce. What a picture of social degeneracy. Surely it is time for the Pulpit and the Press to speak out more trenchantly against the abomination of a loose divorce practice which threatens to undermine the perpetuity and peace of the family.

A conference of spiritualists is announced to be held in a grove near this city, shortly. It is said to be the first of the kind ever attempted in the South. Some noted spiritualists from a distance are expected to take part in the exercises. The municipal election which takes place a few days from now is exciting deep interest. The Republicans are confident of electing their full ticket. Could we get a little more of the "campaign" fervor and activity which I see manifested around me into our churches, I think it would give a much desired impetus to all our plans for saving souls and building up the church. From Marshall—A Correction.

MR. EDITOR—Please correct a mistake made in the statement concerning the white rioters in Marshall. It was published there was six colored and four whites on the committee that met Gen. King; but the truth is there were fourteen whites and six colored.

Last Saturday night another mob went out with masks on and took a colored man out of his house and shot him. On Sunday morning the town was made sad on the part of the colored people. He was found in the road with three holes through him, a rope seemed to have been cut from around his neck, and a knife was laying by his side. It is said that the man, seeing they were going to hang him, cut the rope and jumped out of the hack in which they had him, attempting to escape, they shot him to pieces. He was a member of the A. M. E. Church in this city, also a class-leader. His name was Woods. Nothing has been done about it. Nothing will be done, as he was a Negro. O, mercy! of all men we are most miserable. Gloomy clouds of darkness hang all around. Ten days ago the Texas and Pacific Railroad train stopped a few minutes to look at three colored men hung up in the trees by the road. Don't know why it was done.

OBSERVER.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

O. H. Claibonrne, Dulac: "Our revival is moving on grandly. Thus far we hava received fourteen; more than twenty are at the altar. The young men are coming out on the Lord's side. I am so glad to see how the Lord works with us. A brother and his wife from Alabama joined in f[illegible] night."

J. S. Patterson, Bastrop: "On this circuit, considering all things, we are doing very well. The times are hard and the people poor, but they are moving slowly along. Elder [illegible] held his quarterly on the 8th, and preached three delightful sermons. God grant that the time may come when all of our pulpits shall be filled with such men. We received three into the church. Elder's collection was $29.50."

MISSISSIPPI.

P. Blue, Enterprise: "Protracted meetings have resulted to date in 14 conversions and 32 joined the church. Sunday-school institute will convene in Macon on Friday, Oct. 19."

John H. Cook, Summit: "Elder W. McDonald held our third quarterly conference. The session was very pleasant. Ten were converted during the quarter and 12 received into the church, two from the Baptists and one of them an elder. Good flooring had been put into the church at Summit, and brick pillars underneath, at a cost of $50. The church at Magnolia is paid for and will be dedicated Sept. 30th. On Sunday we were grandly entertained by the elder. Collection for elder $10, pastor, $5.65, church, $6—total $21.65. It was resolved not to record reports sent by absent members not having lawful excuse for abstaining from the conference."

D. D. Goodwin, Benton: "We have just closed a glorious revival. It was the happiest I have witnessed for some time. Children of twelve years and old people of sixty were converted. There were 67 conversions in all, and 145 joined the church. The meeting continued three weeks, and the mourners begged us to continue it longer; some thought best to hold up and start again. Three more were then converted. Pray that all may come over."

J. J. Harris, Pontotoc: "There has been a season of refreshing in our town. August 10th, at night, a Sabbath-school concert was held in the church. Those on duty did credit to themselves. There was an opening address by Mr. A. Henderson, jr., an essay by Mr. S. H. [illegible], subject, "Church Manners;" essay by Miss Flonde F. Grant, subject, "Woman's In[illegible];" essay by Miss Mary E. Chisholm, subject, "We have only One Life;" essay by Mr. W. D. Gilmer, subject, "Obedience to Parents." All these were diversified with singing, which was [illegible] Miss Mary E. Chisholm, a student of Rust University, presided [illegible] children marched from the church to the [illegible] grounds. After [illegible] by Rev. Ed. [illegible] O. [illegible] S. Gil[illegible] and [illegible] G. [illegible] Rust University [illegible] Pray [illegible] for us. God bless the SOUTHWESTERN."

TEXAS.

J. W. Robinson, Lampasas: "I am pleased to say that the church is in a healthy, growing condition. We have added over twenty members to our number this year; we also have a good Sunday-school of over 30 scholars and a real efficient [illegible] of teachers. Mr. [illegible], our Sunday-school superintendent, is loved by all the children, and [illegible] always on duty at the proper time. Peace and harmony prevails here. Rev. C. L. Madison, our worthy presiding elder, held his fourth quarter at Lampasas Sept. 15-16, and, oh, what a glorious time. His name rings as that of a powerful preacher and a good presiding officer among all classes throughout the country. He preached two able sermons to this people Sunday, at 3 o'clock and at night. After night service the sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered to 36, after which a collection of $15.95 was taken. The grand old church is showing her colors and marching right to the front."

ALABAMA.

C. P. Davis, of Mount Union, has secured three deeds, and as many new churches under way. On his work there are 5 Sabbath schools. By letter and probation 92 were received. Old Methodism is on a happy march in Dale county.

J. B. Loveless, preacher in charge of Pleasant Grove circuit, writes from Tupelo to the Methodist Advocate, relative to his newly organized and settled work. There are seven organized societies and eleven preaching places, there are ninety-six members, one local preacher and one exhorter, and if we only had houses of worship our membership would be to-day 200. We are building three new churches this year and have the fourth one in contemplation. They are all good houses, and one of them will be valuable. I think it will be when finished, worth $1,000. Large and beautiful lots have been donated to these churches for buildings and for grave yards. We now have five houses of worship and seven building lots. The houses, when completed, together with the lots, will be worth $2,500. Also, a committee was appointed to purchase or secure parsonage ground. Two or three gentlemen have offered to give lands for this purpose, and the parsonage will be built soon. The circuit is in Jackon and DeKalb counties, Ala., on what is known as Sand Mountain, and in the midst of an industrious and happy people. We have had excellent meetings this year; large congregations, and several conversions—have four flourishing Sunday-schools—have baptized eight, and received into the church, twenty-four members.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Hard Places.

DEAR EDITOR—Not having seen in your columns anything from this part of the Lord's vineyard, I beg space for a few plain facts. Justice demands that we speak of every place and thing the very best we can, but the truth, I think, in all cases, should take its course. St. Helena parish, taken as a whole is a hard place in which to do work for humanity. Everything is quiet; no disturbance except that caused by country of heathen gossip. I returned to this parish 15 months ago to take a school, with promises by letter of $60 per month from those who knew me in Sabbath-school when a boy. I was attending the Central Tennessee College and teaching in the public schools, within 30 miles of the college, where I could return to my regular course after the short public term had expired. For 15 months at intervals I received letters of inducement from this parish, finally I thought it an injustice to the people of my birthplace to deny them, so I resigned and came directly. On my arrival I found the apportionments for the largest schools but $60, and this sum to be taught out at $20 per month. At the end of the third month I found that the whole parish treasure had defaulted. I lost a month's work by it, but managed to settle for the month's board and began private teaching. I went from house to house trying to persuade the patrons to build up a work themselves. After seven weeks I found this to be a failure. Meeting Elder [illegible] and prominent men of the A. M. E. Church, I took their counsel and went on the river in search of a reliable place; but sick in my health, I was compelled to return to the hills to save my life from the swamp or malarial fever. After trying those places I was invited to accept this place among the Missionary Baptists; seven Methodist families send to my school. It is said to be, and probably is, the best school point in the parish. If this is the best the worst certainly needs your prayers. God willing I shall finish out the year according to promise. This has been a hard year on the people. The continual rain, then the dry, burning drouth has caused nearly a failure in the crops. The worms appeared about six weeks ago, but the extreme heat drove them back, though the crops will be little if any better by their not eating the cotton. When a man's bread-getting business fails he can not help failing, in many instances, to meet his promises to pay church, preacher or teacher; but where there is no spirit to do a thing it is always poorly done. Abraham was rewarded for doing, not promising to do. So many of our leading characters are always just going to do a good deed but they never do it. Some are always ready to pay tuition, build a school house, or subscribe for the SOUTHWESTERN, but they never do it. In nearly every community there are a few colored men, ready, willing and able to do what they promise, but the number is small. Besides, some are striving so hard to have something to come with that their children are kept at work about three-fifths of their time. Can a child advance by staying at home three days and coming to school two days in the week? Of course not. But when they fall behind the regular attendants the teacher is accused of partial teaching. Those who are used to doing business with a system can hardly sympathize with the people and their habits in these backwoods. Preachers and teachers are alike ignorant. The most advanced pupils I found in this neighborhood had gone only to multiplication in arithmetic, yet fraudulent teachers had carried them half through chemistry and astronomy. But until a better system of selecting teachers and paying them is adopted this will continue. It is well known that our people in the country are generally poor, and in many cases this happens from bad management. They trade on credit, and do not ask the price of articles until they go to settle, then if the price has not been increased it is much higher than expected when the purchase was made. Education will remove these hindrances to our progress, but some buzzards of influence argue that if a school teacher or preacher gets board and clothing he has pay enough, and thus weaken private efforts. Last year I taught at three different places, following the short term public schools, two or three months in a place, the pupils receiving little benefit in so short a time. This year I resolved to take one place, work it well, trusting the people to give me a support. The school has moved on since Feb. 5; have enrolled 50 pupils, average attendance about 22. Most of them can not pay in 5 cents a month. I suppose many students are laboring in such places. May we do with our might what our hands find to do. In a letter from Rev. J. Braden he says: "We have but one life, make the most of it. Work hard every day; work hard for the ignorant." Who are to work up these hard places, where the first step to refinement and culture is unknown! where God is worshipped in whines by the clergy as much as by the mourner; where the Gospel is preached by those who cannot read the Bible; where the goats take possession of the churches during the winter season; where one child in every twenty goes to Sabbath-school; where but one family in every six pay the day teacher, excepting those that do not send. The annual maximum of public money to any one school being $40, this year. These are some of the hindrances [illegible] in the backwoods. May God take a hand in the work, and multiply teachers and competent preachers, and send them out from the cities and towns till every pulpit and school-house shall have the pure light—St. Helena parish, among the hardest of all, being remembered.

Local Option's Success in Maryland.

Testimony incontrovertible from a variety of sources and from those best capable of judging is borne to the good results of local option in the counties of Maryland where it has been tried. The principle upon which this measure is based would seem to imply such success. It is—that it can only obtain when the people are fully prepared for it, as witnessed by a majority of them, votes being cast for it. To obtain this majority agitation and enlightenment are necessary. Such an intelligent sentiment thus placed, behind the law, is the best guarantee for its enforcement. Every man who votes for it is presumed to feel some personal responsibility to sustain it. Besides the power of majorities in this country is educational, and wields a great influence.

A little more than ten years ago this principle was put to the test in Maryland. At that time there seemed to be considerable total abstinence sentiment but very little prohibitory sentiment. A number of different orders of temperance societies existed throughout the State, but all seemed to be on the line of moral suasion, and each seemed to be acting independently of the others. There seemed, therefore, in the first place, a necessity to bring a common focus these diversified and divergent efforts and direct them to the accomplishment of the greatest possible good. It was also evident that other and greater influences than those wielded by the secret societies must be added in order to compete at all with the giant evil of the liquor traffic. And thirdly, it became equally manifest to a number of thoughtful and deeply interested persons that all the efforts of temperance societies, churches, moral and reform societies and all forms of moral effort combined could never permanently, or to any great extent, check the evil of intemperance whilst the State continued to license the traffic.

It was therefore felt that we must go to the root of the matter, and directs our efforts to the uprooting of the license system, and the prohibiting the sale of intoxicants as beverages. Thus to combine all influences favorable to prohibition, and to increase and strengthen them, was the object of the formation of the Maryland State Temperance Alliance. And keeping this object steadily in view it has gone courageously forward, amidst great opposition often, not only from the liquor fraternity and their steadfast allies, the politicians, but from members of the temperance societies, churches and other religious and reform associations, who did not believe in prohibition. Many such required to be educated and have been educated, fully up to this point. Starting in 1874 with the right to vote in some five counties, and in all except one by districts, and by this first effort securing permanently, to the cause of prohibion three countries and a half, with the exception of about four election discricts, the work has gone gradually forward of adding some one or more counties after each biennial session of the legislature, until prohibition now has obtained in the State in thirteen out of the twenty-three counties, as a whole (with the exception of about four or five election districts) together with about nine out of the twenty election districts of Frederick, five of twenty elections districts of Washington, and some nine or ten localities and districts in other counties.

The general tenor of the testimony regarding the fruits of local prohibition is that it has greatly decreased the number of the inmates of prisons and almshouses, and in some cases has entirely emptied them. That it has lessened the terms of courts and greatly decreased the expenses thereof, especially upon the line of criminal business. That the fees of prosecutors have sometimes been lessened two-thirds, or three-fourths. That taxes have likewise, and as a matter of course, been decreased. That property has been greatly appreciated, the tone of morals elevated, and the peace, happiness and prosperity of the people greatly promoted.

The testimony also shows that some of the most intelligent, influential and violent opponents of this cause have been thoroughly converted by the logic of the practical results which they themselves have witnessed, and have since become, and are now among its warmest supporters.

Another strong proof of the good results of this measure is to be found in the fact that wherever a re-vote has been taken after it has been fairly tried—and several such have been taken at the instance of the liquor men, as in Caroline, Dorchester and Somerset counties—the majorities have been increased, and in some instances quadrupled.—Baltimore Methodist.

A Memorable Anniversary.

Wednesday Sept. 12th, was the anniversary of a day forever memorable in the history of the world. On that day, two hundred years ago, John Sobieski, the King of Poland defeated the Turks who were then besieging the Austrian capital, Vienna, and so permanently arrested the tide of Turkish conquest which then threatened to spread triumphantly over the entire of Europe. Measureless calamities have come to every European province which the Turk succeeded in mastering; measureless calamities would have come to the entire of Europe if Sobieski, two hundred ago, had not succeeded in arresting the Turk's brutal march. For three hundred years before that time the Turk had been making constant advances westward into Europe. It was in the fourteenth century that the Turks crossed the Bosporus and appeared in sight of Constantinople. A vast wave of Ottoman conquest then commenced spreading westward over Europe. It was the most formidable and the most pitiless conquest the world has ever seen. It seemed, until Sobieski arrested it, as though it were destined to spread until all Europe should be compelled to crouch defeated at the foot of the conquering Moslem. Wherever the crescent waved in triumph the land was ruined and blasted. It was the boast of the Turks that wherever the horse of their Sultan had once trod grass would never grow again. The portion of Europe thus overrun by the Turks was, previous to that time, Italy alone excepted, the most civilized portion of the globe. Since that time and just in proportion as the Turk has succeeded in maintaining his conquering grip, it has been the least civilized. Gradually, however, the land, from Constantinople to Vienna, was conquered. Province after province was made to yield. So was founded what has come to be known as "Turkey in Europe;" so originated what has been the despair of so many European statesmen, the Turkish question in Europe.

We speak of "Turkey in Europe," but by that phrase is only meant "the Turks in Europe." The Turkish empire in Europe is not a nation at all. It is a conglomeration of conquered provinces, living and groaning under the iron rule of the Ottoman power. That power has not to-day, and never had in any past day, any higher right to rule then the right of the sword. There is no such thing, there never has been any such thing, and there never will be any such thing, in Europe, as a Turkish nation. There is in Europe a French nation, there is a German nation, there is an English nation. There is, on this continent, an American nation. The French rule is the creation of the French people. The German rule is the creation of the German people. The English rule is the creation of the English people. The American rule is the creation of the American people. There is no schism between the rulers and the ruled in these cases. The rule is born of the people. It exists by and with their consent. It is a thing in which the people may take a legitimate pride. But this never has been the case, and is not now the case, with the people inhabiting the provinces of what is called "Turkey in Europe." Their rule for five hundred years, has never been a thing of their own creation; and has never been a thing in which they could take any legitimate pride. It is a rule which has been imposed upon them by a foreign power—a power alien to them in race, in religion, and in social habits. The Turk is as distinct to-day from the races in Europe he has conquered as he was five hundred years ago when he first crossed the Bosporus from Asia and assailed Constantinople. From the time when the Ottoman conquest in Europe reached its culminating point—that is to say from the time when, two hundred years ago, Sobieski under the walls of Vienna arrested that ruthless conquest, and said unto it "Thus far shalt thou come, but no further!"—the history of the Turks in Europe has been made up, very largely, of their failing efforts to repress the spirit of revolt amongst their subject-populations. Hungary, once under the dominion of the Turks, has been wrested from them. The Crimea, once also under the Turkish rule, eight years before the conclusion of the last century was incorporated with Russia. During the present century the Turks have lost Greece, which has been made independent. Roumania, Servia, Bulgaria and other provinces have won a partial or a complete independence. The Turkish rule in Europe is in decay. It has had its evil day. Its night of merciful annihilation is surely coming on. Nobody regrets that it should be so. Nobody dreams that it would be a good thing to restore Hungary to the Turks, or Greece to them, or Servia, Roumania or Bulgaria to them. No bit of empire has ever been wrested from the Turks—no people under their sway have ever gained even a partial freedom—without its having been instinctively felt that so much had been gained to civilization, and that so much had been lost to barbarism. The only possible solution of the Turkish question in Europe would be simply to banish the Turkish government, bag and baggage, over the Bosporus into Asia, where it naturally belongs, and then leave the provinces of European Turkey to work out their political salvation in their own way. When this is done the work of Sobieski will be completed, and his heroic soul, reposing on the bosom of the infinite heroism, may rest ever more in peace.

Dr. J. C. Ciden, who once lived in North Carolina, tells the following: Gov. Z. B. Vance, of North Carolina, is a Presbyterian in his views; and his brother, Hon. R. B. Vance, is a devout Methodist. The Governor, in remarking upon this matter, once said: "The difference between my brother Bob and myself is, that Bob believes in falling from grace, and never falls, and I don't believe in falling from grace, and am always falling!"

Never interrupt any conversation with a hacking Cough; it create a bad impression. Better invest a quarter of a dollor in a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and cure it.

The Beauty of Holiness.

All theories aside, there is in the fact of a holy life something very attractive. To love God with all our hearts, and our neighbor as ourselves; to have the image of God stamped on our souls, the life of God manifest in our mortal flesh, the mind that was in Christ clearly perceptible in our expressions and ways; walking as Christ also walked; endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace; returning not railing for railing, but disarming criticism by circumspect lives; constantly laboring, praying without ceasing, rejoicing evermore and in everything giving thanks, we say there is in such undeniable characteristics of personal holiness something very charming and beautiful.

How little does it matter whether the power of the Spirit resulting in such living overshadows the believing soul in an instant as we would is often the case, so that from that time he enjoys inward and outward holiness to which he was before an utter stranger, or whether it comes in the gradual unfolding of a long consecrated life. The main point is that there is no deception, no delusion, but a deep and constant communion with the Father and the Son, whereby the whole heart is surrendered and the whole life governed and controlled by the purest principles of the Divine Word.

The truth is, no one experience, or class of experiences, as to this doctrine, can ever become a universal standard. Here, as in conversion, and in intellectual exercises, every man is his own under. Controversies as to the method of becoming holy, may rage until the millennium, and nothing be settled. Nevertheless, souls may continue to trust God for full salvation, and testify to the experience of it, supporting the testimony by holy living and doing. In this, not in the hard dry arguments of theorists, the beauty of holiness appears. Rather, earnest minded believers would better give attention. In the contemplation of it there is profit, and in the experience of it there is spiritual and eternal gain. To have the inward man of the heart renewed after the image of God, cannot be a mistake, even supposing that God has quickened, even as Wesley understanding, as Wesley asserted, the creature, in a most humble, loving state, will at least excite the admiration of all who are capable in our degree of discerning spiritual and moral beauty. From the humble region of the emotions which covers the entire intellectual world, they can not but admire how laudable, how [illegible] in these instances of the creature, the [illegible] God for the benefit and sanctifying [illegible] of the creature.

Shall He be Found?

We read, once of a man buried in a well. The well was deep and he could not extricate himself. The [illegible] could communicate with him, and could secure a little [illegible] to prevent speedy suffocation.

How [illegible] him! Through the [illegible] ran the [illegible] They [illegible] in—[illegible] from pressing too heavily upon his head; they toiled on, almost without thought of tiring, putting more and more of plan and system into their work, vying with each other in doing man's duty to man.

The day dawned, but they rested not. The merchant, the minister, the professional man, labored right on through all those weary hours, side by side with the humblest toiler from the ditch. Before the great stress of that awful time all class conditions vanished. They were simply all men, loyal to a common manhood, and zealous in a common cause. Darkness came on, the long hours of night wore away; but yet they weavered not. Morning dawned, and still was their brother in peril, discouraged, faint, perhaps dying. Only one or two could labor, as the end was neared, and these at the risk of their own lives. All were exhausted with their waiting and their work. Then the fire-bells rang out its warning of danger. To property? Ah, no! to human life! Fresh hands must toil that any hands might save.

And they did toil as bravely as their fellows had done. They toiled, and finally they won. A few hours more, and the man was brought forth, weak, bruised, half unconscious but saved; and from all hearts went up a great throb of joy, while cheers of victory rent the air.

Down in the pit of intemperance a man has fallen. He is somebody's father, somebody's husband, somebody's friend. Let the cry run throughout all the community; let it be the bells of alarm to ring; let humanity be aroused! Shall he be saved? Into deeper and more dangerous depths never man fell. If he get out at all it must be by the help of friendly hands, and the mercy of God. Are your hands outstretched? Are you answering the call? Will you forget self and selfish interests, and toil freely for this brother in distress—will you save a soul?

"Suffer the least of these, my little ones," said the Master. His words were very broad. They reach over and include all duty, and all doing. Wherever is human need, there must humanity go to help and to cure. They must answer their sin who walk selfishly by on the other side.

The First Prayer in Congress.

In the Chaplain's Military Journal, under date of December 1777, is found a note containing the identical first prayer in Congress, made by Rev. Jacob Duche, a gentleman of great eloquence. Here it is, an historical curiosity:

Oh Lord our Heavenly Father, high and mighty King of kings and Lord of lords, who dost from thy throne behold all the dwellers on the earth, and pointest with power supreme and uncontrolled over all the kingdoms, empires and governments, look down in mercy, we beseech thee, on these the American States, who have fled to thee from the rod of the oppressor, and thrown themselves on thy gracious protection, desiring to be henceforth dependent only on thee. To thee they have appealed for the righteousness of their cause; to thee do they now look up for that countenance and support which thou alone canst give. Take them, therefore, Heavenly Father, unto thy nurturing care. Give them wisdom in council and valor in the field. Defeat the malicious designs of our adversaries; convince them of the unrighteousness of their course; they still persist in sanguinary measures, O let the voice of injured innocence prevail with them to drop the weapons of war from their unnerved hands in the day of battle. Be thou present, O God of wisdom, and direct the councils of this honorable assembly. Enable them to conduct all things on the best foundations, that the effusion of blood may be speedily prevented, and order, harmony and peace may be effectually restored, truth, justice, religion, and piety prevail and flourish among thy people. Preserve the health of their bodies and the vigor of their minds; shower down upon them and the millions they here represent, such temporal blessings as thou seest expedient for them in this world, and crown them with overwhelming glory in the world to come. All this we ask in the name and through the merits of Jesus Christ, thy Son, our Savior, Amen.

Bishop Simpson's Head.

J. A. S.—You are right in thinking that this eminent bishop of the Methodist Church has a good-sized head; it is very broad, and the forehead retreats somewhat, while the lower part of the face is rather heavy, this association of features imparting a depressed appearance to the head when viewed from the front. An explanation of this fact which is occasionally met with among eminent men, was made in a late editorial. Bishop Simpson has a very strong, active, forcible organization; his temperament is thoroughgoing and spirited; he is essentially a worker. A self-instructed man in the main, he has brought himself from a comparatively low position in life to one of prominence, and is, therefore, an example for young men of moderate endowment.—Phrenological Journal.

Methodism in respect of its claim for support applies tests to character. When a man is in a position to give a hundred pounds a year to charitable objects, he has in his hands the means by which he may attract some notice and gain an amount of popularity and commendation. In this position there is a trial. If his circumstances are so changed that one-fourth of the amount is more than he can fairly give, the change is sure to bring to him another kind of trial. When under the influence of such a change a man withdraws from membership or keeps his children out of membership on the alleged ground that Methodism is expensive, he acts very unwisely. The little that he has to give might be as easily divided as was the sum five times as large, and if full advantages were taken of what Methodism offers to children and young people, no prudent father would finally regret that he had encouraged his serious children to seek the benefits of Christian fellowship. One who is swayed by the pride of life and leaves Methodism because it is expensive may find something cheaper elsewhere, but we have no evidence either of the soundness of the reasoning on which he acts, or of the sincerity of the motive on which he professes to act. God loves a cheerful giver.—London Methodist.

Whatever needs edification and training may have been, however ennobled or dishonored in our age and land, it finds all needful encouragement open before him if he is anxious to do what he can and earnestly seeks opportunities for usefulness and service. In the advise plan there is work for the feeblest hand and the lowliest order, and for one who looks for opportunities with sincere desire to do God's will, will fail to find them. Doors of opportunity open wonderfully to him who is seeking them and is ready to enter. One man may be qualified for a much larger and apparently more important work than another, but every man will be useful if he will do what he can.—Domestic Journal.

"What do ye call this in your country?" stopped a Scot at a fruit store yesterday, and pointing to a bunch of bananas. Having learned, he bought a plump redskin, and without stopping to peel it, bit on the end. The banana was finished in the same primeval style and then the stranger remarked: "The rind isn't much, but the pith is purty fair."

Buckle Down Boys.

Whatever you have to do, my boys,
Be sure you do it right;
If life is but a battle, boys,
Be faithful to the fight.

Don't cringe and squirm in any way,
But buckle down to work;
Let those around you plainly see
You do not act the shirk.

If lessons hard are given you,
Don't murmur nor complain;
Just buckle down and study hard,
And victory attain.

Yes, that's the way to do it, my boys,
If you would honored be;
The good, the great, have fought and worked
As you can plainly see.

Then fight and work and strive and strike,
Aim high when you begin;
Just buckle boldly down to work,
And you will surely win.

A Noble Boy.

As I was walking along a street of a large city, I saw an old man, who seemed to be blind, walking along without any one to lead him. He went very slowly, feeling with his cane.

"He's walking straight to the highest part of the curbstone," said I to myself. "And it's very high, too. I wonder if some one won't tell him and start him in the right direction?"

Just then a boy about fourteen years old, who was playing near the corner, left his playmates, ran up to the old man, put his hand through the man's arm and said: "Let me lead you across the street." By this time there were three or four others watching the boy. He not only helped him over the crossing, but led him over another, to the lower side of the street. Then he ran back to his play. Now the boy thought he had only done the man a kindness, while I knew he had made three other persons feel happy and better and more careful to do little kindnesses to those about them.

The three or four persons who had stopped to watch the boy turned away with a tender smile on their faces, ready to follow the noble example he had set them. I know that I felt more gentle and forgiving toward every one for many days afterwards.—Ruth Hall.

The Mother's Influence

The solid rock which turns the edge of the chisel, bears forever the impress of the leaf and the acorn received long, long since, ere it had become hardened by time and the elements. If we trace back to its fountain the mighty torrent which fertilizes the land with its copious streams, or sweeps over it with a devastating flood, we shall find it dripping in crystal drops from some mossy crevice among the distant hills; so, too, the gentle feelings and affections that enrich and adorn the heart, and the mighty passions that sweep away all the barriers of the soul, and desolate society, may have sprung up in the infant bosom in the sheltered retirement of home. "I should have been an atheist," said John Randolph, "if it had not been for one recollection, and that was the memory of the time when my departed mother used to take my little hands in hers, and caused me on my knees to say, 'Our Father which art in Heaven.'"

Watching One's Self.

"When I was a boy," said an old man, "we had a school master who had an odd way of catching the idle boys. One day he called out to us, 'Boys, I must have closer attention to your books. The first one that sees another idle, I want you to inform me and I will attend to the case.'"

"Ah," thought I to myself, "there is Joe Simmons that I don't like. I'll watch him, and if I see him look off his book, I'll tell." It was not long before I saw Joe look off his book, and immediately I informed the master.

"Indeed," said he, how did you know he was idle?"

"I saw him," said I.

"You did! And were your eyes on your book when you saw him?"

"I was caught, and I never watched for idle boys again."

If we are sufficiently watchful over our own conduct, we shall have no time to find fault with conduct of others.

Looking Up.

It would be well for all liars like Ananias and Gehazi to remember a remark once made by a little boy to his father, who was meditating a theft of potatoes out of a field. The father looked east, west, north and south, and seeing no one, began to pull up the roots.

"Father," said the lad, "there is one way you forgot to look!"

"Where?" asked the alarmed man.

Witnesses Three.

Shortly before he died Patrick Henry, laying his hand on the Bible, said, "Here is a book worth more than all others. Yet it is my sad misfortune never to have read it, until lately, with proper attention."

With voice and gesture pertinent, and all his own, John Randolph said: "A terrible proof of our deep depravity is, that we can relish and remember anything better than the Book."

When the shadows of death were gathering around Sir Walter Scott he said to the watcher, "Bring me the Book." "What book?" asked Lockhart, his son-in-law. "There is but one book," said the dying man.

Every society of true Christians is a "holiness band." If church membership does not mean this, it means nothing worth mentioning.—Nashville Advocate.

Advice to Mothers.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once, it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as bright as a button. It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Saints and Sinners Stirred by a Clergyman's Confession—The Facts in Full.

Eloquent writing merely convinces nobody. General statements and assertions are cheap. Plain words are best and come most easily from the mouth of a witness who is conscious that he speaks truth. Let the reader judge if the following have the ring of genuine coin:

"I have long been afflicted with rheumatism, a badly disordered liver and general debility. All my strength seemed gone. I tried a number of other medicines without obtaining relief, but I do hereby testify to the great merits of Parker's Ginger Tonic, since after the use of two bottles I find myself feeling well and strong again—in fact, like a new man. I cheerfully recommend it as an excellent strengthening and invigorating Tonic."

Names and dates are of supreme importance. Testimonies are readily manufactured, but the foregoing is from a letter dated St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 30th, 1882, and signed by Rev. Edward Willi, formerly of Mo., and pastor of the University Street Baptist Church, Residence, No. 313 Spruce, that city. From the very fact of their responsible and prominent position, ministers of the Gospel are cautious about giving their signatures or influence to any proprietary medicine or advertised article. Hence the value of unsolicited testimonials like the foregoing.

Please note: First.—Parker's Ginger Tonic is not an essence of Ginger. Don't indulge that idea; nor permit others to impress it upon you. It combines the choicest Jamaica Ginger with other ingredients—constituting the best Tonic known to medicines. Second.—It is prepared in the most convenient form of actions. Prices 50c. and $1—the latter the more economical. Get it of your druggist, or send for circular to Hiscox & Co. New York.

Kicking.

There is an immense amount of kicking among certain writers of the M. E. Church South against Dr. Haygood's earnest and Christian plea for the education of the Negro. His speeches at Chatauqua and Monteagle, and his "Hagar in the Wilderness" have stirred the Bourbon element of the church as it has not been stirred for years. Rev. W. S. C. Hunnicutt, in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says, "Dr. Haygood's philanthropy seems to have taken very largely the form of negrophilism," and then intimates that he is influenced by unworthy considerations. Read: "This is but natural, as he is the distributor of a large fund for the education of the Negro, and is, I suppose, well paid for his services in that line." But here is a specimen of Bourbonism we have not seen surpassed for fifteen years:

"It has been argued by some that we owe the negro special help because they were once our slaves, an argument more sentimental than sacred. Was ever a race on earth under a more improving tutelage than was slavery to the Africans who were subject to it in these Southern States? When or where was a race ever so much advanced in the same length of time as were the negroes during their enslavement? If slavery was profitable to the whites it was, perhaps, more so to the blacks. They were fed and clothed and taught the things necessary for them to know. They were subject to such government and discipline as is perhaps best suited to all people in their condition. If they have made any progress since their emancipation it is no doubt due almost solely to the discipline of slavery." (Italics ours.)

We are glad to publish this extract because we want our readers to know the estimate a Methodist minister places upon the system of human slavery. Mr. Hunnicutt fairly caps the climax. He tells the world that "education" such as the State imparts "has no tendency to make a man better for any purpose," that "ignorance is not the parent of vice," that "society condones and justice, by a thousand technicalities of law, finds excuses for the fiendish deeds of shrewd criminals of the higher sort," that "the crimes of educated men are to a large extent undiscovered, unreported and unpunished. "It is a slander of the ignorant poor to say they are the chief criminals of the land," and "if the Negro is dangerous as a voter at all it is not because he is ignorant, but because he is an alien race." Our readers will understand that this plea for ignorance is not made by a Roman Catholic priest, but by a Protestant clergyman, a Methodist minister.

In the Nashville Advocate Rev. C. W. Miller is equally as sour and bitter, but kicking in another direction. He charges Dr. Haygood with inconsistency and misrepresenting the church. He says:

"Our church does not desire to have any Gilbert Havenism on this negro question thrust upon her. That ill-starred bishop carried about with him the ghastly corpse of the negro question and thrust it forward on all occasions. He took it into every pulpit he entered, into every Advocate and secular paper for which he wrote, lifted up its grinning, repulsive face before every convention whose platform he occupied, and upon all occasions, social and otherwise, this corpse was at his right hand."

"Our church does not desire that, will not have it, and the time is not far distant when her forbearance at the attempt to thrust this state of things upon her will give place."

We do not suppose that Mr. Miller intended it, but we do not see how a nobler tribute could be paid to that godly and self-sacrificing bishop than to present him as always true to the Negro. But Mr. Miller ought to understand that Gilbert Havenism on the Negro question is already in the M. E. Church South; whether the church desires it or not, the leaven is there. And nothing could be more childish than for him, or any other man or class of men, to say we "will not have it." No annual or general conference action can exclude it or prevent its working. This world moves. And of the ultimate issue of what is called "Gilbert Havenism on the Negro question" in this country there can be no doubt, since God is God. As to Dr. Haygood we think he is in the right place, and have no anxiety as to his ability to defend himself or to fight out in his own church this great battle of Christian principle. We look upon him as a man of deep and decided convictions, with mental and moral forces equal to some entire annual conferences; he has nothing to fear.

We frequently hear a great deal said about heaven. People seems to talk with great earnestness about the pleasures and joys of that holy and happy world. But to the writer there seems to be but little attractiveness to the heaven most people speak off. "I want," said a brother to us the other day, "above all things to go to heaven when I die, so many of my kindred are there I must go." Good people sing of that world as a place.—

And Sabbaths have no end."

Oh, what a world for children that must be. If a meeting of an hour is too long for the little folks, what would an eternity of it be? We think that Jesus is infinitely better than heaven, and would like to hear people say a little more about the Lamb and his attractiveness. If Jesus is not the central light and glory of that world it is not worth having. We say above all things give us Christ. Give us Jesus, and it matters but a little what world or place we live in. No matter where we are if we have Jesus we have heaven, and he is better than ten thousand heavens. We need Jesus now, day by day, any day and every day. Right here in the conflict it is both our duty and highest privilege to have Jesus. Go where he may the holy man has Jesus and is just as truly in heaven before he dies as after he is dead. If we are holy we have Jesus and all the elements of heaven with us day by day, and can rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Christ gives—

"Peace upon peace, like wave on wave
This is the portion that I crave,
The peace of God, which passeth thought,
The peace of Christ, which changeth not."

Rev. J. S. Curry, D.D., of Virginia, agent of the Peabody fund, in a speech at the great Educational convention held at Louisville, Ky., Sept. 28th, made a strong plea for "Federal Aid to Education." He said "The basis of our free government is the intelligence and integrity of our people; self-government is impossible with the ignorant. The more education the more liberty." Universal education cannot be except as furnished by the government. Before the war the South was rich, her wealth was greater per capita than any other country in the world, but there was no general education. The large mass of the white people were deplorably ignorant. Denominational education can never affect the whole country. The South is now poor. From the Ohio to the gulf between 1870 and 1880 there was a diminution of the value of taxable property in all but three of the Southern States. The illiteracy of the South is fearful. Thirty per cent of the white population and seventy per cent of the colored are illiterate. In Kentucky there are 43,000 illiterate white voters, and 55,000 illiterate colored voters. In some of the Southern States a worse condition exists. The education of these masses is a greater burden, it is claimed, than the South can bear in her poverty, hence this plea for "Federal Aid." The contrast between the illiterate whites and colored was thus stated: "The whites came here voluntarrily, the Negroes by cruel compulsion." The illiteracy of the whites was voluntary, that of the Negroes forced upon them. Both stand in need of Federal aid, to be distributed by Federal hands.

In Kentucky the lawful school age for white children is from 6 to 21 years; for her colored population it is from 6 to 16 years of age. Now why this difference? It certainly cannot be because Kentuckians tacitly admit that it takes a white boy fifteen years in which to learn what a colored boy can learn in ten years. Then it stands out prominently that the purpose is to deny to colored children at least one-third the chance offered for the education of the whites. Such unjust discrimination, loathsome vestiges of antebellum barbarism, are unworthy the blue bloods of Kentucky. Shame upon such a State; and upon the press that dares not protest against such injustice!

We have no desire to continue useless, irritating controversies. We are against all mere local ideas as North or South, East or West, and against all narrow local and mere race contests. We are an American and as such can know no locality, no race in America. This is our country. Our heart, our sentiment, our judgment call upon us and demand of us that we pursue a course that shall secure the greatest good and the most perfect harmony of all people. For over thirty years this has been our aim, it is our aim to day, and God helping us shall be to the end. From this stand-point we have come to look upon a race church, or a church bounded by certain geographical lines as un-American, and caste churches as moral monstrosities, places where Christ is crucified afresh in the person of the poor. We cannot look upon a mere race church, as the church of the Lord Jesus Christ, and if we could we would abolish all races churches. But of all human organizations that take the name of a church a caste church is the most hateful and harmful. If there is one lesson taught above another by history it is this: The men we most despise and tread upon will surely become our rulers. God "hath" all along the ages "put down the mighty from their seats and exalted them of low degree." Depend upon it, God will avenge the cry of his own elect who cry day and night unto him against the pride and wickedness of their brother man.

"He kindled the flame and he washed his hands like Pilate." This expression the enemies of Martin Luther made against him, when he sought to calm down the excesses of many who claimed to be inspired to do many unlawful acts, by the tendency of his teaching. Luther, however, was sincere in all he said or did. But how true is this expression when properly used against many who, with no apparent fixed purpose, advance a principle one moment and advocate something diametrically opposite the next moment. The world has never been free from that class of people; and they are here to-day. John the Baptist calls them a generation of vipers. Our Saviour did not hesitate to call them all hypocrites. The modern men of this class belong to the race of Joab, who meeting Amasa, inquired concerning his health, and taking him by the beard with his right hand and kissing him, smote him in the fifth rib with a sword held in the left hand. They are of the legitimate offspring of Judas Iscariot, who betrayed his master with a kiss. Such characters are an abomination to the Lord. The veritable Brutuses of modern times. "Whose readeth let him understand."

At the Methodist preachers meeting at Chicago, Rev. Dr. Parkhurst gave an address on Missionary Institutes, showing the importance of training to prepare for missionary work. During his address he complained of certain young women going out as missionaries, and getting married before thier promised five years of work had been completed. Bishop Harris was present and in response delivered a warm eulogy upon Methodist missionaries abroad. As to the young ladies, the Bishop said "that they would marry and nothing could prevent them when they found the man that suited them and offered himself, and it was right they should do so, though it did cause inconvenience to missionary boards." We agree with the Bishop, so long as these young ladies do not cease to be missionaries after their marriage. But we have a personal acquaintance with one of those young ladies who will keep her promise and serve the full five years.

The "Lost Friends" column in the SOUTHWESTERN continues to receive and re-echo some of the wailing cries from the deep places of slavery. Many parents and children, dearest relatives and friends, who were cruelly scattered from each other like dust before the fiercest wind, by this heartless system, continue to cry for each other. Nearly every week letters come to this office testifying to the fact of the reunion of many families who were happily reunited through its agency. Recently Bro. Nathan Harding, of Cotile, a venerable old gentleman 73 years old, at the Shreveport district conference, told the congregation that he thanked God for the existence of the SOUTHWESTER in general, and for its "Lost Friends" column in particular, because through its agency he had found his brother whom he had not seen in forty years.

Ex Lieut. Gov. Antoine, returned to this city from a trip to Shreveport a few days ago. From parties coming from Marshall, Texas, he learned that the recent troubles there, and the intoleration and intimidation on the part of the whites had caused wide-spread alarm among the colored people. Left to the mercy of their enemies, a feeling of insecurity pervaded all classes among them. We repeat, in sections of the South where they are denied their civil and political rights, and can secure no redress against the unlawful outrages committed by white epersecutors, they should exercise their freemans right and go to where they can be secured in person and property and receive the equal protection of the law This is the only sure and ready remedy.

The following are the statistics of Kentucky conference: "Probationers, 2,090; full members, 16,831; children baptized, 325; adults baptized, 493; churches, 213; valued at $400,000; paid on improvement of church property, $15,437.32; on old indebtedness, $4,652.07; present indebtedness, $5,888.77; for missions, $2,115.23; Woman's Foreign missions, $397.45; church extension, $432.34; tracts, $60.05; Sunday-school Union, $61.35; freedmen, $316.54; education, $679.85; Bible Society, $145.29.

It will be seen by an editorial in this week's SOUTHWESTERN that Rev. Dr. Miller has introduced into some of the papers of the M. E. Church, South, what he is pleased to call "Gilbert Havenism." Any of the members of that church who may desire to read the life of that godly Bishop can be supplied by addressing Phillips & Hunt, 32 Natchez street, New Orleans, La. Price $2.

Editorial Correspondence.

In his speech at Monteagle Dr. Haygood indicated that the indifference of the M. E. Church South to the education of the Negro was not to be attributed half so much to her poverty as to the desire of "bossism." If the Negro was educated he could not be bossed, so the church preferred to keep him in ignorance that she might the better boss him. Bossing and being bossed are very different things. There seems to be an innate desire on the part of most people, whether educated or uneducated, to boss, and so far as we have seen there are very few who like to be bossed. Some people seem to think that the dominance of one or two persons or families in the church is a necessity, so their instincts all point to bossing, and settle the right to boss in themselves. We never had much faith in the Divine right of kings and bosses. The Methodist Episcopal Church at Centerville has a pastor who, while he is portly and noble in his bearing, does not like anything that pertains to bossism. He is among the people as their shepherd, leader and servant, pursuing Christ's method of conquering this world; and thus far the year has been one of continued prosperity. The brethren and sisters have confidence in their leader and are ready to follow and assist him in his work. A new feature has been introduced into the Sunday-school. Nearly every Sabbath some one connected with the school reads a short essay on some thought suggested by or growing out of the lesson. The young people are rallying nobly and helping in the work of ceiling, putting in windows and lighting the church. Mrs. Catherine Henderson, by personal effort, secured nearly funds enough to pay for a nice chandelier that has recently been placed in the church. Our church at Centerville has seen dark days in its history, but just now light seems to shine. Everything indicates a large ingathering. Nothing but the most stupid neglect can hinder this church from becoming one of our strong churches in the near future. Bro. Evans is certainly doing a good work.

Riding in the cars, visiting different communities, we often find persons social, agreeable, open-hearted and open-handed eager, and inventive to make others happy, but out of the church. Once they were active in all religious and church work but now they seem to be destitute of all spiritual power, and we ask, what has led to this degeneration? Doubtless many influences have been at work. But we have never found a person seeking some petty office, or a candidate for the same, growing in grace. The friendships formed in a political campaign are not favorable to experimental or practical godliness. A man with the burning zeal of an angel, even on angel wings, cannot dabble in the dirty pool of politics without getting smeared.

At Franklin Bro. Williams is having a year of harmony and prosperity. The improvements of church property, amounting to over five hundred dollars, have all been paid, and old debts of over one hundred dollars have also been paid during his pastorate, and the church greatly strengthened. The reports of the stewards showed over $207 collected for all purposes during the quarter. An earnest, prayerful spirit pervades the church, and a precious work of grace is hoped for in the coming months. There are hundreds of sinners in Franklin who need to be converted from sin to righteousness. The Christian pastors and laymen of that town have an open door.

At LaTeche the sky is looking brighter. Everything is wearing a hopeful look for a glorious harvest. On Sabbath afternoon we preached and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper; the congregation was good, but best of all there was manifestly a tender and thoughtful spirit. Bro. Lyon and our people at LaTeche may congratulate themselves for what God has done, and for the prospect that is before them. The membership, true, is small but they have a nice church and parsonage with only a debt of ten or fifteen dollars, and this will soon be paid. This people may well thank God and take courage. The miserable wretches who entered the parsonage some four months since and robbed Bro. and Sister Lyon of their clothes, crockery and ten dollars in money, are sure to be detected. Their sin will find them out.

At Baldwin we had the pleasure of preaching twice to attentive congregations, and had a pleasant home with Bro. Fitch, who is President of Baldwin Seminary and pastor of Baldwin Mission. The fall term of the school was to open Monday with the prospect of a good attendance. Privately and publicly we have spoken of this school. We are among those who believe that Bro. Baldwin was directed by a special Providence when he established this school, and we think that he was led by the same hand when he made the property over to the Freedmen's Aid Society for the purpose of Christian education. Thus far it has cost that Society little or nothing. It is valuable, and one of the most charming locations in Louisiana. There are certain re[illegible] however, that need to be mad[e] as it is now the Seminary and [illegible] cannot be warmed, and c[illegible] this winter there can be no [illegible] these repairs are made. One or two hundred dollars would be of great benefit now.

REFLECTION.

So far as we could see at all the points we visited there was the most perfect harmony between the preachers and people, and each church seemed to be enjoying a fair degree of prosperity. Nevertheless there is much work that needs to be done. There is a loud call for much more activity on the part of the pastors, local preachers, class-leaders and laymen. There is a vast amount of wickedness, not in the churches but among the people. There are communities where we have no churches and where our preachers never go, but sinners in great numbers are there, sinners of all shades of [illegible] are there. And we feel that God wants our preachers to push out into these places where sin and Satan hold all in subjection to themselves. We think that the local preachers and exhorters should be sent out to teach the people morality and religion. It will wonderfully help their piety to do this work. C.

—Gov. Butler has been renominated by two conventions—Greenback and Democratic—and expects to be elected. And then? Well, Gen. The Butler who "insulted women," "stole spoons," and was lovingly called the "Beast," is fast becoming a historical myth, before a prospective Democratic candidate for the Presidency.

—Gen. Grant was unable to attend the unveiling of the monument to President Zachary Taylor in Louisville, Ky., but he wrote: "It was my good fortune to serve under Gen. There was no man living whom I admired and [illegible] more highly, and I would be glad to show my respect for him now by attending the unveiling of the statue to his memory."

—[illegible] told this in a [illegible] at Woodstock, Ill.: [illegible] was over I went to Washington, where I visited my old friend and schoolmate, General Grant. He asked me if I was ready to be amnestied, and when I told him yes he gave me a strong letter to President Johnson, and I called on him the next day. Then there was another long talk, and presently President Johnson said to me, 'There are three men in this country who can never enjoy the benefits of amnesty—Jeff Davis, R. E. Lee and yourself.' I said to him after thanking him for placing me in the distinguished company he did, 'Mr. President, those who are forgiven most love the most.' With that I went back to my home in Georgia. A year after a petition for me went up, and Gen. Grant and Gen. Pope went in my behalf in person to see it through, and they did. I felt like I had not loved the Union before as I did then, and again I said, Those who are forgiven most love the most."

TEXAS.

E. G. McIntire, Galveston: "The Broadway Methodist Episcopal Church was dedicated Sept. 23rd. Rev. H. H. Johnson officiating. Rev. P. H. Bodkin, of Fort Worth, preached at night, and Rev. John Hardy, of Harrisburg, spoke at 4 p. m. Altogether we had a pleasant time. Our finances are in good shape. There is no debt upon the church. We are trying to get into such a condition and relation to God and man that we can be useful." We congratulate our Bro. upon the wonderful degree of success the Lord has given him in this new and important field of labor. The church property he has secured cannot be valued less than ten thousand dollars. This only shows what can be done in Texas when the right means are used. Push on, brethren of the Austin conference, there is much land before you.

The Highest Authority.

Upon a Subject of Vital Interest, Affecting the Welfare of All.

The following remarkable letter from one of the leading and best known scientific writers of the present day is specially significant, and should be of unusal value to all readers who desire to keep pace with the march of modern discoveries and events:

"A general demand for reformation is one of the most distinctive characteristic of the nineteenth century. The common people, as well as the more enligetered and refined, cry out with no uncertain voice to be emancipated from the slavery of conservatism and superstition which has held the masses in gross ignorance during a large portion of the world's history, and in the time of the 'Dark Ages' came near obliterating the last glimmer of truth. Dogmatic assertions and blind empiricism are lossing caste among all classes of all countries. People are beginning to think for themselves, and to regard anthority much less than argument. Men and women are no longer willing that a few individuals should dictate to them what must be their sentiments and opinions. They claim the right to solve for themselves the great questions of the day and demand that the general good of humanity shall be respected. As the result of this general awakening, we see, on every hand, unmistakable evidences of reformatory action. People who, a few years ago, endured suffering the most intense in the name of duty, now realize the utter foolishness of such a course. Men who were under the bondage of bigoted advisers allowed their health to depart; suffered their constitutions to become undermined and finally died as martys to a false system of treatment. There are millions of people filling untimely graves who might have lived to a green old age had their original trouble been taken in time or properly treated. There are thousands of people to-day, thoughtlessly enduring the first symptoms of some serious malady and without the slightest realization of the danger that is before them. They have occasional headaches; a lack of appetite one day a ravenous one the next, or an unaccountable feeling of weariness, sometimes accompanied by nausea and attribute all these troubles to the old idea of 'a slight cold' or malaria. It is high time that people awoke to a knowledge of the seriousness of these matters and emancipated themselves from the professional bigotry which controls them. When this is done and when all classes of physicians become liberal enough to exclude all dogmas, save that it is their duty to cure diseases as quickly, and as safely as possible; to maintain no other position than that of truth honestly ascertained, and to endorse and recommend any remedy that has been found useful, no matter what its orgin, there will be no more quarreling among the doctors, while they will be great rejoicing throughout the world."

"I am well aware of the censure that will be meted out to me for writing this letter but I feel that I cannot be true to my honest convictions unless I extend a helping hand and endorse all that I know to be good. The extended publications for the past few years, and graphic descriptions of different diseases of the kidney and liver have awakened the medical profession to the fact that these diseases are greatly increasing. The treatment of the doctors has been largely experimental and many of their patients have died while they were casting about for a remedy to cure them."

"It is now over two years since my attention was first called to the use of a most wonderful preparation in the treatment of Bright's disease of the kidneys. Patients had frequently asked me about the remedy and I had heard of remarkable cures effected by it, but like many others I hesitated to recommend its use. A personal friend of mine had been in poor health for some time and his application for insurance on his life had been rejected on account of Bright's disease. Chemical and microscopical examinations of his urine revealed the presence of large quantities of albumen and granular tube casts, which confirmed the correctness of the diagnosis. After trying all the usual remedies, I directed him to use this preparation and was greatly surprised to observe a decided improvement within a month, and within four months, no tube casts could be discovered. At that time there was present only a trace of albumen, and he felt, as he expressed it, 'perfectly well,' and all through the influence of Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy he used."

"After this I prescribed this medicine in full doses in both acute and chronic nephritis, [Bright's disease] and with the most satisfactory results. My observations were neither small in number nor hastily made. They extended over several months and embraced a large number of cases which have proved so satisfactory to my mind, that I would earnestly urge upon my professional brethren the importance of giving a fair and patient trial to Warner's Safe Cure. In a large class of ailments where the blood is obviously in an unhealthy state, especially where glanular engorgements and inflammatory eruptions exist, indeed in many of those forms of chronic indisposition in which there is no evidence of organic mischief, but where the general health is depleted, the face sallow, the urine colored, constituting the condition in which the patient is said to be 'billious,' the advantage gained by the use of this remedy is remarkable. In Bright's disease it seems to act as a solvent of albumen; to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes; to wash out the epithelial debris which blocks up the tubuli uriniferi, and to prevent a destructive metamorphosis of tissue."

"Belonging as I do to a branch of the profession that believes that no one school of medicine knows all the truth regarding the treatment of disease, and being independent enough to select any remedy that will relieve my patients, without reference to the source from whence it comes, I am glad to acknowledge and commend the merits of this remedy thus franky.

Respectfully yours,

"Georgia Democrats want a white man's Government." This is the declaration of the Macon Telegraph in September, 1883. It sounds for all the world like 1860. That sentence proves that the Telegraph, if not its constituency, is still unreconstructed and intolerant. It suggests bulldozing, kukluxism and counting out. It means that a certain faction of the Georgia Democrats—fortunately not all of them—have learned nothing and forgotten nothing since the time when the Government of Georgia was really a "white man's Government"—the Government of an aristocracy of slaveholders. And yet the Telegraph probably wonders why Northern and European capitalists give the South a go-by.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Western says that "Bishop Foster is in special need of a considerable number of young men for appointment to vacant charges in Kentucky. The call is urgent; the need is great. Men of good education, of earnest purpose, and zeal for the salvation of souls, and of unquestionable ability for success in the ministry, are the kind the bishop is in quest of."

A dispatch to the London Daily News from Vienna states that Russia is making extensive military preparations along the Austrian and German frontiers. Tenders have been asked for 36,000 military beds. All the railways have been ordered to have military cars in readiness. A list has been made of the private steamers in the Black Sea, and their Captains have been ordered to prepare for the transportion of ammunition, troops, and provisions. These vessels have ceased executing private orders, and the carraige of corn is thus interrupted. Enormous provision depots have been established along the frontier, and two army corps have been distributed between the Vistula and Bug Rivers. A list has been made of all persons who, in the event of war, will be deported from Poland to the interior of Russia.

"Boss, will you tell me how to make [illegible] cake?" asked a colored [illegible] in a Woodward Ave. drug store a [illegible] ago. "Why, yes I can. SCALLOPED TOMATOES.—Peel and slice a quart of ripe tomatoes. Fry them for fifteen minutes over a hot fire [illegible] a quarter of [illegible]

[illegible] one saltspoonful salt, half a saltspoonful pepper, quarter of a pound of butter. Mode—Break the eggs into a basin, omitting the whites of three, and beat them up with the salt and pepper until extremely light; then add two ounces of butter, broken into small pieces, and stir this into the mixture. Put the other two ounces of butter into a frying-pan, make it quite hot, and as soon as it begins to bubble, whisk the eggs, etc., very briskly for a minute or two, and pour them into the pan; stir the omelet with a spoon, one way, until the mixture thickens and becomes firm. Then fold the edges over so that the omelet assumes an oval form, and when it is nicely brown on one side and quite firm it is done. Hold the pan before the fire for a minute or two and brown the upper side of the omelet with a hot shovel. Serve expeditiously on a very hot dish. The flavor of this omelet may be very much enhanced by adding minced parsley, minced onions, or eschalot, or grated cheese, allowing one tablespoonful of the former and half the quantity of the latter to the above proportion of eggs. Shrimps or oysters may also be added, the latter scalded in their liquor and then bearded and cut into small pieces.

Worth Knowing.

One thousands laths will cover seventy yards of surface, and eleven pounds of nails put them on; eight bushels of good lime, fifteen bushels of sand, one bushel of hair will make about enough mortar to plaster one hundred yards. A cord of stone, three bushels of lime and a cubic yard of sand will lay one hundred cubic feet of wall. One thousand shingles laid four inches to the weather will cover one hundred square feet of surface, and eight pounds of nails fasten them on. One fifth more siding and flooring is needed than the number of square feet of surface, because of the lap in the siding and the matching of the floor. Five courses of brick will lay one foot in height on a chimney; six bricks in a course will make a flue four inches wide and twelve feet long, and eight bricks in a course will make a flue eight inches wide and sixteen long.

Japanese Names.

In Japan, girls are named from plants or flowers, while boys are simply first boys, second boys, etc., though of late years parents are beginning to call them Patience, Fidelity, or some other trait of character. The parts of the body are named with their regard to use. For instance, the thumb the parent finger, the first finger is the man pointing finger, the second the high-high finger, the third the nameless finger, and the fourth, or [illegible] the little finger. The wisdom tooth is the no-parent tooth, because it comes at an age when the possessor is likely to be an orphan. All the mountain names with which we are familiar, such as Green, White, and Rocky, are found in Japan. Animals get their names from their cries.

Faith's Battle-Cry.

BY CHARLOTTE MURRAY.

Oh, what triumphs of joy lie in store for us daily,
If only we never lose sight of our King!
Yes, if only we keep by the side of our Saviour,
And trust in the shade of His sheltering wing.

He is Conqueror now; let us simply believe it,
Though Satan should whisper dark doubts in our ear,
Let us look right away to our risen Redeemer,
And looking to Him will dispel every fear.

Then, amen! Hallelujah! our hearts sing the praises
Of Him who so tenderly cares for the weak.
Let our lips and our lives, and our all, tell His goodness,
Whose glory alone we would constantly seek.

Friday as a Lucky Day.

The Chicago Times sometimes strikes a truth fairly on the head. Here is a point stated by it.

Friday is regarded by some vulgar people as an unlucky day; whereas, for Americans, at least, it has proved itself to be the most fortunate of the seven. It was on Friday, the 3rd of August, 1492, that Columbus sailed from the harbor of Palos for the new world. It was on Friday, the 12th of October, 1492, that he first saw the land, after sixty days of navigation. It was on Friday the 4th of January, 1493, that he started on his return to Spain to announce to their Catholic majesties the glorious result of his expedition, and on Friday, the 15th of March, 1493, that he disembarked in Andalusia. It was on Friday, the 13th of June, 1494, that he discovered the American continent. On Friday, March 5th, 1497, Henry VII, of England gave to John Cabot his dispatch for the voyage which resulted in the discovery of the continent of North America. On Friday, September 7th, 1565, Mendez founded St. Augustine, the oldest town in the United States. On Friday, November 10, 1620, the Mayflower first embarked a few emigrants on American soil at Province town, and on Friday, December 22d, 1620, her passengers finally landed at Plymouth Rock. It was on Friday, February 22d, 1732, that George Washington was born. It was on Friday, June 16th, 1776, that the battle of Bunker Hill was fought and on Friday, October 7th, 1777, that the surrender of Saratoga took place, which event, decided France to give her aid to the Americans. The treason of Arnold was discovered on Friday. Yorktown surrendered on Friday, and on Friday, June 7th, 1776, Richard Lee read the declaration of Independence to the Continental Congress.

The Cheating Priest.

On one of the Tonga islands there was an old heathen priest who declared he had found out how to make something, which he called "the water of immortality," and if any one should drink of this he would live forever, and nothing could kill or hurt him. He made this boast in order to tempt the people who had become Christians to return to the old religion. He said he had drunk of it and would not die.

The chief said to him, "If you are clubbed it can't kill you, I suppose?"

"No," said the priest, "nothing can hurt me."

The chief called for a club and said, "Now, I will try it. If your words are true the club won't hurt you, but if they are false, it will serve you right to have your head cracked for your lies and cheating."

The priest was unwilling to try the test, and disappeared as quickly as possible.

In next year's Presidential election 401 electors are to be chosen instead of 369. If all the States which gave their votes for Garfield in 1880 should give Republican majorities in 1884 the Republican candidate would receive 428 votes, 27 more than enough to elect him. If the Republicans should carry New York, which has 36 votes, they could spare the other two doubtful States, Connecticut and Indiana.

A Woman's Affair.

MRS. E. H. [illegible], the wife of the popular deputy sheriff and assessor of Topsham, Me., writes us on May 15th, 1883: "That she had been severely afflicted during several years with kidney and liver disease, accompanied with severe pains and backache. Having tried many so-called cures, and medicines, and doctor's prescriptions, without receiving any benefit, and while seeking for a cure, she noticed the advertisement of Hunt's Remedy and decided to try it. Having bought a bottle at Mr. Johnson's drug store, I commenced using it with such flattering results that she continued its use, and after using only five bottles the improvement in her health is so marked that she wishes all who are afflicted in like manner to know of this most valuable and reliable medicine; and she most cheerfully recommends Hunt's Remedy to all, and especially to females who are troubled with the complaints peculiar to the sex."

A Family Blessing.

Under date of May 10th, 1883, we have received the following information from Mr. Lorenzo Lombard, of 18 Charles street, Portland, Me. Mr. Lombard says: "For several years past I have been troubled with severe backache and pains in the side, and when I would lie down I could not rest well, as it seemed impossible for me to get into an easy position; and my aches and pains increased constantly to such an extent that I became convinced that I had a disease of the kidneys fastened to me; and after having used doctor's prescriptions and many of the so-called cures without getting any benefit, I was persuaded by a near neighbor, Mr. Jones, to try Hunt's Remedy, as himself and wife had been greatly benefited by its use, and many others of our acquaintances spoke of its merits in the highest terms. I decided to try it, and purchased a bottle at Nichol's drug store, and as soon as I had taken a few doses of it the pains in my back were relieved, and after taking three bottles my backache and lame back are cured, and I can truly testify that Hunt's Remedy is an article of great merit, and will do all that is claimed for it, and I know of many other people in Portland who have found a cure in Hunt's Remedy after all others failed to do any good, and I recommend it to all who have kidney or liver disease, hoping that this may be the means of relieving some sufferer who does not know the merits of Hunt's Remedy."

Christ went about doing good. The true Christian is a follower of Christ in this respect. It is not enough to be personally moral and righteous. It is also required to assist in substituting in the heart and life of other people holiness for sin, and joy for sorrow. What a means of grace it would be for every Church member to be doing daily, in person and to the extent of his or her ability, what such member recognizes as the present and urgent duty of the whole Church! Organized effort is a necessity in some departments of work; but obedience to a sense of individual responsibility is a still larger necessity.

The Livingston Inland Mission has planted stations on the Congo, in Africa, at intervals of from thirty to forty miles, extending over a route of 110 miles traversed by no Europeans except themselves. They are fully supplied with native products by the people. They have acquired the language and are training some of the lads for teachers. The missionaries are thus opening the country to trade and commerce, and thus indirectly are doing a thousand times more for the benefit of trade and commerce than all the expenses of their mission work.

Prof. Verga, in a paper read before the Lombardy Institute of Science, said that serious dangers threaten the Italian people on account of their recent large substitution of alcohol for wine as a beverage. He told a curious story, by the way, of a distiller who died insane from alcoholism, yet had never drank a drop of liquor. He had been so largely exposed to the fumes of impure alcohol while "strengthening" poor wines that his system had absorbed enough of it to poison him.

Bright's Disease, Diabetes.

Beware of the stuff that pretends to cure these diseases or other serious Kidney, Urinary or Liver Diseases, as they only relieve for a time and make you ten times worse afterwards, but rely solely on Hop Bitters, the only remedy that will surely and permanently cure you. It destroys and removes the cause of disease so effectually that it never returns.

MR. EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my two sisters, Mary Noel and Juliette. We were living on St. Philip, between Dauphine and Burgundy streets, New Orleans, when we separated. As near as I can recollect one of my sisters went to Texas and the other to New York, after the death of Mr. Christville. Our mother was Harriet Humphreys, father Bruno. My name was Mary Louise. I was the youngest sister. Address me at 311 Roman, between La Harpe and Columbus streets, New Orleans.

MARY LOUISE PRATTE.

DEAR EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my relatives. Father was [illegible] Jackson, mother Martha Borden. She died just before the close of the war, and belonged to Freeman Hughes, within 15 miles of Selumon, Ala. I left father in Marion, Ala., in 1866, when quite a boy, and went to Bryan to my grandmother. In 1867 my former owner, Hughes, came to Bryan and carried me back to his farm in Perry county. The same year he died, and his widow sold out and came to Texas, and I came with her. My name is Augustus Hughes. Sister is Mary Jackson; her father is Howard Jackson. I left them all in Morgan, Ala., in 1867, and have not heard of them since. My father was living with Mr. Wood; his wife was cooking for Wood, and he was striking in the blacksmith shop. Address me at Anderson, Texas, in care of Rev. F. Gilmore.

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu."
Ask the same physicians
"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:

Plantation Melodies
—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.

BY MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION

By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.

Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be sung as [illegible] they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "[illegible] the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it [illegible] the gold saved from the dross."—[illegible] "Am perfectly delighted with it. It will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

Messrs. A. C. Meyer & Co., manufacturers of Bull's Cough Syrup and other specialties, are doing business in a new and costly structure, Baltimore, Md. The N. Y. Graphic of Sept. 27th, fully describes it.

A bright boy of fifteen, in Brooklyn, died a few days ago of nicotine poisoning. Nine months ago he began to smoke cigarettes. His parents tried in vain to check him. The poison did its work. Medical men could not save him, but were unanimous as to their opinions of the cause of his death.

The Abbeville (Ala.) Times tells of a young man in that neighborhood who worked for a man last year with the understanding that he was to have, at the end of the year, as compensation for his services, the man's daughter for a wife, and a double-barreled shotgun, and having labored faithfully, in due season received his double rewaad.

A Second Emphatic Endorsement.

Mr. Wm. B. Mitchell, editor of the Journal-Press, St. Cloud, Minn., wrote to Mr. Wm. Penn Nixon, asking if a card with his signature, recommending Compound Oxygen, was genuine. Mr. Mitchell writes: "The following letter from Mr. Wm. Penn Nixon, the well-known editor of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, explains itself, and will be read with interest."

"DEAR SIR—I am always happy to bear testimony to the great value of Compound Oxygen, as manufactured by Drs. Starkey & Palen, Philadelphia. I think it the most important remedy for throat and lung troubles that was ever discovered. I feel that it saved my life, and I am always glad to recommend it to those that are suffering from such troubles. The card was not only genuine, but I endorse the remedy now as fully as I did in the card.

"Very truly yours, WM. PENN NIXON."

"Never!" ejaculated the Judge, with great vehemence, getting red in the face. "Den don't talk!"

Martin Luther summed up his ideas of the point of a good preacher in these nine: 'Plainness and coherency; a ready wit; a good power of language; a good voice; a good memory; he should know when to stop; he should be a student, and know what he means to say; he must stake life, goods, and self-aggrandizement upon it; he must be willing to be annoyed and criticised by every body.'

Miss Willard moved the people of the Northwest in a quiet way, but by a mighty force. The people are on one side, the deadly traffic in rum on the other. The business will not bear investigation. It resists every legel restraint. It is in perpetual rebellion. The earthquake at Java is a very gentle shaking up compared with what may be expected yet on this question. The civilization of the near future will no more tolerate this monstrous, criminal business than this age tolerates piracy. The liquor business is doomed.—Pacific Advocate.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. "Gentlemen," said a repentant drinking man, at a temperance meeting held in —— during the Murphy excitement, "gentlemen, it has cost me $10,000 to bring my nose to its present state of perfection." Ten thousand dollars! And what did he have besides his red nose? An aching and remorseful heart, a pain-racked and diseased body; a home where a miserable woman probably dragged her weary life along in wretched, hopeless apathy, crushed and bowed to the earth by the shame of being a drunkard's wife.

One of our leading Indiana workers has a noble and accomplished son who has recently become collector of a bank. DR. JOHN BULL'S
Smith's Tonic Syrup
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.
The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.
The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

USE THE

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.
These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eyes become impaired by their use for the following reasons:
1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson I.—Eli's Death.

The Guilt—Disobedience is the way of death.

Eli was the high priest over Israel and now an old man, ninety-eight years old. He had done wrong in raising his two boys, Hophni and Phinehas. He had allowed them to have their own way, and they grew up—"They made themselves vile, and he restrained them not." When they were vile men the poor old man could do nothing. God punished Eli and his sons. In one battle many were killed and Israel defeated, and at last Eli's son took the ark of God away from Shiloh and carried it into battle. This was a great sin. No one was to touch the golden ark unless God commanded them to do so. Eli knew this; his sons knew it, but they had always had their own way, and so now they take it away from Eli's care. Do you know why they wanted the ark? It was a picture or sign that God was with them, and they knew if God was with them they could win the battle. They took the ark, but God did not help them. They had sinned. The ark was not a help because it was not where God said it should be. When the ark was where God wanted it, then God was with it. Poor old Eli sat by the roadside, fearing and trembling lest something would happen to the ark. At last a messenger came and told him news from the battle. The news was terrible, but it all came of raising sons to have their own way. The battle was lost, his sons were killed, and the ark was in the hands of their enemies. It was too much for the old priest. He fell over and died. Eli's trouble all came from allowing his boys to do as they pleased. Do your parents sometimes punish you? If you disobey and they do not they do wrong, and you must not think they love to punish you; but God's own book says a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame. Learn to obey now and you will be an honor to your parents. Disobedience always brings sorrow and shame.—Western.

NEW BOOKS.

Wayside Springs from the Fountain of Life. By Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D., pastor of Lafayette Avenue Church, Brooklyn. American Tract Society, 150 Nassau street, New York, and on sale at W. D. Skillman's, 90 Camp St. New Orleans. Price 50 cents.

A book that commends itself in every line. Its springs are full of living waters from the Fountain of Life. No one can read it without being benefited thereby. Instead of the trashy literature that floods the country, we would rejoice to find it in every home. It is written in Dr. Cuyler's best style.

Morning Thoughts for Our Daughters. By Mrs. G. S. Reaney. Author of "Our Daughters," "Our Brothers and Sons," etc. American Tract Society, 150 Nassau street, New York. For sale by W. D. Skillman, 90 Camp street, New Orleans. Price 50 cents.

This little volume of 160 pages, is divided into thirty-one chapters, and intended to be used as thirty-one daily lessons. It is interesting to any class of general readers, but is especially intended for girls. Every chapter elucidates some particular scriptural text or other; and impresses sound moral and Christian lessons. We hope it will find its way in the libraries of many of Sunday schools, and Christian homes.

Clung Macpherson. A tale of Brotherly Love. By Amelia E. Barr. American Tract Society 150 Nassau Street, New York. 311 pages.

A story illustrating Scotch life, depicting many vicissitudes, and portraying the beauties and devotion of brotherly love. The moral it inculcates is sound, and of a high order. The more one reads it the more interesting it becomes. It is entertaining to young and old.

Memorial Tributes. A compend of funeral addresses. An aid for pastors. A book of comfort for the bereaved. Edited by J. Sanderson D.D. Introduction by John Hall, D.D. One volume crown 8vo, 500 pages $1.75. E. B. Treat, publisher, 757 Broadway New York.

This is an excellent book, full of comfort for the bereaved of all ages and circumstances. It contains a large number of outlines of addresses, for funeral occasion, and several notable addresses in full. These are all based upon texts of scriptures which will prove stimulating, suggestive and helpful. This work has been compiled from the address of the most eminent divines of the past and present age, both in Europe and America. Among the most noted contributors to this work are Drs. Binney, Bonar, Crosby, Cummings Cuyler, Deems, Fowler, Hall, Newman, Punshon, Talmage, Henry Ward Beecher, Spurgeon and a host of others. No pastor library is complete without it.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A fine sonnet by Whittier, in The Manhattan for October, has for its theme Miss Alexander's touching "Story of Ida," which has been so warmly praised by Mr. Ruskin. What a fruitful field the magazine has in New York and its neighborhood is shown in a well-written paper on "The Valley of the Hackensack." In "The Log of the Atalanta" Mr. Charles Hull Botsford describes Mr. Jay Gould's superb yacht and its voyage from Philadelphia to New York vividly. A third illustrated article is on "The Irish Parliamentary Party," by Thomas P. Gill, who describes the various members of that party in a remarkably vigorous and entertaining way. The thirteen well-engraved portraits which accompany the text are valuable in themselves, and are the first complete collection of such portraits which have appeared in this country. An article sure to attract wide attention is "Washington through Eye-Glasses," by Mr. Demarest Lloyd, correspondent of the New York Tribune. He knows the ins and outs of the capital, and his pen pictures are done with free, bold strokes that make the paper lively. In Julian Hawthorne's "Beatrix Randolph" the heroine has made her debut. A well-told short story is "The Lost Train," by B. B. Valentine. "The Second-Hand Shops of Paris" are agreeably described by Mrs. Lucy H. Hooper. Translations of some dainty love songs by the Spanish poet, Gustave Becquer, by Mr. Richard H. Stoddard, have all the charm of the original, and show that it requires a poet to translate a poet. Mr. W. J. Loftie, of the London Times, has some readable notes on the phases of art and literature in London.

The numbers of The Living Age for Sept. 15th and 22d contain France and England in Egypt, and France and Syria, Fortnightly; The Locust War in Cyprus, Nineteenth Century; Across the Plains, Longman's; King Mtesa, and The Belka Arabs, Blackwood; Two Turkish Islands To-day, Macmillan; Morocca, or a Few Days among the Indians, Month; Earth Pulsations, and Winter Life at Fort Rae, Nature; Unclaimed Money, and The Southampton Artesian Well, Chamber's Journal; The Pathetic Element in Literature, The Closing of the Scottish Highlands, and A Summer Day's Journey, Spectator; with "Master Tommy's Experiment," "Town Mouse and Country Mouse," and instalments of "Along the Silver Streak," and poetry. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers. For fifty-two numbers of 64 large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year) the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 00 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid.

The Wheelman has completed its first year, and entered its second with prospects of success more encouraging than ever. Its emphatic success in the year past has decided the publishers to extend its scope so as to include all out-door amusement, and during the coming year boating, canoeing, yachting, angling, hunting, camping-out, and all kindred sports will receive a fair share of attention in its pages.

The Capture of Jefferson Davis will be fully treated by Mr. Burton N. Harrison in a paper to be published in an early number of The Century. It is a narrative of personal experience, describing the retreat of Mr. Davis and party from Richmond at the close of the Rebellion, and is said to be of decisive historical importance with regard to the event of which there has been so much dispute.

The Editor of St. Nicholas has partly made out a programme of good things for boys and girls to be published in that magazine during the coming year; it includes serial stories by Louisa M. Alcott, Captain Mayne Reid, J. T. Trowbridge, and H. H. Boyesen. The list of contributors to this magazine for 1884 includes F. R. Stockton, "H. H.," Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Joaquin Miller, Charles Dudley Warner, Julian Hawthorne, Philip Bourke Marston, Susan Coolidge, and many other distinguished writers.

The series of separate papers by Dr. Eggleston in "Life in the Thirteen Colonies," which has been appearing in The Century during the past year, will be continued during the coming year, the next being on "Husbandry in the Colonies," and describing the attempts at silk and wine culture, with many other curious experiments and visionary projects. Other papers will treat of commerce, and the social condition, manners and customs of the colonists. The pictures which accompany these papers will all be of historic interest and value.

The Sidereal Messenger for September has several papers of interest to astronomical students. Northfield, Minn. Ten numbers per year for $2.

The Sun.
NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read THE SUN during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read, and like THE SUN for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.

Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs THE SUN makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. THE SUN has absolutely no purposes to serve save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that THE SUN is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.

Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robesonism and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, THE SUN stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interests of the people against the ambition of bosses, the encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that THE SUN is the best religious newspaper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party, and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worth of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of THE SUN discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to his individual liking.

If you already know THE SUN, you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. If you do not already know THE SUN, you will find it to be a mirror of all human activity, a storehouse of the choicest products of common sense and imagination, a mainstay for the cause of honest government, sentinel for genuine Jeffersonian Democracy, a scourge for wickedness of every species, and an uncommonly good investment for the coming year.

Editorial Notes.

The American Reformer thinks the civil service law is winning its way to popular confidence, despite the sneers of the partisan press and the hostility of party leaders.

In its issue of Oct. 5th, the Mississippi Methodist, a church South paper, of Meridian announced a temporary, and possibly a permanent suspension. Insufficient cash patronage and contact with the official organ are assigned as the causes. An effort however will be made to revive it.

The New Orleans City Item notes the increased interest in the cause of temperance in North Louisiana and other parts of the South, and says: "If the progress in public sentiment now going on can continue for another year or two we shall see a great change for the better, and the twin curses of the South, the pistol and drunkenness, abolished from the land."

The Washington organs [illegible] loud in their defense of the Star route [illegible], are now the special champions of the Louisiana Lottery Company in its opposition to Postmaster General Gresham. They are supplemented by other journals now enjoying the Company's patronage, or under the shadow of its influence. All are wholly incapable of [illegible] public sentiment [illegible] condemnation of the [illegible] conveniences for the [illegible]. Their noise may [illegible] with penny whistles [illegible] of diminished [illegible].

What is to become of poor France? She has so completely forgotten the bloody revolution [illegible] of [illegible] that she [illegible] other [illegible] and des[illegible] the [illegible] of the Divine hand in human [illegible] is not far from [illegible]. An [illegible] says: "The [illegible] in schools is [illegible] by the French [illegible] the Deity [illegible] new [illegible]."

The grand jury in Richmond, Virginia [illegible]. The [illegible] of the [illegible] the Week's [illegible] which they [illegible] to escape punishment. The New York [illegible] says [illegible] criminals [illegible] the amount of crime [illegible] where they are read, so that the authorities may properly proceed against them not only in behalf of morality but also for the purpose of reducing the cost of the machinery by which criminals are detected and punished." The papers named each have a large sale in New Orleans, and to this fact we invite the attention of the Mayor and Council, the Young Mens Christian Association, the Prison Reformers, and all others having authority and influence to check the stream of pollution now pouring in.

We are glad to know that the New Orleans University has opened this year with a larger number of students than it has for over ten years. Dr. Dean and his corps of teachers are abundant in labor. We wish them a hearty God speed, the greatest measure of success in their Christian work.

Following close on the unveiling of the statue of Germania commemorating alike the defeat of France and the establishment of the German Empire, came another incident peculiarly exciting to Parisians. The King of Spain, on his visit to Emperor William was given the honorary Colonelcy of a regiment of Uhlans stationed in Strasburg. On his return home he had occasion to pass through Paris. There the populace surrounded his carriage, stoned his escort, and uttered cries of anger and derision; indeed, only the activity of the armed escort prevented personal violence. The President and Prime Minister of France at once tendered apologies, and made the King their guest in an ostentatious manner. The public journals expressed profound regret. In Spain the insult to the King has united the people in support of his government. The Emperor William has forwarded a telegram of sympathy to his late guest. A demand for further apology by France is likely to be made. A senseless street mob has prevented a friendly alliance between France and Spain, and has seriously embarrassed the foreign relations and enterprises of the Republic.

A telegram from New Orleans to the New York Times says with reference to the political situation in Louisiana: "There is a guarantee that there will be no Republican ticket in the field. The Negroes throughout the State, except those in Federal employ, having gone over to the Democracy to a man." This statement without some qualification is misleading. There being no reason to hope for a change of Democratic tactics which in the past have rendered a fair canvass and an honest count impossible, it is probable that Republicans may conclude to avoid the expense and dangers of attempting to carry a State ticket. There have been no conversions to Democracy; the Negroes are Republicans to a man; but if no Republican State ticket is put up for them to vote for, some of them may be induced to choose between two or more candidates of Democratic proclivities. A large number, however, denied an opportunity to vote their convictions will refrain from voting at all. It will be a great misfortune for Louisiana if both parties do not compete for the popular suffrage and offer the voters some chance to escape the arbitrary decrees of the ring bosses—both Republican and Democratic.

Educating the Negro.

THE SPIRIT OF THE SOUTHERN METHODIST PRESS.

Before and during the war the M. E. Church South had many colored members, room was allotted them in their houses of worship, and her preachers took the oversight of them. Soon after the war most of these colored members left this church and joined other organizations. A few however adhered to the M. E. Church South. In process of time it was judged best to organize these colored members into a church of their own, and Bishop Paine with the assistance of other authorities of the M. E. Church South organized the Colored M. E. Church in America. Since that time they have exercised over that church what Dr. Haygood calls a protectorate. The Bishops in their pastoral address to the General Conference of 1882 made favorable mention of the Colored M. E. Church, spoke of them "as in great need of facilities for providing themselves with suitable pastors and teachers of their own race." They thought that whatever assistance could be rendered would be well bestowed. The recommendation of the Bishops was refered to the committee on education; that committee made what was called a strong report, which the General Conference adopted. Resolutions were also passed requesting the Bishops to appoint a commissioner of education who was to "solicit subscriptions for the purpose of creating an educational fund for the benefit of the Colored M. E. Church in America." In harmony with the action of the General Conference the Bishops appointed a board of Trustees. After due consultation this board of trustees thought it wise and prudent to project as a training school for preachers and teachers for the benefit of the Colored M. E. Church in America, the Paine Institute, and two prominent men were secured as teachers. Thus far all of the proceedings had been characterized with great unanimity. It never costs much to give advice or counsel in matters pertaining to the administration of the church, in fact the church has never suffered from the want of advisers, she has had advice enough already to convert a dozen worlds. The friends of Paine Institute had gone as far as advice and counsel would take them. They came to a point where they must have money. It was only a small sum of $5,000 they asked for, it would seem that where there was so much unselfish love as the M. E. Church South claimed to have for the colored people that scores or more of persons would have seized upon the opportunity and given the small sum, but after nearly seven months earnest begging on the part of these men to secure the $5,000, the Alabama Advocate says: "Paine Institute seems to be dragging while this is not surprising, it is nevertheless to be regretted."

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says: "It is to be regretted deeply that Paine Institute is dragging; but this is not surprising. Rome was not built in a day." "This dragging is to be regretted" says the Wesleyan "because these enemies of this particular church still taunt the members with the suggestion that the Southern white church does not sincerely intend to help them."

May be, certainly the Southern white church has had here an open door. But on this question of educating the Negro her great men do not agree. She has but few Haygoods.

Rev. J. S. Stokes, Columbia, South Carolina, in the Christian Neighbor, says:

"The time has come to call a halt in our headlong haste to educate and uplift the Negro. We have followed the brilliant author of "Our Brother in Black" quite as far as it is safe for us to do so. It is now in order for us to pause and reflect and take our bearings. Let us see where our would-be leaders would take us. In his recent speech at Monteagle Dr. Haygood says that at the bottom of our indifference to the education of the Negro is the desire of "bossism"—that we wish to keep the Negro in ignorance that we may the better boss him. In its coarse and broad sense we repudiate the charge; but in that ugly word, Mr. Editor, there is a hint of profound significance. The question comes up, is not the dominance of one race a necessity of the case? Is it possible that there should be two dominant races occupying the same territory? If this be an impossibility, one race must dominate; which shall it be? This is the question. It may seem an ugly thing that, as Dr. Haygood says, we wish to boss the Negro, but when it is a question of bossing or being bossed, all our noblest instincts point to but one solution of the difficulty.

Another writer, in a late number of the Nashville Advocate, speaking of the Negro, uses language like this: "We have one country, one life, one destiny, therefore," &c., &c. There never was a more mischievous sentence penned. That we and the Negro have, fortunately or unfortunately, one country is patent; but that we have one common life and destiny, we do utterly deny. We believe, indeed, in the race improvement of the Negro, and all means to that end. But we do not see the force of any argument to give him equal advantages of education with ourselves, except as far as the public schools are concerned. By all that he can do for himself, by all that his Northern friends can do for him, let him equal or even surpass us if he can; but it is not our part to stultify ourselves by contributing to any such result. The duty of the hour is the education of our own youth. Afterwards, when we can consistently, we will gladly help the Negro to higher and broader culture, but the time has not come.

We hope and pray for the Negro a happy, prosperous future; but we will not be charged with injustice to him if we have still higher hopes and more earnest prayers for our people, and see the best interest of both to be subserved in the higher education and absolute dominance of the Angelo Saxon race.

Rev. C. L. Chilton, in the Alabama Advocate, in answering the question, "What sort of an education shall the Negro have," says:

We hold that the Negro does not now need education in the sense of "book learning" above a certain grade. Nobody objects to the Negro's knowing how to "read, write and chiper." What we object to is, pushing the Negro into an intellectual atmosphere that is too rare for him. If, by education is meant intellectual development simply, and the storing of the mind with classical and scientific knowledge, then we, in all candor, object to giving this to the Negro as a race; and for several reasons. The Negro race does not demand higher education, as we usually term it, for the same reason that a good many white people do not demand it—it unfits them for the sphere of life in which, by nature and providence, they are compelled to move. But what sort of an education ought the Negro to have? First, a common school education, such as he always gets, if his father has a mind to pay his poll-tax and make him go to school. Second, he ought to have technical and practical education. The portion of the race that used to be slaves got this sort—at least some did. And hence, almost all the good carpenters and mechanics and painters and masons and smiths and and cooks, etc., are found among those whose masters taught them how to work. The Negro needs religious education. Not theological schools, but Christian missionaries. Their preachers, as a class, are notorious for their immoralities. They need to have the pure gospel preached to them. They will hear it. They are tired and disgusted in many places with their preachers; and, it may be, the time has come when they will hear us.

Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, corresponding editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says: Dr. Haygood's late deliverances at Monteagle and Chautauqua, and in his "Hagar in the Wilderness" letter, have not pleased the people generally, nor even the Methodists, as far as I can learn. Neither his speech-making nor his flag-waving is after the Southern heart, though they seem to please the Northern well. He urges the education of the Negro that he may be a better qualified voter. Purely secular education, which is the only kind the State has any right to impart, has no tendency to make a man better for any purpose. Ignorance is not the parent of vice, neither is education the parent of virtue. The crimes of the ignorant are apt to be of the grosser and more despicable kind, of which it is easy to convict the unskilful and ill-defended perpetrator, while society condones, and justice, by a thousand technicalities of law, finds excuse for the fiendish deeds of shrewd criminals of the higher sort. It is a slander of the ignorant poor to say that they are the chief criminals of the land. The crimes of the educated are, to a large extent, undiscovered or unreported or, at any rate, unpunished; but the great day will reveal them.

That education does not make men patriotic voters, we need not go far to prove. The fact is that if the Negro is dangerous as a voter at all it is not because he is ignorant, but because he is of an alien race. The Negroes are, for many reasons, less dangerous as citizens than an equal number of any other race not homogeneous with us would be. So long as a large part, and in a few States the majority, of voters are Negroes they will constitute a dangerous temptation to politicians to array them against the whites at the polls, and thus provoke strife and bloodshed, to neither of which is the Negro inclined if left to act for himself. If politicians and pragmatic philanthropists would let the Negroes alone, there would not be a more inoffensive race of people on earth than they, nor any taking their lot in life more easily. Where have the strikes, the agrarian riots and communistic mobs of this country arisen? Among the illiterate whites of the South (the numbers of which Dr. Haygood does not fail to display in his eager appeal for national aid to education) or among the still more benighted blacks? Have they not all originated in the Northern and Eastern States, where the common school has wrought its wonders for a hundred years?

The sooner our whole people recognize the truth that education is a personal possession capable of being used for pecuniary or other advantage, and no more to be bestowed as a charity by the government than money or land or other property, the better it will be for all.

It has been argued by some that we owe the Negroes special help because they were once our slaves, an argument more sentimental than sound. Was there ever a race on earth under a more improving tutelage than was slavery to the Africans who were subjected to it in these Southern States? When or where was any race ever so much advanced in the same length of time as were the Negroes during their enslavement? If slavery was profitable to the whites it was perhaps more so to the blacks. They were fed and clothed, and taught the things most necessary for them to know. They were subjected to such government and discipline as is perhaps best suited to all people in their condition. If they have made any progress since their emancipation it is no doubt due almost solely to the discipline of slavery. Does any one doubt that the Negroes, at the time they were freed, were vastly superior to what they would have been had their ancestors and they remained in Africa?

Nobody is an enemy to the Negro, so far as I know. The opportunities of life and liberty are open before him. Let him make the best of them.

Waco District Conference.

The tenth session of the Waco District, convened at Marlin city, Sept. 6th. 1883. The pastors from every charge was present except one (Denison and Sherman) with their local preachers, exhorters, district stewards, Sunday school superintendents and class leader. The conference was hailed as the good news from a far country, by the inhabitants of Marlin, being the first District Conference ever held in Marlin, Falls Co. Texas. The pastors' reports showed an increase of membership and revivals all over the district. The district stewards reports show an increase of money raised for building and improving, and for support of pastors, Presiding Elder and Bishops and for the various benevolent enterprises of the church, over that of the year ending Sept. 6th, 1882. The Sunday-school superintendents reports show an increase of schools, officers, teachers and scholars, and in the manner and method of teaching. The Sunday-school teachers institute is to be organized in connection with the district conference by A. B. Norris, B. F. Smith and A. Foster, to instill into the mind of the teachers of the Sunday-schools of the district a better method of imparting the great truths of Bible to those they teach. There is an increase shown all along the line of church work. The prospects are good for the future. A resolution has been passed by the West Texas annual conference that preachers receiving an appointment from said conference should take the SOUTHWESTERN. Therefore resolved, that we heartily endorse the SOUTHWESTERN and its heroic editors in their faithful work against the sin of caste. The following resolution was passed by the Waco District Conference: Resolved, that no person be licensed to preach unless he agree to take the SOUTHWESTERN and that no local preachers' license be renewed unless he take the paper. The brethren that have not taken the paper subscribed for it to their pastors. Every thing passed off delightfully, and, as I remarked, the conference was hailed by the inhabitants of the city of Marlin as the "good news from a far country." The sermons delivered there by the preachers were as cold water to a thirsty soul.

A son of Rev. Dr. Atticus G. Haygood, a graduate of Emory College, enters the Musical Conservatory of Dr. Tonrjee, the present term, for a two year's course in music. Young Mr. Haygood has a strong inclination towards this beautiful art, and promises to make a superior musical scholar.—Zion's Herald.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

George Washington, Ouachita: "We have just held our third quarterly conference. Elder Duncan was accompanied by Rev. J. S. Patterson, and their sermons were comforting. Raised for pasror $63; elder $15. There are two churches on the work—Mount Nebo and Mount Sinai. Mount Nebo has 56 and Mount Sinai 94 members. Mt. Nebo paid pastor this quarter $20.50, elder $10. I have a good Sunday-school in both churches, and over 100 scholaas. It is hard to conduct a revival, as people go to work very early in the morning, and it is generally 9 o'clock at night when they stop. I have had to meet many difficulties. Pray for us."

W. Davis, Washington: "Protracted meeting began at St. Marks M. E. Church on Sunday night; a good number of mourners at the altar, and one convert to this time. Elder Albert held our third quarter. His sermon was a treat to the people. We held a memorial service for Bishop Peck, a few Sundays ago conducted by Revs. W. E. Polk, C. Thompson and myself. The church and yard was crowded. We have organized a tabernacle of [illegible] members, and the society is doing good. W. H. Cutler and H. McCrary, a committee from New Orleans were present. Our church is in the lead here."

E. Larkin, Washington: "We are moving on slowly and surely. I have had much sickness in my family, wife has been ill ever since I brought her here. Third conference was held by Rev. S. E. H. Mount. People were benefited by his visit. Rev. A. Luster was present and preached a powerful sermon. Reports were all in order. A basket meeting was held Sept. 9th, and it was an interesting occasion. We expect to raise all of our benevolent money. Pray for us."

H. J. J. Wright, Natchitoches: "The attendance at the camp-meeting was good, fully 600 present." [illegible]

P. H. Hill, [illegible]: "Third quarterly conference was held by [illegible]

[illegible] I have just closed a revival of religion at one of my preaching points resulting in 15 conversions and 12 accessions to the church. On Sunday, Sept. 16, I had a baptizing. Rev. E. Roberts was with me and preached at 11 o'clock, to a very interesting congregation. At 3 p. m. the ordinance of baptism was administered, and thus passed a day of rejoicing with all who attended the services. [illegible] Some years ago he was greatly impressed with the idea that an education was indispensably necessary in the work of the ministry, consequently he [illegible] going to school [illegible] he walked the greater part of the way from Little Rock [illegible] I pray that [illegible] more among us [illegible]

[illegible] Liberty circuit: "I [illegible] this work in April and found it in bad condition. Elder [illegible] me to work it up, and I [illegible] to do so. There is one [illegible] on the circuit. Our people were holding service in a white Baptist church, and they stopped us. We then moved into a little log cabin about 12x14 feet. Our third quarter was held there in July by Rev. C. H. Bullington. Meeting was held in a private house, and 3 united with us. I then determined to have a place on which to build a church, and a committee was appointed and selected a suitable place. I held an eight days meeting which resulted in 8 conversions, 5 additions and 16 received into full connection, 8 on probation. We have bought a nice church lot, and on Sept. 8 we raised $25 which paid for it. Several dollars have been subscribed for the building. The whites say they will help us; and I am on the look out for another place for another church. People are joining other denominations for the want of a church. The people are good, but need training. My pay comes slowly. I have traveled 592 miles, walked 417 and rode only 175 miles."

Editorial Correspondence.

In the dictionary word and work are next door neighbors, etymologically they differ only in a d or a k; but definitely and practically there is a world of difference between them. Hundred of years before Christ, the prophets tells us of a people that drew nigh to God with their mouths while their hearts were far from Him. To judge men rightly take the divine test, not by their words but "by their fruits," by the evidence of their work "shall ye know them." What the Spirit is to the body, that work is to faith. It gives it life, and it is the evidence of it. The evidence of Bro. Johnson's faith in the future growth of our church in Vermilionville is manifested by his persevering efforts. He has suffered as a martyr in seeking to create a sentiment in favor of our church in that town, but is not discouraged. He has a Sunday-school of about twenty, and conducts prayer meetings and preaching services in his own hired room every week. Many promised him to join but hold back awaiting future development. The purpose is to see if assistance will be afforded them to build before breaking away from other alliances with which they are still connected. These were all members of our church, a hundred or more of them, but were ignorantly turned over to the C. M. E. Church in the transfer of their property, the ground of which was thus donated to them. With about $200 or $300 help from the Church Extension Society, or from some good steward of the Lord's money, a good work can be permanently established here in less than sixty days. In this, the parish of Lafayette, with its 240 square miles area, and a population of 13,236, there is not a single Methodist Episcopal Church within its limits. We owe it to ourselves, as well as to our King, to see that Methodism is planted in this open field.

Our church in New Iberia, under Bro. C. Thompson, continues to do well. The Sunday-school has recently bought a splendid organ. Miss Wakefield is the accomplished organist. This source of additional interest has placed the Sunday-school in the first rank both as to numbers and influence. In this charge $73.50 were subscribed to help the presiding elder raise his Gilbert Haven School of Theology subscription. This subscription is a sort of a notice to the other charges as to what they will have to do for the elder to get ahead of New Iberia. Let the whole of the [illegible] district get ready for the [illegible]. Within a hundred yards of our church here, on Saturday night Sept. 8, while our people were preparing for the Sabbath, a brutal murder was committed—combatants two colored young men; place, dancing festival; cause, wicked hearts and fighting whiskey; and an unprepared soul was hurried into eternity. Reader, touch not, taste not, handle not the accursed stuff.

At St. Martinsville we have a good body of members. Unfortunately for us, however, very few of them live in town or even within a mile or two from town. This fact militates against all evening services. Bro. B. Anderson is as ever applying himself to the general upbuilding of the cause. Progress has been made. The crying necessity here, however, and indeed the want nearly all over the district, is a general outpouring of the holy ghost; a general revival of vital religion; divine manifestation of converting power, and the ingathering of souls into the gracious kingdom of our Lord. To this end let every heart, ministerial and lay, prepare His room and the King of Glory shall come in.

At Thompson's the last quarter has been quite dull. The brethren are still without a house of worship. Through hard and persistent efforts some months ago they secured a lot, but thus far have been unable to build. They cry for help. They deserve it. With a little help they hope to build this winter. Bro. Bolden is keeping his little flock together under difficulties. Ever since their church was washed away by the flood of last year our people at this place have had to hold service from house to house. This distressing fact ought not to exist much longer.

Bro. W. Brooks, at Glencoe, was never more popular and beloved among the people than now. During the past quarter over $200 had been collected. A good spirit pervades the church. The new church edifice built last quarter, with the exception of the steeple, is completed outside, and all the sashes, ready glazed, have been hung. It needs only to be ceiled and painted to be the finest church edifice on the district. It is by ten feet the largest. On Sunday, Sept. 16, Thanksgiving Day for the Tabernacles and regular quarterly meeting day, the order turned out in full regalia, and the church was crowded. A grand time was had, which all seemed to enjoy. The old "brick church" and parsonage had been demolished and the debris sold, removing thereby an old land-mark among the people in this neighborhood.

Sunday night, Sept. 16, was spent at Jeanerette. Here death had removed, that same evening, an amiable Sunday-school scholar, a little daughter of Bro. Emile Alexander, our Sunday-school superintendent. The church was mourning with the distressed parents. The Lord blessed us with His presence, and the services proved edifying and profitable.

At St. Peter, another point on this circuit, Bro. Fields is leading the brethren, who have finally succeeded in ceiling their church.

Thus ends the third round, and leaving Jeanerette Monday morning at 3:40 o'clock, at 8 o'clock same day I was here in New Orleans; covering 125 miles in a little over five hours. One more round, and another conference year shall have rolled around. Brethren, let us be true to our King, our church and to ourselves, and let every interest be faithfully and assiduously advocated and fostered. Work, watch, fight and pray for an abundant harvest. For sheaves of spiritual and temporal grains, especially both. Let no cause be neglected. The first portion of the year was largely given to words, let this, the latter portion, be given entirely to work—not for ourselves alone, but for Christ and the general cause. A.

North New Orleans District Conference.

The North New Orleans District Conference met in Thibodaux Sept. 20-21-22. There were 27 members present at the opening, and eight others afterward. Presiding Elder Dale in the chair, and J. W. Hudson, Secretary. At 12 o'clock Rev. F. T. Chinn delivered the opening address. Every member to whom a subject or an essay had been assigned had his paper prepared. The presiding elder's report as to the condition of the work under his charge, and his own work as presiding elder, was full, clear and inspiring. He has done a great deal of travelling; his report showed the district in an excellent condition. The reports from pastors was very good and some highly animating. Accessions were not a few, and in some charges happy conversions. The pastors are full of zeal and energy and are determined to make this year better than the preceding ones. Local preachers and exhorters' reports showed that they are improving in their studies, and that they leave nothing undone to assist their pastor in the church work. District stewards, superintendents and class-leaders each by their reports made a lasting impression on the minds of all present as to the good these officers are doing in the church of God. The pastoral work for the cause of missions is alive. Many of the preachers have their benevolent collections on hand. The work of Home Missions was discussed, and other business of importance was transacted. The conference adopted resolutions of thanks to the presiding elder for the faithful and impartial manner in which he has discharged the duties of his office, and to the citizens, officers and members of Calvary church for their generous hospitality to the members of the conference. On the night of 22d conference closed with a love feast, to meet in Donaldsonville, the time to be fixed by the presiding elder. The local preachers will report answers to the following questions, at the next meeting:

1. How many appointments were assigned you at the last district conference?
2. How often have you preached at each?
3. How many prayer meetings have you held?
4. How many Sunday-schools have you organized?
5. Do you attend regularly the appointments of your preacher where you hold your membership?
6. Do you attend Sunday-school?
7. Have you done all you could to assist your pastor in circulating our church papers, and in taking up the benevolent collections of the church?
8. Do you have prayers in your family?
9. Are you in sympathy with the itineracy?
10. Do you support and defend your pastor in his efforts to do his work, and in carrying out the Discipline?
11. Do you take any of your church papers?
12. Have you provided yourself with the books laid down in the course of study for local preachers?

Reports for the exhorters were adopted, but not so comprehensive as for the local preachers.

Tobacco.

MR. EDITOR—Give me a small space to speak of the use of tobacco. "Resolved, That we advise all our ministers and members to abstain from the use of tobacco," etc. How broad are these few words. Tobacco inflicts many injuries. Two drops of its oil will kill a cat in three minutes. It is one of the most deadly poisons known. Five drops on the tongue of a man will produce almost instant death. It will lead a temperate man to drink. It weakens a man's muscles, shatters his nerves, soils his mouth and makes his breath smell like a person dying with consumption. It will make a man's face look like a spittoon, give the heart disease, destroy his intellect. It will make a man love his pipe more than his wife and children; and cause him to spend more in a lifetime for rank poison than it would take to send his son to college. Dear brethren, thousands of poor heathens are begging for the pennies that we knock out of our pipes and spit between our lips. Tobacco pulls down church houses and rears up alms houses.

The Excursion Curse.

MR. EDITOR:—I wish to say a word to the colored people and others about a habit which is very damning to them in two ways—the habit of running excursions from the 1st of May to the commencement of cold weather. This is hurtful in two ways, from the fact that the money spent is worse than wasted and that, as a general thing, the holy Sabbath is broken.

Some one may say it does not take much money for any one to go out twenty or thirty miles and spend the day in having a good time. Say it costs one dollar for the round trip from Little Rock to Pine Bluff or Morrilton, and 400 persons go—200 men and 200 women. They are gone one whole day. Each one of these men can get say $1.25 to work that day, so each man is out that day, for fare and time lost, $2.25. Say that upon an average each man spends $1.00 in buying what he wants to eat and drink. This will make $3.25 for each man, making a grand total of $650 for the 200 men.

Now, each one of the women can get $1 a day for labor, so each one of them is out, for fare and time lost, $2. They spend for one thing and another say fifty cents apiece, this making $2.50 for each woman, making grand total of $500 for the 200 women, and a grand total of $1,150 for the 400 excursionists, wasted in one day. There are from one to three excursions each week from the 1st of May to October, which range from 400 to 600 participants. I have been speaking of those which go out from Little Rock, and of course there are almost as many coming into the city from other places. The people who participate in this great waste are poor people. A great many of them spend every cent they have, and to have what they want to spend, many of them borrow from others.

I called this a grand waste. Let us see how much it will aggregate.

Say, upon an average, from the 1st of May to the 1st of October, an excursion goes out from Little Rock each week, carrying out an average of 400 persons, it costing them from $2.50 to $3.25 in money and time, it will run up to the sum of $23,000. This is a very small estimate of the amount of money the colored people waste year after year, about Little Rock on excursions. In the last ten years, at this rate, there has been wasted in this way $260,000. Nine-tenths of the people who have helped to waste this large sum are homeless and without the comforts of life. Many of them ought to be saving their money and going to school, and many of them growing up in ignorance.

But let us see who is the cause of a great deal of this and other evils which grow out of it. It is my opinion that in many cases the ministers of the gospel (or so called ministers) and members of some of the churches are great factors in this great evil, and to make them more malignant, the so-called preacher and professing Christain has to gather up a great crowd of people and carry them off from the city on an excursion to a camp-meeting or basket meeting. I think a preacher or member who will go to work and drum up an excursion to go out on Sunday is as far from Christ and heaven as the East is from the West, and therefore needs to be converted.

I am glad to say the M. E. church and her ministers and members never take much stock in this wickedness.

I was carrying on a camp-meeting a few days ago, for the good and not a curse of the people, but the devil had to have a hand in the matter. A good brother of the Zion A. M. E. church, in order to get a good crowd out there at Sweet Home to help us in getting a good collection on Sunday, went to work and drummed up an excursion to go down on Sunday morning. Now, I want to say for the good, and possibly the salvation of the good brother, and all others who would like to take advantage of our camp-meeting at Sweet Home, hereafter to make a few dollars on Sunday, we would like to have you and all you might influence to come, to be present at our camp-meetings, to swell our numbers and help us generally, but not at the sacrifice of immortal souls.

This thing has for three years done more harm than good, and I hope we will never be bothered with it any more. Never do anything unless it is for good.

G. W. SAMS.

Van Buren, Ark.—Herald.

The M. E Church South in Illinois.

The St. Louis Advocate of Sept. 12th, contains a remarkable article on "Southern Methodists in Illinois," by Rev. Colin Murchison secretary of the Illinois Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. It is so full of ignorant prejudice which only partizanship, with an institution like slavery, could have engendered that few persons of common intelligence will be deceived by it. As an illustration of Methodist Bourbonism, which some charitable people think has entirely died out in the South, we have seen nothing like it for years. A ministry such as he describes and the people who sympathise with it certainly could never have felt at home in the Methodist Episcopal Church. We do not charge the writer with willful misrepresentation; but he is apparently so incapable of a fair unprejudiced view of affairs in which he is interested that he could not have prepared a more misleading and untrustworthy statement. It appears that some one in the Nashville Advocate had asserted that "the Southern Methodists are as much to blame for being in Illinois as the Northern Methodists are for being in South Carolina and Georgia." This paper is in the nature of an explanation of how the M. E. Church South came into existence in the Border Northern States. There is no appeal to the reason of a man who can write out the misrepresentations in the third paragraph of this article. It is in fact an arraignment of Methodists of these States, especially of Southern Illinois, because they refused to sympathise with those who attempted to destroy the Union. Some of the statements are not truthful; of which class is the following: "The pulpits Sabbath after Sabbath where polluted, and made to subserve the interests of the political party that the preacher endorsed. Ministers were expelled from Conference and Church because they dared to disapprove of some things that certain officials would do." These persons "hung their harps, as it were, upon the willows, and longed for the privilege of God's house without being disturbed by any of the behests of secret political conclaves, and for the gospel of the Prince of Peace unmixed with political fanaticism." Now any border State man knows just what such writing means. Probably no churches were ever organized with so little "religion" from the Methodist point of view as these which made so great pretense of piety. They were composed of the partizans of a single party. Why not then be honest about it, and say at once that they were disunionists, and that this was the one principle that found expression in these societies. Such people have the right to organize a religious society of their own, if they please. Their is no law to keep them out of any State. There are some people who have a kind of religion and politics that found freedom in these organizations, and we have no disposition to interfere with them. The very people who are described in the paragraph to which we have already referred as bigoted, partizan, unchristian, have treated those who bring this accusation against them with a kindness and liberality which has no counter part in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South. We have for years given them room and fellowship, admitted them into our churches for services, although we know them to be only a political Church. This is the simple fact; these churches were gathered out of the disunion wing of the Democratic party; the greater number of Methodists who prefer the Democratic party, have found ample room in the Methodist Episcopal Church—which makes no distinction between men on account of their politics, but always stands in opposition to disunion.—Central.

A Close Communionist Cornered.

The following is given by the Christian Sun and is a supposed conversation between a Baptist minister and his sprightly little boy:

Boy. Papa, what does it take to make a Christian man?

Papa. Repentance towards God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, well seasoned with good works and a godly life.

Boy. Well, papa, who is a Christian man that I know?

Papa. Why, our good neighbor over the way, Deacon Jones.

Boy. What church does he belong to, papa?

Papa. To the Christian church, my son.

Boy. He is such a good man, let us ask him to join with us the Baptist Church?

Papa. No, my son. we can't do that.

Boy. Why, papa—didn't you say he was a good Christian man?

Papa. Yes, I believe he is.

Boy. Can't all Christians belong to the Baptist Church papa?

Papa. Not unless they believe in close communion.

Boy. Close communion—what is that, papa?

Papa. It is excluding from the Lord's table everybody who does not believe and act just like we do about baptism. Really, my son after all, it is not so much close communion as it is close baptism.

Boy. What do you mean by close baptism, papa?

Papa. I mean only those who have been immersed by an ordained Baptist preacher can come to the Lord's table.

Boy. Papa, does the Bible teach that doctrine?

Papa. Oh, yes, my son!

Boy. Where, papa, please show it to me?

Papa. I will look it up and show it to you some time.

(To this day that boy has not been shown where the Bible teaches that doctrine, but perhaps, he will be if the Baptist Bible is ever printed.)

Boy. What is close baptism, papa?

Papa. Baptism only by immersion by an ordained Baptist preacher.

Boy. Then all who have been so baptized can commune, can they?

Papa. Yes.

Boy. Deacon Jones was baptized in our church, but afterwards joined the Christians and you say he is still a good Christian man, and I should think he could commune, can he, papa?

Papa. No, no!

Boy. Why not, papa, he was close baptized?

Papa. Yes, but—but—well, he can't.

Boy. Well papa, will none go to heaven but those who believe in close communion?

Papa. Oh, yes! all who believe in [illegible] and trust in the Lord Jesus Christ, as their Saviour, will go to heaven when they die.

Boy. Well, papa, if a man is good enough and strong enough in faith to go to heaven, isn't he good enough to partake of the Lord's Supper in a Baptist Church?

Papa. Ah-h-m, w-e-l-l—excuse me a minute your mamma is calling me.

Boy. (To himself) Well I wonder what close communion is good for. Some how I can't see how close communion is close baptism, for Deacon Jones was close baptized and yet he can't close commune, and yet papa says he is a good Christian and thinks he will go to heaven. It is mighty strange—I can't understand why the Baptist Church does that way.

A Homely Illustration of Faith.

Sam Jones was talking to a man of weak faith the other day. The doubter asked if Mr. Jones could not give him a demonstration of religion.

"None," was the reply. "You must get inside the fold, and the demonstration will come of itself. Humble yourself, have faith and you shall know the truth."

"In other words, I must believe, accept it before it is proved, and believe it without proof."

"Now hold on right here. Out West they have a place for watering cattle. The cattle have to mount a platform to reach the troughs. As they step on the platform their weight presses a lever, and this throws the water in the troughs. They have to get on the platform through faith, and this act provides the water and leads them to it. You are like a smart steer that slips around to the barnyard and peeps in the trough without getting on the platform. He finds the trough dry, of course, for it needs his weight on the platform to force the water up. He turns away disgusted, and tells everybody there's no use getting on the platform for there's no water in the trough. Another steer not so smart but with more faith, steps on the platform, the water springs into the trough, and he marches up and drinks. That's the way with religion. You've got to get on the platform. You can't even examine it intelligently until you are on the platform. If you slide around the back way you'll find the trough dry. But step on the platform, and the water and faith come together without any trouble—certain and sure and abundant."—Detroit Free Press.

A Postal Telegraph.

It is reported from Washington that in his forthcoming report Postmaster General Gresham will take strong grounds in favor of a postal telegraph. This will be a wise and sensible thing for the Postmaster General to do. We trust that Judge Gresham will make the following points, which have hitherto been presented by the Herald as representing what the country wants and needs:—

First—Public sentiment will not tolerate the purchase by the government of existing lines.

Second—The government must construct its own lines.

Third—There should be no attempt at a government monopoly of the telegraph.

Fourth—Competition between government and private lines is possible, and it is necessary to protect the public against the abuses of private lines on the one hand and of the government lines on the other.

True Eloquence.

Eloquence is the child of knowledge. When a mind is full, like a wholesome river, it is also clear. Confusion and obscurity are much oftener the results of ignorance than of inefficiency. Few are the men who cannot express their meaning, when the occasion demands the energy; as the lowest will defend their lives with acuteness, and sometimes even with eloquence. They are masters of their subject. Knowledge must be gained by ourselves. Mankind may supply us with facts; but the results, even if they agree with previous ones, must be the work of our own mind. To make others feel, we must feel ourselves; and to feel ourselves, we must be natural.—D'Israeli.

Whem I am Dead.

BY FRANKLIN P. DALY.

When I am dead,
I would not have the rude and gaping crowd
Around me gather, and, 'mid lamentation loud,
Tell of my virtues, and with vain regret
Bemoan my loss, and, leaving me, so soon forget.
But I would have the few, the kindly heart,
Who, when misfortune came, so nobly did their part,
And oft by thoughtful deed their love express—
These would I have, no more, no less—
When I am dead!

When I am dead,
I would not have the high and storied stone
Placed o'er my grave, and then be left alone;
But I would have some living thing I once did love,
Ere I did leave the joyous world above,
Placed o'er me, and in each succeeding year
I'd have my friends renew them, and oft linger near,
With loving thoughts upon the dear one laid below,
And talk of times departed long ago,
When I am dead!

When I am dead
Forgive—O this I pray far more than all—
The anguish I have caused, the deed beyond recall,
Think kindly on me as I lie, so cold, so still,
So poor a subject for thine angered ill.
Think of some generous deed, some good word spoken,
Of hearts bound up I found so sad and broken;
Think gently, when this last long rest is mine,
And gaze upon my form with looks benign—
When I am dead!

A Scot in Search of a Godly Minister.

We remember to have met with a droll history of no less venerable a character than, Ralph Erskine, although we have seen it attributed to Ebenezer. The only amusement in which this celebrated man indulged was playing on the violin. He was so great a proficient on this instrument, and so often beguiled his leisure hours with it that the people of Dunfermline believed he composed his sermons to its tones, as a poet writes a song to a particular air. They tell the following traditionary anecdote connected with the subject:

A poor man, in one of the neighboring parishes, having a child to baptize, resolved not to employ his own clergyman, with whom he was at issue on certain points of doctrine, but to have the office performed by some minister of whose tenets fame gave a better report. With the child in his arms, therefore, and attended by the full complement of young and old women who usually minister on such occasions, he proceeded to the manse of ———, some miles off (not that of Mr. Erskine), where he inquired if the clergyman was at home.

"No, he's no at hame, yenoo," answered the servant lass; "he's down the burn, fishing; but I can soon cry him in."

"Ye needna gie yoursel the trouble," replied the man, shocked at this account of the minister's habits, "nane o' your fishin' ministers shall baptese my bairn."

Off he then trudged, followed by his whole train, to the residence of another parochial clergyman, at the distance of some miles. Here on his inquiring if the minister was at home, the lass answered, "Deed, he's no at hame the day; he's been out since sax i' the morning, at the shootin'. Ye needna wait, neither; for he'll be sae made out (fatigued) when he comes back that he'll no be able to say bo to a calf, let-a be kirsen a wean!"

"Wait, lassie!" said the man, in a tone of indignant scorn; "wad I wait, d'ye think, to hand up my bairn before a minister that gange out at six i' the morning to shoot God's creatures! I'll awa down to gude Mr. Erskine, at Dunfermline, and he'll be neither out at the fishing nor shooting, I think."

The whole baptismal train then set off for Dunfermline, sure that the father of the secession, although not now a placed minister, would at least be engaged in no unclerical sports to incapacitate him from performing the sacred ordinance in question. On their arriving, however, at the house of the clergyman, which they did not do till late in the evening, the man, on rapping at the door, anticipated that he would not be at home any more than his brethren, as he heard the strains of a fiddle proceeding from an upper chamber.

"The minister will no be at hame," he said, with a sly smile, to the girl who came to the door, "or your lad (sweetheart) wadna be playing that gate t'ye on the fiddle."

"The minister is at hame," quoth the girl, "mair by token it's himsel that's playing, honest man; he aye takes a tune at night before ganging to bed. Faith, there's nae lad o' mine can play that gate; it wad be something to tell if ony o' them could."

"That the minister playing!" cried the man, in a degree of astonishment and horror far transcending what he had expressed on either of the former occasions. "If he does this, what may the rest not do! Weel I fairly gie them up a'thegether. I have travelled this haill day in search o' a godly minister, and never man met wi' mair disappointment in a day's journey. I'll tell ye what, gudewife," he added, turning to the disconsolate party behind, "we'll just awa back to our ain minister after a,! He's no a'thegither sound, it's true; but, let him be what he likes in doctrine, deil hae me if ever I kenned him fish, shoot, or play on the fiddle a' his days!"—Rev. Paxton Hood

Family religion requires the highest mutual confidence. The reading of the Bible, prayer in the morning or evening, attendance at Church, cannot constitute family religion. The spirit of the parents must be devout; the children must know that both father and mother depend upon God for direction, and look to him for comfort. The accidental discovery of a parent at prayer makes a deeper impression upon a child's mind than a month of routine services. The spirit in which religious subjects are referred to is more than the things that are said. The undertone is more important than the overtone. Not gloom, nor tasks, nor morbid conscientiousness, but simple, unaffected confidence in God and truth, a personal trust in Christ, and a love for each other which is the result of the love of all for Christ, and a sincere spirit of good-will to all at home and of kindness in thought and expression to all who enter the home or are mentioned there—these make the family religion, and make its Bible-reading, prayer, and Church-going as natural as its social life. No child ever goes out from such a family to become an unbeliever or a scoffer. But from the Pharisaic, the stiff, the dead, the intolerant, whose religion is a yoke of forms without heart, few of the youth become religious.—N. Y. Advocate.

The evils of alcohol drinking do not stop with the individual; they extend to society; and this fact gives to society an undoubted right to interfere for its own protection. To license shops that beget murder and then to punish the murder that the state itself has begotten is indefensible from a moral point of view.

A man's charity to those who differ from him upon great and difficult questions will be in the ratio of his knowledge of them—the more knowledge the more charity—Norman Macleod.

Rev. Petroleum V. Nasby (D. R. Locke.) will travel through the Southern States during the Fall and Winter, for the purpose of writing a series of letters to his paper, the Toledo Blade, his impressions of the great South. The million readers of the Blade who have read "Nasby in Exile," (Nasby's Letters from Europe,) will appreciate how the subject will be handled. Every reader in the South is invited to send for a specimen copy, which will be sent free. The Weekly Blade is $1 per year.

We recently saw a Methodist minister in Mr. Willyoung's store, investing about sixty dollars, mostly in such books as "Ten Great Religions," Max Muller's "Sacred Books of the East," etc. It was none of our business, but we did feel like advising him to let those books suffice for the present in the study of the nine others, and devote a few years resolutely to the study of Christianity. In other words, we believe that, considering the brevity of life, man may carry his study of negative principles too far, so that he shall not preach Christianity with that positiveness which is needed to save souls and build them up in Christian experience.—Michigan Advocate.

Let not any many deceive himself with the thought that because the general spirit of his life is right, his minor short-comings shall bear no bitter fruit. No man sins and does not suffer for it. Towards our infirmities God has infinite tenderness; but He never lets us do wrong and escape. This is His kindness toward us—that by His chastisement He forever seeks to turn us back into the way that leads us to blessedness.

Mr. John A. Walsh was a very important witness for the Government in the star route trials, and because of the importance of his testimony he was forced to submit in the city of Washington to a continuous shower of the vilest abuse. His own experience and the result of the second star route trial have led him to withdraw his civil suit against Thomas J. Brady from the courts of the District of Columbia, and to renew the suit in this City, because he does not believe that he can get justice in the capital. Even his bitterest enemies have never asserted that Mr. Walsh was devoid of sense, and those who know him well know that he is heavily endowed in that respect. It is unfortunate that the Government cannot follow his example, and transfer the remaining star route suits to some city where justice is not handicapped.—N. Y. Times.

Were the sun of prosperity always to shine upon us, we would soon forget our Father's house, our heritage above.

A Wife's Trouble.

For a number of years my wife has been troubled with chronic rheumatism, it being in some portion of her body constantly (except perhaps in the very warmest weather in summer). Last Christmas she contracted a very severe cold, and a diseased condition of the kidneys became manifest, which subjected her to excessive suffering, as the symptoms of gravel became more prominent, her urine being colored, accompanied by a heavy brick-dust sediment.

After trying several remedies without relief, I procured for her a bottle of Hunt's Remedy, which she commenced taking, and before three days had passed she became much better. She continued using the medicine until she had used six bottles, and now feels entirely cured of both rheumatism and kidney complaint. She believes her present excellent health due solely to the use of Hunt's Remedy.

Gratifying Results.

Under date of May 14th. Mr. E. A. Thomson, the well-known grocer and provision dealer, of 78 Green street, New Haven, Conn., writes as follows: "Several weeks since I was taken very ill with kidney disorders, and an examination of my urine showed a very diseased condition of my kidneys, and I had also symptoms of a diseased state of my liver. The passing of my urine was accompanied with severe pains in the small of my back and loins; followed by a burning sensation, and after having stood a while in the vessel, the urine showed a very heavy deposit of a sediment similar to ground brick-dust, and, in a short time, I found that I was such a diseased condition as to require immediate medical treatment, and as I was anxious to obtain the best and most speedy remedy, I looked and inquired carefully, and became satisfied that Hunt's Remedy was an article of excellent merit, and therefore I concluded to give it a trial, and commenced taking it, and before I had taken one bottle I found such a great improvement that I decided to continue its use, and by taking only two bottles the result has been most gratifying in giving me restored health.

"I have ordered a supply of Hunt's Remedy for my store, and shall hereafter have for sale, as I consider it an excellent article for diseases of the liver and kidneys."

Mischievous Malaria.

To say that malaria is mischievous is to put it very mildly. It is all that and more It is cunning, deceitful, treacherous, sly, and underhanded. It does its work in the dark, and in such a sly way that much of the mischief is done before it is discovered. It saps the foundations of a healthy system. It robs the blood of its vitality, demoralizes the liver, confounds the stomach, and makes the victim wish he were in his grave. It is sad to see people sit down in their misery, content to be the victims of mischievous malaria, and thinking that nothing can be done for them. The power of Brown's Iron Bitters over the mischiefs of malaria has been so amply proved that there is no reason why anybody who can procure a bottle of this Prince of Tonics shall suffer. Great is the power of malaria, and great are its disastrous effects. But greater far is the beneficent influence of Brown's Iron Bitters. The preparation of iron in this favorite family remedy can be taken without ruining the teeth or producing constipation and headache. 1

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1883

This paper will be sent from this date to Dec. 31, 1884, to any new subscriber who sends two dollars with the order.

The first of this month was the Hebrew New Year's day.

A supply of Marshall W. Taylor's Plantation Hymn Book now on sale at this office.

"What They Say" has had a fair sale. Some copies still on hand at 10c.

On the first instant, the two cents' rate of letter postage went into effect. Result—increased letter writing over the whole country. The reduction extended to no foreign country except Canada.

Of the 531 Congregational churches in Massachusetts, 253, or nearly half, are without any settled pastors. We should ponder well before attempting any modifications of our present itinerant plan.

The Rev. Dr. J. O. Peck obtained from his pastoral charge in Brooklyn nearly four hundred subscribers for his Church paper. We know of many who are not D. D., who seem to think it beneath their ministerial dignity, to take the trouble of canvassing their congregations for subscribers to their church papers. Oh, for an increase of such Pecks; would that they were scattered by the bushel in all of our extensive territory.

"Remove from the people," he decrees, "the restraints of His law, and you make the country ripe for lawlessness and worthlessness grow rife and under such regime."

The Marital Relation.

If our neighbor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, around on Camp street, will just put on his specks and read the issue of that paper of Sept. 6, he will discover that he did make a sectional accusation. Read:

"The old-fashioned large family of from six to a dozen children is an anomaly and anachronism in New England. There are few Hannah's there yearning and praying for the honor and glory of motherhood. On the contrary there is impatience of paternal responsibility and trouble, and a low estimate of this high privilege."

Our neighbor says, in reply to our exceptions taken to this sweeping charge:

"We commented upon a well known, oft-discussed, and lamentable fact, and in no spirit of sectional accusation."

He headed his article "An Item with a Moral," and after quoting from two so called authorities of minor note, and one especially referring to a slight excess of births over deaths in the State of New Hampshire—a very insignificant pretext indeed for a general accusation against New England—he rushed to these conclusions:

"There is a field for missionary work, and the message to be stressed is, the gospel of the marital relation. With all our sins and sorrows in the South we are happily free as yet from this New England stain and shame. There are few divorces among us and quite all of them on scriptural grounds."

Had the brother chosen to preach the gospel on the marital relation, we have no doubt that he could have found a broad field for labor nearer home than New England. The remarkable natural increase of population in the South of 30 to 40 per cent. he compares with the New Hampshire statistics above mentioned as evidence, it must be inferred, of the higher "yearning and praying for the honor and glory of motherhood" in the South. We fail to discover that any moral has been conveyed by these partial and sectional allusions. And, where, pray, does the evidence come from warranting the assertion that the alleged decrease of births, or any other cause, exhibits a "low estimate of the high privilege" of motherhood in New England? Does he mean to say that this is a "well known and lamentable fact"? We do not believe the accusation to be supported by one iota of credible evidence, and our brother misleads his readers by his hasty conclusion.

Is the fact of decrease in births in any section proof of immoral influences? Is it number or quality that honors motherhood? Is it gospel to encourage a numerous offspring whose density of population and the poverty of parents renders it probable that such offspring will not receive the proper sustenance or care? These questions suggest themselves in an impartial examination of this subject. Were we disposed to be sectional on a social topic like this, we could produce unimpeachable testimony of a laxity of marriage relations in the South. The millions of slaves knew little of lawful matrimony until freedom came, and many are still to be reached by missionaries. The success of Mormon missionaries among the poor whites of Georgia, North Carolina, Alabama and other States has been surprising, and has called for special legislation to meet the emergency. The Legislature of Louisiana, with derisive shouts, almost unanimously voted down a bill to define the crime of public adultery, and to-day the statutes are inadequate for its punishment. It is notorious that all over the South, as a direct heritage from the debasing system of human slavery, miscegenation is in a high state of advancement, and we wonder that our brother did not think of this when inditing his moral essay. We agree with him most heartily that there is need for missionary effort and gospel preaching on the marital relations most conducive to noble motherhood and the upbuilding of a great nation.

There are forty-two religious denominations in the United States.

A Mild Reply to an Angry Assault.

It affords us no pleasure to say, as we are compelled to, that no aspersions of the SOUTHWESTERN have been more reckless or apparently unscrupulous than those which the Methodist Advocate, of Chattanooga, uses with reference to our position on the color line in the churches and schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Its statements are so far from the truth, and couched in such intemperate language, as to make it impossible to class them as any species of legitimate criticism. Could we do justice to our contemporary, or to our readers, by publishing them complete, we would willingly do so, but the fact is they are unfit for the columns of any religious paper, and we have no revengeful spirit to be gratified by so doing. As there is no attempt to discuss any issue, controvert any given facts, and we have no desire to engage in a passionate, personal controversy, we shall confine ourselves to a notice of an innuendo which has twice appeared in the Methodist Advocate. Referring to the editor of the SOUTHWESTERN it says:

"He has a great deal to say in regard to caste, wants our institutions to be free to the colored people, but does not send his children to a colored school. Have his children been students in the New Orleans University, or have they attended white schools?—O, consistency, thou art a jewel!"

If our brother at Chattanooga felt this to be an important point on which he required information, he could have easily have obtained it from Dr. R. S. Rust, Dr. J. C. Hartzell, or Dr. James A. Dean, President of N. O. University. We have no objection, however, to making known the facts. On coming to Louisiana we sent our boys to the New Orleans University one year. Their names appear upon its printed catalogue for that year. Their relations with the faculty and students were pleasant; we never heard of complaint. Unfortunately for them, the course of study at our University was limited, and, desiring to pursue the study of certain languages and other branches, not taught there, which would be required before they could graduate at any first-class university, we found it necessary to send them to another university, and chose one in this State instead of sending them abroad, that we might prolong our enjoyment of their presence and filial affections. This is the truth of the matter, appreciable by any father in the church, and which should wholly relieve us from any well-grounded charge of inconsistency.

Cracking the Whip.

Recently the City Item ventured to express its opinion as to certain cases of wrong doing on the part of some of the Roman Catholic clergy of Louisiana, whereupon the Morning Star read the Item a very significant lecture. It assures the Item that these "priests are the anointed of God. They offer upon our altars the Awful Sacrifice of the new law and hold in consecrated fingers the Body and Blood of Christ, and this Body and Blood they administer to us in Holy Communion." This of course is all gush. The Star does not expect any one in Louisiana to believe a word of it. The assertion that these "priests are the anointed of God" that they hold in their "fingers the Body and Blood of Christ," is so notoriously absurd as to call to mind the palmy days of mental and moral darkness when the Romish church held complete sway over nearly all Europe. But read these words of conclusion and advice to the Item:

One word in conclusion, friend City Item. Catholics, as a rule, are patient and long-suffering, but there is a limit even to their good nature. You have of late, on more occasions than one, given vent in your columns to anti-Catholic spleen, and rendered yourself offensive to Catholic readers. If you think the Catholics of New Orleans and of Louisiana will long continue to pay their money to or for such a journal, or will admit it to their households, you will find yourself grievously mistaken.

There are, perhaps, many Catholics among us who are not in all respects what they should be; but the number of those who care to see their clergy defamed is very limited indeed.

Take, friend Item, an advice that is given in all charity. Look upon this as a good time to amend your ways, and to play quite; doing this on principles of business expediency at least, if not upon those of justice and propriety.

Here we see the intolerent spirit of Catholicism. In no country where the power of Rome is dominant can a Protestant church be built or an open Bible be sold; freedom of speech, freedom of the press and freedom of conscience are withheld. Where the Vatican is dominant he who dares to speak of any case of alleged wrong doing on the part of any Catholic official will be surely called upon, without any reference to justice or propriety, to mend his ways and play quits, not on principles of business expediency but of safety.

No Color Line.

The Government has taken fifty Indian children from the agencies in Dakota and placed them in the Feehamville industrial school at Chicago where they are to be educated and trained to be self supporting and to become useful citizens. It has been demonstrated, says the Inter Ocean, that the Indian children learn more readily are more docile in their behavior, and more easily taught the rules of life by mingling with white children of their own age, than when kept among themselves, where they cannot have the influence of example. They learn most easily by imitation, and the conduct and manners of the whites of their own age with whom they are thrown into intimate contact are adopted by them without instruction or explanation. They secure a knowledge of the English language in playground association more easily than they can obtain it from books, and what their white play-fellows say and do is a constant and never-ending object lesson which their minds absorb and their memories retain."

There cannot be in this country any "color line." We must not have Indian, or Negro States and towns. Assimilation not isolation is the true policy; unification, not separations. We are not in need of schools or churches for either black or white people. We need churches and schools, but let their doors like the arms of the Saviour be open to all.

The Price Current, from behind its new sign, in its new office, on Magazine street, sagely says: "Since our merchants are not now above the receipt and sale of cabbages, eggs and poultry consigned in quantity, we are satisfied by a correspondence of some years standing, that there exists an impediment to the traffic. It consists in the fact that neither the small dealers nor the producers know to whom these products can be sent. We have no other suggestion to offer than that houses which are prepared to conduct this traffic should say so in the newspapers of this city and of those in the regions of country in which the class of articles referred to most abound." If commission merchants will advertise in the SOUTHWESTERN they would find it profitable. Its circulation covers the entire trade territory of New Orleans.

"A St. Louis clergyman" is credited with recently putting an old truth in this striking way: "If a man is thoroughly a Christian, the nerve that runs from his brain to his wallet will be just as much Christianized as the one that runs from his brain to his tongue." That is a fact. And a man opens his mouth for Christ with but little effect when people know that he keeps the mouth of his wallet shut with the tightness of an oyster.—S. S. Times. Come now, Christians, open your purses to the glory of the Lord and the spread of his work. By their works, not their words, you shall know them.

If you enjoy the weekly visits of the SOUTHWESTERN to your neighbor so well, that you make it a practice to go there to see and read it; why not subscribe for it yourself; and pay for what you get? It is certainly more convenient to have one of your own. Another thing is, that to pay as you go is the only honest course. A word to the wise is sufficient. A 50c postal note will pay for the paper till January; six months $1, twelve months $2. Address directly to this office, or to any traveling preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

This paper will be sent from this date to Dec. 31st, 1884 to any new subscriber who sends two dollars with the order.

—Rev. J. J. Billingsley, one of the pastors of the M. E. Church South, stationed in this city, gave us a pleacent call last week. Bro. Billingsley is an admirer of Dr. Haygood.

—Dr. Crary, Editor of the California Advocate, had the misfortune on his way home from the Oregon Conference, to badly sprain his ankle. He has been confined to his room since he reached home.

—Rev. C. H. Claiborne gave us a short call last week. He brings good news from Dulac. As some of the results of a protracted meeting forty-one converts joined on probation and two were received into full connection.

—Rev. J. B. Lewis, Pearl River, reports the death of an infant son, born Oct. 4th. His wife is seriously ill. There is much sickness in St. Tammany parish, more than residents have ever known before. Bro. Lewis says: "Pray for us in this our time of trouble."

—Rev. C. Vennist, a Catholic priest at Labadieville, La., has obtained a verdict against Dr. D. Bienvenu for libel in publishing a pamphlet charging him with adultery and seduction. Defense was given until next term of District Court to make a motion for a new trial.

—The Pittsburgh Conference has member, Rev. M. L. Weekley, who is now eighty six years old and has never been sick an hour in his life, and has yet to feel the first pain. This statement Dr. Buckley says: "We had from his own lips and heard him make a vigorous speech."

—Rev. I. B. Scott, pastor of Trinity Church Houston Texas, on his way home from the Louisville National Convention gave us a pleasant call last week. He made a short stop at Nashville Tenn, says the Central has opened well that the outlook for a prosperous term was never more encouraging. He makes a good report of our work in and around Houston.

—Editor Martinlet of the Louisiana Standard says the Colored Convention was certainly a representative body; good must result from the interchange of opinions among leading men of the race; but it failed to indicate some bold policy to ameliorate the condition of the colored people. The Louisiana delegation is praised. A. J. Dumont nominated Mr. Douglass as president of the convention.

—It will be a matter of interest for the farmer students of the New Orleans University, to learn that Prof. H. A. Clifford has entered upon his senior year in the Wesleyan University, Middletown Conn. Bro. Clifford while in New Orleans won the confidence of all with whom he became acquainted. The South has need of such laborers. We hope to be able to welcome him back to New Orleans once more.

—A postal from Holly Springs says: "Rev. I. B. Griffin, pastor of Holly Springs Circuit is and has been confined to his bed for more then three weeks. He has suffered very great pain during his sickness. Many of his friends in and about Holly Springs have prayed earnestly for his recovery and at this writing (Sept. 29th,) he seems to be improving, and we sincerly hope to see him up soon at his post of duty."

—Rev. Pat Galvin, a member of the Louisiana Annual Conference M. E. Church South, on Sabbath September 16th, was immersed and joined the Baptist. We have no personal acquaintance with Mr. Galvin, but if his being immersed and joining the Baptists makes him a better man, and increases his usefulness as a gospel minister we shall be thankful. Nevertheless we seldom see a grown tree that amounts to much after transplanting.

—Rev. S. B. Darnell of Cookman Institute, Jacksonville, Fla., writes to the editor: "We had a good summer for ourselves and for Cookman. We open on the 15th inst, take no Winter vacation and get on into hot weather; but we are glad to get at the work in the midst of clash of sentiments but triumph of the truth that God is working out the problem of the desting of the colored race. Man's perversity will finally prevail. Thank God for such utterances as we find in your editorials."

—Rev. Father McMullen, Catholic priest, formerly of Richmond, has removed to Terre Haute, and we may expect to hear of a wonderful change for the better in that city before very long. Father McMullen is a good, unassuming Christian gentleman, whose kindness has made him very warm friends in Richmond among Protestants as well Catholics. When he went to Richmond, that pleasant little city contained thirty-two Irish Catholic saloon keepers, but by the good influence of Father McMullen they all quit the business, and now there is not an Irish Catholic saloon keeper in Richmond. It is hoped that his good work will meet with success in Terre Haute. What a Godsend it would be if every parish had a Father McMullen—Indianapolis Monitor.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

We learn that our people at Union Chapel are taking time by the forelock and getting things in order for the next session of the Louisiana Annual Conference. They have resolved to have their church painted and put in order. On the last Sabbath in September they raised $85.50 towards paying for the work. We congratulate Bro. Priestley upon his success.

S. Duncan: "I have been over Shreveport district three times this year, visiting all but three or four points. The brethren are doing well. At the close of the district conference, Aug. 11, friends gave an entertainment and raised $35 to help me pay my subscription to Gilbert Haven School of Theology. It was managed by Bro. and Sister Hill, Cary Williams, Cora Johnson, Sarah Norman and others. Our people, though poor, are willing to help."

TENNESSEE.

G. A. Sanford, Tullahoma: "On July 21–22, Rev. W. C. Miller, from McMinnville, held my third quarterly conference. He preached on Sunday to a large congregation. Paid elder, $9.50; total collection $13.50. Bro. Miller remained four days with us, and the people wish him to come again. I have built a new church on my work this year, 30 by 20, and we don't owe a dollar on it. I expect to do all I can for Christ and my people."

C. H. Bullington, Smartts, Station: "There have been 27 conversions, and 25 joined the church. Sunday-school is in good condition. Something has been raised for the various causes. Our church is doing well."

J. Kenscer, Manchester: "My

third quarter was held by Rev. W. O. Miller. His preaching took hold of the hearts of all, and sinners were awakened. Collection for elder $8.20, missions $2.15. In one week's meeting we had 23 conversions, 14 baptized. Shall bring up all my benevolent money this year. Pray for me."

J. B. Bradford, Purdy: "I have just come home from a series of meetings on my work. Have 13 converts, added 30 to the church, and taken in two new points—one with 28 members, the other with 14 members."

MISSISSIPPI.

Central Tennessee College.

This institution is so well and favorably known that to describe it would be quite a superfluous work. There are five substantial brick and two frame buildings belonging to the group which constitutes the college. There are two other institutions in Nashville devoted chiefly to the education of African-American youths. They are Fiske University and Williams Institute. The former is Congregational and the latter Baptist. The buildings and furniture in the rooms of the students and parlors are furnished at a greater cost in Fiske and Williams than in Central. Limited means has necessitated the most rigorous economy in expenditures, and evidences of this economy appear on the exterior as well as interior of all departments. This is one of a system of charity schools created by the M. E. Church, and mainly supported by benevolence administered through the Freedmen's Aid Society. These schools have been located in important centres, convenient to a large population of colored people throughout the South. This has consumed all availiable funds. Without other resources nothing was practical but to make haste slowly and cautiously, always with the least possible expense, and the greatest possible thoroughness in all branches of instruction as a compensation for deficiencies in buildings, etc. Some pupils have been lost to Central as a consequence of this unfavorable contrast in exterior, but her gain by reason of other features in which she excels has been more than a compensation for these losses. A brief visit there recently at an unexpected moment gave the writer a most excellent opportunity to examine, and left a favorable impression as to the condition of things. There is not enough ground, but what they have is well located and adapted to the purpose. There is good natural drainage, and the sleeping apartments are all above any taint of malarial poison. The first building in and to the north of a group of four is the residence of the genial President, Dr. Braden. It is comfortable, kept in model style, and is accessible to all who have any claim upon the courtesy of respectable people, color always immaterial. The chief embellishment here was the quiet, sweet face of Mrs. L. C. Braden, and the graceful dignity of Miss Braden into whose hands it was our good fortune first to fall upon our arrival, the Doctor being absent. Next the chapel, with sleeping apartments above them, the boarding hall with parlors and ladies' sleeping apartment above. We explored this building thoroughly. The announcement that we would look into the young ladies' bed-rooms caused considerable of a flutter among them, but without cause, for we found them as neatly kept as in any well regulated home. The preceptress, Miss Barnes, a rather handsome lady of Eastern nativity, though she has but recently assumed the arduous duties of this station, gives evidences of proficiency which are exceedingly encouraging. The girls love her for the sociable and other amiable traits which are making themselves manifest in her character. There was formerly some unpleasantness in consequence of the late incumbent of this position but with the debut of the present a portent of harmony is traceable in the collegiate horizon. The diet of the college is simple but carefully prepared, the matron and the cook are both colored, which formerly was not the case. This is generally believed to be a change for the better, and all agree that the fare is better although the cost of getting and preparing it is not enhanced. The cook is a cheerful, warm-hearted lady that might very well represent Mrs. Stowe's ideal aunt Chloe. The kitchen and dining-hall arrangements are very complete; the laundry is yet in an embryonic state. Any pupil will be, by mere contact, made better for following such order as that which preceded and followed our supper. This is the order daily at breakfast and supper, dinner of thirty minutes is free; but let me describe the order at supper and breakfast, it is as follows: At the last bell all enter the hall quietly and at once seat themselves in order at the several tables of which there is one long and seven short ones; next a blessing is asked, then the meal proceeds; after this quietness reigns, every one waits, and the Doctor converses a few minutes on some proper subject; then a chapter is read from the Bible, a hymn is sung, then prayer; after this the gentlemen pass out to the westward into the campus and the ladies pass through an entrance to their quarters; thus matters progress daily. How can the effect upon the students be any other than the best? is it any marvel that conversions frequently take place in this institution? The order is that of the best families. The Doctor, the writer, preceptress and three of the white teachers sat at table; it worked well; all regarded it as a necessary result of the situation. The next is the principal building; the upper floors are occupied as sleeping rooms for young men. The library and cabinet of specimens are well begun but require much aid for their completion. The school rooms are well situated for convenience and properly furnished, but all this does not supply the demand; they need more land, more and better buildings, better furniture for the rooms, and for the museum and library much remains to do. The Lord speedily give us the men and the money to do it. The departments covered by the curiculum of this college are elementary, normal, classical, scientific, theological, legal and medical. They have corresponding to these departments the various literary associations, so that a good deal of experience is obtained along with theories. Dr. Braden said "We aim to make the college a home. It is this domestic feature that more deeply than any other impressed me. If they can maintain at that institution all that is essential in a Christian home they will thus meet the most urgent want of the Freedman, for he had no home when freedom found him. Since he embraced it he has been chiefly concerned about getting the foundation of a home laid, that is, getting land for himself and schooling for his children. In this he has had large success. Now if the college will send back his sons educated gentlemen, and his daughters gifted in knowledge of the house-keepers' arts as well as in any other, then are these colleges greatly needed among us.

At Fiske the motto in practice has been to put Congregationalists on duty. At Williams let none but Baptists wield the ferule and the birch. At Wilberforce the rule has ever been: Receive all cheerfully who come to us, but put only African Methodists on guard. The rule at Central differs from all these, some say unwisely so. Among the teachers here are found gentlemen and ladies, colored and white, belonging to the Methodist Episcopal, A. M. E., and Baptist churches. They are all efficient, render faithful services, and have the confidences of the young gentlemen and ladies in attendance at the college. Large numbers of the attendants in this institution are of exceedingly poor parentage and hence pensioners on the bounty of the church. The teachers are paid principally by the Freedmen's Aid Society. An earnest effort is now being made to secure an endowment of $10,000 each to the chairs of theology and medicine. The colored patrons of the school are engaged in this, but the gifts from individuals are necessarily very small, the income from tuition, board and other sources is inadequate to the demands. Dr. Braden, wife and daughter, have worked with considerable industry there for many years; and if he has not always had the co-operation of those who should have been deeply concerned in the welfare of the college he has now the respect and confidence of all for his entire consecration to the cause of education, and his fidelity to that particular form of it in which he is engaged. Though the Central is not especially devoted to Negro education, the present conditions of society render it impossible for them to do much else there and do that also. Hence their work is confined chiefly to Americans of varigated complexion. Beside this the original policy of the church to man these schools with their own graduates is being strictly adhered to in this institution. The colored teachers and a matron does right well for a beginning. Take it all in all this college is doing a great work, and deserves the best wishes, material aid and prayers of the patronizing conferences.

WHAT BECOMES OF THE GRADUATES?—This is the living question. As to the girls, some of them marry as soon as they are out of school, and thus pass upward at once to the most responsible positions in life, that of wives, mothers and enlightened keepers at home; some find employment in the professions they have been mastering, and others are retained to serve in the college.

The Alumni stands thus, class of 1870:

George Bryant Barber, Nashville, attends the M. E. Church. Winter S. Woods, minister in the M. E. Church, since united with the Congregationalists, he was also teacher in Central. Chas. E. Alexander, class of 1876, Principal in West Tennessee Preparatory school. Henry T. Noel, M.D., Freshman, 1877, Medical School 1879, practitioner in Nashville, steward in the M. E. Church. John S. Bass, M.D., Medical School 1878; practitioner, Murfreesboro, Tenn., originally and still of the A. M. E. Church, class of 1877. Annie Y. Bond, married an M. E. preacher. Sarah A. Patton, teacher, member of the M. E. Church. Elizabeth B. F. Young, teacher in Davidson county, Tenn., member of the M. E. Church, married a lawyer. Class of 1880: Mattie J. E. Scott, married M. E. pastor. Lucy J. H. Johnson, class of 1880, married M. E. pastor. Eva Holus, dead. Cordelia Hayden Wilkins, married a doctor, member of the M. E. Church. Emma J. Pickett, member of the M. E. Church, wife of M. E. pastor. Rebecca A. Sharber, member of M. E. Church, teacher at Spring Hill, Tennessee. Florence T. Hay, originally and still a member of the A. M. E. Church, teacher in Tennessee and Illinois. Susie P. Manson, member of the M. E. Church, teacher in Fayetteville, Tenn. John F. Moreland, member of M. E. Church, pastor in Tennessee conference. Amanda Pool, teacher.

AMALYSIS.—Here are seventeen normal graduates, all but two members of the M. E. Church, these two belong to the A. M. E. Church, and one left us for the Congregationalist; males, 6; females 12; married professional men, 6; dead, 1; teachers, 6; of the males 4 are preachers and 2 are doctors, in all 18. The academic course makes the same showing. Thus is the Central Tennessee College helping to solve the problem of the nation by making sure a useful future to the African-Americans. The question, What becomes of the graduates? is here answered to the great credit of the College and the lasting good of the race it serves so well.

Clark Chapel, under the pastorate of Rev. L. M. Hagood, has its full share of students in attendance; but to insure this it was necessary to make it a nice church and give it a sensible pastor, both of which conditions happily exist there at present. The writer is indebted to this pastor and Dr. Braden for courtesies in viewing the city by moonlight; the private vehicle of the pastor was at our command constantly.

Inhuman Treatment of Colored Convicts in Texas.

The inhuman treatment of colored convicts in Georgia, Texas, and in nearly all the Southern States continues to be a burning shame to the South, and a horror to all humane observers. Read what the colored men in Texas, in a full representative convention say of the system or practiced upon their race in that state:

TREATMENT OF CONVICTS.

Another sore grievance that calls for the consideration of this Convention is the treatment of convicts, a large proportion of whom are colored. It is inhuman and cruel in the extreme. We do not refer to those that are kept within the walls. They are under the immediate care and supervision of the management, and we believe considerately treated. But most of the convicts are scattered over the State on farms, having no one to administer to their physical, moral or spiritual needs but a host of inhuman, brutal convict guards. When a fresh convict is carried to the farms, he is taken down by the other convicts and beaten, at the command of the guard and that, too, with a large piece of cowhide. The guard takes this method of taming the newcomer. Of course this lays him up, but in a few days he is hauled out of his sick quarters and put to work, whether he is physically able to do it or not. The law provides that a convict physically unable to work shall not be required to do so, such inability to be ascertained by the examination of the penitentiary physician. But, convicts on farms, who are mostly colored, have no physician to determine such inability, and even when sick and dying have none, unless the hiring planter, who has no particular interest in saving his life, sees fit to employ one. In many cases sick convicts are made to toil until they drop dead in their tracks. Many again, driven to desperation by inhuman treatment, seek to relieve themselves by attempting to escape when the chances are against them, thus inducing the guards to shoot them, which they are ready to do on the slightest pretext. Others are maltreated by being placed in the pillory or stocks until they are dead or nearly so. When convicts are brutally murdered, nothing is done with their slayers unless the indignant citizens are prompt in insisting upon their punishment. In nine cases out of ten, parties sent to investigate these occurrences report the killing justifiable, because guards and their friends find it convenient to make it appear so. When legislative committees visit one of these convict camps, they always find the convicts ready to report that they are well treated, because all of them, both white and black, are previously warned by their guards to report thus or accept the consequences which will surely follow. Again we will state, although the law justifies the killing of a convict escaping from the penitentiary, when his escape can be prevented in no other way, still we fail to see wherein it can be justified when the convict is carried on a farm, away from the penitentiary, and given a chance to escape only to be deliberately shot down in attempting to do so. We believe such to be deliberate murder, and should be punished as such. Though our men and youths are sent to the penitentiary to be reformed, in most cases they are made worse by the inhumanities and immoral habits of their guards, who, in many cases, are worse morally than the convicts themselves. We think that this Convention should pass a resolution condemning, in strongest terms, the practice of yoking or chaining male and female convicts together. This is an act of officials, done only for the purpose of further demoralizing those persons, especially so where they are only county convicts.

Such friendish barbarities are simply horrible, a disgrace to any State. To remedy this evil, in a measure, the convention asked that the Governor appoint, at least, one colored inspector, "to investigate the affairs of convict camps, and the management of convict labor on private farms." This request is perfectly just and reasonable; and in view of the facts in this case, justice demands that it be granted.

SUGAR GINGERBREAD.—Soft gingerbread, made with sugar instead of molasses, helps to give variety. Half a pound of sugar should be rubbed with three ounces of butter until the butter is soft as batter. To these should be added two well beaten eggs, one teaspoonful and a half of ginger, half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little water and half a cup of milk or cream, and flour enough to make soft batter. Bake as soon as it is mixed in a hot oven. Eat while fresh.

The Population of India.

The recent census of India, according to an article in the London Daily News, shows the population of that great country to be 253,891,821 persons. This is far in excess of what was supposed to be the number of inhabitants, and presents a respectable appearance even by the side of China.

The population is divided as follows: 187,937,450 Hindus, 50,121,585 Mohammedans, 6,426,511 Nature Worshipers, 3,418,884 Buddhists, 1,862,334 Christians, 1,853,426 Sikhs, 1,221,895 Jains.

The "Nature Worshipers" referred to in the table above represent the aboriginal (Cushite) population of India, the "hill-tribes," etc., found mostly in the forests of Arsam, Chota Nagpore, the Central Provinces, Berar, etc. The Christian missionaries have found their readiest converts among some of these tribes, as the Santhals, Kols, and others. Among the Christian population one half is Roman Catholic.

Clear Vision.

"The pure in heart shall see God." Thus spake the Master. It must, therefore, be true that none but the pure in heart can see God. "In fact," says Julius Hare, "every impurity is like a cloud spreading before our spiritual eye, and blotting out God from our sight." Seeing, then, that there is no intensity of bliss comparable to that which fills the soul that beholds the glory of the Father in the face of the Son, how earnestly should men desire purity! Nor is that most precious of heavenly gifts far from any genuine seeker. God offers it to him who believes. He waits with it at the gate of each man's affection. Why then, O thou that [illegible] after purity, dost thou not stretch out the hand of faith and take this inestimable blessing?—Selected.

"John," said a clergyman to his man, "you should become a teetotaler; you have been drinking again to-day." "Do you ever take a drop yourself, meenister?" "Yes, John, but you must look at your circumstances and mine." "Very true, sir," says John; "but can you tell me how the streets of Jerusalem were kept so clean?" "No, John, I can not tell you that." "Weel, sir, it was just because every one kept his ain door clean."

"Ah, good morning. Going to church to-morrow?" "Church! Oh, yes, I guess so. Who holds forth?" "Oh, let's see. Miss Crescendo is to sing an aria, Miss Pianissimo will warble a bit, Bravura he is to hum on the tenor side and old Andante will come in somewhere on the chorus. It will be way up." "But who preaches?" "That makes no difference. Some fellow who will touch up our transgressions mighty light."

The Father of Fish Culture.

Seth Green's Ideas About the Finny Tribe and Some of His Varied Experiments.

(Turf, Field and Farm.)

"How did you ever come to devise this scheme?"

"I have been working at it ever since I was large enough to bend a pin."

The above remark was addressed to Mr. Seth Green, the veteran fish culturist, who is known to the entire world, and his reply indicates the extent of his labors.

"When I was quite young," he continued, "I would lie on the limbs of trees that reached out over the water entire afternoons watching the movements of the fish and studying their habits. In this way I discovered many characteristics which were before unknown. I saw, as every observer must see, the destructive elements that are warring against fish, and I realized that unless something were done, the life in the streams of this country would become extinct. To counteract this disastrous end became my life work, and I am happy to say I have seen its accomplishment."

"Were you successful on the start?"

"No, indeed. Up to that time all artificial attempts to hatch and raise fish from the spawn had failed, and I was compelled to experiment in an entirely new manner. The work was a careful and tedious one, but I finally succeeded, and today I am able to hatch and raise fully seventy-five per cent of all spawn."

"Enormous! Why, that is a larger percentage than either the vegetable or animal kingdoms produce in a natural condition."

"I know it, but we exercise the greatest care in the start, and guard the little fellows until they become able to care for themselves."

The foregoing conversation occurred at Caledonia where the representative of this paper was paying a visit to the State fish hatcheries. It has been his privilege to report very many interesting sights within the past twenty-five years, but the view presented here exceeds in interest anything ever before attempted.

"How many fish are there in those ponds, Mr. Green?"

"As we have never attempted to count them it will be impossible to say. They extend way up into the millions though. We shipped over three millions out of the ponds this year and there seemed to be as many afterwards as before. We have nearly every variety of the trout family and hybrids."

"You speak of hybrids, Mr. Green. What do you mean by that?"

"I have experimented for years in crossing the breed of the various fish and am still working upon it. We cross the female salmon trout with the male brook trout, and thus produce a hybrid. Then we cross the hybrid with the brook trout, which gives us three-quarter brook trout and one-quarter salmon trout. This makes one of the finest fishes in the world. He has all the habits of the brook trout, lives in both streams and lakes, develops vermillion spots on his sides, rises readily to a fly, is far more vigorous and fully one-third larger than ordinary brook trout of the same age. The possibilities of development in the fish world are great and we are rapidly ascertaining what they are."

As the man of news watched the countenance of Mr. Green while he was giving the above account, he could not but feel that he was in the presence of one of the few investigators who, from a rich and life-long experience, bring great benefit to the world! Let the reader imagine a strong and stalwart frame, surmounted by a head strongly resembling that of Socrates, and covered with a white silky beard and luxuriant gray hair. Seth Green, the father of fish culture, is a picture of health, and the reporter could not help remarking so.

"If you had seen me the last winter and spring, young man, you might have thought differently, said the veteran.

"How is that? One would think, to look at you, that sickness was something of which you knew nothing."

"And so it was until last winter. I went down into Florida in the fall to see what kind of fish they had in that state and study their habits and was attacked with malaria in its severest form, and when I came home I realized for the first time in my life, that I was sick. My symptoms were terrible. I had dull, aching pains in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone, and I felt a lack of energy such as I had often heard described but had never experienced. Any one who has ever had a severe attack of malaria can appreciate my condition. I went to bed and remained there all the spring, and if there ever was a sick man I was the one."

"It seems hardly possible. How did you come to recover so completely."

"My brother, who had been afflicted by a severe kidney trouble and threatened with Bright's disease was completely cured by a remedy in which I had great confidence. I therefore tried the same remedy for my malaria and am happy to say I am a well man today and through the instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure, which I believe to be one of the most valuable of medicines. Indeed, I see it is endorsed by the United States medical college of New York, and that Dr. Gunn, dean of that institution, has written a long article concerning its value."

"And are you now as well as formerly?"

"Apparently so. I keep the remedy on hand all the while though and do not hesitate to recommend it to others."

"One question more. How many ponds of fish have you here and how are they divided?"

"Well, we have 43 ponds which are divided up as follows: 22 ponds of brook trout, 2 ponds of salmon trout, 4 of McCloud river or rainbow trout, 2 ponds of German trout, 3 of California mountain trout, 2 ponds of hybrids, 4 of one-quarter salmon and three-quarter brook trout, 2 ponds of gold fish, and 1 pond of Carp. Then we have what we call the centennial pond or "happy family," consisting of crosses of different fish, including Kennebec salmon. Land Locked salmon, California salmon, brook trout, salmon trout and hybrids. These fish range in size from minnows to 18-pounders, and in age from one-and-one-half months to eleven years. I forgot to say, also, that we have a 'hospital' pond, which is entirely empty, which speaks pretty well for a community of many millions. Indeed the whole secret of fish culture can be summed up in four things. Impregnation,—using no water. Plenty of food. Plenty of pure water and cleanliness."

The numerous fish exhibitions which are taking place in all parts of Europe and the unusual interest which is being manifested in this subject throughout the world all owe their origin to the process above described as originated and conducted by Seth Green. It is certainly cause for congratulation to every American that this country produces so many men whose genius brings value to the world, and it is proof positive of the greatest merit that a remedy even with such high standing as Warner's Safe Cure is known to have should be so strongly endorsed and recommended by one so reputable and reliable as Seth Green.

Nordenskjold has penetrated into Greenland for a distance of 360 kilometres, and reached an altitude of 7,000 feet above the sea. He finds the country simply an ice desert, with no open water. On the northwestern coast he found a very low temperature, but on the eastern shore the weather is comparatively moderate.

MR. DDITOR—I desire to find my brothr, who went off a few years after freedom. His name was Neese Browning, and he belonged to Blumenberg, in Attala county, Miss. Father is dead, mother is living. Address me at Barksdale, Miss. THOS. HUGHES.

DEAR EDITOR—I desire to hear from my relatives. My mother, Mary, belonged to Jess Siler, in North Carolina. Her children were Campbell, Oliver, Lucretia, and Lucinda. We were sold by Siler to Capt. Jarrett, in Georgia, in 1831. We were sold to Thompson, who swapped my mother and three children to Judge Morton. That left me in the Thompson family until emancipation. My mother and brother Oliver and sister Lucinda were sold to a negro trader, Harris Tharp, and I have not heard from them since. My oldest sister and I lived together until emancipation, and she is here in Texas. Mother's youngest brother was Levi Siler. Address me in Brazos county Texas, at Milican, care pastor of M. E. Church.

CAMPBELL SILER.

When others are suffering, drop a word of kindness and sympathy. If they are suffering from a Cold, give them Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; a few doses of this valuable remedy will afford instant relief, and a twenty-five cent bottle will cure the worst Cough.

Every church needs her periodicals, as media of statement, explanation, or defense of her doctrines and polity. The newspaper preaches to congregations that the grandest cathedrals could not hold. It talks to persons in leisure moments, around the fireside, or when the smith drops his hammer, or the carpenter lays aside, for the time, his plane and his saw, or the farmer turns himself and his team "out" for rest.—W. H. Anderson.

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night-sweats and cough—prompt measures for relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs;—therefore use the great anti-scrofula, or blood purifier and strength-restorer—Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to Cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections, it has no equal. Sold by druggists the world over. For Dr. Pierce's pamplet on Consumption, send two stamps to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

If God made the world you need not fear that he can't take care of so small a part of it as yourself.—Rev. Edward Taylor.

There is being an attempt on the part of the authorities in Ireland to abolish the practice of holding "wakes" over the dead, because they have contributed so much to the spread of infectious diseases. An act has been formulated against it and recently a man was arrested under its provision for permitting a wake over his child.

Better Than $10,000.

"I spent over $10,000 in 23 years," said Major H. W. Hines, of Boston, Mass., "in being doctored for epilepsy. I employed the best physicians in New Orleans, St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, London and Paris, but all to no purpose. Samaritan Nervine has cured me entirely." $1.50.

If we are cheerful and contented, all nature smiles with us; the air seems more balmy, the sky more clear, the ground has a brighter green, the trees have a richer foliage, the flowers a more fragrant smell, the birds sing more sweetly, and the sun, moon and stars all appear more beautiful.

—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.
By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.
WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever-varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

A man may hang the Decalogue upon the walls of his home and still be an idolater—even as many a one has the Lord's prayer for an ornament, on the walls of his chamber, who yet forgets to pray, both at evening and morning. The thing to be done is to hang the Decalogue on the inner walls of the heart.

Mrs. James Vaughan, of Gentle Valley, Idaho, missed her 18-month old babe, and her neighbors, following the tracks of a large bear into the Bear range of mountains, found the babe curled up in a bunch of weeds and grass, in the bushes sound asleep, with its little tattered and torn dress thrown over its head. Close beside the sleeper was the warm bed of the bear, which had abandoned its captive on the approach of the searching party.

D. A. Chappell, of La Grange, Texas, in the Texas Christian Advocate, Church South, says in defence of Dr. Haygood: "Our church is not without resources, and it is a shame to us that we have done nothing for these Methodist negroes who, by their adherence to us, have cut themselves off from aid from other sources. To neglect them longer would be to show ourselves recreant to a most solemn trust. Instead of criticising and denouncing the man who is trying to awaken our people to a sense of their duty upon this subject, we should be eager to lend him a helping hand."

Hon. James Jackson, chief justice of the supreme court of Georgia in his article in the last North American Review, entitled "Shooting at sight," says: "The day of the grog-shop and of that which it produces—the inflamed passion and the deadly weapon—is rapidly passing away. The local option retail law generally pervades the State of Georgia; county after county prohibits the traffic, reduces expense and diminishes crime. The prosecuting officers of the State are paid according to the number of criminals tried, and they inform the writer that in those counties where this traffic is prohibited, the office of solicitor-general is worthless. Soon, let us hope, the generous Southern sun will shine upon an entire population sober, prosperous, peaceful and happy. May that population be swollen into a vast multitude by a tide of emigration which shall enrich every valley and cover every hill top with good sober, industrious men."

DR. JOHN BULL'S

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER, LESSON II. Oct. 14th. SAMUEL THE JUDGE. (1 Sam. vii, 1-17.)

The ark or golden chest, was taken away from Isreal because [illegible] took it away from the [illegible] God had said it should be. [illegible] the Philistines took it they [illegible] sorrow and trouble with it. [illegible] blessing was for his people when they obeyed. The ark was meant to be where God said it should be. So the ark was among strangers. They set it beside their idol god. This idol's name was Dagon. Next morning the idol was down, and was on the ground. This frightened the people, and they sent the ark away. Everywhere they took it trouble followed. At last they put it on a cart and [illegible] cows to it and sent it away. These heathen people said now if the cows take the ark back to the Israelites we will know all our troubles [illegible].

They turned the cows loose, and then followed to see where they would go. They went [illegible] wards God's people, and [illegible] some [illegible] ing in [illegible]

It was [illegible] God's [illegible] with joy. [illegible] would think they would have [illegible] had [illegible] said they must not open the ark, but [illegible] God punished them again. At last Isreal cried to God for help, and although they had been so forgetful and bad, God helped [illegible]. They went to S[illegible] served God all [illegible] He held a gr[illegible] and they fa[illegible] came a gr[illegible] enemies, and [illegible] A great storm [illegible] thunder [illegible] their enemies, and they ran [illegible] Samuel raised a great stone to remind them of God's love. He called the stone Ebenezer. Our text t[illegible] God has he[illegible] will keep us if we love him.—Western.

A western paper says: Nothing will cure some sick men more quickly, than an office, properly applied.—This "cure" may be very beneficial in many cases, but we would say: If a man suffers from a cough or cold, give him Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

On Sept. 28th, the great statue of Germania, on the Niederwald, opposite Bingen, was unveiled in the presence of Emperor William, and all the German sovereigns and Princes, and a crowd of about 150,000 people [illegible] every prominent person connected with the civil and military Government of the Empire, was present, and each division of the German Army was represented. On the [illegible] is the following inscription: "In memory of the unanimous and victorious rising of the German people and the re-establishment of the German Empire—1870-1871."

Materialists are always in trouble. They build [illegible] on nothing and change with the season. They glory in facts, and build largely on imagination. They boast of logic, and bridge chasms by assertions to conceal their poverty of connecting links. They leap from nothing to matter, and from matter to life though an unabridged gulf divide them. They evolve the highest from the lowest, and yet they ridicule the idea of the Highest creating the lower. They assume the eternity of matter, but deny the possible eternity of mind. They imagine force before substance, yet discard the Almighty and Infinite God. They scorn the faith of Christians, but on their own imagination. They confess their own reasoning unsatisfactory, and still plod in the dark, insisting that facts must justify them, though unable to find them. They treat living as if it were the offspring of dead matter, though no case of life out of dead substance is recorded. Thus they flounder, imagine, guess, dogmatise and end where they begin, in Agnosticism. We need not fear their bite, for they knock out their own teeth; Christianity will not suffer for it rests on a rock.

Fathers of the present generation of young folk revive their boyhood in their sons' enjoyment of Captain Mayne Reid's new serial story, promised for the coming volume of St. Nicholas. That Mayne Reid's powers of observation and vigorous writing are unimpaired is evident from his recent papers on Rural Life in England in the N. Y. Tribune. His new story is to treat of adventures in Terra del Fuego, "the land of fire."

Mrs. Olipant has written for the November Century a paper on Queen Victoria, which will be more particularly devoted to her life as a happy queen and mother, before the death of the Prince Consort. The frontispiece of the number is an engraving of an original oil study of the Queen, made from life by the young American artist, Thomas Sully, in 1838. It was preliminary to a life-size portrait of the Queen in full regalia, painted [illegible] Palace for the [illegible] Society of Philadelphia.

The Sun.

NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read THE SUN during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read, and like THE SUN for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.

Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs THE SUN makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. THE SUN has absolutely no purposes to serve save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that THE SUN is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.

Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robesonism and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, THE SUN stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interests of the people against the ambition of bosses, the encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that THE SUN is the best religious newspaper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worthy of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of THE SUN discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to his individual liking.

If you already know THE SUN, you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. If you do not already know THE SUN, you will find it to be a mirror of all human activity, a storehouse of the choicest products of common sense and imagination, a mainstay for the cause of honest government, sentinel for genuine Jeffersonian Democracy, a scourge for wickedness of every species, and an uncommonly good investment for the coming year.

Terms to Mail Subscribers.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid, as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6.00 a year; with Sunday edition, $7.70.

SUNDAY—Eight pages, $1.20 a year.

Editorial Notes.

So many who fall from grace find it so hard to get up again that the process is unsafe. Avoid it by prayer, firmness and daily reflection upon the Christian pathway.

A conference of the heads of temperance organizations, and a union movement would materially promote the cause. Who will take the initiative? A general call if issued would meet with a prompt response.

Rev. E. O. Thayer, President of Clarke University, Atlanta, Georgia, in a note to the Editor says: "God bless you in your fight against caste. Our church must come to the anti-caste policy or quit the South."

The Catholic Examiner of Brooklyn, N. Y., heretofore issued monthly, became an eight page weekly after Oct. 1. It exhibits typographical neatness and editorial ability. It is a young and lusty defender of the Roman Catholic Church.

The French Minister of War, Gen. Thibaudin, who absented himself from the official reception of King Alfonso, has resigned, his successor has been appointed, and Spain is fully satisfied with the apologies offered for the King's rude treatment in Paris.

French troops are going forward and the prospect of a peaceful solution of the Tonquin difficulty grows dimmer. An attack upon regular Chinese troops, and a movement to intercept a body of Chinese regulars is reported. This unjust war, provoked by a Christian nation, will greatly retard missionary work in China.

We venture the opinion that quacks, irresponsible herb-doctors, conjuring fortune-tellers, medical [illegible], pretenders of great power in the black arts, enjoy a more lucrative practice in this State than in any other Southern State. the auction block like chattel slaves? We shall not believe it until the evidence is produced, but if it be true, as alleged, that the Republican party in Louisiana has no particular principles or convictions which it has the manhood to contend for, and is about to engage in a miscellaneous scramble for such rewards of money or office as may be dropped by corrupt political leaders, then it will continue to be shorn of all power to serve its friends, and fail to command the respect of its opponents.

Leigh Hunt, superintendent of schools in Des Moines, Iowa, has adopted a plan of practical instruction in earning and saving money. All the children are encouraged in opening bank accounts. They are incited to earn money in honest and manly ways. Some black boots, deliver papers, shovel snow from sidewalks, carry in coal, and work at different trades in spare hours, and thereby cultivate a spirit of thrift and economy in addition to their scholarship.

Secular and Romish papers that have lately been harping about the failure of Protestantism, must certainly be ignorant of the facts in the case. Read Dr. John Hall's pertinent question touching this matter: "How," asks the doctor, "can that be a failure which in A. D. 1600 did not exist, and in A. D. 1883 controls populations to the extent of 408,000,000, while its rivals, the Roman and Greek Churches, combined, control 280,000,000?"

Ohio on the 9th inst., elected a Democratic Governor and State ticket by from 6000 to 8000 majority; elected a Legislature that is Democratic by 20 to 30 on joint ballot; and has checked prohibition for a time. It is singular how whisky and Democracy do always cling together. The result in Ohio is more of a victory for the whisky dealers than it is a Republican defeat, and it will be unsafe to say how the State will go in 1884. Iowa elected a Republican Governor and State officers by 20,000 to 30,000 majority; a Republican Legislature; and stands squarely for prohibition. We regret the results in Ohio, but perhaps they were necessary for the better formation of public opinion on State and National issues.

Superintendent Rogers, of the New Orleans public schools, in his report to the city school board, dated Oct. 3, said intimations had been received from Dr. Curry, general agent of the Peabody fund, that he might be able to contribute something from that fund in aid of the public schools during the present session. That noble charity ought not to be squandered to supply deficiencies due solely to Bourbon legislation. The schools are now in a shameful condition because of a Romish-Bourbon conspiracy to destroy them. The plea of poverty is thoroughly dishonest, and not entitled to a moment's serious consideration. Louisiana and New Orleans are abundantly able to sustain the schools were there any sentiment in their favor strong enough to make an impression on law-makers and State officials.

Mr. Parnell has paid off the mortgages on his property to the amount of $65,000 with the money raised for him, and the estate is believed to be now quite free from debt.

Flight of the Church from Jerusalem.

BY REV. L. W. ELKINS.

The death of St. John contributed largely to hasten the death of Judaism. Another event, however, before his death, had helped forward this result, namely, the destruction of Jerusalem, and the consequent expatriation of the church of Jerusalem. While Christianity was in its childhood, it was necessary to leave it in its cradle to be nurtured in its home associations; but the time came when it must go forth, leaving the ties of country and home, to enter upon the world wide mission to which it was destined. These Christians must see the fallacy of the hope of a messianic kingdom to be erected at Jerusalem, on the material throne of David, by being thrust away from the capital of their nation and the shrines of their ancestors. They must be brought to realize that here they have no continuing city—that the kingdom of God is not only to be world wide, but spiritual in its character, and to find its empire in the domain of regenerate hearts—to create a holy nation out of all the kindreds and tribes and people of the earth. Like Abraham, father of the faithful, they must go forth into a strange land not knowing whither they must go, with naught but the providence of God for guidance and support.

The prophecy of our Lord touching the destruction of Jerusalem was about to be literally fulfilled.

In the year A. D. 66 an armed rebellion of the Jews arose against the Roman authorities.

The rebellion continued more or less severe until Titus, the son of Vespasian, then Emperor of Rome, was sent by his father to subdue it. He laid siege to Jerusalem in April, A. D. 70, immediately after Easter, when the city was filled with strangers. The Jews fought with well nigh superhuman energy. At last in July the Castle of Antonia which fell into the Jews' hands was surprised and taken by night. This gave Titus command of the Temple, and he proposed that if the insurgents would surrender he would spare that magnificent specimen of art, but he was insultingly refused and then he ordered the Temple walls to be set on fire, but still wished to spare the sanctuary, but a soldier unbidden thrust a fire brand through the golden door and soon the holy place burst into a sheet of flame. It was now as if the whole mount was on fire, and amid the jubilant shout of the soldiers and the bitter wailings of the people, the holy and beautiful house was consumed to ashes. "Even the heathen Titus exclaimed that God aided the Romans and drove the Jews from their impregnable strongholds." Josephus estimates the number slain at eleven hundred thousand, and the number sold into slavery at ninety thousand.

The Christians, remembering the Lord's admonition, had fled before the siege to Pella beyond Jordan, in the North of Perea, where King Herod Agrippa the second, before whom Paul had stood, opened to them a safe asylum. This great national catastrophe, from which they themselves were marvolously delivered through the force of Christ's own words, must have had a powerful effect upon the minds of the Jewish Christians everywhere, in freeing them from the outward economy of the old Testament and Jerusalem as its center. They could now no longer look backward.

According to Dr. Rothe, the church as a whole "burst forth from the chrysalis of legalism, awoke to a sense of its independence, and in government and worship took its stand before the world." As the first century closed, with John, the last of the apostles, dead, and the "church with its center shifted far westward of Jerusalem," with home gone, and all its memories, Christianity must hence forth look within its own depths and maintain itself by resources from within. The seperation of Christianity from Judaism was now complete and was recognized as a distinct religion even among the heathens.

We have no statistics to show the number of the Christians, but they were scattered more or less through the most populous part of the Roman Empire, they were numerons and strong enough to attract attention everywhere.

Letter From Bro. Henson

MR. EDITOR—Having returned home after accomplishing what I could at a colored man's national convention, I am now ready to do field work and close my quadrennial on the San Antonio district. I am glad I stand so near the end of four years' successful labor. I told a friend I was glad my time was so near out. "Why? You ought to be sorry, we are sorry," he replied. "Yes, I would be sorry, too, if I had the least sense of not having done my whole duty."

Mr. Editor, you know of the convention without any word of praise or condemnation from my pen. Louisville is the home of my friend and preceptor, Gen. J. A. Ekin, who, knowing of my visit to Louisville, made full arrangements for my comfort without cost to me, while in his city; however, Dr. Fitzbutler, chairman of committee of reception did not see me at the depot, nor did any of the committee happen to be there. The General, feeling certain that I would fall into the right channel, made appointment for me to preach in Jeffersonville, Ind., on Sunday, 23rd. The notice appeared in the Daily News; however, I did nat see it as it was late when I arrived at Louisville Saturday night. Being put off at the wrong house, after a long ride in the bus, the agent told the driver to take me to a house not known by any I happened to meet in the city. Being used to hard lots, I could not feel alarmed at this, since I was in Louisville. I moved on as fast as I could, not knowing where I was going, but carefully avoiding all dark alleys; after a while I met a young man who told me that I was going in the right direction to the Tipton House, and volunteered to escort me. I found him to be a clever fellow and a member of the old M. E. Church, the very thing I wanted to know. Next morning Bro. Marx was on hand early and guided me to Bro. Muir's church on Jackson street, where I worshipped all day beginning with the Sunday-school. A funeral took place as soon as the Sunday-school was over. A good sermon was delivered by the pastor for this occasion. Services were to be conducted by myself for the remainder of the day, as the pastor had to preach a sacramental sermon at another church at 3 p. m.; However, Bro. Upshur, of Georgia, preached, at 3 p. m., an instructive sermon. I made a few concluding remarks and closed service till night, at which time Bro. Pinkney, of South Carolina Conference, would preach to the congregation according to promise, if he failed to come, I would preach. Bro. Upshur was about to go when he said "You say, Bro. Henson, that you are a minister belonging to West Texas Conference?" "Yes, sir." "I did not know that; I thought you were only a local preacher that belonged here." A short walk and pleasant converse brought us to our parting place, to meet next day at the hall. At night I was rapidly looking over a passage of Scripture when Bro. Muir whispered, "I believe there he comes." In good old Methodist style, we slipped the Bible to its place on the pulpit, and Bro. Pinkney preached a sermon long to be remembered. Nearly everybody I met at the hall next day were strangers to me except our Texas delegation. I could see that we were meeting a fine set of men. For the first time since here I saw the familiar countenance of my venerable friend, Gen. Ekin. On invitation I visited the home and family of the General the next day, 26th, with friends from Texas and Kansas. The reception was perfect and cordial, the interview was of a broad and comprehensive nature. Here arrangements were made for me to preach at Jacob Street Church, which I complied with, Thursday night, Sept 27th, accompanied by the General and Col. Mason. On leaving the General insisted that we should call as often as opportunity would allow. My friends remarked, after leaving the house, "Bro. Henson, I tell you we feel as though we have been somewhere." The writer was the recipient of many words of kindest friendship of General Ekin while in Louisville. He would have me visit more extensively the exposition than was done by the convention en masse, and I did so Thursday during the day, and our eyes feasted largely in visiting the different departments. We went and came back over the I. & G. N. and Mo. Pacific to St. Louis, thence to Louisville over the J. M. & J. R. R., which sweeps through a country full of saw mills, foundries and factories. I never in all my life saw any portion of country where the earth was so completely subdued as Kansas, Illinois and Indiana. A land of fine stock and fine everything that eye can behold. I could not help exclaiming: These people have no time for devilment; a land of school houses and churches, notwithstanding much of the country looks as though it was newly settled by a people filled with enterprise and ambition. They are friendly looking; if one wanted sour krout he would have to buy it. Many more such murderous raids as the Marshall affair will soon lead hundreds if not thousands of our people to seek these congenial climes. We are made to feel like the fleeing fugitives in a strange land without any protection by the authorities. We cannot feel as though this is our own native home. Sunday afternoon and night service, Sept. 30, were enjoyed at Denison with Bro. G. Bragner, our pastor at that point. Their new church is a credit to pastor, people and presiding elder. One lay over here was from 2:30 p. m. to 12:40 a. m. I was not interrupted until between Eddy and Troy, this side of Waco, when some men, very poorly clad, tried to jerk me out of my seat, with bitter curses on their lips; there were five of them. Mr. Wm. Ward, the conductor, came speedily to my relief and pulled us apart. This conductor simply did his duty. Oh, if men in authority would only do their duty! Men of this character that run upon me are the class that are disturbing the peace of our country, who take the law into their own hands at will, and the authorities seem to be powerless to protect colored men from their fury. And when their conduct is so shocking that it cannot be hid, then the newspapers set up a howl, "Negro uprising! Negroes rising!" and protect, shield and defend these men who disgrace the country by shifting the blame from their own guilty shoulders to those of the innocent. Oh my God, how long. Haste, O day of justice and righteous judgment.

Yours truly,

MACK HENSON.

Austin, Texas, Oct. 10, 1883.

Congratulatory Letter.

Rev. Frank A. Hardin of the Rock River Conference, a most successful revivalist, thus writes to Walden & Stowe:

Messrs. Walden & Stowe:—I congratulate you on your new singing book, "Songs of Redeeming Love." It certainly is the best book I have ever used in my meetings. It is rich in good choir pieces, spirited revival choruses, beautiful solos, and with "Hymns of the Heart" bound with it, it is the book of books for prayer and social meetings. We used this book with great profit at Lake Bluff and Desplaines Camp Meetings. Scatter these blessed songs by the million.

FRANK A. HARDIN.

In Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi and Alabama, they have local option laws, which many of the counties have taken advantage of to prohibit the sale at retail of intoxicating drinks altogether. The result is in every case most satisfactory. There is a perceptible increase in wealth and refinement, a diminution of crime, and an improvement in the general welfare of the people. The work has not made much progress in Louisiana; but the people are becoming tired of annually spending an amount equal to the proceeds of the sugar crop to prepare inmates for the prisons, poor-houses and orphan asylums.—City Item.

There are 87 counties in Georgia where a man cannot buy, beg or steal a drink of whiskey, and none can be purchased in the State excepting in some of the larger towns. This is the result of persistent efforts. We can succeed in Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, or any other State as well as in Georgia. The only prerequisite is faithful effort and abiding trust in God.

"Some of the infidel papers," says the New York Advocate, "publish scraps of news about Christians. Here is one from which they may get such comfort as they can: Chaplain McCabe goes to Dakota this month to dedicate fourteen new churches, in fourteen consecutive days."

This paper will be sent from this date to Dec. 31st, 1884 to any new subscriber who sends two dollars with the order.

On the third Sunday in October we will do what we can for Gilbert Haven school. Pray for us."

T. W. Davis, Corinth Circuit: "Our work is on the increase, and growing in a prosperous condition. On the fourth Friday in August our Sunday-school celebration of Concord Chapel came off. W. H. Page, Superintendent, was in the chair; prayer was offered by the pastor; then came singing by the choir. A. T. Smith announced the exercises to the audience. There were 300 persons present, 60 pupils 3 teachers. After the exercises were over the sisters were on time with their baskets, and we had a fine dinner, after which the pastor delivered a beautiful address to the Sunday-school. On the 17th and 18th our presiding elder, J. M. Shumpert, held our first quarterly; the brethren were on time. We had a glorious conference. On Sunday the elder preached a lovely sermon at 11 o'clock a.m., after which sacrament was administered. I have just closed my protracted meeting, 13 conversions, 3 accessions. We are now preparing to convene one at Tuscumbia Chapel. It seems that God has thrown his glorious benedictions upon us this year. We ask the prayers of all the brethren that God may continue His blessings upon us."

B. Stewart, Edwards: "The work on the Edwards charge is moving on finely. Our new church in the country has 35 members, seven have been converted and ten added to the church. Sunday-school is increasing in town, with Bro. I. S. Thomas as superintendent and Miss Josie Leonard, Sister Davis and Bro. P. W. Baldwin as teachers. Elder Williams was with us; he preached a glorious sermon to a crowded house and administered the Lord's Supper to 83 persons. Collections $11. We expect to bring up our benevolent collections to conference. Pray for our success."

TENNESSEE.

T. Woods, Cedar Grove: "I have just closed a protracted meeting which resulted in 33 conversions and 26 additions. I baptized 15 children, 14 adults. We are having a good time, and have raised for missions $, Freedman's Aid, $2.55; Church Extension, 50c; tracts, 25c; conference, 25c. Hope to raise all our assessments. Pray for us."

A. Beach, Riceville: "Our camp meeting lasted 10 days; 10 conversions, 5 added to the church. Collection $10. We have organized a conference singing choir, and have enrolled 100 young men and ladies. It is a great help to the missionary cause. M. Worthington is secretary and Mattie Chestnut assistant; A. Beach in the chair."

TEXAS.

S. Coleman, Waelder: "Peach Creek is looking up. Our pastor, Rev. Lee Reed, has been grandly successful, having obtained 253 converts in two years. We are going to have a festival Oct. 19 and we hope our friends from surrounding places will come."

H. Swann, Austin: "Please correct a mistake in a letter from Austin, Texas, in the issue of Sept. 27, stating that we received from the Church Extension Society $400 and collected from the people $13. We received from the Church Extension Society by donation to aid in building our new church, $500, and collected from the people $1,300. We are still doing all we can to push the work to completion."

Green Bragner, Denison: "Elder Mack Henson visited us and preached an excellent sermon."

Alma and Garrett, C. E. Heaton, pastor: The Holy Spirit has been with us working in the hearts of the people. A number have been converted and our people greatly strengthened. There were five accessions to the church.

At Harrisburg, Bro. Ashley, pastor, our church is having a great success numerically, financially and spiritually. In two years it has grown from nothing to a church of considerable importance. The pastor paid up to date, and all the benevolent collections well provided for.

M. A. Daugherty, presiding elder of Austin District: "The good work among the Swedes continues. The Swedish church at Austin has bought an additional lot, so it can enlarge its church edifice—plenty of room and a house to rent. A fine bell has been mounted on the belfry of the Central Church. Nine miles up the river from the city is a class composed mostly of Southern people who adhere to us, declining all offers from the Church South. Bro. E. C. Wacker, a German, devoutly pious, a strong and intelligent man, has been appointed to have charge of this work. Our camp meeting at Mason was a season of sweet and rich enjoyment."

VIRGINIA.

From a communication of H. M. Church in the Northern we learn that Charles E. Bradley and a little band of brethren, at Berryville, are struggling hard to build a church in their growing village of 1500 inhabitants. They have been ousted from their church by the Methodist Episcopal Church South (the matter is in the court now), and they struck out to build them a church which they shall certainly own. The little society there gave all it could, the Church Extension Society have given them a good lift, and Bro. Bradley collected at four camp meetings in Northern New York Conference $229 this fall, and from a brother in Little Falls $10, making $239 in all. They need considerable more, and friends willing to help may remit to Charles E. Bradley, Berryville, Va.

Natchitoches Camp Meeting.

DEAR EDITOR—Now that the camp meeting is over, we think it advisable to inform your readers of its results, and let them decide whether it was a success or not. We would content our minds that it was a grand success, benefiting all who attended, and we have a right to believe it has been a blessing towards not only our people but the community in general. On Sept. 13th Rev. A. J. Pickett, of Pleasant Hill, preached the introductory sermon at 3 o'clock. Your humble servant preached at the night service. Among the first arrivals were Rev. A. J. Pickett, Rev. V. Chapman, Rev. Chas. Crockett; then followed Rev. Alexander Spears, from Campte, who did yeoman work in the pulpit and aroused the mourners at the bench; next was Rev. David Shelby, of Allenville, with his brother, Geo. Shelby, Chas. Mack, a local preacher, and Bro. H. Daniels, a local preacher of Shreveport. The next day crowds came in in every conceivable way of travelling. Saturday evening the Lord sent a shower to cool the atmosphere and lay the dust; but rain did not prevent us from worshiping our God. Sunday it rained but we yet went on while the rain descended. We had 30 at the bench bowed in reverence to our God. On Monday came Rev. J. W. Richardson, of Bayou Sala and Sister Susan Boxter, of Alexandria, to do work for Christ. Our camp meeting lasted for ten days. The exhorters who were present conducted the 6 o'clock prayer meetings. There were present of this list: Bro. Geo. Shelby, of Allenville, T. Sims, T. Mitchell, A. Thickland, of this work. The hours for service were, prayer meeting at 6 a. m., on the ground; preaching at 10 a. m., to 1 p. m.; services commence in afternoon at 3 to 5:30 p. m.; night services 6:30 to 20 p. m. On the eleventh day we had a union meeting, when the following brethren who remained preached and called a collection: Bros. Louis Martin, $3.35; Horace Chapman, $2.55; Jordan Wysinglis, $2.30; W. Harris, $3.05; H. Daniels, $3.85; D. Shelby, $5.10, King Mickelberry, $3.70; Crawford Williams, $2.05; J. P. Calvin, $3.30; John Jefferson, $2.55; J. W. Richardson, $2.75. At night services at the church my collection was $4.30; total collection for the day, $38.85. We cared for all who came, and upon the ground during the meeting all classes and all denominations were represented. Romans and Baptists aided us to carry on the meeting. The good people of the city of Natchitoches gave us a good cheer by sending in to us about $15. Sister Cora Redmon brought in about $e2, besides cakes of various kinds. They came in their hacks, with their wives, their sons, their daughters, and relatives and cheered us on by saying it was a grand a meeting as ever they had the pleasure of witnessing. Some told us they were converted into religious belief after listening to our sermons, and would have bowed at the altar but for the tantalizing of their associates. The sermons were all good, the brethren worked well. The sermon of Rev. Valcour Chapman, of Mansfield, La., on the text, "Endless Punishment of the Wicked," was full of force and logic, and elicited quite a crowd of whites, and whenever he preached his sermons were the general topic the next day. We can but speak well for our young brother and wish him God speed in his labors. Revs. A. Spears and D. Shelby delivered each a special sermon to us that will never be erased from our memory. Bro. Richardson did splendid work. He will not soon be forgotten by these people. Sister Boxter surprised all by her courteous manner and energetic endeavors to win souls for Christ. Her words fell like dew-drops upon the people. She organized a Woman's Home Missionary Society with about 20 members: Cora Redman, President; Maggie Slaughter, Vice-President; Paul Slaughter, Secretary; Sarah Houston, Treasurer. During the meeting we had 59 to bow at the altar, besides many who asked us to pray for them standing in their seats or giving us a sign by the uplifted hand. We have on roll those who joined on probation 36. Reclaimed 13. Converts 6. The believers are much encouraged, the sinners are weakening, the church is revived. Our white friends have some knowledge of our mission. We are going ahead in a protracted effort in the church. We cannot close the letter without bearing kindness in our hearts towards all the brothers and sisters who came and helped us. God has blessed us and his blessing were made plain even to some precious souls. Yours truly

Notes From Nashville.

Hon. John M. Langston, minister to Hayti, visited the Central Tennessee College on the morning of October 1st. He was invited to give some personal experiences in his efforts to reach his present literary and social standing. He stated that President Braden, in introducing him had alluded to his struggles in early life. He had struggles with poverty, but that was not the worst, the colored people of the North had suffered far more from the hate and contempt of the whites on account of their color, before the war, than the Southern Negroes had since their emancipation. Among his earliest recollections of the contempt of the whites from which he suffered was seeing the little woman, who had come from New England, and was teaching a school for colored children, in Chillicothe, Ohio, treated with a shower of rotten eggs in the streets of that city. She was his teacher, and thirty years after, when speaking to an immense audience, he alluded kindly to this little woman, who had taught him, when it cost something to teach colored people even in the North; an aged couple came and spoke to him; the wife was old and feeble, but she was the teacher of his childhood, who had heard that her old pupil was to speak and had come, though feeble, to see and hear him. In that same town of Chilicothe, he said, that a young colored man was mobbed, because being near-sighted, some one had made him a present of a pair of gold spectacles, which he, without dreaming it was any crime, was wearing through the streets, when the mob stoned him, swearing "No Nigger should wear gold spectacles in that place." The young man, now a venerable and scholarly minister, bears a scar on his face, which he received from a brick, thrown by the mob. He told how he graduated at Oberlin, O., in the literary department, and then tried unsuccessfully to enter the law school at New York, but was rejected on account of his color, but was told that if he would consent to be a Frenchman or Spaniard, President Fowler agreed to receive him. No! he could never deny that he was a Negro. He was proud of every drop of African blood that flowed through his veins. He was told that he might come and "edge his way in," that is, he might come into the room when the class recited, and take a seat by himself, and if there was no objection to his presence, he might get a little closer and after a while by degrees, get into the class. He was to ask no questions nor get any signs of claiming any instruction from President Fowler, and if he wanted any special instruction at any time, he might go to the president privately. He spurned the idea of degrading his manhood in this way, and returned to Cleveland, where he began the study of law, under the best lawyer in the city, and continued for a short time, and then returned to Oberlin and took the Theological course of study, from which he graduated in 1852. He made an effort to get into the law school in Cincinnati, but was refused because of his color. But he persevered and finally secured his education; having graduated in collegiate theological and law studies. He was admitted to the Supreme Court of the United States, after an examination, which would have been such as to exclude him, if the examiners could have made it difficult enough. They tried. He won. He had paid his own way through school. He was born a slave in Virginia and was taken to Ohio, with other emancipated slaves, and they were required to give bond as soon as they reached the sacred soil of Ohio, that they would never become a charge on the township where they resided. English, Irish, Germans could come into the State and settle freely, but the Negro, coming from the oppression of the South, found an oppression in the North, not quite so open, but quite as hateful. He was poor. He could sympathize with the students he was addressing, but it was not so great a misfortune as many esteemed it. He had learned many things he never would have learned had he been rich. He had learned self-reliance, he had learned how to black boots, in a barber shop in Cincinnati, and wait on gentlemen in the baths; he had learned to sweep, and dust rooms, to make beds, to milk cows, and when President Braden heard him make his graduating theological speech thirty one years ago, he had only been a few days from the potato field, where his hands were hardened with toil. He had earned money and had saved it, and when he was refused admittance into the law school, by President Fowler he had lent money to one of the best students in that school, a young white man, to pursue his law studies. He would not ask any one to educate him. He preferred to have the independence as well as the honor of doing it himself. He thought the colored young men should seek to be independent, and depend less on others to help them on in the world. He advised cultivation of self-respect; care for personal appearance, neatness in dress and personal cleanliness. Thoroughness in study, should be the aim of the student. The colored young men of to-day had such superior advantages to those of his day, they should make superior men. He gave a graphic description of the typical African in the person of the President of the Republic of Hayti—a man of magnificent personal appearance, of scholarly attainments, speaking fluently five or six different languages, and of most elegant manners; and having as his wife a most beautiful and cultured French lady—he black as ebony—she, ivory. The elegant life of the court, the splendid palace-furniture, and all the inhabitants full blooded negroes, with the rich products of the gland of Hayti, were all described in elegant chaste language, and with an animation that was electrifying. Over an hour and a half was spent in hearing the address, which was full of most stirring truth, that was eagerly received and frequently and heartily applauded by his deeply interested audience. Mr. Langston is an elegant orator, easy yet animated, and his fine descriptive powers make him a most entertaining as well as an instructive speaker. He is of medium height, a light mulatto, rather slender, unshaven, hair sprinkled with gray somewhat curly, which latter he seems to enjoy; his father white, and his master; his mother Negro and Indian. This mixture has been, in his case, a success. His visit and his words will not soon be forgotten by those who heard him. He represents the United States in Hayti and has by his ability in treating the delicate questions which must be settled there, honored are represented in him.

The opening of the college is more than twenty-five per cent better than last year. The Meharry medical department opens with fine prospects of an equal increase over former years. The industrial department is taking shape, and the Central will soon add this to the other advantages which students can enjoy here. The Theological class, under the special instruction of Rev. A. H. Birmingham, is unusually full at this season of the school year.

Letter from Lockhart.

DEAR EDITOR:—It having been more than four months since you have heard a word from Lockhart. I thought I would, to-day, break the silence. Since my last writing two quarterly conferences have been held by our elder G. W. Richardson, the last one Sept. 22d and 23rd, at which time a very instructive and edifying sermon was preached by him; an addition of 10-12 ft, has been made to the little parsonage; the preacher in charge was appointed by the Secretary of Board of Education to conduct a Summer Normal for (colored) teachers of the 8th, Congressional District, at Victoria (July), and did so; a camp-meeting was commenced and ended—much good being done; the spiritual condition of the church has been considerably improved, several old feuds of years' standing buried; and two town lots (one of them a corner lot) costing $200, have been purchased upon which to build a $1000 church. We've raised quite a large reliable subscription towards building the same, a part of which has been collected. The old church (almost a barn) is nearly half a mile out of town, on a sickly slough, from which, on account of the "drouth" pressing the cattle from every direction into it, to bog down and die, stench and all kinds of unpleasant odors are borne upon the breezes right into our doors, is not in a very desirable place.

The lots we've purchased are within two blocks of the Court House square, studded with beautiful live oak trees, and bounteously watered by never failing springs. Our membership (86) on the whole work are anxious to commence and complete the church by the 12th, of Dec., and that depends altogether upon the action of the Board of Church Extension Crops have been almost failures in this part of the country this year, and if the desired enterprise is accomplished, or people will have done a very g[illegible] part of their duty. The pasto[illegible] not been paid a third of hi[illegible] this year; yet, if his [illegible] money is raised, the ne[illegible] built, and enough is [illegible] leave for conference [illegible] a cent, he will be ha[illegible] story school house. When completed I think it will cost $2000. All the outside work is done and painted. It is located in a beautiful part of the city upon (I think) one fourth of a block, upon a part of which the house stands. This fine structure (nothing to excel it of its kind in any city in the State) was built by the combined efforts of the Methodist people with exception of 25 cents given by one of another church. All the people were solicited to help, but some would not give one cent. As in all great movements there must be leaders to plan, direct, and steer, so in this, Prof. W. A. Fortson and Rev. P. M. Carmichael are the motive power among their people in Victoria. Amid plenty of discouragements they perserved till the thing was done. It is to be a high school for Victoria and adjacent counties, and is quite an ornament to the city. Victoria is the right place for such a school, and I hope the time is not distant when she will be the educational center of that section of Texas from which highly cultured young men and women shall come, whose influence for good will reflect and be reflected to the yet unborn generations. May success crown your efforts, Prof. Fortson, to build such a monument. Will not some good man or woman with means endow this school? May some one's heart be moved in that direction.

Please allow me [illegible] about the Victoria [illegible] ple. Since confer[illegible] built themselves a [illegible]

The Oklahoma Lands.

Some sixteen or seventeen years ago about one-fifth of what is known as the Indian Territory was ceded back by the Creeks, Chickasaws and other Indians to the United States, in consequence of their failure to fulfill certain conditions, or for other causes. It has proved convenient for certain parties to assume that the land thus ceded back to the Government became a part of the public domain, which it was perfectly legitimate for white men to settle on and become the owners of. Under this pretense Payne has made his repeated expeditions, and as repeatedly has been driven back by the United States authorities. Under the same pretense land speculators—to use a mild term—are exerting a constant pressure to gain possession of the region, and if Payne is not one of their tools he is at least encouraged by them.

Now the cession of this land back to the United States by the Indians in no way affected its status as part of the territory set apart by the laws exclusively for Indian uses. It simply returned it to the Government that it might be utilized for settling other Indian tribes upon it as occasion might arise. It remained under the same laws, so far as white settlers were concerned, that the other parts of the Territory did. Treating with the Indians stipulated that they should have no white neighbors in the locality in question. Many Indians were induced to settle in the Territory with the understanding that they were going where they would be free from white encrorchments, and should these would-be invaders succeed in establishing themselves in Oklahoma with the connivance or otherwise, of the Federal authorities, the circumstance would be regarded by the Indians, and rightly, as a violation of the national pledge. It would seem [illegible] the beginning of the end [illegible] come. The white man would have entered the heart of the Territory and there would no longer be even a lingering [illegible] that any of the white man's [illegible] could be relied on.

[illegible] United States Court has sustained the cause of the Indians [illegible] Government has been firm in [illegible] to sanction trespass. As [illegible] It is [illegible] bills, and providing [illegible] political [illegible] providing for the opening [illegible] There is a g[illegible] home have been defeated [illegible] will be no Rep[illegible] death in Congress. Have [illegible] Interior Department [illegible] com[illegible] in all sorts of [illegible] with po[illegible] the sanction for an entering wedge. But so far, be it said to the credit of the Government, the land sharks have been foiled. It is of course not in the nature of things that this land should lie vacant for any great number of years. If it is not allotted to the Indians, and it becomes evident that it is not needed for that purpose, as intended, the Government should take means by honorable negotiation to secure the priviledge of disposing of it otherwise. The existing treaties should be held sacred until they are properly replaced by new ones. Then Congress should open up the region to settlement, and not before. There is a constant effort on the part of interested individuals todiffuse incorrect information on this subject.—Globe Democrat.

The Strongest Drink.

Water is the strongest drink. It drives mills; it's the drink of loins and horses, and Samson never drank anything else. Let young men be teetotalers if only for economy's sake. The beer money will soon build a house. If what goes into a mash tub went into the kneading trough, families would be better fed and better taught. If what is spent in waste were only saved against a rainy day, work houses would never be built. The man who spends his money with the public and thinks the landlord's bow and "How do ye do, my good fellows," mean true respect, is a perfect simpleton. We don't light fires for the herring's comfort, but to roast him. Men do not keep pot-houses for laborers' good; if they do, they certainly miss their aim. Why, then should people drink "for the good of the house?" If I spend money for the good of any house, let it be my own and not the landlord's. It is a bad well into which you must put water; and the beerhouse is a bad friend, because it takes your all and leaves you nothing but headaches. He who calls those his friends who let him sit and drink by the hour is ignorant—very ignorant. Why, red lions and tigers and eagles and vultures are all creatures of prey, and why do so many put themselves within the power of their jaws and talons? Such as drink and live riotously, and wonder why their faces are so blotchy and their pockets so bare, would leave off wondering, if they had two grains of wisdom. They might as well ask an elm tree for pears as look to loose habits for health and wealth. Those who go to the public house for happiness climb a tree to find fish.—Spurgeon.

Getting Used to It.

An Austin man has a business partner who, like Mark Tapley, is always inclined to look at the bright side of everything. The favorite expression of this jolly partner is, whenever any one complains to him, "Oh you'll get used to it." One morning the serious partner came down to the store and observed:

"I had rather a singular dream last night."

"Did, eh!" said his partner, briskly.—"What was it?"

"I dreamed I died."

"No—did you! Dreamed you went to heaven I suppose?"

"On the contrary, I found myself in hades."

"Don't say so! Well, I reckon you didn't find anybody you knew there?"

"Yes, I met you about the first man I struck."

"Met me?"

"Yes, and we held a short and somewhat hurried conversation."

"What did you say?"

"I remarked that it was pretty middling blamed hot!"

"Well, what did you say?"

"You—O, you wiped away some of the sweat on your blistered face with a cast-iron pocket handkerchief, and said it was all right, you thought, and that I would soon get used to it."

Thousands of families have had occasion to try the never failing qualities of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and they all unite in the praise of this wonderful prescription.

On the Wrong Back.

An invalid gentleman and his wife had engaged a berth in a Pullman car on a certain railway. Towards midnight the patient awoke with a severe pain in his back, and asked his wife to apply a mustard plaster as quickly as possible. His better half at once got the plaster ready and then ran to the other end of the carriage to warm it at the lamp and make it draw all the better. Returning to her sick husband the little woman unfortunately went to the wrong bed, which happened to be occupied by a stout German wine merchant, who was fast asleep. She quickly drew the curtain, lifted the bedclothes, and in a twinkle clapped the plaster on the traveler's back. At that momnent the sick husband called out from the berth: "Mary, what a long time you are!" Now the poor woman first became aware of her terrible mistake. Hurrying to her husband she told him in a whisper of what she had done. the poor sufferer could not help laughing in spite of his pain, and he laughed until his pains had left him. Then all was still for awhile, until suddenly loud cries and imprecations were heard proceeding from the wine traveler. "Herrgotsmillionendonnerwetter! What is it that I have got on my back! Himmel-melbombem-granaten elements-donnerund. Hagelwetter! Whew, hows it burns! Water! Fire! Ah! Oh! my back! The bed is on fire! Thunder and lightning! Water! my back!" We draw a veil over the rest of the story.—Port Jervis Union.

Enough to Poison a Parish.

A Protestant little girl being asked by a priest to attend his religious instruction, refused, saying it was against her father's wishes. The priest said she should obey him, not her father.

"Oh, sir, we are taught in the Bible—'Honor thy father and thy mother.'"

"You have no business to read the Bible," said the priest.

"But, sir, our Saviour said, in John v. 39, 'Search the Scriptures.'"

"That is only to the Jews, and not to children, and you don't understand it," said the priest.

"But, sir, St. Paul said to Timothy, 'From a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures.'"—2 Tim. iii. 15.

"Oh," said the priest, "Timothy was then being trained to be a bishop, and was taught by the authorities of the church."

"Oh, no sir," said the child; "he was taught by his mother and his grandmother."

On this the priest turned her away, saying she knew enough of the Bible to poison a parish.

On the Atlantic Coast, in Eastern Virginia, a few weeks ago, a dog was wading in the water after oysters. He mistook the fins of a shark for some other kind of game, and approached. The shark opened his jaws, when the dog, now thoroughly frightened, turned to run towards the shore. As he turned, the shark caught him by the tail. The dog tugged and the shark tugged for a moment, and then with a yelp, the dog ran to the beach, leaving his tail further behind him than it ever had been.—Golden Days.

Rev. Dr. A. G. Haygood says in the Independent: "If there were a 1,000 doctors of the Negro race in the South there would only be one to every 6,000 or 7,000 of this people. There ought to to be 1,000 Negro doctors in the Southern States.

Young Folk's Corner.

Keep At It.

One step and then another,
And the longest walk is ended;
One stitch and then another,
And the largest rent is mended;
One brick upon another,
And the highest wall is made;
One flake upon another,
And the deepest snow is laid.

So the little coral-workers,
By their slow and constant motion,
Have built those pretty islands
In the distant, dark blue ocean;
And the noblest undertakings
Man's wisdom hath conceived,
By oft-repeated effort,
Have been patiently achieved.

Then do not look disheartened
On the work you have to do,
And say that such a mighty task
You never can get through;
But just endeavor, day by day,
Another point to gain;
And soon the mountain which you feared
Will prove to be a plain!

Advice to a Young Man.

Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork, son, is the facetious way the Burlington Hawkeye has of counselling young men to thrift. Men seldom work so hard as that, on the sunny side of thirty. They die sometimes, but it is because they quit work at 6 p. m. and don't get home until 2 a. m. It's the intervals that kill, my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals; it lends solidity to your slumber; it gives you a perfect and grateful appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do work, my son—young men who make a living by sucking the end of a cane, and who can tie a necktie in eleven different knots, and never lay a wrinkle in it; who can spend more money in a day than you can earn in a month, son; and who will go to the sheriff's to buy a postal card, and apply at the office of the street commissioners for a marriage license. So find out what you want to be and to do, son, and take off your coat and make success in the world. The busier you are, the less evil you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier will be your holiday, and the better satisfied will the world be with you.

Curing Himself.

"You'll be a man before your mother," used to be said to boys who were a trifle too smart. The stripling who paraded himself in the scene below was rather worsted by somebody else's mother:

"Don't you know it's very wrong to smoke, my boy?" said an elderly looking lady, in a railway waiting room, to Young America, who persisted in puffing a cheap cigarette, much to the old lady's discomfort.

"Oh, I smoke for my health," answered the boy, emitting a volume of smoke from his mouth which almost strangled the old lady.

"But you never heard of a cure from smoking?" continued the old lady when she had regained consciousness.

"Oh yes, I did," persisted the boy, as he formed his mouth into a young Vesuvius working on full time, "that's the way they cure pigs."

"Smoke on then," quickly replied the old lady; "there's some hope for you yet!"—Yonker's Statesman.

If you merely want to make yourself a social favorite, and to be always ready with surface conversation on any and every topic which may come up in a miscellaneous company, it may be well for you to skim a little of everything in your reading, and to catch a point on one subject here, and a point on another subject there, and a half-dozen points on a half-dozen other subjects in a half-dozen other directions. You will have to look over the newspapers, and the magazines, and the new books of every kind, as they appear, and this without neglecting a fresh glance, now and then, over older books generally. You must flit over the whole field as a butterfly does over the flower-beds. But, on the other hand, if you want to gain solid information on any subject, or to improve your mind for your own benefit, or for the benefit of anybody else, you must pursue a very different course from this. You must take up one thing at a time, and devote yourself to an examination of that. You will not have leisure to read the newspapers or magazines to any considerable extent, or to examine one new book in a hundred, or one old book in ten thousand. It is true that this is not living a butterfly life; but a butterfly, you know, is not trying to improve his mind; nor has he any real business on hand. A bee's way is very different from a butterfly's. A bee does not "gather honey all the day, from every opening flower," even though Dr. Watts supposed that was the bee's way of doing business. Naturalists inform us that a bee never takes pollen (honey-stock) of more than one kind on any one trip away from the hive. In fact, there is no use trying to do more than one thing at a time in any business line. The choice must be made between the butterfly style and the bee style; and you have already made your choice of method.—S. S. Times.

Catarrh.

A clergyman in Newbern Ala., who had suffered with Nasal Catarrh for nearly twenty years, after using Compound Oxygen for four months, reports himself cured. He says:

"My Catarrh, which was in the form of an ulcer in my head, and on which dark green scabs constantly formed, and which had existed for eighteen or twenty years, is gone. No scabs form, and the disagreeable sensation has passed away. My vocal organs are much strengthened. I preach now three times a week, and feel stronger and better in every way."

Another clergyman residing in Massachusetts, has used the Treatment for Catarrh, and gives the following statement of benefits received:

"I have now used your Oxygen Treatment three months and will state results. After I had used it six weeks my Catarrh was much better. The gathering of mucus abated considerably, so much so that 'hawking' and spitting rarely occurred. I lost largely the sense of the presence of mucus in the nasal cavities. With the decrease of the mucus my voice improved and my enunciation became more easy and distinct. I can now preach an hour without throat irritation and enunciate distinctly and with ease."

Mr. W. S. Sweet, of Taunton, Mass., publisher of the Family Journal, gives the following testimony to the value of Compound Oxygen in Catarrh and Bronchitis:

"I would like to say a few words in favor of Compound Oxygen. Having given it a trial for Catarrh and Bronchial troubles, I was surprised with its wonderful curative properties. It has done more for me than any of the so-called Catarrh and throat remedies I have ever used, and I can say I am now almost entirely free from either of the above affections."

Our Treatise on Compound Oxygen, containing a history of the discovery and mode of action of this remarkable curative agent, and a large record of surprising cures in Consumption, Catarrh, Neuralgia, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., and a wide range of chronic diseases, will be sent free. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1100 and 1111 Girard street, Philadelphia.

Stumbling Block to Hogs.

A gentleman stopped at a cabin where an old negro woman lived, and while waiting for one of the children to get a bucket of fresh water, entered into conversation with her concerning to crop prospects.

"I did hab fo' or five hogs," said the old woman, "but da's dwindled down till I ain't got but one now."

"Did the hogs die?"

"Da master died; but yer ain't agwine ter git me ter say nuthin' agin my neighbors. De man what libed up dar is dead now, and I ain't agwine ter say nuthin' agin him. De hogs disappeared away from heah while dat man was liben; but I ain't agwine ter say nuthin' agin him."

"Do you think that he took them?"

"Mister, dat man's dead, and I doan wanter say nuthin' agin him; but lem-me tell yer, while dat man was libin' he was a powerful stumblin' block ter hogs."

When the preacher at Ocean Grove said: "Many of you have never seen me before, and in all probability many of you will never see me again," an enthusiastic brother shouted "Amen!" and the rest of the congregation smiled.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1883

This paper will be sent from this date to [illegible] 31, 1884, to any new subscriber who sends two dollars with the order.

The City Council is proceeding with the impeachment of Treasurer Walshe. There has been no decision on the questions of law in issue, affecting the conformity of the last city budget with the city charter.

Bishop McTyeire once said to a brother who wept over the terrible state of things in his charge: "What we need, brother, is not weeping Jeremiahs, but building Nehemiahs." Truth aptly spoken.

The Georgia Legislature, after having tried for years to pass a law, has remitted it at last to the several counties. It now goes to the people, who will deal by local option with dogs as with whisky licences.

The Upper City Park is to be put in order for the Exposition. The city council has appropriated $[illegible],000, and Director General [illegible] is conferring with architects with reference to plans for buildings.

The New Orleans Water Works Company has opened a number of plugs, under the supervision of its employes, for the free distribution of water. For this generous proceeding hundreds of families are no doubt truly thankful.

It is said that one in every three members of our German brethren subscribe for the German Apologist published at Cincinnati. A like [illegible] in our patronizing conferences would give the SOUTHWESTERN [illegible] thousand subscribers. And why not, brethren? What an enlargement that would be. And what an enrichment of the homes of our people!

On Monday President Dean of New Orleans University reported the number of students registered at 137. Last year at same stage of school, 107. The year previous, [illegible] Miss Ella Plotner, who has [illegible] eight years as a teacher at [illegible] Tennessee College, and [illegible] University, has arrived, and has taken hold of her work in [illegible].

The Chicago Standard, referring to the Louisville educational convention, which regarded the evil and danger of white and colored illiteracy about equal, suggests that in extending national aid the government should have a guaranty that the funds will not be diverted, as some of the Peabody funds have been by the States to which they were given.

[illegible] Joseph Medill, of the [illegible] Tribune, was before the [illegible] Committee he stated that [illegible] men of this country [illegible] annually not less than $[illegible]00, [illegible] of their wages for whiskey [illegible], and that this was the [illegible] of all their troubles and [illegible]. An exchange says, [illegible] in ten years would build a [illegible] home for every family [illegible] the land."

[illegible] to the statistical rec[illegible] published by Charles Scrib[illegible] the total number of men [illegible] in the States during the [illegible] was 2,859,132. Of these [illegible] are estimated to have died, [illegible] than eleven per cent. of [illegible] killed in battle. They [illegible] exposure in camp [illegible] unfavorable climate. The heart is sick [illegible] ravages of this [illegible] the season [illegible] no [illegible] this year.

Hope.

One of the blessings bestowed on man by the Giver of every good and perfect gift is Hope. All men have hope, but they are as different as the ends which they pursue. The enemies of the cross of Christ have their hopes, but they are destined to an overwhelming disaster. The hopes they cherish are as unsubstantial as the shadows they pursue. Why is it that the men whom the world calls wise and prudent waste their days and consume their energies in the pursuit of pleasure, fortune, applause, and other "lying vanities" of earth, which only lead to a lingering death in the morass of sin!

But the hope of the just is sure—never "makes ashamed," but brightly shines forth upon the path of life like the rising sun, shining more and more unto the perfect day. Watson says that "it is like the cork in the net which keeps the soul from sinking in despair." Those who have no well grounded hope in Christ as an anchor to the soul drift at the mercy of every gale of passion, their end is destruction. The hope of the just, like an anchor in the crevice of a rock, is sure and steadfast. They may not always be able to see the rock, hidden as it often is beneath the waves of trial and distress, but so long as the anchor holds there is no cause for fear; "though the earth be removed and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea, though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof," their hearts are fixed, their anchors cast have taken hold of the rock, and hold "till all the storms of life are past." "The expectation of the wicked perishes, but the righteous hath hope in His death." The hour of death discloses to the sinner his real condition, and the fatal nature of all the strong delusions wherewith the devil led him astray. But the righteous hath hope in his death. Death brings to the child of God a welcome release from earth, and ushers him to the brightness of paradise amid the glories where God dwells.

Unwelcome Testimony.

Rev. J. W. Hamilton, pastor of the People's Church in Boston, and one of the strong men of the New England Conference, in a communication to Zion's Herald, Sept. 26, makes the following statement. It will be remembered that he visited Chattanooga on his recent Southern journey.

"A state of affairs came to our notice in East Tennessee, some time ago. We located a great central university at Chattanooga recently, and we were flatly told by our pastor and laymen there that it was explicitly understood, in the location of the school, that 'no black ones need apply.'"

Mr. Hamilton is not a careless talking man, and there is no mistaking the testimony he gives. He asserts the intention of some members of our church to commit it to a color line policy. Whatever may be the convictions of our Chattanooga brethren on the subject, we are convinced there is only one line to fight this battle on. We must begin at home and expel from our hearts our foolish pride and Satanic prejudice, then there will be no call for churches or schools from which any of our brethren shall be excluded. God will bless us if we do right, but he will send mildew, blight and hail if we join hands with those who oppress his humble poor. Read again:

"We are told that we have not succeeded in the old paths in the South, and now, if we would succeed, we can keep our principles all the same, but must 'lay low.'"

We stand amazed at this statement. It is far from being acceptable to us that the Methodist Episcopal Church is not acting in good faith. And we suggest, would it not be wise for those who have the establishing of this school in hand to let the church know what their plan and purpose is. "The still hunt" on a matter of principle has never been a success, either in matters of State or Church polity.

Dime Novels

Zion's Herald gives a painful illustration of the demoralizing influence of the sensational reading sold at the news stand on our streets and other places. Two boys eleven and thirteen years of age had been reading these books and papers and were full of the matter, and started "for the West to fight the Indians." The oldest had stolen $90 from his mother, and they had supplied themselves with pistols, knives—a dark lantern, cooking utensils with which to dress and cook buffalos and bear's meat, and a belt to hang scalps on. Refering to this the Western says:

"Parents who can not afford to take their Church paper, nor subscribe to the library fund of the Sunday-school, regularly buy the Sunday paper, should take notice. Create and cultivate a taste for proper reading, supplying the demand to the utmost of your ability, and if possible reading the books and papers with the children, and your boys will not be likely to be led astray by bad books and bad company. Of all the demoralizing trash that is served up for the public in these days, so-called dime novels and the flash newspapers do the most harm. Parental authority should be exerted, with absolute sovereignty, for the exclusion from the household of every book and newspaper, the influence of which is antagonistic to religion and morality.

Must parents fear the influence of a bad companion, but no companion can be half so destructive to the morals of a child as a bad book.

Water Famine

The present drouth is said to be the severest the city has experienced for years. It brings not only discomfort, but actual danger. The gutters in many parts of the city are filthy beyond all parallel because there is no water to clean them out. No small amount of property has been destroyed by fire during the past few weeks because there was no water the firemen could get at. The late increase of death rate is largely attributed to this scarcity of water. Why is this? Certainly nature has made amply provisions for a full supply. We have the heaviest rainfall of any city in the United States. No city in the world has more water surrounding it. We have the Mississippi flowing in front of us, and and a large lake in the rear of us. This water famine is the result of the grossest stupidity and inefficiency on the part of our city authorities, and is a deep disgrace to New Orleans. The Times-Democrat justly says: "A large portion of our population might as well be in the very centre of Sahara, where it would be very little more difficult to get a glass of water than in New Orleans to-day."

Well Said.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate, under the caption of "Dr. Haygood and his critics," says: "Dr. Haygood writes vigorously, even aggressively. He has decided, intense convictions, and advocates them with the ardor of a man who doesn't dare to dawdle. Had he written a homily of venerable platitudes on Christian education there would have been no criticisms and few readers. But as he aimed at something practical, and proposed a specific line of action, adverse feeling has been awakened. To deny that the Negroes have advanced, and are advancing morally and educationally, is a confession either of purblindness or innocence of information. Without passion or prejudice, but under the constraint of Christ's love, we ought to help them to our fullest capacity consistent with the claims of other duties."

The Nashville Advocate, M. E. Church South, puts down its opinion touching the colored people in very terse but comprehensive language. It says: "Just now some are eulogizing and others are disparaging the Negro in the South. The fact is, he is like the balance of us, a poor, lost creature without the gospel, and may be made a new creature by its power."

An author will always appreciate an even tempered, purgent critism; he will be down cast if the creations of his brain meet with a withering silence. The following from Zion's Herald we freely accord space to in order that Dr. Philpott's book may be more widely known. We venture to say the author himself smiled as he perused it:

We have examined, and attempted to comprehend, a somewhat astonishing volume entitled, "The Kingdom of Israel," written by Rev. J. P. Philpott, of Mexia, Texas, and published by the Southern Methodist Publishing House. It is an octavo of 533 pages. It proposes to show the opening of this divinely constituted kingdom under Joshua, who was its first president, and its development down to the second advent. In Jacob's prophecy respecting the fortunes of his sons, our author finds the outlines of the history of the United States, and the rise of the Confederate States of America. In connection with even more significant indications in the book of Revelation, he confidently foretold in 1864, during the progress of the war, the dismemberment of the United States and the formation of three nationalities out of the fragments; the Confederate States being clearly indicated to be the chief of these three, and ultimately absorbing the other two. The singular failure of this interpretation of prophecy in no wise discouraged the author, but he now comes forward with a greatly enlarged volume, to emphasize his remarkable disclosures, of which he truly says: "Nothing has ever yet appeared from the press of this or any other country that has occupied in theory, argument, and conclusion, anything like this book." To the utmost limit of our knowledge we bear testimony to the truth of the assertion. As humiliating as is this confession of the fact, we must frankly acknowledge that the work is too "original" and subtile for our comprehension; the well is too deep, and we have nothing to draw with. We stand amazed at the earnestness, diligence, and assurance of the author, displayed in this elaborate adaptation of ancient prophecy to modern times; but must refer the question of its merit to more expert scholars with ample time upon their hands.

Henry Ward Beecher, the great Brooklyn preacher has spent two days in New Orleans, lectured twice to full audiences, some praising and some condemning. He claims to be a Christian evolutionist, and is evidently making an effort to reconstruct his theology on the basis of the philosophy of evolution. He insists that physically he is a descendant from the monkey, but quickly adds he had just as leave descend from a monkey as from a mudpile, provided he has descended far enough. Different persons listening to him came to the opposite conclusions. One says, "He denied the Atonement." Another says, "No, only what is called the commercial view of it, etc." The facts are these, any person who wants to understand Mr. Beecher must allow him to explain himself. The large intelligent audiences that greeted him are indicative of the wonderful change that is going on all through the South. A brighter and a better day is coming.

The annual statement of the Trustees of the Peabody Educational Fund shows that something over seventy thousand dollars has been distributed during the past year in aid of the education of the colored people in the Southern States.—N. Y. Times.

The Times has mistaken the total sum distributed by the trustees for all purposes. We have not the figures before us, but feel confident that only a small per centage has been expended directly for the colored people the past as in previous years.

Sometimes we become so impatient at the restraints and disabilities forced upon our people, that we can hardly control ourself; but fret as we may, it only worries us the more. The only thing to do is to go on building up characters that will command respect, and force recognition from the most unwilling of our white fellow-citizens. —Bulletin. Good. Just add education and wealth thereto and the good is gained.

The Coushatta Citizen of Oct. 6 comes to us specially marked with an editorial hoisting the name of Senator Marston, of Red River, for Governor, subject to the Democratic convention. We have read the carefully enumerated claims which the Citizen presents, but we find nothing relative to the position of its candidate on the public school system. In our opinion no man should be encouraged in gubernatorial aspirations who is not a pronounced friend of public schools. The present Governor allows the constitution to be violated, the school fund to be robbed of $30,000 per annum. There ought to be a change. Let the Citizen sound its candidate on the school question, or make up a possible omission in a future article.

In nearly all of our churches there are class-leaders, stewards, trustees and exhorters who have a very imperfect knowledge of the work the Methodist Episcopal Church is doing in this country from the fact they do not take any church paper. We pity the pastor whose stewards and leaders are uninformed as to the work of the church; such men are sure to kick against any and all aggressive work. Nothing would do more to quicken the pulse of our people than to have the leaders and stewards brought into intelligent sympathy with the work of the Church. Make, brother preachers, a thorough canvass for the SOUTHWESTERN.

Judge F. S. Goode spoke at length to the grand jury of St. Mary parish, La., on the subject of public schools, which had only been opened ten weeks the past year, and are now closed. The grand jury in their report, which we find in the St. Mary Herald, says: "The fault is in the law and in want of money to keep up the education of the children. The fact is the public school system in this parish is a failure. The State must either tax more and higher to let the parishes have good schools or not tax at all, and relegate the question of education to the family to whom the child belongs."

—Rev. G. A. Payne, of Bertie, Assumption parish, gave us a pleasant call last week. Bro. Payne reports peace and prosperity in all parts of church work.

—Rev. W. Cowl, who left a Methodist pulpit near Pittsburgh to accept a call to the Third Unitarain Church, Chicago, has been received again into the Pittsburgh Conference.

—Rev. C. D. Otheman, who long and ably edited the missionary news sent from New York to the various Advocates, has been compelled on account of failing health to resign his position.

—Rev. E. W. Van Deventer has been requested by Bishop Warren to take charge of the M. E. church, Virginia City, Nevada, has consented. and will go in the course of a week or two.—Abilene (Kans.) Gazette.

—Peyton H. Wade writes from Alamo, Tenn., Oct. 3rd: "Bro. Wm. Dwegans was taken sick the 4 the Sunday in August at the baptizing and has been confined to bed ever since. The doctor pronounced the sickness as neuralgia of the bowels, and he is quite ill."

—Rev. T. L. Flood, D. D., served the Titusville church, whose pulpit was made vacant by the death of Dr. Day, for the year. He presented his salary ($1,350) to the Erie Conference as a nucleus of a fund for the benefit of the superannuates of the Conference.

—Miss Everding, of Syracuse, and Miss Hamisford, of Kansas, go out to Japan as representatives of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. They expect to sail from San Francisco, Nov. 20. They go in company with Rev. Mr. Davisson.

—Bishop Wiley closed his round of six Fall Conferences with the Pittsburgh Conference, Oct. 1st. He left a sick-bed two months and a half ago, to hold these Conferences, involving thousands of miles' travel, and was enabled to do his work, though suffering great weakness in the back.

—Mrs. Lucy Simpson, the colored W. C. T. U., evangelist, is doing valiant service in Central Illinois. The Mattoon papers tell of her crowded meetings, notwithstanding the engagement of Keene, the great tragedian, at the Opera House. Mrs. Simpson has many warm friends in this State.—Union Signal.

—Bishop Simpson, our honored senior Bishop closed his visitation to the Fall Conferences with the Dakota Mission Conference, at Huron. For weeks his list of Conferences were in the far-off States of Iowa, Colorado, Minnesota, and closing at Dakota, showing that he is still "effective." The Bishop is announced to preach at the John Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, which is to be dedicated Sunday, the 21st inst. —N. Y. Advocate.

—We learn that Prof. J. H. Harrison has accepted the presidency of the institution established by the Legislature of Louisiana for the education of the colored people, located in New Orleans. This school is under the management of a board of trustees appointed by Gov. McEnery, one of whom is the Rev. Christian Keener, son of the Bishop, and a presiding elder of the Louisiana Conference of the M. E. Church, South. Prof. Harrison is a graduate of Vanderbilt University, and was a pupil of the Webbs at Culleoka. He has the qualities that fit him for the important trust to which he has been called—the character, scholarship, the brain power, and the tried ability as an educator. He will be missed in Tennessee, where he is highly esteemed, but will carry with him the good wishes of a large circle of warm friends. The work he goes to do is one that any Christian educator might well covet.—Nashville Advocate.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

The revival in progress at First Street, Bro. Montgomery pastor has thus for resulted in the conversion of 20; 26 have joined on probation. At the love feast Wednesday the 10th inst, eight joined the church in full connection. It was a time of rejoicing on the part of all. All were glad to have Brother Priestley, one of their former pastors, with them.

At Camp Parapet, Bro. Johnson is having a year of continual peace and prosperity. Thus far during the year fifty four have been converted and received on probation and thirty-six into full connection. So God puts a seal upon his work.

J. H. Davis, Bonnet Carrie: "I can not keep a single copy of the SOUTHWESTERN; friends all want to read it. In about fifteen families it has been read and all promise to subscribe. I will send their names and addresses. I am from Missouri, my parents belonged to the M. E. Church. Since I have been in St. John I have found the Sabbath school work poorly conducted. There is a large field open for Methodists. Any brother who wishes to visit the parish will please address me."

Sixth Street is still moving on. Some how God has wonderfully blessed the labors of Bro. Dyer among these people. During the last quarter twenty-four were received on probation and twenty into full connection. At the third quarterly conference the report of the stewards showed $130.40 as their collection. The collection of the classes was as follows: No. 1 $5.90. No. 2 $21.15. No. 3 $22.45. The Sunday school is in a prosperous condition. Children's day was duly observed, and the collection of $10 was sent on to 805 Broadway New York. Last Sabbath a subscription of $331.50 was taken up towards repairing the church.

The Presiding elder is under special obligation to the people for the gift of a new hat, which he hopes to wear with pleasure.

Mt. Zion is constantly recuperating and developing under the judicious management and efficient preaching of Bro. Marshall, who is highly esteemed by his people as an able preacher and faithful pastor. At the third quarterly conference every report was in order. The class reports showed 172 members, and that the leaders had made during the quarter 833 visits. The collections were as follows: No. 1 $12.75. No. 2 $13 65. No. 3 $17.40 No. 4 $5.45. No. 5 $5.70. No. 6 $12.30. No. 7 $9 75. The Sunday school, under the superintendency of Miss Lizzie Taylor, is a tower of strength to the church. At no point have we listened to a better report than Sister Taylor presented.

D. Shelby, Allen: "We had a grand time at Marthaville. Rev. A. J. Pickett, of Pleasant Hill, came down and with him a crowd to help us in our meeting. Bro. J. P. Calvin and others came from Robeline. Bros. Pickett and H. Daniel preached. Our town is full of good people who seem to want to help us."

F. Harvey, Shreveport: "I have just finished a new church on Red River about 25 or 30 miles from here. We held a basket meeting and took up $18.75. A protracted meeting at Prudent chapel resulted in 10 conversions, 5 backsliders reclaimed. I hope to have all of the Gilbert Haven school money before conference. We will soon have glass windows in Fairfield church."

MISSISSIPPI.

J. D. Walden, Meridian: "The elder was not able to be present at our third quarterly conference. The sacrament was administered to 140. Accessions to date 45. The stewards paid pastor this quarter $150, and the elder $12.50. We raised Sept. 30th, for the annual conference $26.35. We find that we are doing better than for many years, and have sent in more subscribers for the Advocate this year."

O. Gillespie, Shubuta: "There are three preaching points on this charge, and I have held a protracted meeting at each one sixty conversions have resulted, and near 30 added to the church; among these were two fiddlers. One burned up his fiddle on his return home from the mourners bench. Sunday-schools are in tolerable good condition."

P. Blue, Enterprise: "At our protracted meeting the pastor of the A. M. E. Church on this circuit Rev. J. A. Carew, united with our church, and surrended his license to us. He is a young man, a good worker in the church, and [illegible] to make a useful minister. He will be an aspirant for the ministry at our next annual conference. Our work is prospering [illegible] 22 have been received in [illegible] 14 converted and 35 on trial. The Sunday-school is doing well under the superintendency of M. [illegible] and tried one. Our [illegible] building is greatly dilapidated and I thought when I came to this place that I would be able to [illegible] but the people thought [illegible] were not able to do so and [illegible] not be induced to try. The [illegible] is poor and people make little money. I am fearful that they will [illegible] without a house to worship. I do not think that they are [illegible] to make sacrifices, but [illegible] sandy country and [illegible] money, and [illegible] live here. I [illegible] could give [illegible] This church [illegible] without [illegible] and [illegible] bad for [illegible] and [illegible] rebuild them [illegible] never before resort [illegible] and think [illegible] I [illegible] I would [illegible]

TEXAS.

D. Edmond, Rossville: "At fourth quarterly conference, everything was in order. Elder Mack Henson preached a noble sermon. The house was crowded. May the Lord bless him. His collection was $14.75. The Sunday school at Rossville is not so good as it might be, because a mistake in getting an indifferent quality of books."

N. Axal, Columbus. "A grand church banquet will be given at Toland Chapel. Oct. 19 and 20th, commencing at 4 o'clock p. m., on each date, and continue 8 hours. Prof. A. G. Brown of Wiemar, Tex. will be our organist. Refreshments will be had on said dates. Come all."

A. Brown, Tehuacana: "Elder Gates was with us and administered sacrament to 60. Collections $20. He preached an inspiring sermon, and gave the brethren great information about their duty."

R. R. Roberts, Houston: "The members and friend of Mt Vernon Church have painted, bought a sofa, put in a new carpet, put a cushion in the pulpit, and purchased a silver communion sett."

TENNESSEE.

H. Robinson, Spring Hill: "We have started a new church. Received from the Church Extension Board $103; from Rev. John Seay $25. The young men gave an entertainment, and realized $40. The Juvenile Club, Sunday-school children, gave one and realized $60. The old people rallied and raised $45.20. Our new church is up, covered and ready for flooring. No debt on it yet."

Doing Good.

I like the SOUTHWESTERN, and I always welcome it gladly. I usually read it, from its title-page all through, and it does me good. I often see familiar names in it, which I enjoy. Occasionally I read articles from D. W. Hays, and also from L. M. Haygood. Bro. Hays and Bro. Haygood are nobly working for the Master. No doubt the Lord has given them their work, for which they are well fitted.

We trust the SOUTHWESTERN may have great success. We need its religious and educating influence. Like everything good it is growing. Our money, and efforts, and prayers, are needed to help make it a great power in hedging up the way of sin. We must make use of all instrumentalities in imitating the example of our Saviour, who while he was upon earth, "went about doing good." His mission to the world was to relieve it of sin, and its effects, and to teach people how to be happy. "He took upon him the form of a servant" and dwelt among the poor and lowly and ignorant, and made His life a constant blessing to his friends and his enemies. He everywhere taught that to love and pray, and work for others, was the only way to live so as to glorify him here, and to prepare for heaven. Spiritual and temporal blessings, [illegible] attended a regard to His teachings. He has so arranged it, that every generous word, or act, does more for the giver than the receiver. "It is more blessed to give than to receive. Freely ye have received, freely give. Blessed are ye, that sow beside all waters; there is that scattereth and yet increaseth, and there is that withholdeth more than is meet and it tendeth to poverty."

This is a beautiful world and there is much to enjoy in it, but sin has marred its beauties, and embittered its enjoyments and caused many sorrows. One can always find tears to dry, burdens to lighten, and the anxious and care-worn to lead to a higher and better life. The first petition of every newly converted soul is, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do." While there is a desire to do good, there is growth in grace and knowledge, and in happiness.

The wretchedness and desolation that the heart feels that refuses to go out in sympathy to others and lives only for self, is very great.

I read of a man who was so unhappy that he thought he would commit suicide. He had received a good education so as to be intelligent. He had acquired wealth so to have power and to be able to display. He had travelled, to satisfy his curiosity and to see something new, but he was miserable. He thought he would end his sorrows. He would drown himself. He was on his way to execute his purpose, when a poor woman met him, who asked of him assistance. Her tale of woe touched his heart, He went home with her and supplied her wants. The fact that he could be of use to a fellow being gave him much satisfaction. His eyes were opened and he saw how selfishly he had been living, and he saw before him a field of usefulness. He would live for others. He gave his heart to the Saviour, and became a happy and a useful man.

I knew a man who had committed to memory, almost entire volumes of poetry, so as to seem intelligent and to shine in society, but he was not happy. He could make no practical use of his knowledge. He too, needed to go to the Saviour for work to do.

Poor deluded men, have planned, and worked, and worried and wasted lives, in trying to find means of enjoyment, and to get unto themselves a great name regardless of the fact that self gratification, and self-aggrandizement have been the cause of untold miseries ever since Eve ate of the forbidden fruit. History furnishes many such examples. We have read of one who spent his early days in planning ways of successful warfare. He spent the strength of his manhood in sowing sorrow and desolation. He tried to over come the world for France and himself and God frustrated all his plans, and he died in the prime of life on a lonely island, far from home, and those who loved him. No doubt, his name has been handed down to posterity, not for the good he did, but as an example of the failure of those who live for themselves, without regarding the rights of their fellow-beings. For those who are desirous of doing good, prayer has ever been found a very fruitful source of usefulness. It is a wondrous power, for it arrays God on our side; makes us love those for whom we pray, even our enemies cease to be such, when we ask Him to take their bitterness away. The spirit of persecution and cruelty, that prevails to so great an extent in this country, might be modified greatly in answer to prayer. No doubt there are those who are praying, or it might be, even worse. We, in our own strength cannot work reforms, where people seem to see things so differently. We can all pray and let God's spirit do the work.

It has been thought that it is more favorable to a preparation for death, for the old as they near the end of their pilgrimage to cease from active labors.

The world is getting wiser in that respect. Experience has taught us that the laws that govern the young, govern the old as well. Their faculties decay and life is shortened, and spiritual enjoyment not what it might be by inactivity. "Go work to-day in my vineyard" is for every day as long as physical strength holds out, and life lasts.

We have now many examples of the very old who are doing effective work. It is said of George Muller, who in addition to the care of his orphanage has lately made an evangelistic tour through Russia. He is 78 years old. Dr. W. C. Palmer, died in the midst of great usefulness and he was over 70. Bishop Simpson is nearly 80 and he still thrills his audiences. J. B. Gough is nearly 70 and he is still an indefatigable worker in the temperance cause.

I could mention many others who do not intend to stand, "idly waiting" for death, while there is work to be done. For those who have for many years, grown in grace, and in knowledge, and in faith, there must be a field of labor, and God will take care of the laborer. When the soul is converted eternal life begins. Our bodies will fail and go into the grave, but we go on forever. Then let us work for God until He says: "Well done," and bids us come up higher.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER. LESSON III. Oct. 21st. ASKING FOR A KING. (Sam. viii, 1-10.)

After Eli died Samuel became judge of Israel. Eli's sons were killed in battle. Samuel had two sons, and when he was an old man they helped him. Eli had bad sons, and Samuel had bad sons too. At last Samuel's sons were so bad and dishonest that the people came to Samuel and said, "We want a king to rule over us." Did Israel really have a king already? Of course they had. Their King had opened a way through the sea for them; their King sent bread from heaven and water from a rock; their King led them over Jordan and did many other great and loving things. It was God himself; no earthly king could do such things, and yet here is poor Israel wanting a man to be their king. Samuel knew it was wrong to ask for a king, and felt sorry about it, so he went to God, and God heard him and told him to let Israel have their own way and give them a king. God often lets people have their own way to show them how wicked their own hearts are and into how much trouble it will lead them. We can see how very foolish and bad Israel was, but if we could see our own hearts may be we would find we are just like Israel.—Western.

The November number of the North American Review will contain a contribution from Dr. Norvin Green, president of the Western Union company, in opposition to the proposed government management of the telegraph; also, an article on John Brown, by the Rev. David N. Utter, which is calculated to seriously affect the popular estimate of the hero of Osawatomie.

Rev. F. X. Ceuppens has returned to Ascension and is quietly exercising his functions as parish priest, celebrating mass once a day at St. Vincent's Chapel in Donaldsonville and at the Smoke Bend Chapel on Sundays. The angry feelings aroused by the church controversy have greatly subsided and it is to be hoped nothing will be done on either side to provoke a further demonstration of passion or intolerance. We claim to be a law abiding community, and as the matters in dispute between the rival factions of the Catholic congregation have been presented to the courts for settlement, the decision of those tribunals should be patiently awaited by all parties in interest.—Donaldsonville Chief.

Nihilist proclamations have been issued sentencing the Czar of Russia to death.

In Belfast, Ireland, on the 7th, an Orange procession was attacked by a Catholic mob.

Switzerland protests against the erection of military works by France in the neutralized territory of Savoy. It is a breach of treaty engagements.

According to the Cologne Gazette, Russia puts all sorts of vexations in the way of Germans desiring to enter her borders. Even children cannot enter without a passport vise by a Russian consul, and countersigned by the Governor of the province, whose signature has to be renewed weekly.

A GOOD COMPARISON.

The Rev. William Roulatt, a well-known Methodist clergyman, residing at Naples, draws the following amusing, but apt comparison between Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a ferret.

"A ferret when placed at the entrance of a rat hole, enters the aperture, travels along the passage, seizes upon the rat, exterminates his existence and draws the animal's defunct carcass to the light. And in like manner have I found Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge to operate upon worms, those dreadful and dangerous tormentors of children. This remedy, like the ferret, enters the aperture of the mouth, travels down the gullet, hunts round the stomach and lays hold of the worms, shakes the life out of the reptiles, sweeps clean their den, and carries their carcasses clear out of the system. This, at least, has been the effect of the Vermifuge upon my children."

Mons. Toussaint has shown experimentally the serious dangers of eating meat nearly raw and as now so generally done. If the meat is unsound, the germs of disease must pass into the system. The most frequent and dangerous malady with which animals slaughtered are affected is consumption, and even if the animal is only slightly diseased persons eating the uncooked meat are liable to infection. The raw juice pressed from a slightly affected cow's lung was used to inoculate rabbits and young pigs, and all the subjects died in a short time from the disease. The experiment was repeated with a portion of the juice which had been partially cooked, and the result was the same. Only thorough cooking was found to effectually destroy all the infectious [illegible].

Another excellent medicine is sunshine. The world requires more of it, morally and physically. It is more soothing than morphine, and more potent than poppies. It is good for liver complaint, for neuralgia, for rheumatism, for melancholy, for everything. Make your rooms sunny and cheerful; build your houses so as to command the sunlight all day long.

Chocolate Icing.—Put into a saucepan half a pound of powdered loaf sugar, two ounces of grated chocolate and about a gill of water; stir on the fire until the mixture assumes the consistence of a thick, smooth cream. Lay the icing evenly on the cake or pastry with a palette knife, and put it into the oven for a minute or two to set the icing.

Tomates Farcies.—Dip your tomatoes into boiling water for a minute; peel, make a hole near the stalk; scoop out the centre of the tomatoes with a small spoon and put them in a buttered or oiled sheet of paper in a baking tin. Make a stuffing with sausage meat and very thin tomato sauce. Fill the tomatoes with this, sprinkle with grated bread crust and bake. Serve as soon as the stuffing is browned.—La Cuisine.

Are we on the eve of a new development of lay agency in Methodism? The Rev. David Hill contends that there are wealthy young laymen who ought to go to China and to engage in mission work without asking for support from the Missionary Society, and Mr. W. R. Owen, at the recent Home Missionary meeting in City-road Chapel, declared his conviction that 2,000 laymen ought to go forth into various parts of England to help evangelise the people. We shall be surprised if both of these appeals do not bring forth fruit. The matter is one, however, which cannot be forced. It must be the outcome of conviction both on the part of the church and on the part of the individuals who may be so employed. There is a vast amount of talent in our church which is latent. It needs to be cultivated by use. There are hundreds of educated laymen amongst us who would make most successful evangelists. They possess social influence and intellectual gifts. They need only the baptism of the Holy Spirit. And what are we to expect from our ministers, local preachers, and class leaders? They occupy the vantage ground. Special agencies can never supersede ordinary agencies. The permanent growth of a church depends most upon the efficiency of its ordinary agents. The evangelist needs to be followed by the pastor and by the the teacher. Perhaps the great need of Methodism at the present time is that its official workers should receive a baptism of power from on high.

Rev. Petroleum V. Nasby (D. R. Locke,) will travel through the Southern States during the Fall and Winter, for the purpose of writing a series of letters to his paper, the Toledo Blade, his impressions of the great South. The million readers of the Blade who have read "Nasby in Exile," (Nasby's Letters from Europe,) will appreciate how the subject will be handled. Every reader in the South is invited to send for a specimen copy, which will be sent free. The Weekly Blade is $1 per year.

"My dear," said Mr. Jones to his wife, "you are mighty free to call every body a fool. Can you tell me what a fool looks like?" "Yes, I can, but I won't," she replied angrily. "Why not, love?" "Because you can look in the glass and see for yourself." "That's the way I found out."

"I meant to have told you of that hole," said a gentleman to his friend, who, walking in his garden stumbled into a pit of water. "No matter," said the friend, "I have found it."

NOW.

BY HOWARD W. COONLEY.

The statesman toiling for renown,
The soldier seeking glory,
The poet whose bright chain of thought
Links living song and story.
Yes, all, who striving for success
In ev'ry Community,
Have chosen for their watchword, "Now,"
The present opportunity.

And in God's work why not the same
Devotedness to duty?
Why not join heart and hand to teach
His precepts filled with beauty?
Stern effort sieges earthly toil
With grim determination,
The present "Now" improved with care,
Brings future relaxation.

But God's work, done with loyal hearts,
A grander respite brings,
A sweeter consciousness imparts,
Than all the wealth of kings.
Then onward for the Saviour's cause;
In ev'ry land and clime,
The Christian war-cry ever be,
"Now," the "accepted time."

Yes, the laborers are few. More than once in the history of the missions have men of dusky brows begged in vain that the glorious Gospel of the blessed God might be proclaimed in their country. Some of these men have journeyed hundreds, even thousands, of miles afoot and in vain to find an ambassador of Christ who would go to their people; like that deputation of four from the Flathead Indians who appeared in St. Louis in 1832, having crossed the Rock Mountains and traversed three thousand miles of intervening wilderness to learn of the Book and the God of whom some trapper had brought them the report in their remote wigwams. Two of these chiefs, worn out by their long journey, died in St. Louis; nor is it known whether the other two succeeded in again reaching their people.—Mrs. Mary L. Robinson in the Northern.

There are but few church members who do not need help in finding out just what Christian work ought to be done by them. Many would be willing enough to work if only something specific were pointed out to them which is not beyond their ability. It is not sufficient for a pastor to appeal to his people to go to work, or to scold them because they do not anything. He should first find out what needs to be done, either through personal investigation, or through the efforts of competent committees, and then assign to individuals a plain, specific task.—Baptist Weekly.

There is a certain obligation resting upon the Nation to aid in promoting the education of the enfranchised blacks. The social wrongs of which they complain spring from the spirit of the people among whom they live, and their redress will have to await the development of a different and better feeling, which should be promoted in every way possible by the colored people themselves, and by those who take a kindly interest in their welfare. Their industrial relations can only be improved by a friendly co-operation of all concern in the efficiency of their labor and interested in their material well-being. There is no doubt that the white people of the South would share fully in the benefit of the improvement if they would aid in adjusting these relations on an equitable basis. As is well said in the address, the white people of the South can, if they will, "settle the question of labor and capital between the whites and the blacks," and an enlightened self-interest should impel them to edeavor to do this in accordance with the principles if common justice.—N. Y. Times.

A man who stammered was accosted by a traveler with: "Say, friend, how far is it to Smithville?" The tongue-tied man began: "S-s-s-six m-m-mi—;" and then losing all control of himself in his anger he roared: "Go 'long straight down the road; you'll get there long before I can tell you."

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

There is food for thought in the fact that the three States, Maine, Kansas, and Iowa, that have constitutionally prohibited the liquor traffic are the States where there is the least illiteracy. Multiply schools and so shut up the groggeries.

"My Wife Had Fits."

"For 25 years," says our correspondent, Henry Clark, of Fairfield, Lenawee Co., Mich., "my wife had fits. They would last about an hour, and sometimes longer. Samaritan Nervine has permanently cured her."

In Christian England, we are told, the business of making heathen gods for Asia and Africa, is a branch of industry through which large profits are reached. This is but one of the melancholy constrasts which the developments of civilized freedom create. Side by side, the idol seller and the missionary, and both emissaries from a Christian land. These things may astonish the savages, but we have become used to them. Here we have church members fighting to suppress the liquor traffic, and church fighting members to sustain it, for the profits to be gained thereby. The same train that carries our peace commissioners to deal with the red man of the West, carries also the trader with his stock of fire-water and fire-arms. All these bitter contrasts must exist, no doubt, but they do not help the gracious cause of Christianity with savages or sceptics, and there is but little hope of the "coming of the kingdom" until they are abolished.—Union Signal.

An Austin teacher overheard one of the larger boys in the class whispering to the boy below him that the teacher was a donkey. The teacher did not get angry at all. He did not seize the boy by the collar and draw him over the desk where he could get at him conveniently. All the teacher did was to remark placidly: "Harry, I shall mark you deficient in Natural History, because you cannot distinguish me from a donkey."

If and If.

"If you are suffering from poor health or languishing on a bed of sickness, take cheer; if you are simple ailing, or if feel weak and dispirited, without clearly knowing why, Hop Bitters will surely cure you."

"If you are a Minister, and have overtaxed yourself with your pastorial duties or a Mother, worn out with care and work, or a man of business or laborer weakened by the strain of your everyday duties, or a man of letters, toiling over your midnight work, Hop Bitters will surely strengthen you."

"If you are suffering from over-eating or drinking, any indiscretion or dissipation, or are young and growing too fast, as is often the case."

"Or if you are in the workshop, on the farm, at the desk, anywhere, and feel that your system needs cleansing, toning or stimulating, without intoxication; if you are old, blood thin and impure, pulse feeble, nerves unsteady, faculites waning, Hop Bitters is what you need to give you new life, and vigor."

If your are costive or dyspeptic or suffering from any other of the numerous diseases of the stomach or bowels, it is your own fault if you remain ill.

If you are wasting away with any form of Kidney disease, stop tempting death this moment, and turn for a cure to Hop Bitters.

If you are sick with that terrible sickness Nervousness, you will find a "Balm in Gilead" in Hop Bitters.

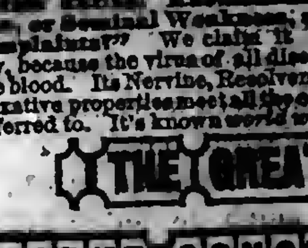
A zealous preacher, who loved smoking as well as he ought, in a heated discourse, exclaimed, aiming his rifle at some of his hearers: "Brethren, there is no sleeping car on the train to glory." One of the party whom he aimed to hit, responded: "No, brother, nor smoking car either."

SAMARITAN NEVER FAILS. NERVINE



"You claim too much for Samaritan Nervine," says a skeptic. "How can one medicine be a specific for Epilepsy, Dyspepsia, Alcoholism, [illegible] Rheumatism, Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, and fifty other complaints?" We claim it a specific, simply, because the virus of all diseases arises from the blood. Its Nervine, Resolvent, Alterative and Laxative properties meet all the conditions herein referred to. It's known world wide as

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR

It quiets and composes the patient—not by the introduction of opiates and drastic cathartics, but by the restoration of activity to the stomach and nervous system, whereby the brain is relieved of morbid fancies, which are created by the causes above referred to.

To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all those whose sedentary employment causes nervous prostration, irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulant, Samaritan Nervine is invaluable. Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system. $1.50. Sold by all Druggists. (14)

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.
By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.
WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time [illegible] the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

Buckley.* "It is grand I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. DR. JOHN BULL'S
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUZAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

The preacher visited him and preached Christ, to him upon whom he was trying to take hold. Just three days before his death he got light into his soul, and though weak, he exulted greatly in Christ his Saviour. He leaves a wife and several children, also a sister and the whole community to mourn his death. The Sun.

NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read THE SUN during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read, and like THE SUN for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.

Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs THE SUN makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. THE SUN has absolutely no purposes to serve save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that THE SUN is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.

Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robesonism and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, THE SUN stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interests of the people against the ambition of bosses, the encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that THE SUN is the best religious newspaper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worth of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of THE SUN discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to his individual liking.

If you already know THE SUN you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. If you do not already know THE SUN, you will find it to be a mirror of all human activity, a storehouse of the choicest products of common sense and imagination, a mainstay for the cause of honest government, a sentinel for genuine Jeffersonian Democracy, a scourge for wickedness of every species, and an uncommonly good investment for the coming year.

Terms to Mail Subscribers.

DAILY—55 cents a month, $6.50 a year; with Sunday edition, $7.70.
SUNDAY—Eight pages, $1.20 a year.

Editorial Notes.

The Western Christian Advocate says the eight hundred Methodist preachers of Ohio made a brave fight during the late temperance campaign.

The seat of the Central Alabama Conference has been changed from Eutaw to Tuscaloosa. Small pox in Eutaw, two recent deaths and several new cases, made this necessary.

As an illustration of the Methodist determination to be a little ahead of other people, we find that Bishop Hurst rode on the locomotive from North Platte to Denver on his episcopal tour of visitation.

The Religious Telescope noting the talk of a Catholic Council in America next year, to tighten up the church to a closer dogmatism, says it would be a great blessing if it could be a reform convention to draw the reigns to a severer morality in Catholicism.

The Baton Rouge Truth gravely announces that "a vacancy has occurred in the office of Mayor, and our people are called upon to go to the poles on the 29th inst., to select a suitable person to fill that office." By looking at any map it will be seen there is a little ring around each pole.

Rev. Morgan Callaway Jr., a correspondent of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, refering to Geo. W. Cable and his effort to correct the abuses in the Southern prison system by exposing its evils, represents Mr. Cable as saying: "I have seen them here in the city of New Orleans, cram men and women and children, without regard to sex or condition into a cell, with apparently no other purpose than to see how many could be put in, as if they were packing a barrel of patatoes."

Geo. W. Cable rejoices at the increase of Southern literature, as shown by recent successful ventures. This indeed is a matter of congratulation. It should be borne in mind, however, that people can not appreciate literature, or produce it until they learn how to read and write; that the common school sections are prolific in good authors; and that when New Orleans, Louisiana, and other parts of the South, vote the public school system out of a practical existence, the native talent is held in check, and native authors are compelled to go abroad for pecuniary recompense and deserved appreciation. Every successful production to-day bears the imprint of a Northern publishing house, and is upheld by Northern critics. A change may be desirable, and obtained by proper efforts.

With reference to the result of the Iowa election, Gov. Sherman said to an interviewing reporter: "The victory was won for the nobler forces and better elements of the State, and it leaves the Republican party in a better and stronger position in Iowa than it has been for ten years. It has taken a position of conscience and courage in the face of a great duty, and has met it both with honor and success." He felt sure of a Republican and prohibition majority in the legislature, and said the party would redeem every pledge it had made to the people.

In Ohio 711,691 votes were cast. The prohibition amendment received 323,765, or 31,081 short of a majority. Forty-six counties voted for prohibition, and forty-two counties against. Of the number favoring prohibition thirty-one returned Republican and fifteen Democratic majorities. Of the forty-two counties voting against, thirty-four were Democratic and eight Republican. This is a defeat in one contest only, and shows that prohibition has a mighty host of defenders in Ohio. It is safe to say that the new Governor and legislature will deal tenderly with the question, and will have need of all their wisdom to avoid political breakers.

Houston Seminary.

MR. EDITOR—Our school has opened with a large attendance of good earnest students, and the best feeling seems to prevail. We have enrolled about 80. Those who are thinking of entering should not delay in doing so, but come on as soon as possible. Altogether we think the year promises to be a prosperous one with the Seminary. The district conference recently held at Trinity Church in this city were invited to visit us, and they accepted the invitation, coming, in a body, on Friday evening. After listening to the recitations a while the order of exercises were changed and addresses called for. Bros. Reddick, Thomas, Watrons, Jas. Smith, Roberts, Geo. Davis, Moore, H. W. Wilson and C. O. Minegan, the financial agent, spoke briefly and to the point. At the suggestion of Bro. Roberts a collection was taken up for the school amounting to four dollars. The following amounts have be paid in on the old subscriptions: R. R. Roberts, $13.35; J. S. Whitaker, $14.50. I. B. Scott, $7.50; F. Norwood, $3.50; John Guess, $7; S. Hardwell, $2. Bro. Whitaker writes me that he intends "to shake every bush and not let the stumps alone," and that he intends to complete that hundred dollar subscription. Who else will remember to do likewise? We need such men in our pulpits, as will freely undertake the subscriptions and then not forget afterwards to honor their own names. It will not do to relax our efforts for the school. It is as urgent a necessity to raise these collections this year as it was last. We hope all our church members here and elsewhere will consider it a duty to visit the Seminary. Come during school hours if you can; see the workings of the school; listen to the recitations; know what we are doing, and go home feeling thankful to God and the Freedmen's Aid Society for the privilege of having a school to take up collections for.

Notes From Nashville.

To-day I called to see Rev. John Seay, near Lebanon, Tenn. He has just entered his 90th year. From him I learned that he was born in old Virginia, Oct. 9, 1794; that he was born of the spirit Sabbath night, Aug. 20, 1820; was licensed to preach in 1821; ordained deacon by Bishop George in 1823; ordained elder by Bishop Soule in 1 25. He traveled as an itinerant preacher seven years, then located and remained in the local ranks till the close of the war; he then sent his certificate of location to the Tennessee Conference of the M. E. Church, of which he is now a superannuated member. His principal work since the war has been in promoting the temperance cause. The Tennessee Conference organized, at his suggestion, a temperance society, including in the pledge intoxicating liquors and tobacco, and every member of the conference took the pledge. He gave the conference; at that time $560, for aiding an embarrassed church, as an inducement for the brethren to give up the use of the weed. He says of himself, "I never swore a profane oath, told a wilful lie, defrauded a man out of a dime or used tobacco in any form in my life. To God be all the praise for this preventing grace." Notwithstanding his age and his lameness, from a fall, which has kept him in his room for near two years, his is quite strong and full of mental activity. He enjoys the life of faith.

Nashville has just closed an exciting election. It was what most municipal elections in this country are, a fight between the "outs" and the "ins." Both sides claimed to be for reform, and both sides spent an immense amount of money in liquor, and their reform movement has been inaugurated by an immense amount of drunkenness. It is to be hoped that this is not the outcome of the "reform" in Nashville. Both candidates for the mayoralty are avowedly opposed to total abstinence; one is a wholesale liquor dealer, the other boasts that he is not afraid to avow in public that he can drink a glass of whiskey and enjoy it. J. BRADEN.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 13.

An Important Notice.

To the Preachers of the West Texas Conference:

DEAR BRETHREN—Please allow me to submit the following for your consideration. In view of the fact that the coming conference will be an electoral conference, and there will be many to be cared for, say 65 members of the annual conference besides probationers and those on trial in the traveling connection, I am doing all I can to prepare homes for you and your delegates, but I can not take care of your wives and children. If you bring them you may expect to look out for private homes for them. We have worked hard this year, and are yet working. Our aim is to make it as comfortable for you as we possibly can; but expenses have been so very great in trying to complete our church by conference that we find that it will be utterly impossible for us to take care of any except those who are members of or connected with the conference, of course we include the delegates. Furthermore, at the season of the year in which the annual conference will convene the weather is generally very inclement, and I am satisfied your wives and your children will suffer should you bring them with you. Several brethren have written me already to secure good rooms for them. Allow me to say to you, dear brethren, such homes as the people have you shall have; I shall not choose for you. Some have written to some of my members for homes. I am here to look out for this matter, and will do it. Some have written for homes near the church. Dear brethren, I shall not show any partiality whatever; whoever will take you you will have to stop with. We must have all things in common. God has made of one blood all men, etc.

I remain very truly,

J. R. CARNES.

Gulf District—Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR—I have completed my third round, and will let you know what we are doing on the district. I began at Crystal Springs, H. L. Kennedy in charge. The work is doing well. A good number joined the church. At Hazlehurst, one of his appointments, a new church is almost completed.

New Hope, the new place, has R. Anderson in charge. The work is doing very well, and several have been added.

At Union Church, J. Ford in charge, great improvements have been made. Two new churches are complete, and a good many persons have joined.

At Fayette, H. Henderson in charge, has bought and paid for two lots on which to build a church and parsonage; thirty have joined.

At Meadville R. Roundtree is doing well.

At Bay St. Louis and Pass Christian, N. Cannon in charge, great improvements have been made. A lot has been bought in Pass Christian on which to build a parsonage, and a good many have joined.

At Handsboro, J. B. Smith in charge, all is well, and several have joined.

At Pascagoula, P. E. Bardwell is doing well; forty have joined.

At Augusta G. W. Smith is doing a good work, and there is a large field.

At Brookhaven and Summit, J. H. Cook is in his third and last year. There is great improvement. One church has been built, another repaired, and thirty members have been admitted.

At Columbia, J. Drayton, and at Liberty, H. May, are doing well.

W. MCDONALD, P. E.

The New Presiding Elder.

MR. EDITOR—I had, on yesterday, the pleasure of becoming acquainted with Rev. J. C. Eklee, presiding elder of the Holly Springs district, in the place of Rev. L. Bradford, resigned on account of failing health. It has never been my pleasure to meet a Christian brother whose appearance, every utterance and action were more Christian-like than Bro. Eckles. The ministers and members of our church in his district who have seen him are pleased with and proud of their new elder. As presiding elder of the Holly Springs district I believe that he is the right man in the right place, and that the preachers and people of his charge will extend to him a cordial Christian greeting that will encourage and strengthen his heart in his new field of labor. H. R. REVELS.

The new and beautiful M. E. church at Belvidere, Ill., was dedicated Oct. 7. It cost $2800.

The Supreme Court Decides the Civil Rihgts Act of 1875 Unconstitutional.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The Supreme Court to-day rendered a decision in the five civil rights cases which were submitted to the court about a year ago. These cases were prosecutions under the Civil Rights act for not admitting certain colored persons to equal accommodations and privileges in hotels, railroad cars, and theatres. The defence set up in every case was the alleged unconstitutionality of the law.

The first and second sections of the act were the parts directly in controversy. The first section is:

SECTION 1. That all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the accommodations, advantages, facilities, and privileges of inns, public conveyances on land and water, theatres and other places of public amusement, subject only to the conditions and limitations established by law, and applicable alike to citizens of every race and color, regardless of any previous condition of servitude.

The second section privides that any person who violates the first section shall be liable to forfeit $500 for each offence, to be recovered in a civil action; and also to a penalty of from $500 to $1,000 fine, or imprisonment from thirty days to a year, to be enforced in a criminal prosecution. Exclusive jurisdiction is given to the District and Circuit Courts of the United States in cases arising under the law.

The rights and privileges claimed by and denied to the colored persons in these cases were full and equal accommodations in hotels, on railway trains, and in the theatres.

The Court, in a long and carefully prepared opinion by Justice Bradley, held:

First—That Congress had no constitutional authority to pass the sections in question under either the Thirteenth of Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution.

Second—That the Fourteenth Amendment is prohibitory upon the States only, and that the legislation authorized to be adopted by Congress for enforcing that amendment is not direct legislation on the matters respecting which the States are prohibited from making or enforcing laws or doing certain acts, but is corrective legislation necessary or proper for counteracting and redressing the effect of such laws or acts; that in forbidding the States, for example, to deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and giving Congress power to enforce the prohibition, it was not intended to give Congress power to provide due process of law for the protection of life, liberty, and property (which would embrace all subjects of legislation), but to provide modes of redress for counteracting the operation and effect of State laws obnoxious to the prohibition.

Third—That the Thirteenth Amendment gave no power to Congress to pass the sections referred to, because that amendment relates to slavery and involuntary servitude, which is abolished, and gives Congress power to pass laws for its enforcement; that this power only extends to the subject matter of the amendment itself, namely, slavery and involuntary servitude, and the necessary incidents and consequences of those conditions; that it has nothing to do with different races or colors, but only refers to slavery—the legal equality of different races and classes of citizens being provided for in the Fourteenth Amendment, which prohibits the State from doing anything to interfere with such equality; that it is no infringement of the Thirteenth Amendment to refuse to any person the equal accommodations and privileges of an inn or a place of public entertainment, however it may be violative of his legal rights; that it imposes upon him no badge of slavery or involuntary servitude which implies some sort of subjection of one person to another and the incapacity incident thereto, such as inability to hold property, to make contracts, to be parties in court, &c.; and that if the original Civil Rights act which abolished these incapacities might be supported by the Thirteenth Amendment, it does not therefore follow that the act of 1875 can be supported by it.

Fourth—That this decision affects only the validity of the law in the States, and not in the Territories or District of Columbia, where the legislative power of Congress is unlimited; and it does not undertake to decide what Congress might or might not do under the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States, the law not being drawn with any such view.

Fifth—That, therefore, it is the opinion of the Court that the first and second sections of the act of Congress of 1875, entitled "An act to protect all citizens in their civil and legal rights" are unconstitutional and void, and judgment should be rendered upon the indictments accordingly.

At the conclusion of the reading of Justice Bradley's opinion, Justice Harlan said that under ordinary circumstances and in any ordinary case he should hesitate to set up his individual opinion in opposition to that of his eight colleagues, but in view of what he thought the people of this country wished to accomplish, what they tried to accomplish, and what they believed they had accomplished by means of this legislation, he must express his dissent from the opinion of the Court. He had not had time since hearing that opinion to prepare a statement of the grounds of his dissent, but he should prepare and file one as soon as possible, and in the meantime desired to put upon record this expression of his individual judgment.

Church Extension Funds.

Conference trustees and others having Church Extension funds in their hands are desired to forward the same to Jas. Long, Treasurer, No. 1026 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa. Unless received by Oct. 31, they cannot be credited this year nor included in receipts reported to General Conference, as the fiscal year and the quadrennium will close Oct. 31, 1883.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 15, 1883.

If the Chicago charity organization society just formed carries out what its secretary states as its expectation, it will accomplish not a little. Says he: "In a short time I expect that there will not be a street-beggar in Chicago, nor will there be a deserving poor person neglected." The plan of the society is similar to that of the one in Boston spoken of in our literary columns a few weeks since. It aims to district the city and establish a bureau of exchange of intelligence regarding the poor in the various divisions. The object is to ascertain the name and whereabouts of every needy person in the city, and to prevent the practice of pauperism and imposture which to a greater or less extent abounds in every city.—Standard.

Rock River Conference adopted resolutions in favor of total legal prohibition of the liquor traffic, and declaring the unqualified opposition of the members to license in any form.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

W. H. Osborne, Centreville: "Our Sunday-school is prospering. Rev. S. Evans, pastor, is pleased with the church and the school, and we are pleased with him. The teachers are dutiful to the school. We shall send our pastor to conference with the report of a good year's work."

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. D. W. Calvert, of Starkville, writes that the church has completely settled with him for this year's services, $350, and he feels grateful to the liberal and generous people. He sent us the names of those who contributed, but we will not publish them, as our space should be devoted to other matter of more interest. It is creditable to the people of Starkville that the relations between them and their pastor are pleasant. We have never heard any but good things about Bro. Calvert.

G. W. Barney, Yazoo City: "I wish to say a few words about Greenwood district. Every preacher is at his post, and we are moving forward. We are building new churches and repairing old ones, and the best of all is that we are having a wonderful revival all over the district. Many souls have been converted, and added to the church."

H. Cawthorn, Greenwood: "I have just closed my protracted meeting, which resulted in 30 additions to the church and several backsliders reclaimed. We have bought two acres of land with a small church on it, and have a good deed for it."

James Trice, Tupelo: "I have closed my protracted meeting with 46 converts, of whom 40 joined our church, making a total of 60 this year. We held a camp meeting 20 miles east of Tupelo. Our presiding elder came and stayed with us three days. The white people crowded our camp grounds, and asked that the elder remain another night that they might bring their wives and children out to hear him. His collection was $8.05."

TEXAS.

W. H. Moseby, Seguin: "The work is in good condition; camp meeting resulted in 9 converts, 31 mourners, 9 joined our church. In Seguin we have 44 members; at Mount Pleasant 140; at Neckonut 38. There is a church at each place. I held Bro. J. B. Walker's quarterly meeting. The pastor's report was good. A debt of $100 was to have been paid right away. Some of the members of the M. E. Church South have preached for us. The pastor has started a new work with 12 members."

J. T. Jacobs, Hondo City: "Public schools are without teachers at Fredericksburg and Elm Pass. We want teachers of the third grade to come to our aid. Our children have not had much chance here. We would like to have colored teachers of the M. E. Church, who will take an interest in our Sunday-schools. Dear brethren, do not stop long to consider; come and help us; write for information to Mr. T. Blanks, Centre Point, Kerr county, or Mr. S. Russell, Fredericksburg, Gillespie county, Texas."

TENNESSEE.

L. M. Moore, Pleasant Grove circuit: "It has been quite a while since I have had anything to say in your valuable paper. I call it valuable because it is on the line of right and duty. It is like the old M. E. Church, and knows no man by the color of his face. When any man or editor takes the side which he may expect himself or people to die. Our paper has fought from the first, and we hope the editors, as God's men, will hold their ground. Those who can't stand it must step down and out. There is going out of all the churches in the land, and may God hasten the time when it will be out of the school room and other places. The old M. E. Church bruised the serpent's head some years ago, and his tail will die in a few years. While in Memphis I was introduced to Rev. Dr. Moore, of the Church South, and was pleasantly received. The spirit of caste is going out of that Church."

B. Anderson, Lebanon: "I had a two week's meeting at Seay's Chapel. At this meeting there were 18 conversions, of which 15 joined our church. I have commenced a protracted meeting at Lebanon. There are six at the altar, the church is being greatly revived."

H. W. Simmons, Gallatin Circuit: "Being a young minister on my first work, I at first met with many things that were embarrassing. For eight months I worked without any apparent success, and was, at times, at a stand, as what to do next. But having read in your columns so many words of encouragement, I thought it best to wait on the Lord. Now my work has thrown off her mourning and is at work. I feel as the Psalmist says: "Truly God is good to Israel." I have been walking close by the side of Jesus. Now the clouds have vanished and the sky is shining clear. Our fourth quarter was held on the 29th, by Elder Pickett. Bro. Bryant, of the Hartsville circuit was with us, and preached Sunday and Sunday night. Text, 1 Peter 4-18 verses. Sermons I hope which will be long remembered by those present. Our collection for presiding elder was $9.50; benevolence, $8. Reclaimed 2; received by letter 2; on probation 5. We earnestly solicit the prayers of the church."

ARKANSAS.

G. W. Baber, Howard co.: "Over 75 souls have been added to the church this year. The times are very hard in some parts of the circuit, though the people do all they can for me. I have been paid $210.75. We want more good men for the work in this State. There is some discord among the brethren which sometimes discourages me."

J. Clark, Hot Springs: "Our Sunday-school is progressing with an average attendance of 65 scholars, an increase over the past two or three months. The church members are becoming more interested in the Sunday school work, and are using their influence and setting Christian examples. We anticipate a school of 74 or 80 before the close of the present quarter. We have been wonderfully blessed during the present year. There was only one death in the Sunday-school during the year—little Mamy Harrison, daughter of Hamp and Mary Harrison, and a greatly beloved scholar. She died Aug. 10, aged 10 years, 7 months, and 29 days. She was a great favorite of all who knew her, and leaves an aged father and mother and two brothers. Our beloved pastor, Rev. W. H. Crawford, is doing all he can to revive the spirit of religion in our church, but as yet has not been very successful. He is certainly a good man, and we wish such men as he is could be sent to every place where the gospel is wanted."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Experiences of a School Teacher.

MR. EDITOR—I desire to make a few remarks about my summer tour and work in Texas. First I came to Texas in December, 1880, from Tennessee. I found things quite different to what they were in Tennessee; the custom very much different from any that I had been used to. Yet I never let the people see by my actions that their custom was so very different from ours (though within myself, at that time, one day was enough for me). They sent for me to teach school; I went before the board and stood the examination. The trustees treated me very kindly; had they not done so I would have left long ago. Yet, with all of the kind treatment the leading gentlemen gave me, I felt lonesome. From boyhood I have been accustomed to high hills, nice towns, large cities, and a wooded country; so anything different from that changed my views of things. There is quite a contrast between Texas and Tennessee. The people of Texas are very good in some respects to strangers, and in others they are very indifferent, though I suppose the reason is that they suffer themselves to be led by the Spanish, though I do not mean directly under its influence. Since I have been in Texas I am glad to say that I am fully persuaded to believe that my labor is not in vain. I am impressed that my labor has been duly searched by leading characters of this portion of the country, and one whom I truly think has been carefully looking after the cause of his people, Rev. M. Henson, of the West Texas Conference and presiding elder of the San Antonio District. I never met a more earnest and deep thinking gentleman in all my travels. There are many whom you meet that will pretend to be true men, but alas! such men we have no place for. In short, since I have been in Texas, I have succeeded in raising a high school in Goliad; we commenced without a dollar, but have since raised $750, bought five acres of land, chartered our school, bought 40 patent seats, blackboards and rubbers. We have a two-story frame building in which we can accommodate three hundred students. Our school is a charitable one. We need help from any source that will and desire to do good. Our school is a union school, non-sectarian in principle. We have 150 students attending this school; our faculty is not complete, though we hope to make it so. After staying in Texas two years and a half I was permitted to return home to see my dear parents and the dear old faculty of Central Tennessee College, by whom we were gladly received. Of course, after telling all the sweets and as little of the bitters as possible, I presented the wants of the people in Texas intellectually. They opened their hearts and made several small donations. Dr. G. W. Hubbard, the dean of the medical faculty of Central Tennessee College, donated over forty volumes of fine literature and a goodly number of singing books, also a small box of chemical apparatus. Dr. J. Braden also gave a great number. Allow me to say in behalf of myself and these two, aside from the regular line of thought, Dr. J. Braden and Prof. W. Patterson made me the present of a fine lot of books which I shall hold as the dearest treasure on earth. The trustees of Jones Male and Female Institute highly appreciate them; they not only appreciate the books but the teachers they sent to teach in our institution at Goliad, Texas. During my stay in Nashville I had the pleasure of meeting Rev. L. M. Hagood, pastor of Clark Chapel. I am glad to say, and I think it due him, I never met a more refined gentleman in my life. It made me feel proud to see him the pastor of Clark Chapel. Clark Chapel never meets with bad luck; her ministers are first-class. After being with Rev. Hagood nearly seven weeks, I then went to Aberdeen, Miss., my native home. There I met another able minister, Rev. P. Jamison, who was an apparent stranger, as much so as Elder Hagood. I cannot tell you how well pleased I was. Aberdeen has never had a more dignified minister than Elder Jamison. His congregation gave Jones Male and Female Institute $17. In short, brethren, I think I shall enter the field with the whole armor. I think it is time for us to come to the front. You hear it remarked that we have too many preachers; it is well said; too many of the wrong sort. Our pulpits need intelligent ministers. Every profession of life is being filled with able and intelligent young men but the ministry—I mean in a general sense. I know the Saviour said, "The maim, the halt, the blind all may come," but I really do not think that He meant that these characters should call the noble and brave to Christ; never, no never did He mean any such. Come, young men who are educated, and enter the minister's work; the people need us; God wants us to mow in the vineyard. Who will respond this year? The fields are ripening far and near.

Yours, in Christ,

O. P. WESTBROOKS.

Human Food.

Many of the ancients never ate animal food. Plutarch, a learned Grecian, abstained from it altogether. He lived to be nearly eighty years old, and was a hard worker. He is said to have written three hundred philosophical works. One hundred and twenty-five of them are extant. This celebrated man once wrote: "You ask me for what reason Pythagoras abstained from eating the flesh of brutes; for my part I am astonished to think what appetite first induced man to taste of a dead carcass, or what motive could suggest the notion of nourishing himself with the flesh of dead animals." People could live much cheaper if they were taught Plutarch's views, and enjoy excellent health and live a great many years by restricting themselves to a purely vegetable diet. If we "look nature squarely in the face," we shall find that grains, vegetables and fruits are the natural food of man, and therefore best for him, both mentally and physically. Pythagoras was one of the most celebrated of the ancient philosophers, and he is said to be one of the very first one we read of, who came to the defence of a vegetable diet. He not only refrained from animal food himself, but he likewise prohibited its use by his disciples, and in consequence those who follow his rule to-day are called Pythagoreans. He flourished about five hundred years before Christ, and was a man of vast and profound learning, and of extraordinary powers of intellect. It was he who demonstrated the famous Forty-seventh Problem of the First Book of Euclid, and who entertained the true views respecting the solar system which were afterwards restated by Copernicus in the fifteenth century.

Zeno, the stoic; Diogenes, the cynic; Plato, Plutarch, Plautus, Proclus, Empedocles, Phocion, Quintus Sextus; Porphyry, and a great many more among the ancients whose names and histories have descended to us, all abstained from animal food; and more recently Haller, Ritson, Dr. Cheyne, Dr. Lamb, Shelley, Dr. Whitlaw, Sir Richard Philips, Prof. R. D. Mussey, Dr. W. A. Alcott, and many others have both advocated and personally tried for a long course of years a strictly and exclusively vegetable diet. Vegetable food is capable of producing and sustaining the greatest physical strength. Even grass is capable of producing great vigor in the herbivorous animals, and that fruits, roots and grains are also capable of supplying considerable muscular energy is shown by the orang-outang. This animal has been known to take up his master bodily and carry him about. Among men whose powers of endurance and whose physical strength were notably sustained on a vegetarian diet, the case of Cyrus the ruler of Persia, is cited. It is recorded that he performed more extraordinary marches, fought more battles, won more remarkable victories and exhibited more bodily endurance than almost any general that ever lived; and that he subsisted from childhood on the simplest and plainest diet of vegetable food and water; and the Persian soldiers who accompanied him on his career of conquest, and shared his hardships, toils and dangers, and on whom he placed his main dependence in battle, and with whom he was able to march thousands of miles in an incredibly short time, and conquor armies twice as large as his own, were, like himself, trained from childhood on bread, cresses and water, and adhered strictly to the same simplicity of vegetable diet through the whole of their heroic course, not relaxing at all from the stern severity of their abstemiousness even in the hour of victory, when the luxury of captured cities lay in profusion around them.

On this subject Rollins says in his Ancient History that those who were destined to become athletæ "frequented, from their tender age, the gymnasia or palestræ, which were a kind of academies maintained at the public expense for that purpose. In these places such young people were under the direction of different masters, who employed the most effectual methods to inure their bodies to the fatigues of the public games, and to form them for the combats. The regimen they were under was very hard and severe. At first they had no other nourishment but dried figs, nuts, soft cheese, and a gross, heavy sort of bread. They were absolutely forbidden to use wine, and required to observe the strictest continence." And again he says, "In later times, after animal food had begun to be common among the people, and flesh meat was found to be more stimulating, and to render their pugilists and gladiators more ferocious, a portion of flesh was introduced into the diet of the athletæ. But according to the testimony of early Greek writers it was soon found that the free use of this kind of aliment made them the most sluggish and stupid of men."

Coming down to modern times, we have the personal testimony of several travelers, some from New England, and well known, to the fact of the superior strength of Russian soldiers, Greek watermen, Spanish carriers and stevedores, Canary porters, and other specimens of strong men, which is entirely consistent with the theory of a vegetarian diet. In almost all these cases, a small daily allowance of coarse, unbolted bread, garnished with some kinds of common fruits for sauce, was the basis of a physical vigor that no flesh-eating classes can show. The facts are certainly too significant to be set aside, and they are of special interest to all those who are desirous of following abstemious lives. One thing is very certain, that a great deal of flesh food tends to clog and corrupt the human spirit in the folds of stupidity which it generates. But the subject is one rather to investigate and experiment upon than to dogmatize upon with intent to make involuntary converts to the vegetarian theory.

Must Be True.

MR. EDITOR—A few days ago, while sitting in a passenger coach, we heard a white man say: "Yes, there are the niggers. If I had my way I would kill the last one of them. All they study about is an education, and the first thing we know we can't get a cook or a nurse." This led us to believe that Dr. Haygood's statement relative to "bossism" must be true.

Yours, A SUBSCRIBER.

Filled With God's Fullness.

BY BISHOP M. SIMPSON.

I love the brave fireman who puts up the ladder and comes down with my child. I can't help taking that man to my arms. He saved my boy. Shall I not love God—Jesus—who died for all my children to save them from eternal ruin and rescued them from that perdition to which they are going! I want no other proof of the depravity of the human heart than the fact that men do not love God. If this depravity is cast out by taking Christ, getting near to Christ, getting Him to dwell in your heart, getting Him to stay morning, noon and night, you can then look out on this planet and take in the breadth and height and one above every surrounding of trial, being "filled with all the fulness of God." But then, as I intimated, there must be love to comprehend love. There must be a practical exhibition of love to enable you to fully comprehend love. God did not theorize; He practiced. He gave His Son. He told Abraham to take His son and offer him. How did Abraham feel in all those three days when looking upon Israel? How did he feel when taking the knife? Could he forget him as he turned his head? He looked so much like Sarah, shall I slay him? Could he forget him? God gave His only begotten. Could He forget us? I Hear Him saying, Lo! I come to do thy will, even as He looked down the future, past the years, past the centuries, past the ages, on to Calvary, saw the pangs, saw all, yet He came. There was practical love for us. We must begin to work, to do good in some way. There is not a person whom God has not placed under circumstances in which he can do good. God gives to us the key to some heart no one else can open. It must be done by us or it is not done at all. As Christ came for our sakes, we ought to go for His sake. Now these views come to me suggested by the text, yet there is more in it than I know. I have never been able to solve it. All see something of this mystery, see something of this love, know something he has done. But the riches of His glory are beyond my comprehension. I had a friend who preached once on the love of God and its unfathomable nature. He used this figure. Brought a sounding line and reached away down and said, "So many fathoms." Another expression, "So many fathoms," and then cried out, "More line!" "More line!" He had not line enough to measure the depths of the love of God. I am not able to describe it all, but, thank God, you and I have all eternity to try our line.—October Pulpit Treasury.

Napoleon Barry of 281 Mulberry street was very drunk yesterday. He beat his sister-in-law's dog and bit its tail until it howled. Then he locked himself in his room and made a bonfire of the family Bible. The sister-in-law, Mrs. Kate Barry, forced her way into the room, and he struck her on the nose. The sight of smoke caused some one to send out an alarm of fire. The Fire Department turned out and found Mrs. Barry's nose bleeding. Barry was arrested, Mrs. Barry said she had $400 in bank bills in the Bible, and part of it had been burned.—N. Y. Sun.

Christianity.

Here is Christianity. Whence came it? What is it? It is a force in the world, a prodigious force. It has revolutionized society. It has lifted man out of himself. It has changed the face of the world. There it lies imbedded in more than eighteen centuries of human history; and history of no mean sort—the best record of the race. Buddhism and Brahminism are older, and are linked with more peoples. Mohammedanism, not so old, has to do with a greater multitude. The adherents of these systems have outnumbered the adherents of Christianity. Numerically they are at the lead. But if you weigh men, or weigh nations, there are no numbers of either that can be put in the scale against Christendom without kicking the beam. Christianity has held her own, and made conquests amidst battles of thought, with discussion at a white heat. She herself has been a "beam of light shot into chaos," irradiating the darkness and restoring order. She has not thrived amid moral abominations by wearing pitch upon her garments; but her breath has been as a broken alabaster box of ointment. Because of her coming, men have been ennobled and beautified and given new moods of joy. Her truth has held the best mind of humanity—held it and possessed it, and gotten the unreluctant homage of it, against all the most persistent effort of learning and science to make that truth a lie. Christianity has withstood all attacks from all foes and come off victor. There never has been an institution so fiercely and bitterly and resolutely opposed. A giant and defiant heathenism, a corrupt and bigoted priesthood, a persecuting, world-conquering state, a proud and reasoning philosophy, a subtle and ingenious scepticism, a sneering and malignant infidelity, a plausible and self recovering humanitarianism, impelled by hate and the scorn and the pride and the obstinacy of men's natural hearts—these all in succession, and often conjointly—have set themselves to the task of rooting Christianity out of the world's life. "The days of this hated religion are numbered," they have shouted, as some fresh foe has entered the arena to make it bite the dust. And yet today millions rest on it their dearest hopes; it is flinging its forces, with an enthusiasm of energy beyond all precedent, into the very centres of heathenism; it is banding the world with lines of light; the sun never sets without new records of its conquests; "our best of uttered prayers are in its storied speech," our grandest thoughts of God are born of its quickening touch; and the best that men know of immortality was brought them in the revelation hour of this new gospel ..... The prodigious force of Christianity comes from the personality of Him who rode into Jerusalem on an ass's colt. This Christ, whoever He is, has not only originated a system, but He has put Himself into it, as its very life, and soul, and power...... What Christianity has done, Christ has done; what Christianity professes to do, Christ professes to do. If Christianity reveals a way, Christ is the way. If Christianity teaches truth, Christ is the truth. If Christianity brings life, Christ is the life.—Christianity's Challenge, by Rev. Herrick Johnson, D. D.

The Negro Rioters.

Gen. R. G. Shaver, of Center Point, writing to the Daily News, says that forty-two of the Negro rioters of Howard county have been indicted for murder in the second degree, and gives as his opinion that they will be convicted as charged in the indictments. The court adjourned to November 12th, when the Negroes will be tried.

If the white people of Howard county were fair they would also convict those white men who killed the innocent colored men who was only looking on, and was making a coffin to bury the murdered colored man. Evenhanded justice is all we ask for. The leader of the alleged colored rioters of Howard county was captured last Saturday in Texas, and is now in the county jail at Washington, Hempstead county, awaiting the action of the grand jury.—Arkansas Mansion.

A Terrible Enemy.

The rumseller is a terrible enemy to the happiness of every family circle. He sits in the lurking places of the villages like a beast of prey. He fastens his eyes upon the youth and sets forth the tempting bait to draw them into his net. If some huge serpent lurking near, should now and then glide along the street, and wind its fatal folds around somebody's son and crush him, who could remain indifferent and inactive? Every parent, every citizen would rise up, and that serpent would be dragged forth and destroyed, though his den were a rocky fortress. The serpent could kill but the body. The rum-seller kills the body and soul together. And yet persons who know all this, and who would sooner follow a son to the grave in life's fair morning, than see him live to become a victim of the rumseller, will sit still with folded arms and see the work of ruin go on busily around him. Once a fierce wolf went prowling over the hills and valleys, thinning the flocks of the farmers. The men rose up, pursued the enemy to his lair, the bravest of them went in, confronted and destroyed him. The wolf preyed only upon the flocks—the rum-sellers prey upon the precious youth. Had that wolf been endowed with perpetual life, and had he devoured the sons instead of the lambs, he would not have been at all so terrible an enemy to the homes of the country as are the rum-sellers, who are fattening by the ruin of souls.

Five Rules for Church Visitation.

1. Go to that family in your neighborhood, or parish, least likely to receive a call from any one else. They are the ones that need you first.

2. Go as a church member belonging to such a church, interested in its work.

3. Report any case to your pastor where a visit from him would be acceptable. You know more about your neighbors then he does. Your calls and reports will help him very much in his work.

4. Look for the strangers upon whom you have called. Don't forget all about them in a half an hour after you have visited them. Look out for them at church and at the prayer meeting.

5. Persevere in it as a disciple of Christ! You are not doing it for your sake, but Christ's sake. You are doing it for the sake of saving souls for Him. "Verily I say unto you, you shall have your reward."—Evangelist.

In the lumbering region of Texas a philanthropists attention was called to the fact that no schools existed in that vicinity, and the children were growing up in ignorance. He inaugurated a school and invited all the neighbors to send their children free; they were indignant and said they did not want their children spoiled. Those are white people of the 19th century.

It is so hard for some minds to rest in a spiritual Christianity. Show us a sign! Tip a table or materialize a spirit! Cure incurable diseases, and settle by divine revelation the location of a church or the election of a school trustee! To such people Christianity is nothing unless it can run a sawmill or tear the veil off all that God hides from our sight. But the real office of Christianity is to save men from their sins, purify their natures, and exalt their affections to spiritual things. And this is the greater, sublimer task. The old heathenism and idolatry cry out for signs, and bend down to dumb things, and rest in the life of sense. No! it is not a step forward, but a great march backward, to be oiling people's religion at Knock or Boston.

A distinguished man when questioned respecting his habitual refusal to criticise the sermons of his pastor, said, "I would have no one criticise a sermon till he has attempted to preach one. After one has addressed a congregation, one will better understand a preacher's sensations and difficulties. In all criticisms one should remember that the hand which cannot build a hovel, may demolish a palace." If these wise thoughts were accepted as rules for the tongue by those hearers who act as if they believed criticism to be the chief duty of the listener, much preaching now critically condemned would be fed upon as manna from heaven.—Zion's Herald.

It fell into a crevice, and a large mass of rock was blown up. Adams turned mournfully to gather up what might be left of his effects, and found a vein of silver that the explosion had exposed to view.

Mother's Girl.

Sleeves to the dimpled elbow,
Fun in the sweet blue eyes,
To and fro upon errands,
The little maiden hies.
Now she is washing dishes;
Now she is feeding the chicks,
Now she is playing with pussy,
Or teaching Rover tricks.

Wrapped in a big white apron,
Pinned in a checkered shawl,
Hanging clothes in the garden,
Oh, were she only tall!
Hushing the fretful baby,
Coaxing his hair to curl;
Stepping around so briskly,
Because she is mother's girl.

Hunting for eggs in the haymow,
Patting old Brindle's calf,
Riding Don to the pasture,
With many a ringing laugh;
Coming whene'er you call her,
Running wherever sent,
Mother's girl is a blessing,
And mother is well content.

Not Trustworthy.

BY FRANK H. STAUFFER.

One afternoon a gentleman was shown into Mr. Lamar's library.

"Mr. Lamar," asked the visitor, "do you know a lad by the name of Gregory Bassett?"

"I guess so," replied Mr. Lamar, with a smile. "That is the young man," he added nodding toward Gregory.

The latter was a boy aged about fourteen. He was drawing a map at the wide table near the window.

"A bright boy, I should judge," commented the visitor, looking over the top of his glasses. "He applied for a clerkship in my mill, and referred me to you. His letter of application shows that he is a good penman. How is he at figures?"

"Rapid and correct," was the reply.

"That's good! Honest, is he?"

"O yes," answered Mr. Lamar.

"The work is not hard and he will be rapidly promoted, should he deseve it. O! one question more Mr. Lamar, is the boy trustworthy?"

"I regret to say that he is not," was the grave reply.

"Eh!" cried the visitor. "Then I don't want him."

That ended the interview.

"O uncle!" cried Gregory, bursting into tears.

He had set his heart upon obtaining the situation, and was very much disappointed over the result.

"Gregory, I could not deceive the gentleman," Mr. Lamar said in a low tone, more regretful than stern. "You are not trustworthy, and it is a serious failing; nay, a fault, rather. Three instances occurred, within as many weeks, which sorely tried my patience and cost me loss of time and money."

Mr. Lamar's tone changed into one of reproach, and his face was dark with displeasure.

"I gave you some money to deposit in bank," he resumed. "You loitered until the bank was closed and my note went to protest. One evening I told you to close the gate at the barn. You neglected to do so; the colt got out through the night, fell into a quarry and broke his leg. I had to shoot the pretty little thing to put an end to its suffering."

Gregory lifted his hand in a humiliated way.

"Next I gave you a letter to mail. You loitered to watch a man with a tame bear. 'The nine o'clock mail will do,' you thought. But it didn't, being a way mail, and not a through mail. On the following day I went fifty miles to keep the appointment I had made. The gentleman was not there to meet me because he had not received my letter. I lost my time and missed all the benefit of what would have been a very profitable transaction. It is not too late for you to reform; and unless you do reform your life will be a failure."

The lesson was not lost upon Gregory. He succeeded in getting rid of his heedless ways, and became prompt, precise, and trustworthy.—Sunday School Times.

A Blacksmith's Story.

A subscriber, who is a blacksmith, says that he sees a great improvement in the temper of the horses he shoes now as compared with the horses he shod a few years ago, because, as he said, owners are setting the horses better examples. The old maxin, "Like master like man," in its spirit, extends with even greater force to the animal creation than to man. "Lately," he said, "a horse came to my shop that was difficult to approach. 'What have you done to this horse?' I asked of the owner. 'I have been mad with him. I lost my temper pretty often, and of course he does not know what to expect from you or anybody. The horse is not to blame—the fault is mine.'" This man was of the sort known as fractions, and wholly unfit to control others, whether man or beast, but he had the wit to see and the justice to acknowledge the truth. Of the civilizing influence of gentle manners there is no evidence so decisive as that furnished by the lower creatures. Happy indeed are they when owned by masters and mistresses whole "blood and judgment are so well comming'ed" that their rule is one of uniform justice tempered with mercy.—Dumb Animals.

Thirteen young men were received into Erie Conference, having completed the course of study prescribed. Bishop Foster took occasion to address them at length, and through them the entire body. He has the habit of doing remarkable things in the pulpit, and in his Conference addresses. For thirty-one years we have listened to our Bishops as they have given reproof, and advice, and exhortation to their ministerial brethren, but the match of Bishop Foster's effort at New Castle we have never heard.—Pittsburgh Advocate.

The Preacher's Quiet Habits.

Sedentary and studious men sometimes become prostrated before they know it. Those who spend much time in close mental work and neglect to take enough exercise often find their stomachs unable to do the work of digestion. The liver becomes torpid. The bowels act irregularly. The brain refuses to serve as it once did. Their preaching becomes a failure, and there is a state of general misery. So many ministers have been restored to health by the use of Brown's Iron Bitters that the clergy generally are speaking to their friends of this medicine as the very best tonic and restorer they know of. It restores thin and watery blood to its proper condition by toning it up with the purest and most invigorating preparation of iron that science has ever made. It is pleasant to take, and acts immediately with the happiest results, not only on the parsons, but on other folks as well. 3

Rev. Petroleum V. Nasby (D. R. Locke) will travel through the Southern States during the Fall and Winter, for the purpose of writing a series of letters to his paper, the Toledo Blade, his impressions of the great South. The million readers of the Blade who have read "NASBY IN EXILE," (Nasby's Letters from Europe) will appreciate how the subject will be handled. Every reader in the South is invited to send for a specimen copy, which will be sent free. The Weekly Blade is $1 per year.

We wish to express our profound gratitude to our brethren of the East Tennessee Conference for their hearty endorsement of the SOUTHWESTERN. We are intensely anxious to make the paper an instrument of great good to all the families it visits. We are doing the best we can to make it a helper to all of our people. The resolution of commendation and endorsement on the part of this conference opens to us a new field of usefulness, and we promise our brethren of the East Tennessee Conference to do the best we can. Begin the canvass for new subscribers now. We send the paper from date to December 31, 1884, for two dollars cash in advance. This we regard a liberal proposition. Make a thorough canvass.

Gen. Lew Wallace says that he was converted to Christianity by Col. Ingersoll. He was inclined to be skeptical as to the divinity of Christ. Ingersoll presented his infidel views. Wallace was much impressed, but finally remarked he was not prepared to agree with Ingersoll on certain extreme propositions. Ingersoll thereupon urged Wallace to give the matter careful study, expressing his confidence that he would, after so doing, fully acquiesce in the Ingersoll view. For six years he thought, studied and searched. At the end of that time he said: "The result is the absolute conviction that Jesus of Nazareth is not only a Christ and the Christ, but that he is also my Christ, my Saviour, and my Redeemer."

The bell of the Moravian Mission at New Hurnhut, in Greenland, the gift of another Eskimo station, bears the motto: "Come, for all things are ready." That benignant invitation mingles in melodious peals with the tempest as it roars about the turfed dwelling and the lowly sanctuary with the never ceasing resonance of the surf and the reverberating sundering of the ice. May all good angels, his messengers, "flaming spirits," speed the day when the motto of the bell may be wafted around the Arctic Earth, when in China and Tartary, in India and Central Asia, in Russia and Turkey, in Siberia and Patagonia, all things shall of a truth be ready for the longing souls that wait for the feet of them who bring good tidings, publishing peace, saying: "Thy Rescuer liveth, thy safety; thy God reigneth in love for thee and all mankind."—Mrs. Mary L. Robinson, in the Northern.

It is a pleasant thought that good men are not forgotten. On November 10, 1883, it will be 400 years since the birth of Luther, and to-day he is better known and more highly esteemed than when he was living. In all Protestant Europe extensive preparations are being made for the purpose of celebrating his four hundredth birth-day. His father was a miner, his mother a pious, sensible woman. In his youth he was a devout Roman Catholic, entered the Augustinian Convent and became a monk, studied philosophy at Wittenburg. In 1509 he visited Rome earnestly seeking peace of mind in the performance of duty, but he soon discovered that religion was a mere garment to be worn or laid off at pleasure. Rome was to him more of a disappointment than satisfaction. The irregularities in the cloisters disgusted him. They could say their prayers three or four times before he was through. He remained but two weeks in the city, when he returned to Germany. In 1517 Tetzel, a pedler of indulgences, visited Wittenberg selling indulgences. His money box was labeled with the words,

When in the box the money rings,
The soul straight up to heaven springs.

This made the ignorant give liberally, but it set Luther's soul on fire. On the night of the 31st of October he walked through the streets of Wittenberg alone, and nailed to his church door his ninety-five theses, which were in fact an attack upon the whole Roman system. A more daring act than this was never performed by any man. They set the whole of Europe in commotion. Attempts were made to convince Luther that he was wrong, or to bring about a state of reconciliation, but to no effect. Leo X issued his bull against Luther, which the latter seized and publicly burned in the streets of Wittenberg. This so exasperated the Pope that he excommunicated Luther, and soon after summoned him before the diet of Worms April 17, 1521, to discuss and settle if possible this issue. Charles V gave Luther a safe pass to attend this meeting; some of his friends were fearful of treachery and did all they could to persuade him not to go. Luther replied, "Though there were as many devils in Worms as there are tiles on its roof, still I would enter." This world has no more sublime spectacle than Luther's entry into the city of Worms, his trial, his defense, his appeal to the patriotism of the German electors, his decision not to retract what he had written and preached, and his final words, "Here I stand; I cannot do otherwise, God help me! Amen." Neither the Pope nor Charles V were able to destroy the great reformer. Luther had taken hold of thoughts that must grow. In 1516 Protestantism had neither name nor followers. Luther began the battle alone but now full 500,000,000 stand by him. There are few biographies more inspiring in the world than the life of Luther. As a scholar he was far ahead of his day; as a reformer and leader the world has had no superior: Romanists have uniformly hated and misrepresented him and his work, while all Protestants have always admired him, and have been glad to do him honor. Germany cannot pay too great honor to the name of her greatest and most honored and illustrious son. We in America join with her in her songs of gladness and rejoicing; for Martin Luther belongs to no people, but to all people.

The Sudden Death of E. Q. Fuller, D. D.

We learn from the Atlanta Constitution that Rev. E. Q. Fuller, D. D., pastor of Marietta Street M. E. Church, died on the 16th inst., on Mitchel street pavement near the Central depot. He was walking up the street when, just as he met Mr. Green of the Constitution mailing force, he threw up both hands as if to grab the fence to support himself. Mr. Green, observing this strip him, ran before he could reach him he fell to the ground face foremost. Mr. Green called for help when instantly other gentlemen responded. A messenger was sent for a physician. Dr. J. M. Baring responded. Dr. Fuller made one or two efforts to breathe, which seemed to be accompanied with great pain; he had evidently reached the point where human skill could be of no use. The coroner was sent for and the body removed to the undertaker's rooms and prepared for burial, and a verdict of death from apoplexy was rendered by the coroner. Dr. Fuller had a severe attack of the vertigo a year ago last May, which came near ending his life. For a long time after this attack his family apprehended his sudden death, but during the last few months these fears were all dispelled by his unusual good health. On the morning of his death he arose in his usual health, spent the greater part of the day with his family, at about 3 o'clock he left home to visit a florist and was on his return home when he died, and was carrying in his hand a beautiful bouquet which was placed in his casket. Dr. Fuller was about fifty-five years old. He went from Illinois to Atlanta in 1868, and has faithfully served the church as a pastor, presiding elder, and as editor of the Methodist Advocate. He was a man of deep and decided convictions, strong will and intense zeal, and said and wrote perhaps some harsh things. The SOUTHWESTERN has not always agreed with all that he has said and written. His zeal may have taken a different shape from ours, but we dare not say that it was not inspired by the same spirit. His fidelity to God, his loyalty to the Church has never been questioned. His earthly labors are ended, and his name has passed into the list of noble names of historic Methodism. Dr. Fuller leaves a wife and seven children to whom his sudden death must be a great shock and an irreparable loss. May we all hear the voice speaking from behind the veil, "Watch, therefore, for ye know not the day nor the hour when the Son of Man cometh." "Blessed is that servant whom the Lord when He cometh shall find watching."

The Pay of Colored Soldiers

In response to an inquiry from A. B. Coleman, Enterprise, Miss., sent to this office, and which we referred to A. P. Albert, of the Pension Office, Washington, D. C., the following reply has been received:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Second Auditor's Office,
Washington, D. C., Oct. 16, 1883.

By Act of June 15, 1864, colored soldiers were placed as to pay on the same footing as white soldiers, from and after January 4, 1864. Most of those colored soldiers who were entitled to difference of pay by reason of enlistment prior to Jan. 1, 1864, have applied for and received it. Those who enlisted after Jan. 1, 1864, were undoubtedly paid the same as white soldiers.

An Adulterous Generation?

Close-Communion Baptists have a famous short argument by which they support their position. How would they reply to the other short argument. Immersion gives a right to the Lord's Supper. But Christian character is better than Immersion. Therefore Christian character gives a better right to the Lord's Supper.

We are indebted to the Independent of September 17th for the above remarkable piece of logic. With this legerdemain, what chances may be made in inconvenient practices! viz: Marriage gives a right to connubial intercourse; but natural love is better than the marriage ceremony; therefore, if we love one another, there is no harm in living together without marriage.—Baptist Courier.

The above is a Baptist effort in logic. We give it as a specimen without note or comment.

Hon. Benjamin Butterworth of Ohio has accepted the position of Commissioner of Patents.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court against the constitutionality of the civil rights bill, though not wholly unexpected by those who had carefully examined the decisions of the lower courts, was received all over the country as an unwelcome event. The law operated to a great degree as a reserve force in securing the civil rights which are everywhere regarded as the common heritage of citizens of the United States. It is true that it encountered opposition, and from that class whose blindness to justice in dealing with the Negro prompted its enactment This class persists in confounding civil with social rights, and its influence was too powerful in wealth, intelligence, possession of the machinery of courts, to allow of the complete enforcement, as intended by the Republican Congress which passed the bill. The fact, however, that it was a decree of Congress, supported by continued endorsement of the party and the men who indited it, caused opponents, while determined to practically nullify it, yet to make concessions that otherwise would not have been obtained. The civil rights bill has served as an important factor, regarded in this light, in hastening on a better recognition of those rights. Now that the Supreme Court has stamped it with nullity, the popular impression on the mind of the Negro is that his friends have knocked away a prop upon which he leaned until he could acquire the powers required for self-assertion. This is a view of the situation which can not be entirely dispelled; and to leave the Negro at this stage of his progress entirely upon his slender resources, in contending for the ordinary rights of citizenship, is in many respects an ungraceful thing for a righteous nation to do.

The same class that inaugurated the war of the rebellion is in power in the South to-day. It reached this position by continued and remorseless disregard of the Negro's right of suffrage—and that right is to-day almost a nullity in the larger portion of Southern territory. The delusion is fostered by outside observers at the North that the solid South is about to be broken, and causes which ordinarily govern law abiding communities, judged by comparison therein, are cited in proof. Observers resident in the South would welcome such an event, but it seems to them still a blessing which this generation will not be permitted to enjoy. However the Democratic hosts may divide in their local contests for office, they are united in their prejudices against and the firm denial of the free exercise of Negro citizenship. Were it otherwise, the Negro vote of the South would long since have been divided and allied with progressive and conservative political elements, as is usual with other classes and nationalities in the other sections of the country. The Negro has remained loyal to the national government and its friends as against its opponents and their peculiar doctrines. This has combined with and intensified the prejudices pertaining to slavery, until they now dominate every State of the late Confederacy. These States, with governments founded on disregard of Negro suffrage, armed violence and fraudulent counts, can not reasonably be expected to, as indeed they do not, protect the civil rights of the Negro. The nation has been declared powerless to intervene and act in good faith in defense of its allies on many battlefields for its own preservation. It did not intend to so go, but the carelessness of its law makers, and the decisions of its courts, have virtually brought about that result. To-day the Negro suffers from the stopping at State lines in defense of a national citizenship; to-morrow a change may take place, and adequate powers be discovered to enforce the doctrine that we live in a nation and not a league of sovereignties. An American citizen may sometime feel as sure of England, France or Germany. Until that time the Negro is relegated to his own efforts, and his own manhood, to make such alliances, and provide for his defense. The same overruling Providence which forced an unrighteous nation to make atonement in rivers of blood, and to make the bond go free, will continue his protection to the Negro in America, and melt the hearts of his oppressors.

Southern Advance Association.

A letter to the editor from Boston, under date of October 9, makes the following statement, which may be of some interest to our readers:

"For a few days or weeks Col. J. E. Bryant, of Atlanta, Ga., representing the Southern Advance Association, of which the Rev. Dr. Fuller is one of the principal promoters, has been here at work in the interest of that Society. After much perseverance, and no little opposition, he obtained a hearing by a small majority vote of the Committee on Questions of the Boston Methodist Preachers' Meeting, and after he had been heard certain brethren offered a series of resolutions commending him and the Association, whereupon J. W. Hamilton, pastor of the People's Church; arose and read objections. Bro. Hamilton stated that perhaps it was too late to go into the discussion at that time, but if the brethren having the resolutions in charge were disposed to press them he must ask the privilege of then stating his objections to the measure. The matter was then laid over for two weeks, and made the order of the day for yesterday morning, when Mr. Hamilton gave an address of a full hour's length on the "Tendency of the Methodist Episcopal Church towards a System of Caste." After the address the discussion of the question was continued for full three hours, showing all the vigor of the old anti-slavery days, and was then continued till next Monday. Of course I cannot say what will be the out come, but I do not believe the Boston Methodist Preachers' Meeting will strike her colors whatever currents may be in the air. The National Council of the Congregational Church has this same question, and and a similar discussion at their annual meeting in Concord, N. H., this week. When will this matter end? I believe under God the SOUTHWESTERN is the safest leader on this question now to be found in the whole South. Let us pray much, love much but talk and vote right."

This Southern Advance Association to which our correspondent refers is much like our Western and Southern cities or the new lines of railroads now passing through the country, well laid out but so sparsely populated that all hope of organization has been abandoned. It is a mere shell, and must, from the very nature of its organization, remain such. The Methodist Episcopal Church has one educational society in the South and only one, and needs but one, and we think that all the members of the Church should unite in making this the great educational force of the Church in the South. How any New England Methodist preacher could have been persuaded to introduce a resolution to the Boston Methodist Preachers' Meeting commending the Southern Advance Association is a mystery to us, unless he wants to foster and perpetuate the sin of caste. We stand amazed at the action of some of the Christians of America. Before God men are not only accountable for the sins they actually commit, but also for those they can prevent. Take the sin of caste. We do not charge that the Christians of America initiated it, but we do believe that if they will stand upon the platform of the ten commandments, and the Lord's Sermon on the Mount, they could effectually remove it from the Churches. For its continuance they are not only indirectly but directly chargeable before God.

We have read with a sense of shame and humiliation, the various excuses and disclaimers of all responsibility on the part of the Ocean Grove Association, for the gross insults that were heaped upon our brethren of a darker hue last summer. And in the full exercise of that charity that "hopeth dureth all things," and "never faileth," we are compelled to say that we have no confidence in those disclaimers or excuses. Look! Here we see an association potent to the extent that it can prevent men from selling cigars or riding to church upon the Sabbath, and yet so weak and helpless that it could not secure to a company of educated Christian gentlemen the commonest right even of a shelter from the storm. There is no doubt in our mind as to the ability of the Ocean Grove Association in this matter. They could have secured for those brethren the same Christian courtesies that were extended to all other ministers. But they did not, and the sin is chargeable to them. The Southern Advance Association was conceived in the sin of caste and will only serve to foster and perpetuate that sin.

Five Dollar Saints.

"Some time since a brother living near a Virginia town asked for a letter of dismission from a country church and deposited it with the town church. Soon, however, he was filled with amazement, if not with horror, at seeing what this change of church membership involved. Five dollars a year was very respectable in his country church; but here came applications for money every Sunday and for every kind of thing. Then came the assessment for the pastor's salary. Others, not worth half as much as this brother, were assessed fifty dollars apiece, and he was put down for as much; but he cried out against it, assuring his new friends that he had never given more than five dollars a year, and that there had never been any complaint. At the next church conference he asked for a letter of dismission, and took it back to his old country church, where he is now serving the kingdom at five dollars a year.

Our Baptist brethren are not the only people who are afflicted with five dollar saints. We know of Methodists who sing, shout and pray occasionally to whom five dollars is of more value than a heart full of the love of God. They have dollars for tobacco and nickles for the Lord, and five dollars is more to them than the salvation of a score of souls.

Question Answered.

"I want to know if a person who never was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church has a right to testify against a full member who is on trial?" If our brother will take his Disciplino and turn to paragraph 234, on page 149, section 7, under General Directions, he will find that in all cases of trial witnesses from without will not be rejected. In Baker on the Discipline, we read, "Persons of reputed veracity are competent witnesses in a church trial without regard to their particular religious belief or church relation."

—It has fallen to the lot of the Rev. George H. Thompson, of the Virginia Conference, in his ten years in the ministry, to build six new churches, to complete two, to extensively repair one, and, by strenuous exertion, to save one from the hands of a sheriff, making a total of 10 churches—one a year—secured to Methodism by his labors.—N. Y Advocate

—Rev. Barton H. Cartwright, who requested a superannuated relation at the late session of the Rock River Conference, said that in April, 1833, he preached his first sermon in Illinois. The same Spring he started for Iowa with four yokes of oxen and twenty bushels of corn, to start the first Methodist church in that State. It might be a curious outfit for a preacher, but it was such as he had, and he built the first church in Iowa.

—The Philadelphia correspondent of the New York Advocate thus pleasantly refers to Rev. W. C. Webb, a former pastor of Ames Methodist Episcopal Church in this city: "Our brother W. C. Webb, pastor of Grace Church, has admitted 92 from probation into full communion. Only two have been dropped. The present membership of Grace is 671, with 38 still remaining on probation."

—Mrs. A. Ryder, of Oberlin, O., who spent sometime in New Orleans, and asisted in Sabbath school work at First Street Church, died in Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 6. She sank rapidly after a surgical operation for the removal of a tumor, in hospital, on the 5th. The remains were interred in Oberlin, and services conducted by Rev. Mr. Knap of the M. E. Church. Mrs. Ryder has many friends in this city, who deeply regret her unexpected death.

—The venerable Dr. J. M. Trimble, who was the first delegate chosen by his brethren of the Ohio Conference to represent them at the next General Conference, was honored by such an election in 1844, when in the youthful prime of manhood. He has been chosen a member of every General Conference since that date, by the same Annual Conference; and he will in all probability enter his 11th General Conference with as much intellectual vigor, as he displayed on the floor of his first, 40 years ago. His record in this regard is without a parallel in American Methodism.—N. Y Advocate.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

N. D. Bush, recording steward, Simpson Chapel: "Our third quarter closed on the 7th inst. Elder Outman was with us, and the brethren were in the best spirit. The steward's report showed a collection for the quarter amounting to over $400. The fourth quarter was entered upon with no less a degree of encouragement, and over $40 was taken up last Sunday. Bro. Jackson has nobly denounced superstition and hypocrisy. God grant that he may press forward."

T. S. Jackson, Simpson Chapel: "I want to say through the SOUTHWESTERN, for the encouragement of our Zion, that the Lord has graciously remembered Simpson Chapel this year. We have had over 70 accessions to the church thus far during the year, and over 50 conversions, which, in the main, have been clear, and in the old-fashioned way of giving glory to God. The church occupies now a high [illegible] ground. Thus far all [illegible] expenses have been [illegible]. Pastor, presiding elder and sexton are all paid up to date. On the church debt the [illegible] have paid $360. For all purposes we have raised thus far over one thousand dollars since Conference. God bless the people of Simpson Chapel for their kindness to their pastor."

M. O. R. Mason, Haven Chapel: "[illegible] of men building a [illegible] house in a single day or night. So with the Church. We may [illegible] now, but through prayer, faith, patience and the godly life of pastor and people the church must build. At Haven Chapel Bro. Mason is having a prosperous year, and is surely under the blessing of God, building up the church. At the last quarterly conference the reports were in order. Those of the class leaders and stewards show a wonderful increase in the financial work of the church. But nothing was more cheering than the report of the Superintendent of the Sunday-school. Over thirty new names have been added to the roll during the quarter, and $30 in the treasury towards paying for an organ, while the average attendance of the school was nearly one hundred. None but the most hopeful signs are visible at Haven Chapel. A gracious God is ready with His presence to crown the labors of pastor and people with His largest blessings. The handful of corn on the top of the mountains shall wave like the cedars of Lebanon.

C. H. Claiborn, Dulac: "Our revival still continues. It has produced a great change in the community. Forty-six have already joined the church on probation, and we think that more are to follow."

MISSISSIPPI.

M. Adams, Shubuta: "Elder Campbell held quarterly meeting Aug. 2, at Rock Hill. There was a pleasant session and good reports. Increase of membership 38, conversions 22, collection for elder $10. Sunday-schools have improved. Several celebrations were held, which added greatly to their success. Many Methodists, under erroneous teachings, left us some years ago; but a brighter day has come, and they are again found at our meetings. Many have been added to the Church at New Hope, Bethel, St. Michael, Rock Hill, Hickory Grove, Cooksville and Trimble's."

A. J. Proctor, Brandon: "We have had quite an interesting series of revival meetings, and succeeded in adding 30 or more to our church. Our common foe has been ignorance and the Baptist Church. Our pastors, Revs. A. Handy and E. Graves, are working faithfully. Our church is growing."

L. J. Terrell, Ripley: "We were much surprised a few nights ago, being visited by a party who rolled into our door while we were on our bed of repose. A fine parcel of flour, sugar and coffee was found in our residence, with these names on them: Maggie Denis, Mary Denis, Susan Biggs, Harriet Miller, Hannah McAlster, Anis Miller and Wm. Sanders.

TEXAS.

M. C. Cavines: "Rev. E. E. Cooper is a faithful and impartial pastor, and is doing excellent work for Christ."

J. Browley, Lockhart: "My protracted meeting is closed. There was a backslider and one convert. The elder visited us. Collection $7.35. We expect to commence our building at Ryle as soon as possible. There is much opposition from the Baptists and African Methodists, but I have a large number of white friends to help me."

TENNESSEE.

A. P. Blakemore, Springfield: "I have 19 converts, 18 additions. The new church is nearly done at Coopertown, and I expect to have it dedicated on the 21st. The other two will probably be repaired before conference, and a parsonage will be built. Pray for our success."

Canada is refining more sugar than her population can use, and the refiners, suffering from the overproduction, ask for a bounty in order to enable them to export their product. Of course this will be made the basis of a new demand for protection from the refiners in the United States, and in their charity they will doubtless include the sugar producer—to a small extent.—N. Y. Herald.

[illegible] DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR—It has been quite a long while since your many readers have had anything with reference to the work of our Church on the Argenta District, Little Rock Conference. I commenced my third round with the Little Rock Circuit the first Sunday in September. This work has made a decided advance this year. We have been able to build two new church houses. Though they are of logs, yet they are the only church edifices in the bounds of this circuit of any kind. There have been quite a number of conversions and accessions to the church on this charge. This work is moving along nicely under the faithful charge of Bro. J. D. Johnson, who has been able to keep up the work, and go to the school from conference up to the first of June. After school was out he commenced to teach school and taught a three months public school. This is one way for young ministers to do; if you cannot get an education easy, do the next best thing. Whatever you do, educate yourselves. He is now ready to enter school again. The Little Rock Circuit consists of five regular preaching places. Bro. Johnson has had a good deal of sickness to contend with.

The Sweet Home Circuit, which lies South of Little Rock, on this work, has undergone two or three good revivals of religion this year. Though Bro. Boone, the pastor, has had sickness all the year in his family (he himself has been almost down to the crossing of the chilling waves of death) yet the work is doing well. Thirty-five or forty have been converted and added to the church on this work since conference. We are trying to build one new church house on this work. Possibly we will have it done before conference. Our camp meeting on this charge was not such a success as we contemplated, on account of so much sickness just at that time. Our district conference which met at Sweet Home on Sept. 2, was a delightful session.

Van Buren—this is the best charge on the district, and has made a decided progress this year. Quite a number have been converted and joined the church here this year. Our third quarterly meeting was a grand occasion; 9 were converted and added to our beloved Zion. The pastor, Rev. F. Wallace, has also had a gread deal of sickness, but the work is in excellent condition.

The Fort Smith charge has had a misfortune this year, and I am very sorry, this being our first year in this field. Its pastor got married and then got sick, and I have had to supply the work. Notwithstanding the misfortunes the work has been built up considerably. There have been several conversions on the charge, and 25 or 30 accessions to the church this year. It is to be regretted that Bro. J. P. Mack, the faithful pastor of this work, has been forced to give up his charge on account of bad health. Bro. Mack is a good young man, well beloved by his people and all who know him.

Fayetteville—There has been a grand work done on this charge since conference. A new church built and near completion; about 40 conversions and more than 40 have joined the church. This work is in fine fix; it speaks for itself. Bro. W. R. R. Duncan, one of the most active members of our conference, is the pastor. He has raised from his small society about $500. He has faithfully tried the doctrine taught by our bishops, "call on the people to give to other causes aside from the support of the ministry, and they will give the pastor a good support."

The Hynsville Circuit is in good fix. Several have been converted and added to the church this year on this charge. One new church has been built.

Morrilton—This charge at present is without a pastor, though we have been able to gather up about 70 members on this work since conference.

Our Conway Circuit is booming. Bro. A. L. Richardson. He has built one new church since Conference.

As far as I have gone on my third round the work is doing well. We have built already since conference five new Churches on the district. We hope to be able to do a better work this year than ever before. We have had about 175 conversions, and about 350 accessions to the church this year.

Yours respectfully

G. W. SAMS.

Baptizing a Sister Against Her Will.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 15.—Just after daylight yesterday morning a band of colored persons marched to the water's edge on the Ohio, just below the Newport and Cincinnati railway bridge, and directly opposite Sausage Row, where the vilest negro desperadoes resort. They had come to take part in the ceremony of baptizing by immersion a newly converted sister. The weather was very cool, and the early morning, when few persons were stirring, was chosen to escape interruption. After a song and a prayer, the gowned minister and the candidate—a coal black, stout young girl—waded slowly into the chilling water. The girl shivered at first, but exhorted by the minister, she followed him until he halted where the water was waist deep. Suddenly she made the Kentucky shore echo these words:

"Lord-a-massa, I can't stan' dis, lemme go!"

"But remember the Master's command, dear sister, and don't turn back to the wicked world," said the minister.

"But I mus' go; it'll kill me; I know it will," the girl replied.

She made a desperate effort to escape, but the parson held on, saying as he struggled with his obstinate convert, "Yo' head mus' go under." In the effort to duck the girl's head both went under beyond their depth. They soon rose to the surface and floated down stream, shouting for help. Boats were at hand, and they were rescued in the usual way. Now the colored theologians are discussing whether or not this was a Christian baptism.

Will some of our Baptist brethren tell us whether this was Christian baptism, or what shall we call it?

Coercive Measures for Utah.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Gov. Murray of Utah reports to the Secretary of the Interior that he is unable to enforce the laws against polygamy. He adds: "I am impelled to make in this report an earnest appeal for the adjustment of all wrongs and the establishment of good government in Utah by Congress. The history of all States demonstrates that times come when military aid is necessary to support the civil authority. I am [illegible] out of the rule. The Utah militia is not and cannot be made available. It therefore only remains for this Territory that the military forces of the United States be made available, and I recommend that it be made lawful for soldiers of the United States to be used for the execution of processes out of the courts of the United States, in the hands of the United States Marshal of Utah." He says the unlawful Territorial Government of Utah which has existed for more than thirty years, still exists. Polygamists are exercising the functions of office, who under the law are not entitled to vote. Polygamy is still openly taught and practised.

News are received of a case of effective, but unusual, punishment upon a Negro ravisher in the parish of Calcasieu, La. Lewis Woods was convicted at the last term of court for ravishing a young colored girl, and he escaped from jail. In less than one week after his escape he committed the same crime on a white lady; which so enraged the whole country that everybody turned out to hunt him. He and another escaped convict, a white murderer, named Martin, were captured at a settlement on Teche River, Texas. They were taken on the train for Lake Charles. At Edgerly station a large crowd of men assembled, and when the Sheriff saw them he covered up Martin with some quilts and bedding that happened to be in the car, and the crowd saw only the Negro. They seized on him, dragged him out, took him to a point some little distance from the station, chained him to a pine tree, covered him up with pine-knots and chips, and burned him to death. The crowd then started for the parish jail to get the murderer Martin, but the Sheriff succeeded in hiding him away.

FRENCH MUSTARD.—French mustard is thus made in America: Four tablespoonfuls of mustard, one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each of cloves, black pepper and of flour, with vinegar enough to cover these; mix all well, and let it come to a boil; when cold add a little salad oil, say one or two tablespoonfuls; this gives smoothness to the whole.

PREVENTING FLANNEL FROM FADING.—To prevent scarlet flannel or worsted goods of any description of this color from fading when washed, take this precaution: Mix a half a cupful of flour with a quart of cold water, let it boil for ten or fifteen minutes, then mix with the warm suds in which the article is to be washed; squeeze and rinse up and down repeatedly instead of rubbing on a rubbing board. If very much soiled, wash in two or three waters, always taking care to have them of the same temperature, if possible, and just cool enough to put your hands in comfortably. Make the suds before putting the garment in, and avoid rubbing soap on it.

EMPLOYMENT.—It may be laid down as an incontrovertible principle that no family can be happy without employment—regular, diversified, continually recurring employment. There may be the possession of wealth, there may be an ample and beautiful domain, there may be everything externally to enjoy, but unless there be an appropriate and varied employment to occupy the body, engross the mind and awaken the energies there cannot be happiness. It is the active, industrious, persevering family that is the truly happy family; not the idle, the slothful, the useless—not the family that has no definite plan, no fixed and important object, no personal and collective energy.

AIRING THE BED.—It must be false ideas of neatness which demand that beds should be made soon after vacated. Let it be remembered that more than three-fifths of the solids and liquids taken into the stomach should pass off through the pores of the skin—seven millions in number—and that this escape is more rapid during the night, while warm in bed. At least one-half of the waste and putrid matter—from twenty to thirty ounces per night—must become more or less tangled in the bedding, of course soiling it, and a part of this may become re-absorbed by the skin, if it is allowed to come in contact with it the next night, as it must if the bedding is not exposed for a few hours in the light. We may well imitate the Dutch example of placing such bedding on two chairs near the window, that the best purifier known—the light of the sun—may displace the impurities, or neutralize them. At least three hours on an average, is as short exposure as is compatible with neatness.—Summerside Journal.

OATMEAL GRUEL.—Boil a pint of water in a saucepan; when boiling, mix it with two teaspoonfuls of oatmeal, half a pint of milk, and a little salt. Let it then simmer for half an hour; strain it through a hair sieve, sweeten, and add a little nutmeg. A few raisins may be added before boiling.

MACARONI A L'ITALIENNE.—Cut into small, thin pieces two pounds of fresh lean beef, slice a small onion, chop and then pound in a mortar quarter of a pound of fat bacon; fry the bacon and onion together, then add the beef and turn frequently. When the beef becomes slightly colored, turn the whole contents of the frying-pan into a hot sauce-pan. Add a pint of boiling water, boil up for one minute, skim thoroughly, and sprinkle in a salt-spoonful of salt and a little pepper, then simmer gently for two hours, skimming occasionally. Strain the gravy through a hair sieve, and when cold take off the fat. When ready to use make the gravy hot, and mix with the fourth part of it a tablespoonful of tomato sauce; then add by degrees the rest of the gravy, stir over a sharp, clear fire and boil three minutes. Put in boiling salted water a half pound of Naples macaroni; boil quickly twenty to twenty-five minutes, drain in a colander, which shake before the fire a minute or two to make the macaroni perfectly dry. Put the macaroni in a hot dish, mixing through it two or three table-spoonfuls of grated Parmesan cheese, pour the hot gravy over it, mixing well, and serve with a dish of grated Parmesan. This is an excellent dish with which to begin dinner on days too hot for smoking soup. The proportions may, of course, be varied to suit the number of persons served.

Pick and singe a chicken, wipe with a wet towel, draw it without breaking the intestines, and cut it in joints as for fricassee; put it over the fire in sufficient boiling water to cover it, and simmer it gently until it is tender. Meantime slice quarter of a pound of salt pork, and fry it brown in the bottom of a saucepan; peel and slice six onions, and after the pork is brown take it up, and fry the onions in the drippings, soak half a pound of sea-biscuit in cold milk or water; mix two tablespoonfuls of flour smoothly with half a cupful of the broth in which the chicken has been cooked, put the chicken, onion, pork, and biscuit in layers in the saucepan containing the pork drippings, seasoning each layer rather highly with salt and pepper; mix the chicken broth and the flour together, boil them for two minutes, and then pour them over the chowder; place the saucepan containing it over the fire, and let it simmer gently for a few minutes; then serve it hot, in a tureen, with a plate of unsoaked crackers.

Source of Law.

It is said that the following passage in one of the fathers was in the mind of Hooker's interpretation of the law, which in its most general and comprehensive sense is of incomparable eloquence: "There is nothing independent of God, who is the mover of all things, and Himself immovable. Nothing so high is to be above His providence, nothing so low as to be beneath it, nothing so large but is bounded by it, nothing so bad but he can draw good out of it, nothing so wisely placed but God can disappoint it, nothing so simply and unpolitically carried out but He can give a prevailing issue to it, nothing so freely carried in regard to the next cause but God can make it necessary in regard of the event, nothing so natural but he can suspend in regard of operation."

By contracting a severe cough and cold, I was compelled to give up my daily work and keep to the house. A neighbor recommended me to try a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; it was procured and used; to my astonishment relief was instantaneous. Edw. W. Clayton, Waverly, Md.

There is often a good deal of sense in the Mother Goose rhymes, if only we know what is intended to be taught by them. A writer in Golden Days thus explains the story of the "four and twenty blackbirds:" The birds are the twenty-four hours. The bottom of the pie is the earth, and the top crust the sky that overarches it. The opening of the pie is the dawn of day, when the birds begin to sing. The king setting in the parlor counting out his money, is the sun, and the golden pieces that slip through his fingers are the golden sunshine. The queen in the kitchen is the moon, and the honey with which she regales herself is moonlight. The maid is the day dawn and the clothes she hangs out are the clouds; while the birds who nips off her nose is the hour of sunrise.

Poetry.

True Nobility.

Deeper than all sense of seeing Lies the secret source of being,
And the soul with truth agreeing,
Learns to live in thought and deed;
For the life is more than raiment,
And the earth is pledged for payment
Unto man for all his needs.

Nature is our common mother,
Every living man our brother,
Therefore let us serve each other;
Not to meet the law's behests,
But because through cheerful giving
We shall learn the art of living;
And to live and serve is best.

Life is more than what man fancies!
Not a game of idle chances;
But it steadily advances,
Up the rugged heights of time,
Till each complex web of trouble,
Every sad hope's broken bubble,
Hath a meaning most sublime.

More religion, less profession!
More of firmness, less concession;
More of freedom, less profession
In the Church and in the State;
More of life, and less of fashion,
More of love and less of passion,
That will make us good and great.

When true hearts, divinely gifted,
From the chaff of error sifted,
On their crosses are uplifted,
Shall the world most clearly see
That earth's greatest time of trial
Calls for holy self denial,
Calls on men to do and be.

But, forever and forever
Let it be the soul's endeavor
Love from hatred to dissever,
And in whatsoe'er we do,
Won by love's eternal beauty
To our highest sense of duty,
Evermore be true and true.

New Orleans has long been famous for its Mardi Gras exhibitions. Montreal made a great stir last Winter with its ice carnival and Baltimore has recently attracted much attention by its Oriole festival but St. Louis is preparing to outdazzle them all next week with a Veiled Prophet show. Such distinguished personages as Queen Mab and Jack the Giant Killer are to appear in the procession in which little John Barleycorn will also figure. Travellers sometimes make us smile by their accounts of the spectacles with which barbarian and half civilized peoples amuse themselves, but a barbarian traveller who chanced to be present at some of the festivals in which our highly civilized cities indulge, would probably be able to raise a laugh at our expense on his return home.—N. Y. Sun.

In days past I have seen drunkenness and the effects thereof. I have seen the dead bodies of women murdered by drunken husbands; I have seen the best men in America go down to disgraceful graves; and I have seen fortunes wrecked, prospects blighted, and I have perused a great many pages of statistics. There are crimes on the calendar not resulting from rum, but were rum eliminated, the catalogue would be so reduced as to make it hardly worth the compiling. Directly or indirectly, rum is chargeable with a good 90 per cent of the woes that afflict our country.—Petroleum V. Nasby.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

As a Refrigerant Drink to Fevers.

Dr. C. H. Davis, Meriden, Conn., says: "I have used it as a pleasant and cooling drink in fevers, and have been very much pleased with it."

The Hindus worship the objects from which they derive benefits as rivers, cows, trees, gates, etc., also the implements used in their various callings; thus the carpenter worships his saw and axe, the soldier the flag under which he fights, and the shopkeeper his money and the goods he has for sale, bowing down to them when he opens his shop in the morning. Are the Hindus the only idolaters in these respects in the world?

The laziest boy exists in Connecticut. His mother sent him to a neighbor's house after a cup of sour milk. On being told that there was none but sweet milk to be got, he helped himself to a chair, and said: "Well, I'll wait till it sours."

Lost Friends.

[We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers. All others will be charged fifty cents. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.]

MR. EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my people whom I left in Louisiana before the war. I had three brothers named John Snowden, Andrew Brown and Henry Wilson; and one sister, Priscilla Brown. Kin folks were Marie Johnson and Francis Johnson. They all belonged to Lord Cox in Ascension parish. I was called Sarah Smith, and belonged to Phillip Barton Key. My mother and brother live near the little town of Jeffersonville, La., and I have not heard from them since I left there two years after the war. One of my sisters came out here, but she went back. I now go by the name of Sarah Key. Address me at Bremond, Texas, care of Rev. W. J. Mitchell.

MR. EDITOR—Please correct some mistakes in B. J. Houston's lost friends letter for me. The oldest was Mack and Harry and Ben. Sisters Emily and Emma. I have found my brother Ben. We had not seen each other since we were little boys, until the 3rd of September last. When we parted I was eight years old and he was six; today I am 40 years old and he is 30 odd. The oldest child in our family is 22. We found each other by inquiring letters. He has been a traveling deacon of the Colored M. E. Church, under Bishop Lane, in Texas for eight years. He found me a local preacher at Durant, under Elder G. W. Barney. Brother remained with me until Sept. 19, and I took him around to see as many of my old and new friends as possible. He was gladly received, and preached several sermons for us during his short stay.

MARK SHEPARD.

DEAR EDITOR—I desire to learn the whereabouts of my people. Father was Charles Paxton, and came from South Carolina, and lived on Richland Creek, East Feliciana parish, Louisiana. Mother was Polly Silliman. When I was seven years old, Mr. Paxton, their master, moved to Red River, and took his slaves with him. Father left five children, named Bettie, James, Amanda, Rose and Ailsy. Address me at Clinton, Louisiana, care of Rev. James Qualls.

Jesse Lee's Wit.

Rev. Jesse Lee, one of the early Methodist preachers of Virginia, was possessed of a liberal share of ready wit. It is related of him that one day as he was riding along the road, two young limbs of the law rode up, one on each side of him, proposing to have fun at his expense, he soon discovered their purpose. One asked him whether he wrote his sermons or preached extempore. Being told that his sermons were extempore, the lawyer inquired, "Do you not often make mistakes then?"

"Yes, sometimes," was the reply.

"What do you do then? Do you stop to correct them?"

"Sometimes I do, and sometimes I do not," said Lee, "for instance the other day I went to quote the passage 'All liars shall have their part in the lake that burns,' etc., and by a slip of the tongue, I quoted 'all lawyers,' etc., but I thought the difference so slight I did not stop to make any correction."

Nettled at this hit, one of them said to him:

"I doubt whether you are more fool than knave."

The preacher, looking keenly first at one and then at the other, dryly said:

"I believe I am between the two" utterly discomfited, they rode rapidly on and left the preacher victor on the field.

The Americad Homœopathic Observer says: "Liebig Co's preparation should not be confounded with patent nostrums. Its Coca Beef Tonic is a legitimate pharmaceutical product, and worthy of the recommendation bestowed upon it by worthy homœopathic and allopathic journals." Invaluable to all who are run down, nervous, dyspeptic or bilious.

[illegible] reason to revere the memory of Luther. He was the reformer of all the reformers of his century. Without him they had not been. He has been our heroic Protestant as fully as if he had been born on our shores, for his children came hither and have helped us to fight all our battles and rear this new western civilization.—N. Y. Advocate.

REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

The addition to churches by profession averaged 12,500 annually. The contributions for Sabbath schools last year amounted to $300,000, and for charitable objects upward of $6,000,000. There are 874 more churches in the United States than there are clergymen to supply them.

The Christian life is a warfare against evil; it is a struggle after perfection of mind and heart; it is a contest in which, if we would be successful, we must daily and hourly "watch, and fight, and pray." This is our only hope of success. We can never conquer, except in the strength and by the help of God.

The attendance at the Mormon Conference at Salt Lake City on the 10th was fully 6,000 persons being in the tabernacle. Apostles Richards, Carrington, Lyman and Cannon, impressed on their hearers the necessity of living up to their religion, going into polygamy, and paying tithing. Apostle Cannon presented the statistics of the Church which showed a membership in Utah of 127,294; number of families, 23,000; births in the past six months, 1,200 males and 1,100 females; number of children under 8 years, 37,000; number of marriages in the past six months, 339; new members, 23,040, and deaths, 781. The Church organization embraces 12 apostles, 58 patriarchs, 3,885 seventies, 3,153 high priests, 11,000 elders, 1,500 bishops, and 4,4000 deacons. Idaho has double that of Arizona. Eighty-one missionaries have been appointed to go on missions to Europe and the United States. Eighteen were set apart for missions in the Southern States, where the Church is meeting with considerable success in increasing its membership. The Southern converts are being colonized mainly in Colorado.

This paper will be sent from this date to Dec. 31st, 1884 to any new subscriber who will send two dollars with the order.

NEW BOOKS.

OUR BROTHERS AND SONS. By Mrs. G. S. Reaney, American Tract Society, 150 Nassau St., New York. For sale by W. D. Skillman, 91 Camp St. New Orleans. Price $1.

This book is intended as a companion volume to "Our Daughters," and like that it deals with home-felt truths and interests. It is true that the dangers duties and interests of men are remarkably similar. All are in a common calamity, and can be extricated only by the same general means. All are steering for the same port, and have to traverse the sea filled with rocks and shoals amid contending winds and currents. "Our Brothers and Sons" will serve as a chart to any one who will heed its teachings. Mrs. Reaney writes like an earnest, devoted mother seeking the interests of her sons, and no way unmindful of what she owes to her brothers. We take pleasure in commending this book. It will help not only to see the possibilities of life, but to make life what it should be.

STORIES OF PATRIOTISM AND DEVOTION. For young people. Translated from the French by Mrs. Belle Tenis Speed. Walden and Stowe, Cincinnati, Ohio. Phillips & Hunt, New York. Price $1.

It is a fact that the press is a mighty lever either to upheave society from its foundations and plunge it in the abyss of vice and irreligion, or uplift it into higher and joyous regions of holiness. Stories of patriotism and devotion are in order. Sectional animosities are dying out. The barriers between the States that have been like stone walls are being thrown down, and men are coming to be patriots, and will soon reach the point where the nonsense of sectional brickering will not be tolerated. These stories of patriotism will serve as models, or a basis and help to build for future usefulness. Any one may read this volume with profit.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. jel4-1y

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

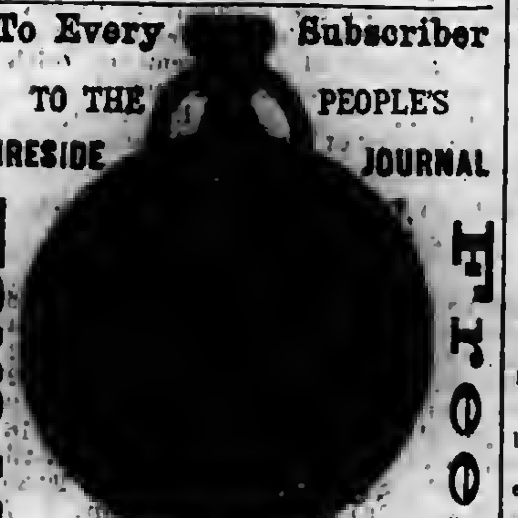
To Every Subscriber TO THE PEOPLE'S FIRESIDE JOURNAL



Watch Free!

The PEOPLE'S FIRESIDE JOURNAL of NEW YORK, now in its sixth year, is determined to lead the race in premiums, as it always has done, in giving the best paper for the money. In order to get the paper into every home in the land, we give an inducement which cannot fail to accomplish our object. We have decided to make the following princely and magnificent offer to each and every reader of this paper. It is the common practice of the gold and silver refiners of England and Switzerland to purchase from the pawnbrokers of their respective countries all the gold and silver watches which have been unredeemed, simply for the sake of the gold and silver cases. The works are then sold to a celebrated watch firm who have made a specialty of this business. The firm places the works in the hands of skillful workmen, who set to work and put them in as good condition as possible. These works embrace every variety of movement, some of them being very fine and perfect time-keepers, all handsomely cased. WE HAVE JUST PURCHASED THE ENTIRE STOCK (31,000) of a bankrupt concern of the above described watches at less than the first cost of the raw material.

ON RECEIPT OF $1.50 we will send THE PEOPLE'S FIRESIDE JOURNAL for one year, and one of these watches, prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada. WATCHES AND PAPER MAILED SAME DAY AS ORDER IS RECEIVED. These watches are not cheap dials or solar watches, but GENUINE, GOOD, TIME-KEEPING WATCHES, and they will only be supplied to subscribers to the FIRESIDE JOURNAL. Only ONE WATCH TO EACH SUBSCRIBER, and you must cut out this advertisement and send it to us as a voucher that you are entitled to the same. If you send 50 cents extra, we will send you a handsome chain and charm. We have THOUSANDS OF TESTIMONIALS, but have no space to print them. Our reliability is undoubted, as the paper has been well and favorably known for six years. If you are not ENTIRELY SATISFIED when you get the paper and watch, we will RETURN YOU THE MONEY; or you can send 50 cents, and have the balance collected C. O. D. if you choose. If you will get us 10 subscribers at $1.50 each, all of whom will get the above watch, we will in addition send you a HANDSOME GOLD WATCH for your trouble, either for lady or gent.

Our profit in this transaction is not going to come from this trade, as we lose money on it; but when we get subscribers to one paper they like it so well they will always take it. Send postal note. Address

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER. LESSON IV. Oct. 28th. SAUL CHOSEN KING. (1 Sam. x, 17-27.)

Saul had gone away from home on an errand for his father, and was now on his return. He had to pass by the place where Samuel was. Samuel expected his coming, beause God had told him the day before that a young man would come to him, who was to be the king. When Saul came God told Samuel Saul was the man he expected, so Samuel received and kept him all night; and next day, before he sent him away, he told him he was to be king. Saul said: "I am from the smallest tribe of Israel, why do you say this to me?" Samuel told him many things and sent Saul home. Saul was a good young man, and tall and fine in person. Samuel called the people together, and said: "You want a king. You have said you don't want God for a king, but a man, and now have your way. Let all the twelve tribes come before me." All came, but when the tribe of Benjamin, to which Saul belonged, was come, Saul was missing. He had hidden; but when he was brought out, and stood up, he was taller than all the rest of the people, and when they knew that he was to be king, they shouted for joy, and said: "God save the king!"

Samuel told the people how wrong it was to want a king, but they would not hear; so now they are like the people of the world about them. It was a foolish, wicked act. People who serve sin act just as foolishly and wickedly.—Western.

Sheriff's Report.

Under date of May 16, 1883, Mr. Isaiah Cook formerly Sheriff of Skowhegan, Me., writes as follows: "I have been afflicted for over twenty-nine years with a weakness of the kidneys and liver, and have had severe pains in the back and sides, which were brought upon me in first place by exposure during my stay in California during the early settlement of the land of gold. At that time my water troubled me very much, and after trying many different means without receiving any benefit, I was induced to try Hunt's Remedy, although I was much prejudiced against it and at all other medicines. I purchased a bottle at Cushing's drug store, here in Skowhegan, and I found that the first bottle relieved all pains in the back and sides; and I have, in my family, used five bottles in all, and have found it a medicine of real merit and of great value, and have gladly recommended it to many of my friends and neighbors, who universally praise it in high terms. You are at liberty to use my name for the benefit of suffering humanity."

Timely Advice.

I have been troubled with kidney disease and gravel for a long time, with severe pains in my limbs and back, with inflammation of bladder. My sufferings were terrible. I tried several physicians, all to no purpose—I found that I was growing very feeble. I was discouraged, and lost faith in physicians and medicine, when a friend from Malden, who had been cured by Hunt's Remedy of gravel and liver complaint, recommended it to me, and from the first bottle I commenced to improve, and three bottles have entirely cured me, and I heartily thank my friend for his timely advice to use Hunt's Remedy, for all the pains have gone from my back, and I am in excellent condition, and I feel that a word from me may be the means of saving some friend that may be suffering as I did, before taking Hunt's Remedy, the best kidney and liver cure.

Horse Railroad Men.

Having occasion to use a medicine for general debility in my family, I was recommended by a friend to use Hunt's Remedy, as that was being used with great success all over the country. We have used one bottle with marked benefit, and find it just as represented, and a medicine of great value, and I cheerfully add my testimony in praise of Hunt's Remedy. GEORGE W. SCOTON.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Season for November has been received from the International News Co., of New York This superior fashion magazine may be found at the news stands. Price 30cts. It embraces plates patterns and miscellany.

The Fiction in the November Century includes the first chapters of Mr. Cable's new novel "Dr. Sevier," the first part of Henry James' story, "The Impressions of a Cousin," and of the two-part California sketch, by Robert Louis Stevenson, "The Silverado Squatters"; also a complete short story, by the author of "Guerndale," and the fourth installment of the Bread-winners."

The November number, concluding the sixty-seventh volume of Harper's Magazine, is rich in illustrations, and its articles entertaining. Herbert Tuttle contributes "A Vacation to Vermont," illustrated with views of Green Mountain scenery, "Some Glimpses of Artistic London," by Joseph Hayton, are illustrated by the portraits of Leighton, Fildes, Millais, Boughton, Alma-Talema, Pettie, and Herkomer, and views of their studies. Henry P. Johnston contributes an article apropos of the Centennial Anniversary of the Evacuation of New York by the British. An interesting biographical sketch of Sir Moses Montefiore, the Jewish philanthropist, now entering on his one hundredth year, is contributed by Mrs. Z. B. Gustafson. Mr. William Blaikie's article, "Our Children's Bodies," strikes vigorously at some defects of our home and school training. Francis E. Prendergast contributes a timely and comprehensive article on Transcontinental Railways, with a map. Dr. H. H. Kane describes a "Hashish House in New York," and "the curious adventures of an individual who indulged in a few pipefuls of the narcotic hemp." The Editoral departments are full of entertaining and useful matter.

Montana desires to become a State. On Nov. 5th, an election will be held for delegates to a State constitutional convention. Party candidates are in the field. The convention will meet in Helena in January, and the constitution to be framed will be submitted to the people in November, 1884.

The Sun.

NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read THE SUN during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read, and like THE SUN for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.

Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs THE SUN makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. THE SUN has absolutely no purposes to serve save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that THE SUN is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.

Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robesonism and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, THE SUN stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interests of the people against the ambition of bosses, encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that THE SUN is the best religious newspaper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party, and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worthy of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of THE SUN discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to his individual liking.

If you already know THE SUN, you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. If you do not already know THE SUN, you will find it to be a mirror of all human activity, a storehouse of the choicest products of common sense and imagination, a mainstay for the cause of honest government, sentinel for genuine Jeffersonian Democracy, a scourge for wickedness of every species, and an uncommonly good investment for the coming year.

Terms to Mail Subscribers.

SUNDAY—Eight pages, $1.20 a year.

Editorial Notes.

The Dakota correspondent of the Northwestern says that nearly eighty churches in that territory are now being aided by the Church Extension Society.

The fatherhood of God is no more plainly taught in His word, than the brotherhood of man. "Let brotherly love continue," to the exclusion of all caste and color prejudices.

Over 1,500,000 of the colored people in the South, are in the Methodist and Baptist Churches. This fact involves great responsibilities upon these two denominations. The Lord help them to be true to themselves, to Christ and the race.

The Exposition will be held in Upper City Park. Competing architects will consult with Director General Burke up to Nov. 24th, for the buildings. The press of the country is advertising it bountifully; and it promises to be that imposing affair which it should be in view of the numerous interests involved.

A correspondent of the Chicago Standard says the mailing list of a literary journal of very large circulation shows that twenty per cent. of that circulation is in New England, twenty per cent. in the four Middle States, ten per cent. in the ten Southern States, and fifty per cent. in the region between the Alleghenies and the Pacific."

The Nashville Christian Advocate makes mention of a clergyman in Tennessee who bears the name of of the "satisfying preacher." Whenever a church began to get tired of their pastor this man is sent for, and uniformly after hearing one or two sermons from him they are satisfied to keep the preacher they have. We would like the name and address of that "satisfying preacher."

A French journal says: "But three things in France are progressing—the consumption of tobacco, alcohol and beer." This fact means, to France,—progress backward. It means to any country an increase of the most shameful abuses and crimes, and destruction of everything valuable to humanity. It is the antecedent of embarrassed capital, discontented labor, corrupt politics and a fearful proportion of insanity, idiocy, misery and crime. Archimedes never invented an engine for the destruction of the enemies of his country that was as dangerous as the liquor traffic. It destroys the homes, thereby sapping the very life out of the republic.

It was the American Citizen which announced that the Garrison Cadets gave "a fine display of their deficiency in the manual of arms and marching movements." And we have scanned the columns of the dailies every morning for a week expecting to read of an assault upon a compositor, or a brilliantly executed "march" away from the sanctum by the editor of the Citizen, hotly pursued by the innocent and injured Garrisonians.

The Kansas City, Springfield and Memphis railroad has been completed, and opened for business Oct. 21. Through passenger trains are running between Kansas City and Memphis, and freights from over the new line, have already been received at this port. It connects with the New Orleans and Chicago railroad. It is a most convenient route to the North and Northwest.

We have heard it said that there are three boxes devoted to the cause of civilization: viz, the ballot-box, the cartridge box and the contribution box; their uses are selfevident, but the greatest of these is the contribution box. Give the latter box the preeminence, and it will purify the first and abolish the use for the second box. Come now brethren, utilize the contribution box.

The Rev. Thomas Harrison is soon to enter upon his winters work at St. Louis Mo., with the united Methodist churches. The Lord be praised for his wonderful doings. The time has been when Methodism in St. Louis was as irritable as a bear robbed of her whelps. We are thankful for the return of peace and harmony. May the coming winter witness thousands slain to sin and made alive unto God.

The statement is made in the Chicago Inter Ocean of Oct. 16th, that N. W. Ayer & Son, of Philadelphia have received during the thirty-nine days from Sept. 1st, to Oct. 9, 1883, orders for advertising through their agency to the amount of $239,646.41. Probably no other concern of the kind in the world does so large a business. For a number of years the SOUTHWESTERN has dealt with this firm, and cheerfully notes its deserved prosperity.

The New York Tribune has discovered that "Washington's military career was memorable mainly for its disasters." But this is not surprising. The Tribune has exhibited many conceits since the death of Horace Greeley. In Louisiana it is not forgotten that the Tribune applauded the White League crusade upon the Republican government, and thought the 14th of September mob was a spontaneous uprising of intelligent patriots. The truth of history and the Tribune are often at variance.

Would you successfully and victoriously run the race set before you? Then "lay aside every weight," every infamous and notorious sin; "and the sin which doth easily beset you," the convenient and apparently insignificant sins, "and run with patience the race that is set before you." The grain of sand in the traveller's shoe, no less than the heavy burden on his back, may prove his failure and ruin. Be mindful of little, as well as of great things; for it is he that is faithful in that which is least, that is faithful also in much.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

A Trained Ministry, and the Gammon School of Theology.

BY REV. WILBUR P. THIRKIELD.

The time has passed when training schools for Christian ministers need to be defended. The beneficent workings of our theological schools furnish the best argument for their having a place in our church economy. Dr. Dempster, grand and progressive man of God, the founder of Concord (now Boston) and Garrett Theological schools, in the days of struggles and opposition, looked forward to the time when the church in her highest councils would sanction these "schools of the prophets," when her Bishops should be their committee of supervision; her conferences their legal guardians; her prayers her perpetual offerings. That prophesy is already fulfilled. The entire Church, East and West, North and South, is awake to the necessity of training schools specially adapted to give a ministerial education to those called of God, and ordained by the Church for the functions of this holy office. The Church recognizes the fact that a minister may be well educated, and yet not have a ministerial education; that is, one fitting him for the peculiar work of the ministry. For this, there should be a special course of study and reading preparing him to interpret the Bible aright, and securing to him at least a broad outlook over the field of theology. In harmony with these ideas of the Church, through the munificence of Mr. E. H. Gammon and the unremitting labors of Bishop Warren, the new Theological Hall at Clark University has been built, and a liberal endowment is secured. The building is an elegant structure, a modified form of Gothic architecture, built of brick with stone trimmings, 110x52 feet, and four stories high. Some of the rooms are now occupied and the rest is rapidly finishing. The full privileges of the school are open to worthy candidates and ministers of all evangelical denominations. There are three reasons why scores of young preachers throughout the South should be here pursuing the broad and practical course of theological study that it proposes to furnish.

1. You are called to be religious teachers. The command is, "Go teach!" and Paul exhorts that the Gospel truths be committed "to faithful men who shall be able to teach others also." The qualifications should correspond to the vocation, in culture, intellectual discipline and moral worth. In all other professions, that scholastic culture is insisted upon. It is most essential in the minister, for his calling is to teach divine truth. This is the Gospel plan. God might have communicated the transcendent truths of the Gospel through open vision, or in tables of writing, or by emblazoning them on the dome of the sky. But He sent the Teacher, and Christ chose men and commanded: "Go teach!" And to teach is to communicate the Gospel scheme as a connected, systematic whole; to exhibit the plan of redemption in its relations, demands and purposes. All the truths of theology are in the Bible, but they are not formulated into a clearly defined system. To teach Christian doctrine truthfully, every part should be viewed in its relations to the whole. Narrowness of view is a most frightful source of doctrinal heresy.

Again, the work of the minister is not only to make men feel; to arouse the imagination, to convert them; to get them into the church, but it is also to teach, to build up, to feed the flock of Christ. Do you feel yourself called to this apostolic work? Has the Church given its authorization? Then enter the school of the prophets, and by discipline and study get the clear vision, the broad outlook, and the power to prophesy unto the people.

2. The ministry, in intelligence and culture, must be abreast, if not ahead of the times. Other professions may lag, but the ministry must lead. Bishop Simpson doubtless felt this when he said, "What the church needs is not more ministers, but better trained ministers." This need is deeply felt here in the South. The common schools, academies and colleges are filled, and this generation is rising rapidly in general intelligence. The boys and girls are far ahead of their parents, because they have advantages that were denied them. The Sunday-school is also giving them, through the Berean lessons, fresh and systematic teachings of Bible history and doctrine. Now, the minister who is to get their respectful hearing must be versed in Divine truth, be able to interpret the Bible to edification, and to unfold its doctrines intelligently. This is the object of learning, not to veil the truth, but to flash light upon it. How much wisdom is packed into that sentence of the old divine: "Brethren, it will take all our learning to make things plain." A certain remark of Bishop Ames is also in point here. At a certain conference a member began a tirade against education, and thanked God that he had never been in a college. The Bishop asked, "Do I understand the brother to give thanks to God for his ignorance?" The member answered, "Well, yes, if you want to." To which the Bishop rejoined, "All I have to say is, the brother has a great deal to be thankful or!"

3. The ministry has to contend with infidelity and all forms of doubt and error. These are becoming popular. The press teems with infidel teachings. A cheap literature is scattering them broadcast among your people. The very atmosphere is full of strange doctrines. These must be met in a positive way from your pulpits by a clear and forceful preaching of Divine truth. Are the errors of Romanism spreading among the people? You must at least have right conceptions of the doctrines which that church has so corrupted, in order to refute their false teachings by clear and positive presentations of Divine truth as it is in Christ. Romish priests are here to stay. They are thoroughly educated men. The Protostant minister, by his character and attainments, must command the respect of the intelligent people in the community, or he will stand at a disadvantage in coping with these false teachers. Are emissaries from that seething maelstrom of vile and lustful iniquity in Utah, among your people? Seventeen Mormon missionaries started for the South last week. Ministers with convictions born of an intelligent study of this hellish system, with a knowledge of its designs, are needed to arouse the people to root out these agents of the devil. An educated, consecrated ministry, and good schools are the only safeguards of the people amid these threatening dangers.

For these reasons, ministers trained in the doctrines and discipline of the church, men with educated minds, and with the outlook over the field of truth that a course of theological study affords, are now needed in the service of the church. The call is urgent. It will soon be imperative. What excuse have you for delay? The way for such preparation is now open hereat the very doors of your conferences. The Churches now ask and soon will demand trained men. No young man with grace and energy need stay away. Aid may be given to the most worthy. Who will come and join the band of students already at work? If not able to enter the Theological School, through correspondence, you may pursue a course of study at your homes, passing regular examinations, and coming up to the ministerial institutes to be held here several times each year.

Will you show your interest by addressing a letter of inquiry to the Dean of the Theological School, Clark University, Atlanta?

Rust University.

To the Members of Mississippi Conference:

DEAR BRETHREN—Some weeks ago I wrote you through the SOUTHWESTERN setting forth the needs of our University and earnestly asking you to forward by the 1st of October whatever sums it was possible for you to raise by that time. Up to this date not a dollar has been received, and we are very greatly embarrassed and perplexed to know what to do in the case. There is now in the bank at Holly Springs for collection bills amounting to over five hundred dollars, besides accounts with merchants in Holly Springs amounting to five or six hundred dollars more, and we have not a dollar in hand with which to meet these obligations. Since the 1st of Sept. we have purchased and paid for labor to the amount of over fifteen hundred dollars, with the full expectation that the brethren of the Conference would meet their pledges and help us out. We now write these lines praying that each brother will respond at once with what he has on hand for this cause; or, if he has nothing that he will take a collection at once and forward the same to us. If we could pay for a portion of our indebtedness each month our creditors would be patient and grant us time, but if we are unable to pay anything the credit and good name of the University must suffer. We wait your action.

Very truly,

W. W. HOOPER.

The Colored Race in Georgia.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 19.—A call for a convention of colored people in Atlanta, Dec. 12 next, has been issued, signed by all the leading colored men of the State. The call declares that the condition of the colored men in Georgia is daily growing worse. Recent bitter articles against the education of the Negro that have appeared in leading newspapers of the State, and the bill presented to the State Legislature separating the tax paid by white citizens from that paid by colored citizens for educational purposes, and providing that colored people should only receive the benefit of taxes paid by themselves, go to show that a large part of the white population of the State are determined to deny the colored man in Georgia equal citizenship, and that the Negro shall not have the same chance to rise as his white brother. These facts are given as reasons for the call.

Kansas wishes it to be known that she anticipated the civil rights decision and passed a law of her own—even before the civil rights act was passed by Congress, in fact—covering the whole question. It provides that any distinction made on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude by officers of the public schools or by the owners or managers of railroads, street cars, stage coaches, hotels, boarding houses or places of public amusement, shall be treated as a misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $1,000; and also that damages may be recovered by parties injured by such distinction. This law is referred to the Southern States as an excellent one for them to copy in proof of their alleged willingness to grant the colored man all the rights he needs if the Federal Government will "let them alone" in such matters.—Globe Democrat.

Hon. John M. Langston and others addressed a meeting of colored citizens in New York on the subject of the Supreme Court decision on the civil rights bill. All favored accepting the decision with as much grace as possible, and urging that the question of public rights be agitated in the States separately, and that the colored vote be given to the party which would endeavor to pass favorable legislation.

Senator Brown, of Georgia announces that negroes must ride in negro cars on the Georgia railroads. This, he says, will be his policy as president of the State road of Georgia and head of the new Georgia railroad syndicate, "under the altered condition of things made by the civil rights decision."

Who is to be the Republican Moses in Ohio now?—Cincinnati Enquirer. Just wait and you will see him coming down the mountain with "the commandments" carved upon stone. The worshipers of the jug and whisky barrel will then more anxiously inquire what has become of their Aaron—Inter Ocean.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Daniel Lewis, Allen: "While preaching at one of my pastor's churches, about four miles from this point, I found an old sister about 50 years of age. I was telling the people the good of this paper. She formed a resolution, attended the Sunday-school, bought a pair of spectacles, and now, after an attendance of about eight months, she can read quite well. She says she will be a subscriber of your paper if God will let her live."

MISSISSIPPI.

R. Anderson, New Hope Circuit: "Protracted meetings have resulted in 24 conversions, 36 additions. Sunday-schools are improving the children. Third quarterly conference was held by Elder McDonald. Collections $15."

P. H. Hill, Lexington: "My protracted efforts ceased on the 16th, with the success of 50 conversions. During the year 121 have been added. I shall press every claim. A number of the people have met the pastor's claims." [Bro. Hill sent a list of names, but we will not publish, as our space can be used for matter of more general interest.]

C. W. Ivy, Enterprise: "Another protracted meeting, just closed, lasted one week; one convert, five additions. Rev. Mr. Kline, a Baptist brother, assisted me four nights. The trustees have $40 in hand, and want to build our new church."

J. O. Houston, Winona: "I feel like extending my heartfelt and sincere congratulations to the Bishop and Elder for having placed me among a Christian people whose hearts are so full of love for God and Methodism. We have just closed a protracted meeting of some weeks, resulting in the conversion of 70 souls to God. Backsliders reclaimed, and members from other churches 20, making the grand total 90. The occasion was a great season of grace. All hearts melted and all flowed together in sweet Christian love. Over a month ago we completed a new church, 32x40, four miles east of this place, presenting a conspicuous object to the public road, commanding the attention and sincere admiration of the community. We have had the presence and lovely instruction of our dear Elder Barney at each of his appointments this year. We look with much pleasure for him again soon."

J. O. Rucker, Fayette: "Fayette Circuit has witnessed this year some great refreshings from the presence of the Lord. Our protracted meetings, this year, closed with good results. Our pastor, Rev. H. Henderson, has labored very hard this year for the upbuilding of the cause of Christ, nor have his labors been in vain. On August 18th, presiding elder W. McDonald was with us at Pine Grove and held our quarterly conference. The brethren came out promptly, each having his written report. On Sunday, the 19th, the church was crowded. The presiding elder preached us a noble sermon and administered the Lord's Supper to 42. Up to the third quarter there have been 43 accessions to the church. We are much encouraged by the earnest labor of our pastor, H. Henderson, who seems to be laboring very hard to erect a new church in Fayette. Pray for us. Your best hopes be that many wanderers may be brought into the folds of Christ."

TEXAS.

M. Smith, La Grange: "This is one of the oldest charges in the West Texas conference. I found a small membership, not all givers to the church or its benevolent enterprises. They gave me considerable work, and it continues so. Supplies have to be given to get our apportionment. We have some members who love missionary work, and are willing to do all they can. I judge from the present that it will take many years to bring this people to a good spiritual condition. I have tried to fix their minds on the conference school, but I do not think I can do much for it. Sisters Louisa Faceson and and Louisa Vanghan collected $20.10 missionary money; Sister Mary Harris paid $24 for painting and stove-pipe for the church; Sister Lizzie Blair collected the Freedmans' Aid Money, $6. If I could get others to do as well the mission wheel would turn right swiftly. We are preparing to raise our church up higher from the ground."

Alice Bunn, Fairfield: "Our Sabbath-school now numbers 34, and is in a flourishing condition."

TENNESSEE.

G. C. Harden, Perryville: "Our fourth quarterly conference was held by Elder Price. We paid him in full; pastor received $85.80. Have something on missionary claims. On the circuit this year were added 24; conversions, 10; deaths, 2. None withdrawn or dismissed."

G. A. Sanford, Tullahoma: "There have been 15 conversions on my work this year, and all joined our church but one. I have taken in, from the A. M. E. Church, Bro. John Arnold."

Christian Life and Worship.

BY REV. L. W. ELKINS.

The life of the Church is the aggregate life of its individual members. Under Judaism each life was fashioned before it had the power of choice. In Christianity it is wholly different. The gospel deals with men in their various dispositions, and their differing degrees of knowledge. At some moment, which is not necessarily the same for all, on a special and remarkable occasion, or after a long preparation which memory can scarcely retrace, a change takes place. A new vital energy penetrates the heart and the individual is conscious of a new relation to God—the soul is begotten of the Holy Ghost and draws nigh to God through Christ—the Savior, and cries Abba Father. We are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ. This individual principle is the very marrow and sap of the new covenant, hence all believers are regarded as kings and priests unto God and constitute a universal priesthood under the eternal mediatorship of Jesus, who once offered Himself a sacrifice for all. Christ is the head, and the Church his body, and all believers are members of this one body. All members partake of the Holy Spirit. The fundamental necessity and duty of the Church is to edify itself. It must grow, and in order to grow it must exercise its faculties as indued by the Holy Spirit. Christ, in His ascension, received the Holy Spirit as a germinal gift for men, and He divides to the individuals of the church severally as He wills. These gifts are ordinary and extraordinary. The ordinary are the usual saving graces bestowed on every true believer. The extraordinary are the special gifts bestowed upon some, whereby their natural talents are greatly quickened and enlarged. Although there are diversities of gifts and different administrations, there is but one Spirit and one Lord, as Paul said to the Corinthians, 12; 1-5. These gifts are called charisms, and were undoubtedly bestowed upon the church for the creative epoch of Christianity. As the aim of Christianity in its work in this world is to produce a sanctified human nature, so it is but reasonable that Christianity once established, its work should henceforth be carried on after a natural order and its manifestations be more strictly in harmony with the laws of a natural development, for the reason the charismata ceased with the apostolic age, and thereafter the Church was left mainly to the Spirit as working through the ordinary channels of thought and action. To create in any age a holy, spiritual people is the greatest of all divine operations, and hence the greatest of the gifts is love which liveth and abideth forever.

Christianity a Science.

BY H. S. HANSON, D.D.

Now Christianity is a science just as truly as chemistry. Its great fundamental facts are determined by thousands of experiments. It is something that may be known; that challenges investigation, and submits its claims to crucial tests. Here are some of its confident utterances: "Prove me now," "Come, taste and see," "If any man will do His will he shall know of the doctrine," "Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord," "He that believeth hath the witness in himself," and "Did I not tell thee that if thou wouldst believe thou shouldst see the glory of God?"

Christianity is not a mere theory but a vital experience, and it challenges the inquirer to make proof of its power. Millions have accepted the challenge and made the experiment in different ages and different lands—many of them men of biggest brain and broadest culture, and coolest judgment. Their clear, concurrent testimony is not merely that they have believed in certain principles, and have come to cherish certain sentiments, but that they have arrived at certain palpable results, that they have had personal, inward demonstrations, as conclusive as any ocular exhibition, and have had personal experience of a practical power that has transformed, transfigured, glorified their lives, lifting them up to a loftier plane, and givin them a joy unspeakable and full of glory. Now, shall we unhesitatingly receive the testimony of learned scientists, though they be few and far between, and do not agree in many things! and shall we reject the current testimony of millions of Christian witnesses, among whom are multitudes of men and women the wisest and purest the world ever saw?

Is it logical or rational, or decently fair? True religion has its difficulties—mysterious and unfathomable—but has science any fewer? Can anybody tell me why matter attracts all other matter with a force inversely proportioned to the square of the distance? and why that thing called gravity holds the universe together? Why, as the earth wheels on its axis with a velocity of a thousand miles an hour, are not all things on its surface shot off at a tangent? What feeds those subterranean fires that every now and then spout through volcanic vents? How is it that the sun is ever burning and yet never consumed? If any man thinks that he can answer such questions, he only demonstrates the density of his ignorance. Is there, then, no truth in science? Are all its deductions to be regarded as incredible, because there are difficulties that no man can master, and because a fool can ask questions that a philosopher cannot answer? No sane man would so suppose; and yet in a matter of religion, if you cannot make everything clear to the cloudiest understanding; if you cannot explain the incarnation and cipher out the Trinity like a sum in arithmetic; if you cannot fathom the unfathomable, and measure the infinite, men shrug their shoulders in incredulity and turn away from the Bible with lofty scorn. Now, I solemnly protest that this is alike unscientific, unmanly and unfair.—October Pulpit Treasury.

Do not rob your child of an education. Now is the time to send your children to one of our church schools, though it cost you a present sacrifice. Give your son and daughter a better chance in life than you had. Every year in the seminary and college will open a new and higher world to your children. Do not cripple your son and daughter for a whole life just for the little menial service they may be able to render you at home. Give them a chance. Duty to God, self and family demands it.—Religious Telescope.

Bishops of the M. E. Church.

BY JOHN LUTZ.

Of the thirty-five bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church thirteen were college graduates. Coke graduated at Oxford University, England; Simpson at Madison College, Kingsley at Allegheny College, Thomson at University of Pennsylvania (medical department) Clark at Wesleyan University, Cowman at Dickinson College, Andrews at Wesleyan University, Gilbert Haven at Wesleyan University, Wiley at University of New York (medical department), Foss at Wesleyan University, Warren at Wesleyan University, E. O. Haven at Wesleyan University, Hurst at Dickinson College. Baker, Ames and Foster each received a collegiate education, but did not graduate.

Three were born in England, namely, Asbury, Whatcoat, and Thomson; one was born in Wales—Coke. Six were born in New York, five in Ohio, four in Massachusetts, four in Virginia, three in Maryland, two in Pennsylvania, two in Maine, one in West Virginia, one in Delaware, one in Connecticut, one in New Hampshire, and one in Georgia. Two were Africans, namely, Burns and Roberts. Ten have been editors, and eight college presidents. Twenty have been authors. Two left the Methodist Episcopal Church, going over to the Church South, namely Soule and Andrews. One resigned the Episcopal office—Hamline.

Morris filled the office the longest period—twenty-eight years. E. O. Haven the shortest, dying in a little more than a year after his election. Morris attained the greatest age—eighty-four years. Emory died youngest, being but forty-seven. Foster and Andrew entered the ministry the youngest, both being but seventeen, and the only two that entered the ministry under twenty. The oldest when entering the ministry was Hamline who was thirty-six. Six others were past thirty when entering. The average age when entering the ministry was a little more than twenty-four years. The youngest when elected to the office were Coke and Janes, each being thirty-seven. The oldest when elected was Whatcoat, who was sixty-four. Two others were sixty before their election, namely, Peck and E. O. Haven. The average age when elected was forty-seven and three-fourths years.

The greatest pioneer Bishops were Asbury and McKendree; the greatest missionary bishop was Coke, who crossed the Atlantic fourteen times in the interest of missions. The most eminent educator was E. O. Haven, and the most distinguished orator, Simpson. Twenty-three have ceased their labors here, while twelve are with us.—Western Christian Advocate.

How to Preach.

Make no apologies. If you have the Lord's message, deliver it; if not hold your peace. Have short prefaces and introductions. Say your best things first, and stop before you get prosy. Do not spoil the appetite for dinner by too much thin soup. Leave self out of the pulpit and take Jesus in. Defend the gospel, and let the Lord defend you and your character. If you are lied about, thank the devil for putting you on your guard, and take care that the story shall never come true. Let your beard grow. Throw away your cravat. If you do not "want to break," make your shift collar an inch larger, and give your blood a chance to flow back to the heart. Do not get excited too soon.

Do not run away from your hearers. Engine driving wheels fly fast with no load, but when they draw anything, they go slower. It takes a cold hammer to bend a hot iron. Heat up the people, but keep the hammer cool. Do not brawl and scream. Too much water stops mill wheels, and too much noise drowns sense. Empty vessels ring the loudest. Powder isn't shot. Thunder isn't lightning. Lightning kills. If you have lightning, you can afford to thunder; but do not try to thunder out of an empty cloud. Do not scold the people. Do not abuse the faithful souls who come to meeting rainy days, because of the others who do not come. Preach the best to smallest assemblies. Jesus preached to one woman at the well, and she got all Samaria out to hear him next time. Ventilate your meeting room. Sleeping in church is due to bad air oftener than to bad manners. Do not repeat, saying, "as I said before." If you said it before, say something else after. Leave out words you can not define. Stop your declamation and talk to folks. Come down from stilted and sacred tones, and become a little child. Change the subject if it goes hard. Do not tire yourself and every one else out. Do not preach till the middle of your sermon buries the beginning and is buried by the end. Look people in the face, and live so that you are not afraid of them. Take long breaths, fill your lungs and keep them full. Stop to breathe before the air is exhausted. Then you will not finish off each sentence-ah with a terrible gasp-ah, as if you were dying for air-ah as some preachers do-ah, and so strain their lungs-ah, and never find it out-ah, because their friends dare not tell them-ah, and so leave them to make sport for the Philistines-ah! Inflate your lungs. It is easier to run a mill with a full pond than an empty one. Hoist the gate a little way; when you are half through, raise a little more; when nearly done, put on a full head of water. Aim at the mark. Hit it. Stop and see where the shot struck, and then fire another broadside. Pack your sermons. Make your words like bullets. A board hurts a man worse if it strikes him edgewise.

Beauregard and Andersonville

A few day ago, at Louisville, General Beauregard expressed the opinion that the Union prisoners at Andersonville could not under the circumstances, have received better treatment than they did, and intimated that the soldier who would complain of his experiences there is "a little too nice for war."

It is very possible that General Beauregard is in lamentable ignorance concerning the Andersonville atrocities. He probably never visited that monstrous prison-pen, and being absorbed with exciting military duties far remote from the scene, gave no thought to the condition or sufferings of Union prisoners in the South. He may have seen accounts of Andersonville, since the war, and been willing and desirous to consider them exaggerations. If all this be true, he is disqualified from rendering an opinion on the subject. If he knows the real facts, and hopes to palliate them, he has undertaken a hopeless task.

The treatment of Union prisoners, not only at Andersonville, but wherever the Confederate flag floated, was not only a disgrace to the South, but to civilization and humanity. It was worthy of an armed despotism battling to maintain human slavery. It was what might have been expected of Moors, Turks, or Asiatics, but not of any race of European descent, or of one making any pretense to civilization. It was cruel, pitiless, inhuman. The details, so terribly revolting, have been sufficiently made known to the world, and form the blackest page of American history. The time has not yet come to deny or belittle them. They can be substantiated by thousands of living witnesses. There are thirteen thousand graves at Andersonville representing more dead than Beauregard's army left on the battlefield of Shiloh after forty-eight hours of fearful fighting. The tale of every Confederate prison-pen is the same: starvation, exposure, brutal treatment, and death.

"What is the use of keeping these things alive? Why not let them be forgotten?" it may be inquired. They do not need to be continually paraded, but when Confederate leaders have the effrontery to deny them, justice to the men who perished requires that the denial shall not pass unrebuked. Posterity has a right to know what it cost to preserve the American Union and extirpate human slavery from North America. The country has no right to send men to war to perish for it, and then, when triumph has been gained, turn around and bury the memory of their heroism. A debt is due to such martyrs which cannot be repaid by a few eulogiums at the close of hostilities. As long as the English language is spoken on this continent the horrors of Andersonville will cause men to shudder, and to execrate the political and military power that sought to perpetuate itself by such indescribable atrocities.—Inter Ocean.

A Draped Locomotive.

"To me," the sad passenger said, "there is something inexpressibly mournful in a draped locomotive, especially so when it is draped in mourning for a dead engineer. The president of a railroad company stands a long way from the engine, and when he dies the engine mourns as we sorrow for a rich uncle whom we never saw and who left us nothing. But the man who was a part of the engine's life, who spurred her up the long, steep climbing mountain grades, and coaxed her around dizzy curves, and sent her down the long level stretches with the flight of an arrow; who knew how to humor all her caprices, and coaxed and petted and urged her through blinding storms and rayless night, and blistering heat and stinging cold, until engine and engineer seemed to be body and soul of one existence—then, when this man at last gets his final orders and crosses the dark river alone, with only the fadeless target-lights of sure and eternal promise gleaming brightly on the other side, and when there is a new man on the right hand side and a new face looks out of the engineer's window, then I think I can see profound and sincere sorrow in the panting spirit of power, standing in the station, draped with fluttering sable emblems of its woe, waiting for the caressing touches of the dead hands that it will never feel again. And engineers tell me that for day and days the engine is fretful under the new hands—it is restless and moody, starts off nervously and impatiently sometimes, and then drops into sullen gait and loses time—that no man can get so much out of an engine as its own engineer." "Do you remember only a year or two ago," the jester said, "only last summer, I believe it was, an engineer on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, running west from Chicago, died on his engine—died right in his place, running between Galesburg and Monmouth, and sat there with his hand on the lever, and his sightless eyes staring glassily down the track, unnoticed until the fireman looked up to see why he did not whistle for Monmouth station? And how many miles that train had thundered along with the dead engineer looking out of the cab window into eternity no one knew and no one known".—Burlington Hawkeye.

The Southern Democrats know that they will have all the consideration they merit when the Democratic party comes into power. They have shown for years such disinterested patriotism that even if they had just cause to complain we believe that few of them would do so. And there are still fewer of them who do not know that the Appeal's assertion that the South is "politically paralyzed" is sheer nonsense.—N. Y. Sun.

How Martin Luther was Cured

Ordinarily the great Reformer, Luther, was less liable to doubts and gloom of spirit than his friend Melanchton. But he was a man of terrible impetuosity; and when he did fall into a fit of darkness he drove all before him.

At one time, when danger threatened, and nothing seemed to prosper in the mighty work he was doing, he became so despondent that his friends were alarmed. He did not sit and mope as other men do when they are melancholy, for Luther was not one of the silent kind.

It was this fact that made his mood dreadful. He was like a strong steed running with a broken rein. His strange actions and bitter words led some to fear that his great labors and burdens had shaken his reason. His fellow-reformers, and his best friends (some of them rich and powerful ones) shook their heads and said: "We must get Doctor Martin out of the way. He needs rest. Who knows but he'll say or do something to wreck the whole cause?"

This time, however, they were puzzled to know how to manage it. Once they shut him up a year in Wartburg Castle to save his own life. It seemed absurd enough to think of shutting up Luther to save reformation. But they must do something. It was hardly safe now, as it usually had been, to let him alone until his grand faith had worked itself out of eclipse.

Finally, they concluded to try a method common among old prophets, who often taught and rebuked great men by enigmas and parables. Luther's wife, the good and gentle Catherine Bora, was taken into confidence, and her love and solicitude for him made her, no doubt, the best person who could have been chosen to administer medicine to the gloomy man's mind.

The next time Luther went to his house he found it silent. To miss the welcome at the door was a surprise to him, and changed the current of his thoughts a little. Men in sour humors will say there is nothing bright, but they never like to be taken at their word.

He went through the rooms seeing not one till he reached the parlor, and there he found his wife in deep mourning, and sobbing as if her heart would break.

"Katy, what is the matter?" cried Luther, now thoroughly startled.

No answer but sobs and tears.

"Is the baby dead?" thinking of his youngest child, who had been ailing.

"No—worse than that—a great deal worse—I thought you knew!" and then a fresh burst of tears.

"Kate—wife! what in the world can you mean! tell me quick!" exclaimed the astonished reformer.

"Oh, husband, hasn't the awful news reached you? Haven't you heard that our Heavenly Father is dead, and His cause in the world has all gone to ruin!"

The horrified expression on Luther's face changed at once. He stood a moment looking at his wife, and he began to shake with laughter. He laughed as loud and long and as heartily as he had ever laughed in his life—and that is saying much, for naturally Martin was a very merry-hearted man.

"Ah, Kate, Kate, my good wife," he said presently, "I read your riddle. God is not dead, but I have acted as though He were. You have taught me a good lesson."

Dont't Waste Vital Energy.

The most vigorous persons do not have too much vitality. People generally inherit a lack of it, or at least find that much vital energy has been permanently lost in their childhood or youth through the ignorance or carelessness of their parents. Often it is impaired by wrong indulgence in early manhood. The endeavor with all persons should be to husband what is left, be it much or little. Therefore:

1. Don't do anything in too great a hurry.

2. Don't work too many hours a day whether it be farm-work, shop-work, study-work or house-work.

3. Don't abridge sleep. Get the full eight hours of it, and that, too, in a ventilated, and sun purified room.

4. Don't eat what is indigestible, not too much of anything; and let good cheer rule the house.

5. Don't fret at yourself or anybody else; nor indulge in the blues; nor burst into fits of violent passion.

6. Don't be too much elated with good luck, nor be disheartened by bad.

Positively——be self-controlled, calm and brave. Let your brain have all the rest it needs. Treat your stomach right. Keep a good conscience, and have cheerful trust in God for all things in both worlds.

Nature does not conquer the world to God. It never has. It never will. In America, with its vast abounding wealth, its grand expanse of prarie, its reach of river, and its exuberant productiveness, there is danger that our riches will draw us away from God, and fasten us to earth; that they will make us not only rich but mean, not only wealthy but wicked. The grand corrective is the cross of Christ seen in the sanctuary where the life and light of God are exhibited, and where the reverberation of the echoes from the great white throne are heard.—R. S. Storrs, D. D.

There has been a great deal of searching for the missing link between the lower order of animals and man in his lowest estate. Several times the claim has been made, that men with tails where discovered in Africa; and that claim has always cheered the heart of the evolutionists. But now there is a new discovery, in the traces of cigarette-users among the extinct aborigines of America. This is a fresh triumph for Darwinians. And it must be admitted that it throws the burden of proof on the cigarette-using dude, to show which side of the line he belongs on.—S. S. Times.

The Independent gives the following incident in the life of Peter Cooper: "A workman in the Cooper Institute, having occasion to ascend a ladder to do some repairing in one of the public rooms, called to an old man whom he happened to see standing near by, watching him: 'Here, old fellow, hold the ladder for me, won't you?' The old fellow started forward and held the ladder for the workman while he climbed up and did his work. That unpretentious old man was Peter Cooper."

The New York World (Democratic) says: "The decision of the supreme court of the United States declaring the civil rights law unconstitutional will create much excitement among the negro population. If our colored fellow-citizens act wisely, they will accept the result with patience, and will strive by self-improvement and good citizenship to which every honest man is entitled, no matter what may be the color of his skin. That is the surest way to equal rights, and to the sympathy of all whose friendship is worth having."

"Poor creatures!" exclaimed Mrs. Grosgrain, looking at the pictures of nude savage women; "no clothing of any kind! I wonder what the poor things have to talk about."—Boston Transcript.

A local paper gives an account of a person who was run over by the cars and killed, and in whose pocket was found a half-filled bottle of whisky, and adds, "No clew to the cause of the accident has yet been found." That half-filled, half-empty bottle, Mr. Reporter, is more than a clew. What would be thought of the intellectual calibre of a reporter who should say "a man was found dead with a bullet hole in his head and an empty pistol by his side, but no clew as to the cause of his death has yet been found?" How true it is, "There are none so blind as those who will not see." There are few subjects upon which people seem so willfully blind as upon the terribly destructive effects of strong drink.

The only way for a man to keep out of trouble is to do right. He may be subjected to annoyance and embarrassment for a time, but his ultimate vindication is certain, and the finale outcome will justify his course. If a man commits an error the proper thing is to admit and correct it, and thereby prevent its further injurious effect. Every attempt to justify it or cover it up, will prove unsuccessful, and only increase the difficulty which it seeks to remove.—Recorder.

Had I no other proof of the immortality of the soul than the oppression of the just and the triumph of the wicked in this world, this alone would prevent my having the least doubt of it. So shocking a discord amidst a great harmony of things would make me naturally look for a cause; I should say to myself we do not cease to exist with this life; everything reassumes its order after death.—Rousseau.

Never be ashamed to give a little, if you are not able to contribute much. Courage to make a small subscription to the pastor's salary, might enable that class of people who have heretofore been of no assistance in this respect to give just the aid that is now needed to make up the estimated allowance.

The question whether or not he has the right or power to appoint a successor to the late Bishop Colenso, of Natal, has for some time engaged the attention of the Archbishop of Canterbury. Natal, however, has an ecclesiastical community distinct from the English Church, and hence it is considered probable that no Bishop can be appointed by the head of the English Church.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. The Crocodile's Dinner Party.

BY E. VINTON BLAKE.

A wily crocodile
Who dwelt upon the Nile,
Bethought himself one day to give a dinner.
"Economy," said he,
"Is chief of all with me,
And shall considered be—as I'm a sinner."

With paper, pen and ink
He sat him down to think;
And first of all, Sir Lion he invited;
The Northern Wolf who dwells
In rocky arctic dells;
The Leopard and the Lynx, by blood united.

Then, Mr. Fox, the shrewd—
No lover, he of good—
And Madam Duck with sober step and stately;
And Mr. Frog serene
In garb of bottle green,
Who warbled bass, and bore himself sedately.

Sir Crocodile, content,
The invitations sent,
The day was come—his guests were all assembled;
They fancied that some guile
Lurked in his ample smile;
Each on the other looked, and somewhat trembled.

A lengthy time they wait,
Their hunger waxes great:
And still the host in conversation dallies:
At last the table is laid,
With covered dishes spread,
And out in haste the hungry party sallies.

But when—the covers raised—
On empty plates they gazed,
Each on the other looked with dire intention,
Madam Duck at last of all,
And Mr. Frog was small—
She softly swallowed him, and made no mention!

This Mr. Fox perceives,
And saying, "By your leaves,
Some punishment is due for this transgression."
He gobbled her in haste,
Then, much to his distaste,
By Mr. Lynx was taken in possession!

The Wolf, without a pause,
In spite of teeth and claws,
Left nothing of the Lynx to tell the story;
The Leopard all irate
At his relation's fate,
Made mince meat of that wolfish monster hoary.

The Lion raised his head;
"Since I am king," he said,
"It ill befits the king to look his dinner!"
Then on the Leopard sprang,
With might so claw and fang,
And made a meal upon that spotted sinner—

Then saw in sudden fear
Sir Crocodile draw near,
And heard him speak with feelings of distraction;
"Since all of you have dined
Well suited to your mind,
You surely cannot grudge me satisfaction."

And sooth, a deal of guile
Lurked in his ample smile;
As down his throat the roaring lion hasted;
"Economy, with me,
Is chief of all," said he,
"And I am glad to see there's nothing wasted."—Good Cheer.

A Child's Heart.

The other day a curious old woman, having a bundle in her hand, and walking with painful effort, sat down on a curb stone to rest. A group of little ones, the oldest about nine, stopped in front of the old woman, saying never a word, but watching her face. She smiled. Suddenly the smile faded, and a corner of the old calico apron went up to wipe away a tear. Then the oldest child asked:

"Are you sorry because you haven't any children?"

"I—I had children once, but they are all dead," whispered the woman, a sob in her throat.

"I'm sorry," said the little girl, as her chin quivered. "I'd give you one of my little brothers, but I haven't got but two, and I don't believe I'd like to spare one."

"God bless you, child—bless you forever," sobbed the old woman, and for a minute her face was buried in her apron.

"But I'll tell you what I'll do," seriously continued the child. "You may kiss us all once, and if little Benny isn't afraid you may kiss him four times, for he is just as sweet as candy."

Pedestrians, who saw three well-dressed children put their arms around that strange old woman's neck and kiss her, were greatly puzzled. They didn't know the hearts of the children, and they didn't hear the woman's words as she rose to go:

"O, children, I'm only a poor old woman, believing I'd nothing to live for; but you've given me a lighter heart than I've had for ten long years."—Pansy.

"She talked about all her neighbors, and said nothing that was not good about any." This was a royal testimony of the social character of a woman of whom we heard another speak the other day.

Father and Mother Both.

Sarah was an orphan, and the woman in whose house she now lived was not very kind to her. She was setting one day on a rock, looking very sad and lonesome, when dear little Effie Dean, a neighbor's child, tripped by.

"How do you do, Sarah?" said she.

"Oh, as well as I can with nobody to love me," said Sarah. "If I only had a father and mother!"

"You have God for your Father, Sarah. The Bible says he is the Father of the fatherless."

"Well, it doesn't say He is the mother of the motherless."

"But it says something like that, I'm sure," said Effie, "for I read it myself. It says, 'As a mother comforteth her children, so will I comfort you;' and mamma says God will be father and mother both to us."

The poor orphan brightened up. "Is that so?" she asked. "I didn't know that before. I don't believe I shall cry so much now."—The Sunbeam.

"Ashamed to Tell Mother."

Such was a little boy's reply to his comrades who were trying to tempt him to do wrong.

"But you need not tell her; no one will know anything about it!"

"I would know all about it myself, and I'd feel very mean if I could not tell mother."

"It's a pitty you are not a girl. The idea of a boy running and telling his mother every little thing!"

"You may laugh if you want to," said the noble boy, "but I've made up my mind as long as I live not to do anything I would be ashamed to tell mother."

Noble resolve! and one which will make any life true and useful. Let it be the rule of every boy and girl to do nothing of which they would be ashamed to tell mother.

Dyspepsia is BAD.

BAD in its effects on the disposition.
The man who can't comfortably digest his dinner is not a delightful companion.

BAD in its effects on the household.
It sets people at variance with each other and makes them irregular and unreasonable.

BAD in its effects on the purse.

Brown's Iron Bitters is GOOD.

GOOD in its effects on the dyspeptic.
It gives him a sound digestion, and enables him to enjoy the food he swallows.

GOOD in its effects on the family.
It drives dyspepsia out, and with it the whole company of little demons that make home unhappy.

GOOD in its effects on business.
With a sound digestion a man can face and overcome worries and troubles which would wreck a dyspeptic.

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

L. P. CUSHMAN, Editor.
A. E. P. ALBERT, D. D., Assistant.

THURSDAY, NOV. 1, 1883.

This paper will be sent from this date to Dec. 31, 1884, to any new subscriber who sends two dollars with the order.

Governor Ireland urges that the races in that State be kept in different cars. But the vice president of the International Railroad decides that business will not justify it, and that the colored people will restricted to no certain cars.

The colored people in this city, it is estimated, pay taxes on fourteen million dollars worth of property; and in the State, on forty million dollars worth. When all their disadvantages and discouragements are considered, this is certainly not a very bad showing.

Some of the colored citizens of Quitman Miss., have organized an association to further the educational interest of their children. The officers are S. L. Jones, President; Wm. Smith, vice President, T. Smith, Treasurer; and T. R. Smith, Secretary.

The Church Extension Society recently purchased of the Presbyterians a valuable church property located on Bainbridge street, Philadelphia for the use of our colored brethren. The house has been put in good order and was dedicated Sabbath 21st inst. Bishop Simpson, Dr. Kynett, W. F. Butler, and H. Morris preaching on the occasion. It will be known as the John Wesley Church.

No doubt, as Dr. Talmage says, there is a disposition on the part of some professed Christians to ride to heaven in a Pullman palace car, they would like to go in on soft plush, and have their beds made early so they can sleep all the way. Modern improvements have made a thousand things easy, but the way to heaven is just as rough and rigged in 1883 as when Abel offered his bleeding lamb.

The papers and addresses delivered at the National Educational Assembly at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, have been edited by Dr. J. H. Hartzell, and will be issued in book form Nov. 1st, by Phillips & Hunt, 805 Broadway, New York. Retail price $1 per copy, mailed post paid on receipt of price. These addresses form a valuable compend which should be read by every intelligent citizen. The Assembly was attended by some of the most thoughtful educators of the country, and their suggestions, founded on facts and varied experiences, are worth heeding. The volume is entitled "Christian Educators in Council."

It is possible that J. B. Askins, of 33 Carondelet street, has not quite as fair a knowledge of the English language as the editor of the Evening Chronicle, who appears to have published his comunication without deeming it proper to correct its orthography, but his ideas are sound. The colored race does need merchants, lawyers, doctors, mechanics, and engineers, masters of their callings; and does need to build up financially, intellectually, morally and religiously. These are essential to the full recognition of civil rights, and the rising generation is meeting the expectation of their friends in this regard.

Recently the saloon keepers of Milwaukee held a mass meeting to devise means for their own protection. They passed of course the usual resolution of open warfare upon all men and parties, who dare oppose them in their business. They also deplore the prevalence of drunkenness, but declare that it is not due to the saloons but to "the lack of education." This certainly is a new departure, and there is a show of truth in this statement. There is an opportunity for a reform, but where and with whom shall it begin. Would it not be better for the saloon keepers to begin and establish schools, and by a course of education cure people of their drunkenness?

Revivals and How to Promate Them.

A revival is not a miracle. Things marvelous frequently occur in revivals, but not miracles. In a revival there is no suspension or setting aside some law of nature to show that God is above nature, to prove his presence. A revival is the result or fruit of the use of appropriate means. So far as it relates to the spiritual condition of believers it consists in an increased interest in the subject of practical and experimental religion. There is with them a conscious growth in all the graces of the spirit, and a deep solicitude for the salvation of sinners. The actual commencement of a genuine revival of religion must be with Christians themselves. But this is the result of natural causes. The Christian "brings all the tithes into the storehouse," and God "opens the windows of heaven and pours out a blessing that there is not room enough to receive." It is the result of a combination of divine and human agencies, according to fixed laws. With reference to revivals of religion the responsibility is all with the Christian. Nothing is more out of place on his part, whether in the pulpit or pew, than the pious pretence that he is bowing to the Divine will while he idly waits. It is his duty to be active. The great danger is not in doing too much, but too little.

The one great agency by which this is to be accomplished is the preaching of the Gospel by a Divinely called and commissioned ministry. It is doubtless true that all ministers may not have the same tact in telling the story of the cross. This is a matter of personal qualification possessed in different degrees according to their intellectual endowments and the measure of the grace of God they enjoy. Largely, then, we believe that the efficiency, the real success of the minister, depends upon himself. On this question we are coming more and more to believe in the one man's responsibility. It is through the power of the one Man Christ Jesus preached by living ministers that sinners are saved.

"Every great reform, every great advance in morals, or in methods of Christian activity, has been brought about through the work of some one man who heard God's voice calling for a worker, and rose up and did the work for which God and God's world were waiting. God's call is to the individual; God's promises are to the individual; God's method of working is through the individual. The great need of the hour—of every hour—is not an aroused community, but an aroused individual. When the risen Savior was setting Peter at work, Peter wanted to know about the Lord's plans for some one else. "And what shall this man do?" he asked, about one he knew was peculiarly loved of Jesus, and who might, therefore, be supposed to have peculiar power from and for his Lord. "What is that to thee? follow thou me," was the Savior's response; and when Peter went to work as an individual servant of his Master, the populace felt his power, and all the world shall feel it to the end of time. You are not to wait for your church to be aroused, or for the whole community to have a new interest in that which you think is alone worthy of its interest. The real want of your church and community is one man, willing to be the Lord's instrument, and having faith in the Lord's readiness to use him as such. Why shouldn't you be that man?"

In his preaching the pastor wants to aim directly at the conversion of sinners. Sinners are not converted by accident, it is the result of the use of appropriate means. Revivals of religion are the product of indifference on the part of the preacher in his preaching. The men distinguished for success have aimed at the sinner's conversion. The one reason why so many able ministers competent to instruct, to inoculate morality and explode heresy accomplish so little, they aim at nothing and accomplish nothing. They preach the truth but never apply it. What right has a minister to preach a sermon on repentance, justification, the resurrection of the dead, future general judgment, and then dismiss the congregation without an effort to lead men to forsake their sins? Let us aim more at the conversions of sinners.

Principle Not Policy.

To command success in any sphere it is necessary to adopt some certain policy, some fixed line of action. Such a policy, however, must compromise no known precept of rectitude and duty. Principle must be the comprehensive term out of which must evolve any chosen line of action. Any policy aside from this is a delusion and a snare. It may afford the flush of temporary success, but one who admits time and eternity as elements to be computed in the problem of life, cannot afford to ignore any known principle of rectitude and duty in this matter. Hypocrisies, deceptions, sharp practices and cunning, may, for a time, monopolize popular attention and favor, but they will perish by their own inherent nature. Not so with plain, honest, straightforward Truth. She may be vilified, misrepresented and crushed under; she may there by become so unpopular as to fail to command the considerations she deserves, but sooner or later the reaction will and must come, and she will be honored as never before. "Truth crushed to earth will rise again—the eternal years of God are her's." The history of the world is nothing more than a panoramic exhibition of steady, old-fashioned truth, overtaking and exploding the many errors of ignorance, and the deliberate falsehoods of dishonesty. The truth must triumph, sooner or later. Then, "perish policy and cunning; perish all that fears the light. * * * trust in God and do the right." Any policy that deviates from honest principles is doomed. It may temporarily rejoice in the victories of its Bull Runs, but it must unconditionally surrender, and will be annihilated at its Appomattox. It is principle that is enduring and not policy, except in so far as it may be the outgrowth of honest principles. Follow honesty, then, not only because it is the best policy, but because it is the embodiment of religious principles.

The Mormon Problem.

One of the Mormon missionaries said to have been tarred and feathered in Indiana recently, said in Washington that in North Carolina within a few weeks he had made seventy-six converts, most of them young women between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five. A Mormon Apostle at Salt Lake City recently said to a visitor, "Our missionaries are not only in all the Southern States but in every country as far as Iceland on the north and New Zealand on the south. In fact they almost encircle the globe." We fear that this is no figure of speech, no vain boast. During this year 3000 Mormons have landed at New York, and it was stated at the recent Mormon conference at Salt Lake City that there were 75,000 Mormon converts now in Europe ready to come. According to the statement of Apostle Cannon 23,040 new converts were received into the church during the past year, many of whom came from the Southern States. The entire membership claimed for the church in Utah is over 127,000; the increase of last year was 18 per cent., a rate of increase that no evangelical denomination can boast of in this country. It is claimed by some that both the membership and the number of converts made during the year are exaggerated, but we fear not. It must be plain to every thoughtful and intelligent person that there is a wonderful amount of vigor and aggressiveness on the part of the Mormon missionaries. We know of none who excel them, and they are producing results that call for the application of more effective measures than have yet been devised for its suppression. The laws thus far enacted are wholly inefficient; and there is reason to fear that not only Utah, but Arizona, Idaho and Colorado are being Mormonized every year. There are now over 2,3000 Mormons in Arizona, and twice as many in Idaho. Recently twenty-five of their missionaries were sent into Southern States to make converts who were to settle in Colorado. There is no mistaking the fact Mormonism is one of the most aggressive forces in this country. It is making converts at home and abroad. To-day its attitude is one of open hostility to all National law. The Edmunds law from which we hope so much is practically inoperative either to destroy polygamy or check the power of the Mormon Church. "No half way measures will answer. It is not a question of politics but of outraged morals and shameless disregard of decency, a slap in the face of well ordered and civilized society." The opinion is freely expressed that only the sternest measures can avail to crush out this evil. The Christian men and women of the United States should arouse themselves, and do some active work before it is too late. Every year Mormonism becomes stronger, more formidable, and the longer decisive measures are delayed the more difficult will its suppression become. Better use some more aggressive moral influencies than the half-way measures already devised, else the talk of sending General Sheridan may not prove to be so "ranting" after all.

The Enforcement of Civil Rights.

The general opinion of the press and statesmen of the country is that the Supreme Court decision, however disappointing to colored citizens and their friends, is sound in law. The dissenting opinion of Justice Harlan is awaited with much interest, and will contribute important facts for use in the discussion of the questions of civil rights, we have no doubt. It is also true, in our opinion, that intemperate discussion and hasty reflections, though arising naturally under the sense of wrongs inflicted upon helpless and defenseless people, are out of order. The question of practical concern now is, what can be done to better enforce the civil rights of the colored citizen? The decision does not affect the equal rights of citizens in common law, and in those States where denied, the colored people may organize and petition the Legislatures for better laws. Appeals from the enforcement of discriminating laws can be taken from State courts to the U. S. Supreme Court, which will faithfully enforce the fourteenth amendment and its provision that "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges of citizens of the United States ..... nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." We are aware that the process will be surrounded with difficulties, and be slow in execution, but it is the only legal remedy in the premises. There is no reason to hope for further enactment by Congress, (it will be governed by the Supreme Court decision) or for a new amendment of the constitution on the subject of citizenship at an early day. The colored people must educate, accumulate property, and ally their influence with the best interests of society, repudiate corrupt, would-be leaders, and work and pray unitedly to remove the sin of caste from the land.

The Holly Springs Reporter says that Gen. Clarke, president of the New Orleans and Chicago railroad, has interdicted the sale of vile literature on that road; and the Reporter asks the Mississippi legislature to pass laws prohibiting the sale of indecent papers within that State. In New Orleans, if members of churches and Christian associations would resolve not to purchase at news-stands where that class of literature is sold, the dealers would sooner be persuaded to yield to the dictates of right public sentiment on the subject.

Civil Rights

The recent decision of the United States Supreme Court declaring the Civil Rights Bill unconstitutional and void, continues to excite comment and indignation among all classes of our colored citizens and their friends. And well it might, for since the celebrated Dred Scott decision, when Chief Justice Taney announced that black men had no rights that white men were bound to respect, no decision of the court has had such sweeping and withering effect upon the rights of any class of citizens. The excitement over this decision is not due to any fears that the colored people are thereby entitled to any less civil and equal rights, to full and equal accommodations in hotels, inns, ladies cars or railway trains, and dress circles in theatres, etc., than before. In fact the principle involved is recognized in this decision, for in the Territories and in the District of Columbia the civil rights bill is declared to be valid. It is in the States that it is said to be unconstitutional, because it is held that the States are to settle such matters between their citizens and not the United States courts. This is not only a slap in the face to our colored citizens, but a clear triumph for the States rights heresies of Calhoun and Jeff. Davis; a judicial victory for the cause which was overpowered, but was not destroyed when Richmond fell. Justice Harlan reasoned well when dissenting from his eight colleagues he said, that in view of what he thought the people of this country wished to be accomplished, what they tried to accomplish and what they believed they had accomplished by means of this legistation, he expressed his dissent from the opinion of the court. His liberal construction in favor of human rights and freedom, in keeping with the temper of the nation when the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted, elevates Justice Harlan deservedly high in the opinion and grateful remembrance of the seven million colored people and their friends in this country. What mischief this recent decision will create can scarcely be overestimated. Already some of the representatives of the Bourbon press are advocating the adoption of star-cars, and separate coaches on steam railways for colored passengers. In Georgia U. S. Senator Brown, president of the State road of Georgia, and head of the new Georgia Railroad Syndicate, has given orders for separate coaches for colored people. In many parts of Texas and other States, strict separation based upon color has already been adopted. That the accommodation given colored passengers under such circumstances is always inferior to that given to whites need scarcely be mentioned. It is always self evident. View this recent decision in whatever light possible it shines out conspiciously as a States rights victory, which gives license and a premium to prejudice and crime against defenceless colored citizens. If the amendments to the Constitution are inadequate for the protection of all classes of citizens, it is in order to fight anew the battle of freedom and equal rights. For colored men to secure their civil rights from the States in the South is a delusion and a snare. Like helpless sheep in the keeping of wolves, they are thereby left to the tender mercy of their enemies. What though these rights existed under common law before the adoption of the civil rights bill? what though the U. S. Supreme Court has recognized their existence, will State courts in the South give justice to their colored citizens against the encroachments of prejudiced and evil disposed white men? Will these States that have virtually suppressed the colored voter, and that are now being ruled by an intolerant minority; will these people who have witnessed the constant lynching of colored citizens with perfect indifference, and many times apologizing therefor, render exact justice? When the fact is known that probably not a single white man has ever atoned for the hundreds of thousands of colored men murdered in the South since the war by white men, and scarcely a single Negro escapes summary vengeance for a drop of Caucasian blood he spills, any fair-minded man will agree that the case is a hopeless one for colored men to secure equal rights from the courts of the South. Why, in this very city, where fully a third of the population is colored, they have no representation on the school boards of the State or parish, and on the juries scarcely ever more than five or six out of a panel of ninety. No wonder our jails and penitentiaries are full of Negro convicts, and thousands of them are sold out yearly to build railroads in the South. The Negro question is not and should not be a dead issue in politics until he is as secure in his person and property as any other class of citizens. Where are the ghosts of Sumner, Ben. Wade, Garrison, Gilbert Haven and Matlack? Is tariff, temperance, as worthy as it is, and other minor issues to supercede that of human rights before these are secured? Are we the friends of equal rights and justice to sit idly by like dumb driven cattle, while seven millions of our fellow-citizens are thus left to the Shylock mercy of their enemies? Nay, let constant agitation in this line stir up the heart of the nation to deal justly with its most faithful defenders in the South. It is only the blindest folly that will say that the National Government is powerless in the premises. If the United States can demand the services and obedience of its citizens in any State, can cross State lines and drag citizens into its army, it can with equal propriety cross State lines to afford its citizens reciprocal protection which the State fails to give. The constitutional right which made every U. S. Marshal a blood-hound to capture slaves in the streets of Boston and return them to their master under the Fugitive Slave Act, protected the rights of property. Is Congress, under the Constitution, now less powerful in the protection of the rights of persons? Which is the more sacred of the two? It is barely possible that a friendly Congress might pass the proper and necessary law upon some other section of the Constitution. In the meantime let our people educate, amass wealth, and build up character, and, by their worth and integrity, invoke the considerate judgment of their fellow-citizens, and the gracious favor of Almighty God.

A.

Thorns.

Sometimes we come across a brother who is a member of the A. M. E. Church, who seems to regard that church as the only proper religious home for the colored man. There he is free from bossism, and there consecration to work and manhood are sure of their proper reward. But all is not glassy and soft with our brethren of that church. Read the following complaints Rev. J. W. Randolph of Austin, Texas, makes against Bishop Cain, in the Recorder who he says: "With no regard for law nor man before his eyes, his heart intent on inflicting punishment on me in the spirit of revenge. I was pastor at Brenham, without hinting his intention and certainly without giving me one moment's notice, transfered me from the West Texas to the Texas Conference, and assigned me to Huntsville. If this is the encouragement given to manhood and ministerial consecration in the African Methodist Episcopal Church; if Bishops are to use their office and influence, I should have said permitted to prevent the official authority, I pity her claim to the manhood she pretended to advocate. Bishop Cain, in the last General Conference, when in the very act preparing the way for his own election, cried out, "We are tired of Episcopal tyranny." I reminded him of this since he came to Texas. "Well," said he, "I wasn't bishop then; it makes all the difference in the world."

The Pope's Lament.

Few things are more absurd and surprising than the Pope's protest against the loss of the temporal power of the papacy. Twenty-two years ago a royal decree was promulgated by the Italian Government annexing the pontifical territory to the Kingdom of Italy. In Rome this decree was confirmed by the people by a vote of 4 ,785 for annexation to 46 against. In the entire pontifical State the vote stood 133,581 for annexation to 1,507 against it. These votes show a state of harmony that is rare and significant. This action of the people and the Italian Government has been constantly gathering strength though the Pope bitterly protests against it. In 1871 the Parliament of Italy passed a law granting the Pope an annual income of $600,000 besides a number of special privileges. Only two days expired before he issued a proclamation refusing the pension and liberties granted, and called upon the governments of the world to restore him to his former temporal power, but his call for aid met with no response. Pius IX, died lamenting his loss of temporal power. Pope Leo, his successor, seems to be equally as gloomy over the matter, and will doubtless go to his grave lamenting the loss of temporal authority, but nearly the whole world look upon this with the greatest complacency. Time has clearly shown the wisdom of that action by which the divorce of the Church and State were effected.

The Christian Observer (Presbyterian) recently published a statistical summary both of the Northern and Southern Presbyterian Church for the past ten years. The simple examination of last year's report is encouraging, but as compared with the work done two or three years ago, it reveals the startling fact that the church is falling behind. The average contributions per member to all purposes in the Northern Assembly in 1873 was $20.17; in 1883 it was $16.11 per member; a falling off of $4.00 per member. In the Southern Church the contributions in 1873 were $12 per member, in 1883 only $10. In their contributions to strictly benevolent work there is the same unfavorable showing. In 1873 the Northern started at $3.18 per member and sank to $2.72 per member, while the Southern Assembly started at $1.75 in 1873 and fell to $1.50 in 1883. It is worth while sometimes to study figures, they are full of significance. These figures show that the contributions of the Northern Presbyterians are full seventy per cent. larger per member for all benevolent purposes of the church than the Southern. We know it is said they are richer than the South, but we doubt this. We think that the Southern Presbyterians have as much if not more wealth per member than the Northern. In the conversion of people to God there is a similar falling off which indicates not only a decadence in activity of the church but a loss of real spiritual power. Our Presbyterian brethren know what to do to stay the decline. We believe that they have both sense and grace to use the means that will make 1884 the most prosperous year they have ever enjoyed.

For all Christian workers we cherish the heartiest sympathy and good will. Wd believe that Methodism has a peculiar mission, and that her ministers, itinerant and local, should be found in the front rank of those who are carrying the good news of salvation to the "lost sheep of the house of Israel." In this work the preacher in charge should lead, he should skillfully organize and plan, and put the local preachers, exhorters, the godly and zealous laymen at work. There is a call for an organized, aggressive movement on the part of our ministers, both itinerant and local, to reach the masses of men and women who now neglect nearly all the means of grace. Real earnestness is never quiet, but always devising means to attain its object, and will use or refuse methods according to their fitness for the work to be done. The months between this and conference should be months of earnest work. Every Christian should seek to become an effective and aggressive soldier, The work demands this, while the variety of the work to be done makes it possible. The Church needs the active exercise of all the various abilities with which God has endowed the members of the Body of Christ. There should be more earnestness, stronger and deeper intensity of feeling, leading on to vigorous and determined action to save men and enlarge the borders of Zion.

One of the most pitiful sights that we have recently witnessed was three Methodist preachers returning from a fishing expedition. They had spent nearly the whole day at the lake, but returned home with about as many fish as when they went to fishing, minus their baits. They went out thinking to return with such a draught of fish as to supply themselves, and even to share a few with the denizens of this office, but alas for human disappointment; they had none for themselves and about as many for the SOUTHWESTERN. The fish bit well enough, but the water on the lake was so rough our clerical fishermen became so miserably seasick that notwithstanding the order, "launch out into the deep," they returned to land to be restored to their former selves. The fish bit quite satisfactory, but those fiery Methodist preachers could not stand the water. So they had to turn back. It is a grand thing for those brethren's sake that the overland route to heaven is still open.

PERSONAL.

—Capt. Mayne Reid, the novelist, died in London, Oct. 20.

—Rev. D. A. McCready, pastor of Walton Methodist Episcopal Church, Pittsburg, dropped dead of heart disease at his home on Sunday night, Oct 20.

—Patrick Egan, the Irish agitator, and late Treasurer of the Irish Land League, filed in the District Court his intention of becoming an American citizen. He will locate and engage in buying corn in Lincoln, Nebraska.

—Mrs. Mary D. James, a writer of religious verse, died at the residence of Mrs. Dr. Palmer, in New York City, Oct. 4th, aged 73. She was a sister of the late Edmund J. Yard, and her latest literary work was the compilation of her brother's biography, under the title, "The Soul Winner."

—Rev. W. H. Daniel compiler of a "Popular History of Methodism" has been transferred from the Rock River to the New England Conference. "To go" says Zion's Herald "wherever the cabinet esteem his services most needed." We had supposed that was a uniform rule in our Zion.

—John T. Gunn, Esq, a member of our church in Lexington Ky., called to see us last Friday. Bro. Gunn was passing through to the town of Plaquemine, Iberville parish, where he has business interests to look after. He speaks encouragingly of the prospects of our church in Kentucky. Earnest loving and patient workers, are sure to win the day, and take the State for God and Methodism.

—In a private note Rev. L. Bradford, former presiding elder of the Holly Springs district, Mississippi conference, says, "I have been transferred to the N. W. Iowa Conference and taken work at Elk Point, Dakota. The work is developing wonderfully in this territory. Towns of two and three thousand spring up as by magic. Methodism is making vigorous efforts to keep pace with the multitudes who are coming here. I have lost none of my interest in our Southern work. May God bless you in your field of labor." No doubt Bro. Bradford will be heartily received by the brethren of Iowa conference, and will become a welcome addition to our corps of efficient laborers in the great Northwest.

—Rev. T. Kennedy one of the old members of the Louisiana Conference now stationed at La Harp Street New Orleans, is confined at his home with but little prospect of recovery. Sabbath 21st inst. Bro. Kennedy preached with his usual strength and acceptability, went home and retired to rest. About one o'clock in the morning he awoke, and complained of feeling unwell. Sister Kennedy instantly arose to do what she could to releave him, his symptoms grew worse, and he was soon smitten with a paralytic stroke. The good man still lingers, can speak but a few words, recognizes his friends, and gives assurances that his hope in Christ is well founded.

—Gen James B. Steedman died at Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 18th. He was born in Northumberland County, Penn., in 1818, removed to Henry County, Ohio, when about twenty-one, and was afterward contractor on the Wabash and Erie Canal, member of the State Legislature for two terms, and member of the State Board of Public Works. In 1857 he was appointed public printer at Washington. He went into the war at its outset as colonel of the Fourteenth Ohio, and his military career was a brilliant one. At the close of the war he held the rank of major-general of volunteers. Since the war he was provisional governor of Georgia, collector of internal revenue at New Orleans, member of the Ohio Constitutional Convention, and State Senator. At the time of his death he was chief of the Toledo police force.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

H. J. Wright, Natchitoche: "Our fourth quarterly conference was held Oct. 12th, "Elder Duncan in the chair, 21 out of 25 members present. Reports showed some progress of the work. Bro. Geo. W. Duncan was elected Lay delegate. The conference was interesting; a large congregation in attendance. Paid the Pastor $216.20. Trustees $82.00. Stewards $42.25. Paid Elder $50.00. The superintendent made his report which was very satisfactory; teachers 9, scholars 90, average attendance 59; visitors 48; collections to date $31.55. We have paid $14.35 that was due on the organ. 87 partook of the sacrament Sunday night. We wound up Sunday night with a love feast long to be remembered. This people bear a Christian warmth for Elder Duncan. I pray God's blessing upon him and his family."

Rev. T. J. Johnson, Camp Parapet: "Our third quarterly meetings was a season of pleasure and profit. The star of hope never shone brighter at Camp Parapet. Our people are full of courage. During the quarter a nice bell tower has been placed upon the church, and paid for. As one of the results of a recent protracted effort 24 have been received on probation. Among the converts are two Roman Catholics. The financial report of the classes was as follows: No. 1, $10.40; No. 2, $24.55; No. 3, $45,05; No. 4, $18.85; No. 2, $25.05; No. 6, a class recently formed, $1.35. The Stewards had collected $197.55. All of the current expenses are promptly met. At Kenner a lot has been secured, lumber bought and on the ground for a church which we propose to erect and have ready for dedication early in December. Taking it all together the year thus far has been one of prosperity. The Lord has heard my prayers and blessed my effort and he shall have the praise. I desire to express my gratitude to my brethren and sisters for their kindness to me."

The completion of the New Orleans and Northeastern road makes the Cincinnati Southern the shortest route to New Orleans by ninety six miles. The distance is 825 miles.

The steamer Rio Janeiro, from San Francisco for Hong Kong carried away about 1000 Chinamen and about $750,000 which they carry off with them out of the country. More than 800 of them have been already provided with return certificates.

A Detective's Experience.

His Successful Undertaking and Escape from an Impending Fate.

(Buffalo, N. Y. News.)

One morning several years ago, just as the dull gray light was beginning to show itself in the east, a small band of men might have been seen deployed about a house on Ferry street, in Buffalo. There was nothing special either in the dress or appearance of the men to indicate their intention, but it was plain that they had business of importance on hand. Suddenly a man appeared at one of the windows, took in the situation at a glance, and, swinging himself outward with wonderful quickness, scaled the roof of the house. This man was Tom Ballard, the notorious counterfeiter; and, armed to the teeth and fully realizing his situation, he defied justice and the officials below him. Some of the officers, knowing the desperate character of the man, proposed to shoot him until he was killed, but one of the number promptly protested, and declared that if his brother officers would assist him so ascend he would capture the man alive. Accordingly he began the difficult and dangerous task, and succeeded in bringing his prisoner to the ground of safety.

The man who accomplished this task was Mr. Thomas Curtin, the present superintendent of city police of Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Curtin is a man who is known by every prominent detective and policeman in America, and he stands pre-eminently in the front rank of his profession. Quiet and gentlemanly in appearance and manners, he possesses a courage, combined with marked physical powers, that make him the terror of evil-doers and the pride of law-abiding citizens. Few people can realize, however, the trials, exposures, and even privations, to which the members of every municipal police and fire department are exposed. Compelled to be on duty at uncertain hours, subjected to the most inclement weather, and often necessitated by the nature of their duties to protracted undertakings, they endure a nervous and physical strain that is terrible. Such was the experience of Mr. Curtin in former days; and it is not surprising that he found himself suffering from a mysterious physical trouble. In relating his experience to a representative of this paper he said:

"At times when I was on duty I would feel an unaccountable weariness and lack of energy. My appetite was also uncertain and my head seemed dull and heavy. I did not fully understand these troubles, but supposed, as most people suppose, that I was suffering from malaria. I tried to throw off the feeling, but it would not go. I thought I might overcome it, but found I was mistaken, and I finally became so badly off that it was almost impossible to attend to my duties. I have known any number of men in the police and fire departments of this country who have been afflicted as I was, and I doubt not there are to-day hundreds similarly troubled who, like myself, did not know the cause, or really what ailed them."

"Your present appearance, Mr. Curtin, does not indicate much physical debility," said the interviewer as he looked at the 220 pounds of bone and muscle standing nearly five feet eleven inches in height before him.

"Oh, no; that is altogether a thing of the past, and I am happy to say that for more than a year I have enjoyed almost perfect health, although I now realize that I was on the road to certain death by Bright's disease of the kidneys and traveling at a very rapid pace."

"How did you come to recover so completely?"

"That is just what I want to tell you, for I believe it may be of great service to many others in my profession, who may possibly hear of it. I began the use of a popular remedy at the earnest solicitation of a number of friends in this city, and found to my great gratification that I began feeling better. This feeling continued and I gained in strength and vigor until now I am perfectly well—and wholly through the instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure which I believe to be the best medicine for policemen, firemen, railroad men or any other class of people exposed to danger or a change of weather, ever discovered. Since my recovery I have recommended it everywhere, and never knew a case where it failed either to cure or benefit. I would not be without it under any consideration, and I am positive it is a wonderfully valuable and at the same time entirely harmless remedy. Indeed, I see that Dr. Gunn, dean of the United States medical College of New York, indorses it in the highest terms."

"So you experience little difficulty in the execution of your duties now, Mr. Curtin, do you?"

"None whatever. Our department was never in better condition than at present."

"And do you never have any fear of some of the desperadoes whom you have been the means of bringing to justice?"

"Not in the least. Some men do not try to retaliate, partly because they have not the courage, but oftener because they respect an officer who does his duty."

The policemen, firemen, letter-carriers and other public employes in this country have a particularly trying life. When, therefore, a simple and pure remedy that can restore and sustain the health of all such men is found, it should be cause for great congratulation, especially when recommended by such a man as Superintendent Thomas Curtin of Buffalo.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER. LESSON V. Nov. 4th. SAMUEL'S FAREWELL ADDRESS. (1 Sam. xii, 13-25.

Israel wanted a king and you know God gave them their way. When Saul was made king. Samuel called all the people together and talked to them as a dear, loving old father would talk to his children. He told them they had known him from a child until an old, gray-headed man. They knew how he had served God, and now he asks them if he had ever done wrong to any of them. Every one cried out No, no. Every one knew the gray-headed old man was God's servant, and all loved him. Samuel talked to them of their sin in asking a king. The old man told them how wonderfully God had saved their fathers and led them by day and night, and through the sea in safety. Then he told them to remember that God always punished his people when they forgot his laws and sinned. They knew it all, and yet wanted a king. Samuel was old, would soon leave them forever, and he wanted them to know God was displeased to know they wanted a king. Samuel asked God to send a sign from heaven so they could see and feel it. It was harvest time, and in that country there is very seldom a drop of rain at this time, but when Samuel asked God in prayer a dreadful storm came. It was so strong a thing at the time of the year, they knew God had answered Samuel and the thunder and rain made them afraid, and they called on God for help. Samuel told them God had not forsaken them. God is just the same to-day as then. He loves us all. Jesus, his Son, died for us all. If we love and follow him, all the beautiful promises in his Word are ours. Ask Jesus to keep you his forever.—Western.

AN ONLY DAUGHTER CURED OF CONSUMPTION.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidently made a prepation which cured his only child of Consumption. His child is now in this country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that Consumption can be positively and permanently cured. The Doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two 2-cent stamps to pay expenses. This Herb also cures Night Sweats, Nausea at the Stomach and will break up a fresh Cold in 24 hours. Address Craddock & Co. 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, naming this paper.

Then make a sauce by putting a tablespoonful of butter into a saucepan, and when it bubbles up stir in a tablespoonful of flour. When cooked season and add half a pint of stock and half a pint of boiling cream and the celery cut in small pieces. Let it boil up one minute. Serve hot. The sauce can be made without the cream and celery with a pint of boiling stock and the addition of two or three beaten yolks of eggs, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, pepper and salt.

In an able paper upon "Health: How Acquired and How Preserved," read before the West Virginia Medical Society, Dr. Frissel, of Wheeling, says: "I regard alcohol as the greatest agent of destruction, both to body and mind, that was ever introduced into society since the creation of man." And he refers to the use of tobacco as an evil only less in magnitude than that of alcohol," adding: "It was never intended by the Creator to be used in a state of health any more than arsenic, mercury, prussic acid, or any other poison."

TO COOK BEEFSTEAK.—Cut in thick slices and pound almost to fragments; put a small piece of butter into a frying pan and carefully lay the meat, peppered and salted, into it; as it browns add water every few minutes—a few teaspoonfuls at a time; turn often, but do not put a cover on it, and do not let it scorch; when done dredge with flour; turn it over and add a little sweet cream, thin with water until the gravy is of the proper consistency; strew over with parsley, and send to the table very hot. Generally speaking, our meat is the poorest cooked dish that is served at our tables; so much watchful care and attention are required to prepare it properly.

BREAKFAST OR LUNCH DISH.—An excellent way of using up the odds and ends of steaks, roasts, chops, or any bits of cold meat, is to cut the meat from the bones omitting the gristle and fat if desired. Chop as fine as if for mince meat, place in a pan, cover with water, adding frequently if it dries; let it simmer or gently boil for two hours, season with salt and pepper; toast to a delicate brown any bread you may have, stale or fresh, and when spread in single layers over your meat tray, pour meat and gravy over the toast, or you can send to the table without adding the bread.

TAM O'SHANTER CAP.—Cast on six stitches, and crochet round these stitches a flat piece, widening at intervals to insure this, and until this head piece is as large as you may desire it, when crochet one round without increasing. Crochet the succeeding rows diminishing in the same proportion as you increased, and work the head band with either increasing or decreasing, taking the stitches through both edges of the loop. Nine or ten rows will be sufficient for this band. It should be crocheted tighter than the other part of the cap.

General Butler assures the colored man that he loves him. The whole Democratic party loves him well enough to want his vote. When the colored men of America lose all memory of the past they will be in a condition to reciprocate that affection. The party which during all the years of its existence, has tested in the bodies and starved the souls of the colored race is not in a good condition to argue.—Inter Ocean.

Summing Up the Results of a Year's Treatment.

"A lady patient in Lockport, N. Y., thus sums up the results of a year's Compound Oxygen Treatment: 'It is now a year since I commenced using the Oxygen, and I can readily sum up the good results of the treatment. It is hardly too much to say that I am infinitely better. I am stronger in every way and rarely suffer ... the utter exhaustion which was my usual condition before. I cannot remember the time when I have been so free from headache as during the past year. My physician rejoices in my improvement and assures me that I am going to get well.'" Our Treatise on Compound Oxygen, containing a history of the discovery and mode of action of this remarkable curative agent, and a large record of surprising cures in Consumption, Catarrh, Neuralgia, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., and a wide range of chronic diseases, will be sent free. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 and 1111 Girard street, Philadelphia.

"A little boy in one of the city German schools, while engaged in the delightful exercise of defining words, a few weeks since, made a mistake which was not at all a mistake. He said: "A demagogue is a vessel that holds beer, wine, gin, whiskey, or any other intoxicating liquor." He was probably thinking of demijohn, but he hit the truth just the same.

Enough.

God holds the key of all unknown,
And I am glad:
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if He trusted it to me,
I might be sad.

I cannot read his future plan:
But this I know,
I have the smiling of His face,
And all the refuge of His grace,

Enough; this covers all my want,
And so I rest;
For what I cannot He can see,
And in His care I sure shall be Forever blest.

Summerfield M. E. Church, Milwaukee, has had a term of great prosperity under the pastoral care of Rev. J. E. Gilbert. During the three years 125 have been received on probation and 128 by letter, a total of 253. Nearly seventy have come from other denominations. The Sunday-school has increased nearly threefold. During the term $17,500 has been raised—for current expenses, $11,500; for benevolences, $5,000; for improvements, $1,000. The benevolences have steadily advanced each year, aggregating for the last year the sum of $2,200. The property is in excellent repair, entirely free from debt. It may hereafter be properly classed among the best charges of the northwest. Mr. Gilbert has been transferred to the Michigan Conference and stationed at Grand Rapids.—Northwestern.

"I wish that I had some good friends to help me on in life!" cried lazy Dennis. "Good friends! Why, you have ten," replied his master. "I'm sure I haven't half so many; and those I have are too poor to help me." "Count your fingers, my boy," said his master. Dennis looked down at his strong hands. "Count thumbs and all," added the master. "I have—there are ten," said the lad. "Then never say you have not ten good friends able to help you in life. Try what those true friends can do before you go to grumbling and fretting because you do not get help from others. Better than all, God always helps the ready hand. God helps those who help themselves."

Central America is destined to come with Mexico into greater prominence. Merida, the capital of Yucatan, is already connected with Progreso, the principal seaport of the State, by a broad-gauge, steel track road, said to be well built, equipped and managed. A railroad is being built to Peto, 125 miles south of the capital, with branches to Tekax and Ticul. Another is to be built to Progreso, via Conkal, with a main branch to Valladolid, 150 miles east of the capital.

The only protection the Methodist Episcopal Church has from hasty and unwise legislation, is the character of the men it sends to the General Conference. Their sound, practical judgment, their devotion and loyalty to the Church, are its only safeguards. The elections that have been going on, and will go on, are of importance to every Methodist. Not all the able and good men can be sent, but all that are sent should be good and able. —N. Y. Advocate.

At a microscopic exhibition in Boston lately, the sting of a honey bee was thrown upon the screen, the point of which was so sharp as to be hardly distinguishable. At the same time the finest of fine needles was shown under the same power of the microscope, and the end of the needle measured five inches across. Said the exhibitor, "God can make a fine point, but man cannot."

A good deal of the humor is just in the shrewd simplicity of a reply. A London tourist met a young woman going to the kirk; and as was not unusual, she was carrying her boots in her hand, and trudging along barefoot. "My girl," said he, "is it customary for all the people in these parts to go barefoot?" "Pairtly they do," said the girl, "and pairtly they mind their own business."

The coming holidays will be more generally observed than any for many years, and we would remind our readers that a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will prove a most acceptable present.

What is Exempt from Taxes in Mississippi.

The law of the State exempts from taxation all wearing apparel, all provisions for family consumption, all farm produce in the hands of the producer, one gun, all poultry, all household furniture not exceeding in value $260, two cows and calves, ten head of hogs, ten head of sheep or goats, colts under three years of age, all farming utensils, which may include cotton gin $[illegible], cotton press $125, sorghum mill, evaporating pan $30, threshing machine $125, mower $30, horse rake $25, straw cutter $7, corn sheller $7, cider mill $25, plantation corn mill $60, wheat fan $15, harrow plows, hoes, pitchforks, running gear gin, harness for plow and team, stock, etc., all of which are extensively used—an average of at least $50 worth of which is to be found on every plantation—and including the steam engines, boiler and fixtures for ginning (found on many farms), the tools of all mechanics, the libraries of all persons, all pictures and works of art not kept as merchandise, all school property, cemetery property, fair association property, church property, and all property belonging to towns, counties or State.

The policy of the United States in regard to the Mormons and Mormonism is both feeble and inconsistent. The purpose of the government, when it can be said to manifest a purpose, is to abolish polygamy—that particular feature in which Mormonism differs from all other modern forms of society or social institutions, in civilized lands. We say "forms of society or social institutions," because while polygamy receives the sanction of the so-called Mormon religion—which is essentially beastly and devilish—it is in its very nature something which pertains to society, to social life, to the physical and social condition of the people, rather than to the sphere of religion, exclusively or chiefly, as the Mormon leaders claim. Polygamy, if a crime at all, is a crime against society, against the state; and it follows, therefore, that all who participate in it or abet it are enemies of good order, of the state. They are, in fact, rebels. The people who are under the control of such enemies—though they may not all be equally culpable—are not fitted for self-government, for the management of municipal or other civil affairs.—Western.

"And education? Is there any satisfactory progress in Alabama?" "The education of the masses is being carried on in a make-believe slip-shod way. Illiteracy, according to the last census and our own observation, is increasing. Democracy, in the South at least, has always opposed public education. With all their pretensions towards education, it is my honest conviction that the Bourbons are opposed to public schools, and, in private conversation, some of them do not hesitate to say so. The recent speeches of Dr. Haygood, of Georgia, at Chautauqua, in the cause of education at the South, have called forth bitterly condemnatory articles from the Bourbon press of Alabama, in which he is stigmatized as an ecclesiastical beggar, mad saint, and other hard nicknames.— Winfield S. Bird, in National Republican.

One of the lay delegates to the Wisconsin Conference was ninety-five years old. He seemed scarce eighty. Plantation Melodies
—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. E. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition; Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed and are now given for the first time, in the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy. "These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—*Rev. Bishop Warren of the Methodist Church is enthusiastic over American progress. He proudly declares that our country is one that in a hundred years has taken a respectable rank in literature; that has made fourteen inventions, which have gone wherever civilization has gone, while all the rest of the world have not made half that number of equal importance; that has revolutionized land warfare once and naval warfare twice; that has solved social problems which the world has blundered over for ages: that has abolished feudalism and serfdom; that, taking the Bible declaration that God has made of one blood all the nations, has made one family out of representatives of every kindred and tongue and people and nation; that has founded its institutions on the rights of man and the laws of God; and that has already driven a wedge of republicanism nearly to the heart of Europe.—*N. A Swedish farmer had a pretty daughter, with whom his hired man fell in love. The old man refusing him, he determined to emigrate to the United States. The old man, unable to persuade him to stay, went to the steamship to see him off. He offered to help him carry his big blue box on the steamer. "It is pretty heavy," said the old man. "It will be lighter before it gets to America," said the young man. And so it was—the same minute—for the bottom gave way and out rolled the pretty daughter. She blushed and explained, and the upshot was that her father promised the young fellow that if he would come back with some money in his pockets within two years he should marry the young woman.

The wealth of heaven never perishes, never departs, never ceases, never brings with it care or envy or blame, destroys not the body, corrupts not the soul, is without ill-will, heaps not up malice; all which things attend on earthly wealth. That honor lifts not men into folly, doth not make them puffed up, never ceases nor is dimmed. Again, the rest and delight of heaven endureth continually, ever being immovable and immortal, one cannot find its end or limit. Nothing which comes to an end is much to be desired; whatever ceases, and to-day is and to-morrow is not, though it is very great, yet it seemes little and contemptible. Then let us not cling to fleeting things which slip away and depart, but to those which are enduring and immovable.—St. Chrysostom.

The Sun.
NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read THE SUN during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read and like THE SUN for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.

Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs THE SUN makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. THE SUN has absolutely no purposes to serve save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that THE SUN is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.

Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robesonism and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, THE SUN stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interests of the people against the ambition of bosses, the encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that THE SUN is the best religious newspaper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party, and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worthy of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of THE SUN discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to his individual liking.

If you already know THE SUN, you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. A WONDERFUL ... d
SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.
These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you used them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore eyesight ... time, but ... can the eye become impaired by their use, for the following reasons:
1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that disagreeable sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eyes.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.
MEDICATED GLASSES are ... the name H. ROEHL, Medicated ... NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

Over the door of a small frame building in which a colored family is living, in Greenville, Tenn., is a pine board on which is the legend, now almost erased by rain and storm, "A. Johnson, Tailor." A little beyond the western border of the town is a marble monument that marks the last home of "Andrew Johnson, President of the United States."

In Baton Rouge, says Truth, there resides an old negro named Noel Peter or Pedro, who claims to be over one hundred years of age, who has had an eventful career, and been the witness of many stirring episodes. In early life he was a slave and servant of Don Carlos De Grandpre, the Spanish Governor of West Florida, and accompanied the Spanish troops as the body-servant of his young master to and fro between Pensacola, Mobile, and the Fort at this place. He was in the service of Don Louis De Grandpre, son of the Governor, and Commander of the Spanish forces, at the time of the capture of the Baton Rouge Fort by filibusters under Gen. Philemon Thomas, at which time his young master was killed.

We desire to call the attention of our readers to the card of Seardon and Wilson. We know of no more enterprising and capable merchant grocers. They do a large business because they insist upon giving their customers their full money's worth of whatever goods they buy. We buy our groceries of them.

Republicans have nominated Judge Chas. C. Pool, for Congress, first district of North Carolina.

To any of our readers desiring to purchase clothing, we commend Wm. H. [illegible] whose card is in the SOUTHWESTERN. He keeps a heavy stock of all kinds of men's and children's clothing, and offers splendid bargains. It is a fact that he gives "liberal discounts to clergymen."

NEW BOOKS.

The Sun: its Constitution; its Phenomena; its Condition. By NATHAN T. CARR, L. L. D., Judge of the Ninth Judical Circuit of Indiana. J. Fitzgerald, Publisher, 20 Lafayette Place, New York. Price, post free, 15 cents.

The chief results of Solar Research are ably presented and popularly explained in this little work. But its author is not only a clear expositor of the views of others; he offers an original and consistent theory of Solar Physics, which appears to reconcile many of the conflicting theories and observations of astronomers. For sale by newsdealers.

LIFE IN NATURE. By JAMES HINTON. No. 48 of the "Library of Science." Price 15c. S. Fitzgerald, Publisher, 20 Lafayette Place, New York.

A most original acute, remarkable book. It is calculated to meet in a certain measure the mental requirements of an important class of readers, whom various modern writers have stimulated into a sense of the mysteriousness of Life, and into a desire for some sort of solution of its multitudinous problems. For sale by newsdealers.

COPP'S U. S. SALARY LIST AND CIVIL SERVICE RULES. Solid information is contained in the 160 pages of this recently issued book. It is prepared by Henry N. Copp, a lawyer of Washington, D. C. All the Government salaries are given from President Arthur's $50,000 to postmasters with $500, officials of the Treasury, Interior, War and Navy Departments, Custom Houses, post offices, and fully 20,000 federal offices arranged by States and Territories. Specimen examination question for admittance to the Civil Service throughout the country are added. The price of the book is only 35 cents. Every citizen who expects his Senator or Representative to offer him a government position, by possessing this manual can decide at once whether to accept or decline the offer.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Popular Science Monthly for November gives much of its space and several of its stronger papers to the consideration of educational topics. The question of the value of classical studies, which is creating such a stir in the colleges, is treated from different points of view by Professor Cooke, of Harvard College, and by the editor. Professor Cooke, maintains the position, which it will be hard to controvert, that while the sciences are of the greatest importance and should be given an advanced position, there is good, though not all good, in the classics, and they should not be neglected. The editor reviews President Porter's reply to Mr. Adams's address, and sets against his assertion of the high value of classical studies the adverse testimony of such teachers as President Barnard, Professor Blackie, and Dr. Farrar. Mr Joseph Carter argues for "The Utility of School-Recesses," Hygienic matters receive a lively stirring up, not only in Dr. Oswald's ("The Remedies of Nature") recommendation of an active life as a remedy for the alcohol-habit, but also in his trenchant answer to Dr Black's objections to the doctrine of Nature-cures. The Island of Ischia, which his suffered so severely from earthquakes, is described and its history related in an illustrated paper. New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

The North American Review for November, by the liveliness and worth of the articles satisfies the requirements of the most exacting reader Senator. H. B. Anthony writes of "Limited Suffrage in Rhode Island," the considerations which influenced its people in restricting the exercise of the electoral prerogative. Dr. Norvin Green, President of the Western Union Company, in "The Government and the Telegraph" cites the provisions of the Federal Constitution and the determinations of the Supreme Court weich appear to debar the General Government from assuming them anagement of the telegraph lines; and presents statistics designed to prove that the service in this country is cheaper and more efficient than in any of the countries of Europe where the governments own the lines. The Rev. David N. Utter brings out from oblivion the record of certain alleged atrocious crimes of "John Brown of Osawatomie." There are two scientific articles, "Solar Physics," by Professor Balfour Stewart, and "Modern Explosives" by Gen. John Newton. W. H. Mallock contributes "Conversations with a solitary" an imaginary passage-at-arms between a Radical and a Conservative, in which the two opposing theories of government and society are advocated with rare spirit and ingenuity of argument. In "Suggestions in regard to the Public Service," Green B. Raum offers certain facts going to prove that the clerks and other employes of the government departments at Washington, even before the passage of the Civil Service act, were in the main both faithful and efficient. Finally, "Dr. Hammond's Estimate of Woman", is reviewed by Mrs Lillie Devereux Blake, Miss Nina Morais, Mrs. Sara A. Underwood and Dr. Clemence S. Lozier. Fifty cents a copy, $5 a year. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, and sold by newsdealers generally.

Dio Lewis's Monthly has grown rapidly in public favor. The November issue will be of larger size and will contain an extra number of interesting papers. Rev. Dr Hopkins, President of the old Theological Seminary at Auburn, discourses on "The Wrongs and Rights of Doubting." Helen M. Loder criticises sharply Dr. Howard Crosby's paper in the October issue upon "Our Young Women," and Rev. Dr. Justin D. Fulton participates in the discussion. A Southern College President criticises "Dear Sir." The phenomena of Modern Spiritualism are discussed, and there are twenty other attractive articles.

The Pansy for October (Boston; D. Lathrop & Co), is at hand, full of good cheer for the little folks. Terms 75c per year.

The American Journalist (St. Louis, Mo.,) for October has articles on illustrated journalism, reporting in New York, Chicago journalism, and general notes of interest to professional writers. Price 25c.

Found in a Box.

MR. JOHN KINSMAN, of Augusta, Me., writes, May, 10, 1883, as follows. "I have been afflicted for some years with a severe kidney trouble, and having noticed an article in one of our papers of the wonderful cures Hunt's Remedy had performed in many cases of dropsy, bladder and kidney troubles, and finding a bottle in a box of straw packing, I concluded I would try it, and commenced to take it when, to my surprise, I found that the first bottle benefited me so much that I decided that I would continue its use, and I kept on taking it until I had used in all six bottles, and my appetite is good and all pains in the back and side disappeared, and for one of my years (I am now 80 years old) I am able to attend to my business, and am strong and vigorous as many of my friends and neighbors can testify that know me well. I beg to state also, that many of our neighbors have used Hunt's Remedy with equally as good results, and one of my friends who has just purchased a bottle of Guppy, Kinsman & Alden, of Portland, says he: "would not be without it at any price."

The Baker's Way.

Mr. Alfred Nabeau, No. 62 Lincoln street Lewiston, Me., writes us, May 14, 1883: "I have been severely afflicted for a long time with indigestion and liver complaint, and at times all that I ate so distressed me that I could not bear the sight of food. I had tried a good many different remedies for my complaint, and they all failed, until one day Mr. Martel, one of our druggists in Lewiston, recommended Hunt's Remedy, as he knew of so many who had used it here with great success for kidney, liver and urinary troubles, as well as indigestion, and upon his recommendation I finally concluded to try a bottle, and commenced taking, with very little faith in it. The first bottle helped me so much that I purchased two more, and it has done me a wonderful amount of good, and cured me of indigestion. I can eat all kinds of food now, and can truly recommend Hunt's Remedy as a sure cure for indigestion, liver and kidney diseases."

Practical Experience.

Mr. Geo. D. Bates, of No. 32 Cottage Street, Lewiston, Me., a reliable and prominent citizen, imparts the following information, May 14, 1883:—

"Having learned of the valuable qualities of Hunt's Remedy in a practical manner, I beg to state that I consider it a remedy of great merit, and can most cheerfully recommend it to any one troubled with kidney or liver diseases."

Editorial Notes.

In the State of Iowa there is a population of 1,624,615. There are published in that State 576 newspapers with an aggregate circulation of 567,340. In the States of Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana and Mississippi there is a population of 4,876,228. There are published in these four states 560 newspapers the aggregate circulation of which is 588,360. It is safe to say that the Iowa men and women read. A reading, intelligent community will always prefer a school house to a whisky shop.

The statistics of the West Texas Conference M. E. Church South show a membership of 8940. The number of Texas Christian Advocates taken 938. Only about nine and a half per cent of the membership take their church paper. It is a lamentable fact that many of our own members know but little as to the work of their church, because they do not take a church paper. Could the preachers induce them to take the SOUTHWESTERN it would give a new impulse to church work.

According to a recently prepared table by the Commissioner of Education, there are 4,154,125 men in the formerly slave States who are legally entitled to vote. Of this number, 1,392,457 are unable to even write their names. 400,563 of are whites, and 992,894 are colored. Such enormous figures, representing such a dark and threatening cloud of ignorance, should convince the church and the nation of their duty in the premises. It would be no act of charity on the part of the nation to bring its aid against the evil, but an act of self preservation. We must educate or perish for no republic can long subsist that does not rest upon the intelligence and morality of its citizens.

Rev. J. L. Stokes, Columbia, South Carolina, in the Christian Neighbor of September 18, says: "We are in the most illiterate section of the country as a white population. Our young men and maidens are under par as a rule from insufficient education." The African American Presbyterian says that school teachers in South Carolina receive from ten to twenty dollars per month; and that the school terms last from three to four months per year. Put these two statements together, and we have a strong argument in favor of Federal Aid for education. The duty of the hour, so far as it relates to the State or nation, is the education of our youth, without reference to race or color.

The Holston conference met in ninetieth annual session at Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 17. Bishop Bowman presiding. J. S. Hill was re-elected secretary. The statistics showed a large increase. Resolutions of sympathy and appreciation of Dr. Fuller were adopted. Drs. Stowe and Rust were present, and the anniversaries were conducted with much zeal.

What could be more unscrupulous and utterly unprincipled than the following expression of its party loyalty from the Greenwich (S. C.) News, Democrat: "Gen. Butler is the type of all that is mean, false, brutal and despicable, but if by any freak of insanity a Democratic convention should nominate him for President, we would support him, because this paper is Democratic and will always be loyal to its party."

Rev. Dr. Daniel Curry, in his article on "Evolution," in the Western Christian Advocate, says: "It is quite supposable that the Divine hand fashioned at once the complex creature man, in all his threefold being, and equally so that one after another the higher forms were superinduced upon the lower, and that our race is physically and psychologically the offspring of an irrational ancestry." Are we thereby to understand that the Doctor has become a virtual convert to Darwinism?

We have no desire to call in question the correctness of any word of Rev. J. W. Lee in his tribute to the late Dr. Fuller as published in the Northwestern of Oct. 31st. But we do think his reference to Dr. Buckley most unfortunate. We cannot see the least possible good to come from it. No heart is cheered, no wound healed by such utterances. Our wonder is that the genial editor of the Northwestern ever gave them a place in his columns.

The first conviction of Ku Klux has occurred in Georgia. In the Banks county cases, eight persons were found guilty on every indictment. The ring leaders are men of property and members of a large family in Banks county, named Yarbrough. The charge against them was that they committed outrages upon Negroes, for voting for Emory Speer, Republican, for Congress. Speer was defeated, and afterward appointed United States District Attorney. It fell to his lot to prosecute the Ku-klux, and he did so vigorously and successfully. Judge McCoy delivered a strong charge, and the jury promptly rendered its verdict to the dismay of the evil doers. One such conviction is with more than a thousand promises of protection to the Negro voters of Georgia, and should mark a new era for that State.

An exchange says: "While the Rev. Phillips Brooks was in Geneva, Switzerland, the congregations of the English and American Episcopal churches were anxious to have him preach to them, and he was quite willing to do so, but could not, because there wasn't a surplice or gown in the city large enough to fit him." Imagine Peter giving such an excuse to Cornelius; or Paul sending word to those of Macedon that he could not preach to them because no surplice or gown was available.

For The SOUTHWESTERN.

Unexpected Good.

It is astonishing how men miscalculate causes and their effects, and what imperfect judges they are of themselves. From some things which we apprehended evil, good has been the inevitable consequence, and from things we expected nothing but good. have come disappointment and grief. Men are often deceived in their judgment, especially when used to judge others. Knaves try to help themselves by pretending to help others. Many an idle knave, by means of a fine coat, a lily hand, and a graceful bow, has been received into the polite circles of society with eclat, and walked, roughshod, over a worthy young mechanic or farmer, who had too much good sense to make a dash, or imitate the monkey-shines of an itinerant dandy. All ranks and stations of men are followed by either success or failure unexpected. The farmers sometimes reap an abundant harvest from a crop they expected to be a perfect failure. When I came to this work I had a great many unpleasant things to bear, and everything but success seemed possible, but I came to succeed and was determined to fight it out on this line if it took all the year. Some of our good Baptist brothers said that every one that joined the Methodist Church was on the wrong road, and that the Methodist preachers were leading the people to hell. And I said to this, if all the people that were lead by Methodist preachers were turned into hell I thought there would need to be some enlargement made, for, hell was only prepared for the Devil and his and his angels; if these are facts the devil will have a great many angels, even more than his pro rata share. Thank God, notwithstanding all this we are able to report good success, unexpected to most of the members of our society. We have succeeded in paying the debt on our old church property, and built another neat little church and had it ready for our third quarterly conference. Have had 22 accessions, and received into full membership 7, making a grand total of 29 accessions to the church this conference year. Still our Baptist brothers say a Methodist preacher cannot succeed. They remind me of two men who went out to hunt, and the dogs ran a raccoon up a tree; one concluded to climb the tree and shake the coon out while the other was to stand on the ground to have the dogs catch it. He had not gone very high before he fell back to the ground, when the other hollowed to the dogs, "Sic, sic; take him, fellows!" and the dogs sprang on him. He cried out, "Oh, ah; take them off!" So it is with these fellows, but we Methodists hold the tighter and shake the harder; thanking God all the time for the victory. Very truly,

A. L. RICHARDSON.

Conway Ark, Oct. 30, 1883.

A negro man in Austin, Texas, who found a linen envelope containing $2,660 in currency, checks, and other valuables, spent several hours hunting up the owner, and was rewarded with a fifty-cent piece having a hole in it.

The religious bodies expended in 1881 the sum of $139,440 for education and missions among the Indians.

The Civil Rights Decision.

Those who assume that the status of the Negro has been changed an inch; or that he has been divested of a single right by the recent civil rights decision, are very much mistaken. He is as free as any other citizen, and is entitled to every right that every other citizen is entitled to. The fourteenth amendment says: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States." The effect of the Supreme Court decision was simply to send the citizen to the State for redress of any invasion of his individual rights; then if the State by its legislative, executive, judicial or other action, under its authority, abridges "the privileges or immunities of its citizens," the remedy is to be found in the fourteenth amendment and the corrective legislation which Congress has adopted or may adopt for counteracting the effect of State legislation or State action prohibited by the fourteenth amendment.

A careful reading of the following extracts, from the opinion of the Court, as delivered by Justice Bradley, will be of interest, and will show that the rights of no class of citizens has been thereby curtailed, but that it only makes the State the protector of all civil rights, and that if the State denies their rights the corrective acts of Congress may be appealed to.

Justice Bradley said:

It is State action of a particular character that is prohibited. Individual invasion of individual rights is not the subject of the amendment; it has a deeper and broader scope; it nullifies and makes void all State legislation and State action of every kind which impairs the privileges of all citizens of the United States, or which injures them in life, liberty or property, without due process of law, or which denies to any of them equal protection of the laws. It not only does this, but in order that the national will thus declared may not be mere brutum fulmen, the last section of the amendment invests Congress with the power to enforce it by appropriate legislation. * * * *

It does not invest Congress with the power to legislate upon subjects which are within the domain of State legislation, but to provide the mode of relief against State legislation, or State action of the kind referred to, until some State law has been passed, or some State action through its officers or agents has been taken, adverse to the rights of citizens, ought to be protected by the fourteenth amendment. No legislation of the United States under said amendment, nor any proceeding under such legislation can be called into activity, for the prohibitions of the amendment are against State laws and acts, done under State authority.

Further on he said:

It is proper to state that civil rights, such as are guaranteed by the Constitution against State aggression, cannot be impaired by the wrongful acts of individuals, unsupported by State authority in the shape of laws, customs or judicial or executive proceedings. A wrongful act of an individual, unsupported by any such authority, is simply a private wrong or crime of that individual, an invasion of the rights of the injured party. It is true, whether they affect his person, his property or his reputation; but if not sanctioned in some way by the State or not done under its authority, his rights remain in full force, and may presumably be vindicated by resort to the laws of the State for redress. An individual cannot deprive a man of his right to vote, to hold property, to buy and sell, to sue in the courts or to be a witness or juror. He may, by force or fraud, interfere with the enjoyment of this right in a particular case; he may commit an assault against the person, or commit murder, or use ruffian violence at the polls, or slander the good name of his fellow-citizen, but unless protected in these wrongful acts by the shield of the State law or State authority, he cannot destroy or injure the right. He will only render himself amenable to satisfaction or punishment, and amenable, therefore, to the laws of the State where wrongful acts are committed.

Again:

For violation of any right of a party, his redress is to be sought under the laws of the State, or if these are adverse to his rights, and do not protect him, his remedy will be found in the corrective legislation which Congress has adopted, or may adopt, for counteracting the effects of State or State action prohibited by the fourteenth amendment.

Inn-keepers and public carriers, by the law of all States, so far as we are aware, are bound to extend their facilities and to furnish proper accommodations to all unobjectionable persons who in good faith apply for them. If the laws themselves make any unjust discriminations, amenable to the prohibition of the fourteenth amendment, Congress has full power to afford a remedy under that amendment and in accordance with it.

The slave having been freed, and by the aid of beneficial legislation having shaken off the inseparable concomitants of that state, and having been made a citizen, the court further declared that "his rights as a citizen and a man are to be protected in the ordinary modes by which other men's rights are protected."

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

By the President of the United States of America a proclamation.

In furtherance of the custom of this people at the closing of each year to engage, upon a day set apart for that purpose, in special festival of praise to the Giver of all good, I, Chester A. Arthur President of the United States, do hereby designate Thursday, the 29th of November next, as a day of national thanksgiving. The year which is drawing to an end has been replete with evidences of divine goodness.

The prevalence of health, fullness of harvests, stability, peace, and order, growth of fraternal feeling, spread of intelligence and learning, continued enjoyment of civil and religious liberty, all these and countless other blessings are causes for reverent rejoicing.

I do, therefore, recommend that on the day above appointed the people rest from their accustomed labors, and meeting in their several places of worship, express devout gratitude to God, that he hath dealt so bountifull with this nation, and pray that his grace and favor abide with it forever.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR, President.
FRED T. FRELINGHUYSEN, Sec'y of State.

The Jewish Messenger says: "Every now and then one hears about the first railway in Palestine. This, however, is given as authentic—that such a railway is being laid out, the preliminary survey having been completed as far as the Jordan. It is to be run betwen Acre and Damascus, and to be called Hamidie line, after Sultan Abdul Hamid, who owns large tracts of property, through which it passes, to the east of the plain of Esdraelon."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

To the Preachers of the Austin District.

DEAR BRETHREN—The conference year is closing, the Bishop is on his way to Texas; soon the roll of the West Texas Conference will be called. One by one we will be required to report the year's work. What will your report be? Will it show an increase in every department of the work, or will it show an increase in membership and a decrease in benevolent collections? Please, for one time, come up with every dime that you are asked to raise; the amount is so small that you can get it if you try. Do not wait until the Sunday before you start to conference to ask the people for the money, for it may be a bad day.

Some of the brethren have about got all of their's now, while others have not got anything. Please do not come to conference with a poor month about the hard times. These are the best days that we ever saw. When you think about hard times look back twenty years to the time when we were almost in hell. Not one cent of the money we made was ours; and if God shut up the heavens that it did not rain to make cotton and corn to pay the debts in the fall, why, a Negro was sold. We had nothing; no, not so much as clothes for our nakedness, nor shoes for our feet. Those were hard times. Every day is ours now. All we make is ours. If we make nothing it is our own fault. God has put plenty in this world for all his people, and if we work and trust Him He will help us. Twenty years ago two boys and their father and mother, and myself, also a boy, made a living for our master and his family of seven or eight, and ourselves too. It is common now to see men who are able to make four or five hundred dollars a year, going half naked. Talk about hard times! The colored people have had no hard times since freedom, only in being killed and murdered for nothing.

Brethren, you know that our people do not give but little at a time, therefore you must call often. It is common to see a man worth from ten to fifteen thousand dollars give from five to twenty-five cents at a collection. Many of them contribute the large sum of five cents every three months for the elder and his family; his travelling expenses must be paid out of the same five cents. The people say they can't do this, and they can't do that. It is not so. You can do all things through Christ Jesus. Talk about a charge with 150 members that cannot raise $40 or $50 for benevolent purposes! A charge with 150 or 200 members can not pay a pastor more than $200 for a year's work; and out of this he must live, pay rent and travelling expenses! He preaches all the year on promises to pay up in the fall, and then men come up with one dime or twenty-five cents. It is a shame. Think of a district of 1500 members being asked to raise for missions $250—less than 16 cents per member—and then the preachers come to the annual conference without the money. Friends it will not do. The church is doing all she can for us, and we must do more for ourselves and for one another. The money must come The pastors must be paid better or some of them will have to give up the ministry. Their wives and children can not suffer much longer. Pastors please read this to the people. Your brother.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

H. J. Wright, Natchitoches: "Bro J. P. Calvin, a local preacher, has left us and joined the church at Robelene, under Rev. S. S. Wright. Thus we lose a good worker."

A. J. Pickett, Pleasant Hill: "We now have 40 scholars enrolled, and a night school for the old people. Anderson Daniel, aged 40 years, Henry Brantly, aged 60 years, Sister Frankie Brantly, aged 50 years, are in attendance trying to educate themselves. Sister P. Powell is doing much good for our people night and day, both young and old."

MISSISSIPPI.

J. G. Platt, West Point. "We have had a grand time this year in winning souls for the Lord. In our first protracted meeting we added 38 to the church. Rev. L. L. Shumpert, of Columbus, was with us, and preached some able sermons, for which we are thankful. In our second meeting 20 were added. Elder J. M. Shumpert was with us and rendered us much assistance. He was pleased with our progress. Rev. D. W. Culvert aided us also. I send you a money order to pay all my indebtedness. I think I can almost hear you say you wish all the Mississippi preachers would do the same."

TEXAS.

J. R. Carnes, San Antonio: "Our fourth quarterly conference was held on the 13th by Rev. M. Henson, P. E. The class leaders, stewards and trustees rendered their reports, which were very encouraging. The class leaders' reports showed that they are becoming more familiar with their duties as leaders; also the stewards report showed that the sum of $163.75 had been paid the presiding elder. The trustees report showed that there had been spent for improvement purposes the sum of $2,000. The Sunday school superintendent's report showed nine additions to the Sabbath schools; total number of scholars in school 198. Average attendance 142. On Sunday the Elder met the Sunday-school and gave us quite an interesting address. At 3 o'clock he preached one of those soul stirring sermons that made every Christian feel that the Lord was near. At night we had a sermon on the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Our house was crowded to overflowing. The sacrament was administered to 115 persons. Our love feast was a success. The Spirit of the Lord pervaded, and we were filled. Collection $3.65. Collection of presiding elder for the year $117. We are moving upon the King's highway. Pray for us."

TENNESSEE.

A. Burdett, Friendship: "I have been sick and came near dying at Bell Station, but I was able to get to district conference. Success has attended my efforts at all appointments. Converts are numbered as follows: Price Chapel 10, Mayzie Grove 2, Alice Grove 1, St. Peter 2. Bro. John Smith had 10 converts. Total 35. Many have died on this work this year and gone home."

G. W. Marsh, Lawrenceburg: "Fourth quarterly conference was held by Elder Price. Officers and committees presented written reports. The church is prospering, with a good Sunday-school. A new church was built and dedicated at West Point. During the year paid pastor $184.57; raised for missions $7.80; Freedmen's Aid 70c.; education 25c.; bishop $2.10; parsonage 55c. A Sunday-school institute was held. We had a glorious revival in the church; 12 were added, 5 on probation and 23 seekers were left at the altar. Pray that the Lord may bless them. Our pastor, J. F. Summerhill, is finishing up his third year."

A. Phillips, Murfreesboro: "Elder Key went North a few months ago to raise money for the benefit of our new church in Murfreesboro. He returned hon. Oct. 7th, looking well and cheerful. The elder raised money enough to bring our church out of debt. The good friends at the North gave the elder $800 for the benefit of our church, for which we feel very thankful. We poor colored people and poor white people of the South owe our gratitude to the good people of the North for their benevolence to us. The good people of the North have sent thousands of dollars to the South since the war to help the poor colored people and poor white people. The people of the South are catching the idea that the good people of the North are their friends and are falling in line with the North. Every day they are getting hold of Northern ideas, both eclesiastical and political. The bright day is coming."

ARKANSAS.

J. D. Johnson, Little Rock Circuit: "I went to work immediately after conference last February, and have been ever since. I attended school at Philander Smith College all last session, and kept up my work too. The good Lord has been with me this year, though I have been sick a great deal. I have had 6 conversions, 20 accessions to the church, and I have taken in one new point. I have built one church on a lot that a brother donated to the church. I have leased a lot on which we are building a house that will be very comfortable to worship in until we can purchase a lot at this place. This work was very cold when I came to it, but I am glad to say by God's help I have the whole circuit in a prosperous condition. I have entered school again and will keep up all regular appointments, and attend school also. Pray for us, brethren."

The Cause of the Colored People and its Present Demands.

BY MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

The Supreme Court of the United States, Justice Harlan dissenting, has decided the Civil Rights Bill unconstitutional. This declaration, if not approved, must be accepted by every one as final in the case until it assumes some new aspect. There is no appeal but to God and the enlightened and liberal sentiments of the people, white and colored alike. Whatever, therefore, is done must be of such a character as to retain all friends and enlist our foes in this cause. This decision, viewed from a political standpoint, is of a two-fold aspect: 1. Confirmatory; 2. Repellant. It confirms the oft repeated assertions of leading Democrats that these Congressional enactments were extra judicial, and not at all in harmony with the Constitution of the country. Such will doubtless hail their abrogation as a triumph for the old Democratic doctrine of State's rights. In this claim they will be right if the Court's decision is not wrong. The issue is made up now, but the nation must and will, in due time, pronounce an ultimate verdict upon it. Vox populi, vox dei. We must await and abide it when it comes. It is to be expected that this decision, operating as a repellant force, will drive many colored votes out of the Republican ranks. Those who take a narrow and superficial view of things, led on by impulsive "hot spurs," will fail to see any extenuating or redeeming features connected with it. The authors of the law were Republicans and the Court that decided it is of the same political faith. These colored people will with great difficulty be made to clearly understand how these men could consider the virtue of their action, and the trend of their doctrine so diversely. Democrats will probably avail themselves of any temporary advantage thus presented by this repellant aspect of the case to secure colored supporters in the Republican States. This may be of interest as a political consideration, but is otherwise immaterial to my present purpose. This decision of the Supreme Court leaves a narrow margin for the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution to stand upon. It may yet prove to be the Gibralter whence the foes of Negro manhood can rally their cohorts in solid opposition to the Thirteenth Amendment. Such an idea may at this time, provoke serious people to smile, but let them reflect a moment and it will occur to them that this last great edict would have seemed no less improbable a year or two since. Times move, and events thereto are mutable. It is in the Amendments that Negro citizenship has its "Magna Charta." The Constitution, without them, does not contemplate him as a citizen, to say the least that can be said. The Civil Rights Bill was designed by its illustrious founder to render the Amendments operative, which, after their ratification, became the Constitution itself. Now, if this Bill is not constitutional, the grounds of its unconstitutionality will be ultimately found to rest on the illegality of the amendments themselves. In that event the freedom of the Negro could not stand before the Courts. This trial many good men believe is yet to come. It has been freely declared that these Amendments were never legally adopted; certain ratifying States, it is said, were improperly represented; others changed their vote, that it is competent for others still at their option to do so, and finally that the Negro vote gave some States their majorities and that the Negroes in those States were not unquestionably legal voters by State enactment when they did so. Whether this class of argument is invincible or not is to be decided in the future. Still the truth remains and holds good that citizenship is only a mockery when the rights which make it real are at the mercy of every prejudicial or capricious person. A citizenship which can neither be fully maintained, legally defended or made respectable by law is falsely so called. It is in reality a shadowy sufferance; when citizenship is not clothed with the mighty panoply of surrounding legal safeguards it is simply and only toleration; it can be suspended at the will of any real citizen or terminated violently at the option of a senseless mob. It has been visible to all observers that since the war the freedman has had to contend with many perplexing anxieties as to the ultimate result of the efforts made to secure him the full fruits of his liberty. The great exodus to the West, the late Colored Men's Convention, and the constant clamor kept up by them for equality, echoes only the query of undecided men as to their fate. Politicians have not been slow to seize this unrest and apply it to political advantage. Before national elections they have been usually reminded that so uncertain was the tenure of their freedom that they must needs make sure the supremacy of the party which gave it to them. They have often been assured that should the scepter of power fall from Republican hands, and their old-time enemy, the Democrats, mount the throne, war legislation would probably be repealed. Now they behold these bulwarks erected to preserve Negro freedom tottering to their fall, while the Republicans who constructed them are still largely on duty. They do not understand it. Such a state of things does not calm the agitation in the freedman's breast. Nor is it to much purpose now to tell him his fears are in vain. The danger appears, and it will be feared though it cannot be evaded. There may be much philosophy, but there is certainly very little comfort in the axiom that "ills which cannot be cured must be endured." Slavery is dead, but the fear of its resurrection in some form serves still to alarm those who have once felt and still regard themselves as possible subjects of its voracious power. The leaders may with sincerity disavow any intent or wish to restore slavery, but the Democratic masses long for and believe it is coming sooner or later. They have hence opposed the Negro's advancement, and find great satisfaction in the prospect afforded by this decision. They are not all dead who question the legality of the Negro's vote except where it is sanctioned by State laws. Such stand ready to challenge and otherwise hinder him in the exercise of that and corelative functions. There are States North, East and West, where public sentiment is so strongly in favor of liberty that the damage directly resulting from this decision will be inconsiderable, but no man in his right senses either believes or will assert that this is true of the South as a whole. Indeed a colored traveler in Kentucky could note the difference in a week after the great declaration went forth as a law. The march of liberal ideas will be retarded in all the States, and American civilization will step backward a decade or more in the face of a wondering world. The cause of human rights will feel the shock everywhere. He cannot doubt this who remembers the history of the Dred Scott decision or the Fugitive Slave Law, and much similar adjudication and legislation in the time of slavery's power. The colored people are considering this with burning eyes and troubled hearts. They read a great deal, if not always wisely, and their occupation as servants gives them superior opportunities for observation. They know the issues of popular importance which agitate the country, and they are well informed as to the importance of this measure to themselves; and they are greatly concerned as to its final result. What course of conduct does the present condition of their cause demand of them? What possible action has the promise of immediate beneficial results? The first demand of them is certainly self-control, a dignified submission. The next the exertion of every appropriate effort, and the sacrifice of every personal consideration to arouse and turn public sentiment to their behalf. The question will be asked as to the manner of doing this. All will agree that it must be done. That eminent French patriot and humane scholar, Victor Hugo, once observed that "the American Negroes were in the anomalous situation of a people without patriotic leaders to guide them." This is not the case entirely. Our preachers have, in a good degree, supplied us with such leaders. They can be relied on in this crisis. Where they have remained true to their holy calling they have accomplished great and beneficient results. Many of them were allured away after political phantoms since the war, but failed in that field. Broken down preachers make very poor politicians on general principles. But our ministry has, of necessity, been a conservative force rather than a bold revolutionary class. Though their persecution has been severe and long continued, their voice has been almost unanimous for law, order and peace. They have been the right hand of planters and manufacturers in preserving amicable relations between employer and employe. Yet, in some instances, they have shown great recklessness and inconsideration of speech. Beyond these our leaders have been few and lacking in important qualifications to success. Our usual methods will not help us now, it is a great emergency and demands great effort. We have a penchant for the denunciatory style of expression, but we must not denounce the Supreme Court; it demands our reverence. We are apt to hold indignation meetings when undesirable things occur, but this will do our cause no good. We frequently utter great and imperious demands without power to execute them. This course has ever been a means of more fully exhibiting our impotence, and has never aided us; it should be avoided at this period. We cannot impress men favorably by declarations of independence, while we subsist largely on charity, and are actively seeking more of it, or while our occupations are, to a great degree, of the most menial sort. I take no pleasure in relating these things. I relate them because they are truths. It has been said that beggars must not be choosers. It will be to our profit if we remember this now. If we may speak to them I will ask what will colored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church do with reference to this matter? They are Americans at least by birth, and they are Americans in part by blood. They are directly interested, and should act. How? What should they do? Rather what is it they should not do? They should not in any way be identified with any denunciation of the Supreme Court. That Court may have acted conscientiously, and interpreted the Constitution fairly; it is possible that they did. It was not their business to consider results, but to construe an instrument of writing. They did not act in their character of philanthropists but according to their sworn duty as judges. It was not a court of equity but of law. As such their decision must be regarded as the logical result of the evidence produced, and they esteemed for their work sake. Common sense would restrain us from hastily condemning them as men, and as Methodists our souls forbid us to speak evil of magistrates or ministers. We cannot do so unless we propose to degrade and bring their sacred vocations into irreverence and popular contempt. Such a course would be revolutionary in its character; it would retard rather than advance our cause. There can be no offense or wrong grave enough to justify an evil and foolish speech. As a race it will injure us to do it. Such a course cannot give us the moral and material support of intelligent Christians. Without this we are sure to fail. If the wound is deep the surgeons should be all the more skillful. If the Court was guided by law and evidence we must follow the plain path of right Christian ethics, and obey it. If the opinion of the Court is erroneous it will ultimately fail at the bar of public judgment. Our paramount object being ultimate success as an end, our means to attain it must be righteous. If indignation meetings are held, we should either be absent or present to prevent hasty and injurious action. What good can such meetings hope to accomplish? Men indignate when they are angry and at such moments they are likely to sin. We must "be angry and sin not." "It requires a cool hammer to weld iron." If indignant we shall at such time be incapable of appropriate expressions, perhaps when we are cool we shall not desire to speak at all. Meetings for the purpose of reasoning together are not amiss, but they should be equally open to the white as the colored friends of liberty. There are many such who feel as keenly as ourselves the deep dishonor under which we are unconsciously and helplessly writhing. Our pastors are worthy of our confidence, and they should be consulted first in the matter. They should every where familiarize themselves with the question and lay it before each congregation in a calm, dispassionate manner. Every word uttered should be prayerfully considered, and the sermon as a whole thoughtfully prepared and carefully digested before its deliverance. If we should not indignate about it we should "take it to the Lord in prayer." If petitions and memorials are prepared it should be by the advice of persons learned in the law and of avowed friendship to the cause. Every step we take must be in deference to God's word, illustrated by His Spirit.

"Where no counsel is the people fall, but in the multitude of counsellors there is safety." Nothing should be undertaken in violence to our Christian character. Nothing in passion or in malice. We may have to suffer much inconvenience and not a little violence yet, but if we behave manfully, advance judiciously, and live Godly our cause will be directed in heaven, and we will be triumphant on earth in the end. "Let patience have her perfect work." "In due season we shall reap if we faint not." Nevertheless we must be "first pure and then peaceable."

Hard Places.

I read a letter from J. N. Simms in the SOUTHWESTERN, dated Oct. 4th, describing his work in St. Helena parish, where he works hard and receives poor pay and little appreciation, and he calls it a "hard place." Does he mean that he is in a hard place, or that the people are, for whom he is laboring? No doubt he enjoys having a plenty to do for the Savior. If he perseveres the Lord will be with him and take care of him, and he will grow stronger and nobler and trustier. There is nothing like trials and conflicts to develop character. Strength is never acquired by ease and comfort, and freedom from care and responsibility never brings happiness. It is hard to contend with ignorance. Many people seem to love the old ruts in which they are walking, and will not stop to inquire whether there is a better way. There seems to be a natural tendency in the human heart to be prejudiced against what it cannot understand. The more ignorant people are the more they fight the light. Not long since I heard of a neighborhood where they had built a schoolhouse and had employed a teacher, which were steps in the right direction, but unfortunately for the school the teacher gave his pupils a lecture on astronomy in which he told them that the earth was round and moved around the sun. This getting to the ears of the parents offended them, and instead of considering their own ignorance they made war upon the teacher and compelled him to leave. It is to be hoped that they have learned before this that the world does move in many ways, and if they have not moved in the right way they are in a place where the darkness is very dense. Such ignorant people are to be pitied for their persistence in keeping themselves in ignorance when so much light is within their reach. If they would only think! Thought has drawn the veil from many mysteries, and has done wonders for the world. When people think something is always going to be done in the way of rising higher.

There is a great deal of beauty and brightness and love in this world, but God has so arranged it that these must be sought. There is also much of ignorance and vice and the accompanying evils, but He in His great love for us has provided an antidote for ills in Himself. The nearer we approach to Him the more the light shines, and the intellect expands, and the heart grows loving, and selfishness is lost in a desire to live for Him, and "sorrow and sighing flee away." Many people have a desire to get rich rapidly. They give themselves no time for mental or spiritual improvement, and they grow narrow and selfish, and feel too poor to educate their children or help pay the preacher, or take a church paper, or contribute to any benevolent enterprise. It is possible to accumulate money and grow poor in many ways. It matters not how much of God's gifts one has, they cannot be enjoyed without a capacity is also obtained for enjoying them. Earthly treasures are desirable, and it is right to seek them, but they cannot satisfy the soul or build up a noble character. They are only helps. The richest treasures we have are in the heart, and they are the only ones that can be laid up in heaven. They are God's reward for doing His will.

It is a hard place where God is not acknowledged and enjoyed, and His laws obeyed. The Savior's yoke is easy, and His burden light. There is no easy place only at His feet, bearing His yoke and learning of Him. The way out of hard places is plainly taught in the Bible. Jesus said, "I am the way."

District Conference at Clifton.

Our district conference met at Clifton, Tenn., J. P. Price, presiding elder, in the chair. B. W. Mayfield was elected Secretary and Treasurer. Usual committees were appointed. Rev. D. Collier, of Martin Station, preached the opening sermon. Revs. J. F. R. Summerhill and G. C. Harden were present, and made themselves active in the conference, and the usages of the Discipline of the church. The following named brethren were licensed to preach: E. M. Wigfall, Dennis Briggs, Thomas Kelley and Jesse McDonald. The conference was one that will be long remembered by the people of Clifton and vicinity. Rev. D. Collier preached on Sabbath after the love feast, and St. James Church was dedicated. The sermon was a good one and suitable for the occasion. Our collection during the meeting for presiding elder was $12; for pastor $3.85; G. C. Hardin $1.00; for Church debt $6.30; for missions, from the church and Sunday-school, $3.75; Rev. D. Collier $2.75; total [illegible].

We, the members of the West Tennessee District and the Tennessee Conference, together in a subdistrict conference, at Clifton, Tenn., seeing the great need of an educated ministry, as well as the laity of the church; therefore be it

Resolved, That we recommend our young men and women to the Central Tennessee College, the Mason [illegible], and the Lawrenceburg School as the most suitable schools for those who desire a finished education. We also recommend the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE as one of the best papers of the Church, and bind ourselves in doing what we can in circulating it in every family. And that a man is not fit to fill the office of a local preacher or exhorter who does not take some religious paper, especially as Methodists.

We have a very good every day school here, taught by the writer. The elder and the several visitors called at the school and gave us words of cheer. The Sunday-school Institute that was here made the people wonder. I think, taken as a whole, it was one of the nicest little institutes that I ever witnessed, and we want the elder and the brethren to visit us with another soon.

Rev. J. F. R. Summerhill gave some brief hints on the Sunday-school work and how to keep them up in the winter. G. C. Hardin talked on who should attend, and how old a person should be before they got too old to attend; when the clods fall upon them at the graveyard.

The conference took a decided stand not to renew the licenses of any of the preachers or exhorters who used tobacco.

E. M. MANSON.

The Methodist Quarterly Review for October is upon our table. This number closes another year of this excellent periodical. The first paper "The Solidarity of Methodism," from the pen of Daniel Dorchester, D. D., the great Methodist statistician. Dr. Dorchester shows from facts gathered from the most reliable sources the deficiency of other systems in the matter of pulpit supplies. From his figures we learn that in New England there are 868 Baptist churches, of these 233 were without pastors. New England is the stronghold for the Congregationalists; his figures show that in 1882 they had 3,936 churches, with only 827 settled pastors, 1,986 had stated supplies, and 1,023 were vacant without pastors. The economy of the Presbyterians has something more of a connectional character, and this showing is more favorable. But their principle does not supply their churches with pastors. In 1880 of the 5,489 Presbyterian churches 3,030 had pastors, 1,369 had stated supplies, and 1,030 were vacant. There are three denominations who in the selection of their pastor do it on the principle of "mutual choice." But these figures show that in furnishing pastors for the churches the system fails. The itinerancy is based upon the policy of mutual submission, the subjection of personal preferences to the greatest good. With us "both ministers and people wave their personal choices in order that the great ends for which the Church is founded may be more fully accomplished." It gives to every church a pastor and to every preacher a congregation. The following figures show something of the results of the two systems. In 1800 there were of Baptists of all kinds 103,000; in 1880, 2,452,873. Congregationalists numbered in 1800, 75,000; in 1880, 384,332, a gain of 309,332. The Presbyterians numbered, in 1800, 40,000; in 1880, 937,640, a gain of 897,640. The gain of all these churches who seek their own selfish ends in settling their pastor has been 3,356 850. Methodism in 1800 numbered 6,400, less than one-third as many members as all kinds of Baptists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists, has come to be nearly as numerous as all of them united, and her actual gain has been 48,188 more than theirs. Largely the superior success of Methodism is due to her peculiar polity which furnishes to every congregation a perpetual pastor.

The second paper is "Slavery in the North," how it was looked upon and how it disappeared; by S. G. Arnold, Esq.

"The Church Lyceum," by A. C. George, D.D. "Some Historic Places of Methodism."

The fourth paper is by W. W. Bennett, President of Randolph Macon College. This is the result of observations made by Dr. Bennett while in attendance of the Ecumenical Council.

The fifth article, "Support of Conference Claimants," by Rev. John Poucher, of the Indiana Conference, is an excellent statement of the question, and will be read with the greatest interest by all Methodist preachers.

The "Opium Traffic in China," is by S. L. Baldwin, D.D.

Rev. Edward Thomson, A. M., President of Nebraska College, briefly sets forth in a well written paper the superiority of the Latin pronunciation.

Methodist Theology is ably defended by Dr. Whedon in his review of the periodical literature of the times.

We cannot see how any Methodist minister can deny himself of the Quarterly Review. Send to Phillips & Hunt, 805 Broadway, New York.

Rejoicing in Iniquity.

There was an infidel blacksmith who was always carping at professors of religion, especially when he could get a Christian to talk to, or knew there was one near enough to overhear him. Some choice morsel of scandal was sure to be served up about an erring minister, or a sinful deacon, or a sabbath school superintendent who had fallen from grace. One day he was dilating with uncommon relish on his favorite theme to a venerable elder, who stopped to have his horse shod. The old man bore it quietly for awhile, and then said:

"Did you ever hear the story of the rich man and Lazarus?"

"Yes, of course I have."

"Remember about the dogs at the gate there—how they licked Lazarus' sores?"

"Yes, why?"

"Well you remind me of those dogs—always licking sores. All you notice in Christians is their faults."

KALAMAZOO, MICH., Feb. 2, 1880.

I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums, and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness, I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine.

Abundant Giving.

The sun gives ever, so the earth;
What it can give, so much 'tis worth.
The ocean gives in many ways;
Gives paths, gives rivers, fishes, bays;
So, too, the air, it gives us breath,
When it stops giving comes in death.
Give, give; be always giving;
Who gives not is not living;
The more we give the more we live.

God's love though in our wealth unheaped
Only by giving it is reaped:
The body withers and the mind,
If pent in by a selfish rind,
Give thought, give strength, give deeds, give pelf,
Give love, give tears, and give thyself.
Give! give; be always giving;
Who gives not is not living;
The more we give the more we live.

Jack's Scar.

Almost every boy has some kind of a scar. Theodore has a scar upon his cheek made by falling against the stove; Albert a scar on his foot, cut with a hatchet; Franklin a scar on his shoulder, where a horse named Lucy Lolly, bit him; but Jack's scar is not like these.

I heard about Jack's scar at the prayer-meeting last night, and a voice in my heart whispered:

"Tell that story to all the boys you know."

Though, to be sure, Jack is not a little boy. He is a young man—a conductor on a railroad train.

A great railroad has its headquarters in our town, so almost everybody is either at work for the railroad company himself, or else he has a father, or a brother, or cousin, who is.

Last week a conductor was killed—somebody is killed nearly every week. While Jack, with a group of his comrades, stood sadly talking about the conductor's death, one of their number, a Christian gentleman, remarked:

"There is hardly a man on the railroad service, but has been in some way hurt—carries some scar."

Whereupon Jack proudly replied that he had been in the employ of the railroad company for years and he had never been hurt—he carried no scar; and to make his statement stronger, he used some very wicked words; for alas! alas! Jack had learned to swear.

The gentleman looked sorrowfully at the young man. He knew his history; knew that Jack had not been brought up to swear, but that he had kept company with profane boys and men until he had fallen into the habit almost unconsciously, scarcely knowing when he did swear. The comrade thought of all this, then said earnestly:

"Jack, you do carry a scar."

But Jack again asserted with an oath that he did not; he was very positive there was no scar upon him.

"Ah, Jack! Jack!" answered the Christian friend, "you have a bad scar—in your mouth!"

And girls, too, sometimes have ugly scars. I know a lady who says she has a scar on her heart, made by listening to some bad stories one day when she was a girl at school.

Dear boys and girls, you may not be able to prevent the scars of accidents upon hands and faces, but I implore you to strive earnestly, all the time fervently seeking the help of the Savior, to keep your mouths and hearts free from the scars of sin.—Sunday School Times.

Jerry McAulay's Mission.

BY REV. F. A. CRAFTS.

AN EVENING IN THE CREMORNE MISSION.

Jerry McAulay was serving out a sentence in the Sing Sing State Prison when converted, through the blessing of God, by the efforts of Orville Gardner, Mr. Irwin and others, and immediately began to lead sinners to Christ. As soon as he was permitted to return to New York, his home in Water Street was the scene of a wonderful transformation. Where drunkenness and the foulest crimes had found shelter, the voice of prayer and songs of praise were heard. When his old associates saw what a change had taken place in him, many of them believed in Jesus and were saved. His wife devoted herself to the Lord, and soon there was a band of fearless soldiers of the cross, making successful raids on the enemy and winning souls to Christ. At length a room was fitted up for a place of worship, and every night it was filled; and now a great multitude of saved souls crowns the work of years.

At length, in view of what God had wrought at the Water street mission, and the great need of more comprehensive plans to reach the degraded masses of the city, the Cremorne Mission was inaugurated, on the corner of Sixth Avenue and 32d Street, which has been the scene of the triumphs of grace almost every night for several years. As I entered the room, I found it brilliantly illuminated with electricity, and the seats all supplied with Gospel Hymns, No. 4. A piano was on a low platform at the rear end of the room, at which a young man presided during the evening.

It was Wednesday evening, and the tides of worldliness were surging around us, but here was a company gathered in this humble temple to talk with Jesus. Some were there prepared by walking with God many years to guide others into the shining way, and many who had recently been washed in the fountain; the youth and children were there, with parents who had been saved. The meeting was led by a layman, whose heart the Lord led to leave his printing press for a little while, that he might help to print the name of Jesus on some of the lost ones. He read an appropriate selection—our Lord's parable of the feast, to which men were gathered from the highways and hedges. The season of prayer was preceded by the singing of several hymns. When testimonies were called for, about twenty-five persons responded. Here are some of these testimonies. A young man, the pianist said: "I came here about two and a half months ago, and the Lord saved me. I was a drunkard; my lips were full of blasphemy; I was not honest; but now I am trusting in Jesus. I can say as David said, "My soul shall make her boast in the Lord!" A colored lad said, "The Lord Jesus saved me about two months ago. Now I am happy more and more every day. The best thing anybody can do is to seek Jesus, for He keeps me from the theatre, from gambling and drinking." After singing, "O what shall I do to be saved!" a young man said; "I came in here six months ago, and was saved, and I bless God that He saved me from the love of rum and tobacco." A man who was a sporting character twenty-three years ago, said, "Christ Jesus saved me twenty-three years ago. I thank God for His Word. I am a happy man—a saved man." He is one of the earnest workers of this mission. One of the helpers, a woman, said: "I expect to love him while he gives me breath, and then shall go home to praise him. I counted the cost and paid the price. My grace has been fully tested, even this week, but I have been kept in peace. 'As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people.'" Nearly every man and boy who spoke, acknowledged gratefully that they had been saved from the love of rum and tobacco. These lightened and emancipated souls turned away with loathing from both, as not only the badges of Satan, but the chains with which he binds his captives. How can a man aid these fallen ones to break the snare who is himself the slave of a degrading appetite for either? They sang, "Who is on the Lord's side?" and then invited seekers to raise the hand, and the service closed with a season of paryer for the penitent. The handful of corn in the earth on the top of the mountain already shakes like Lebanon.—Zion's Herald.

Nothing To Do.

Your hands are in your pockets, young man, because you have no work for them to do. And while you are idle the world is alive, wide awake, pushing, struggling, going ahead. The world wants those hands. You need not take them out of America. They can find a market here at home. The country wants those hands selling dry goods in New York, cradling wheat in Minnesota, raising cotton in Alabama, weaving cloth in Lowell, picking oranges in Florida, digging gold in Colorado, catching mackerel from the deck of a down East fishing smack. Take your hands out of your pockets. Nothing to do! There is plenty of work everywhere. Do the first thing that comes along. Saw wood, get in coal, go on errands, in short, do anything honest with your hands, but don't let them loaf in your pockets.

The late Rev. Dr. Samuel J. Wilson, of Allegheny Theological Seminary, once said to the students "Young gentlemen, study Hebrew roots, pore over Greek verbs, read Latin, and if you have time and desire, translate ancient hieroglyphics; but I charge you, when you go into the pulpit to preach the gospel, to use the plain Anglo-Saxon."

The Methodist Conference of Canada, at its recent session, decided that the educational standard of its ministers should be raised. It was resolved that hereafter all canadidates should present certificates of matriculation in some accredited university, or what shall be accepted as an equivalent.

Royal, Rich, Red Blood.

In this country we are all kings, and we are all entitled to have as good blood as that which courses through the veins of emperors.

There are princes and millionaires languishing in feebleness and broken-down bodily health who would be glad to have the strength of the humblest laboring man.

And there are many people who are neither kings, emperors, nor millionaires, whose blood is thin, whose circulation is poor, who are suffering from lassitude and debility, and who know not the pleasure of a hearty meal, nor the enjoyment of being able to do a good day's work.

If such people will put some iron into their blood, they will vitalize and enrich it. They can do this by the use of Brown's Iron Bitters, the purest and most excellent iron medicine ever made. Thousands who were weak, languid, pale, and prostrated, are now happy to say that Brown's Iron Bitters brought them up and gave them new life. 5

DR. C. McLANE'S Celebrated Liver Pills

In offering to the public Dr. C. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills, as a remedy for Liver and Bilious Complaints, we presume no apology will be needed. The great prevalence of Liver Complaint and Bilious Diseases of all kinds throughout the United States, and particularly in the West and South, where, in the majority of cases, the patient is not within the reach of a regular physician, requires that some remedy should be provided that would not in the least impair the constitution, and yet be safe and effectual. That such is the character of Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills, there can be no doubt. The great success which has invariably attended their use, will, we think, be sufficient to convince the most incredulous. It has been our sincere wish that these Pills should be fairly tested, and stand or fall by the effects produced. That they have been so tested and that the result has been in every respect favorable, we call tens of thousands to witness who have experienced their beneficial effects.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS are not held forth or recommended, (like most of the popular medicines of the day), as universal cure-alls, but simply as a specific for Liver Complaints, and those symptoms connected with a deranged state of that organ.

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

L. P. CUSHMAN, Editor.
A. B. P. ALBERT, D. D., Assistant.

THURSDAY, NOV. 8, 1883.

This paper will be sent from this date to Dec. 31, 1884, to any new subscriber who sends two dollars with the order.

The General Missionary Committee began its annual session in the Mission Rooms, 805 Broadway, New York, on Wednesday, Nov. 7, at 10 a. m.

Now that the crop is being gathered, is the time to put in your best work for the benevolent collections, Push every cause, and let no single backward step be taken.

The great butchery of men, women and children in Anam, by order of the French Admiral, calls for earnest condemnation by the civilized world. Over 500 defenseless, fleeing people were slain near Hue early in September.

To-day we publish the prospectus of the Chicago Daily Inter Ocean for 1884. Read it. The Inter Ocean is unexcelled as a newspaper by any daily in the country; and its editorial department is always attractive, able and pungent.

The prompt indictment of John Coffey, Jr., for the assassination of his father's murderer, who was manacled and in the custody of Sheriffs, in the street, on his way to receive sentence, was a proper response to the mandlin sentiment-ality expressed by his friends in order to palliate the brutal deed.

The annual meeting of the Bishops is in session at their Room 805 Broadway. All the members of the Episcopal Board will be present except Bishop Merrill who is now in China. We hope in our next issue to be able to give the time for holding the Spring Conference.

Now that preparations on a grand scale, for the Cotton and Industrial Exposition, are being made in this city, would it not be the proper thing at this time to be polishing up our rickety school system in this State and city, so that it may in a measure at least compare favorably with our other exhibits to be made.

General Sherman retired from the command of the United States Army, on the 1st., and General Sheridan succeeded him. Gen. Sherman possesses the confidence and esteem of the country he has long and honorably served, and it wishes that he may live to enjoy many years of peace.

Rev. Dr. Crooks, of the Irish Conference says that the Methodist is the only denomination in Ireland that really exibits an increase, and that it has now a stronger relation to population than ever before. The churches there had to contend against the discouragement of a declining population—declining at the rate of fifteen per cent. annually.

The Richmond Christian Advocate edited by Dr. Lafferty is an able bright and thrifty M. E. Church South journal, has a correct appreciation of periodical and church literature, and speaks on this wise:

The Northern Methodists have never taken to the folly of the cheap paper. Their Advocates are put at a fair price, and the income is spent in making the journals superior publications.

The New York Methodist put its subscription down, but the clear-headed people preferred to pay more and get a better article, so that paper collapsed.

The wise directors of the periodical literature up North always look to the quality of the article. They never educate the religious mind downward by appealing for patronage "at reduced prices." The tactics of the "original Jacobs" are not in vogue among them. The class upon which a religious paper must depend for a support are intelligent enough to know that good staffs always command good prices, and that the cheapest is the dearest in the end.

Wanted.

Day by day, month in and month out, in the columns of the secular press the reader sees our caption calling his attention to the real or imaginary wants of different people. In nearly all communities will be found those who, for pecuniary remuneration, are ready and waiting to supply these wants. Suppose a like announcement was made, setting forth in clear terms the wants of the Christian Church, would the call meet with a cheerful response from the hearts of those who are abundantly able to meet the demand? Certainly there can be no doubt about the reward. God is not unrighteous to forget any work and labor of love. He gives an hundred fold in this present world, and the final inheritance of eternal life.

Wanted—Men who thoroughly believe in God, and believe God; who believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God; that heaven and hell are awful realities; that sin unrepented and unforgiven, will exclude men from heaven, and shut them up in hell; and at the same time know the power of the Lord Jesus to save sinners from all of their sins; and have in themselves a heart that answers back to the Bible presentation of this wonderful truth.

Wanted—A large number of the above described men who feel that God has said to them, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Who will count it an honor to go into the byways and hedges after the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

Wanted—In every church, a large number, of all ages, whose daily life and conversation agree with the New Testament standard of Christian living and work.

Wanted—A company of men and women (am not particular whether they are white or black, native or foreign,) born who have endured trials, buffetings and scornings in this life, and can rejoice with joy that is unspeakable and full of glory.

Wanted—An innumerable company to do business as merchants, lawyers, doctors, manufacturers and farmers, etc., who in their personal daily experience understand what St. Paul meant when he said, "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God."

Wanted—For class-leaders, stewards, trustees, exhorters and local preachers, who know the power of the atoning blood of the Lord Jesus to cleanse from all sin, and can demonstrate to all the apostolic representation said to be "love, joy, meekness, faith, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, temperance," thus showing that they have "crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts."

Wanted—A great company of men and women, young and old, of tried faith, whose prayers God hears, who seek and find, who ask and receive, to engage in the special work of leading men to forsake their sins and turn to the Lord.

Such are some of our wants to-day. The Church of the Lord Jesus is not suffering for the want of wealth and learning half so much as from a want of earnest consecrated men filled with the Holy Spirit. In 1863, when General Rosecrans was besieged at Corinth, General Grant sent this order to General Hurlburt commanding the Union forces at Bolivar, Tennessee: "My orders are that you relieve at once the besieged garrison at Corinth, reach Rosecrans or perish." The next morning the army moved forward only 8000 men; the second day they encountered 30,000 Confederates, a battle was fought, the Confederates yielding to the boys in blue. Twenty years have passed since that memorable day; Gen. Hurlbut and many others who took a prominent part in that conflict have been gathered to their fathers, but the order, "Reach Rosecrans or perish," and the gallant conduct of the men who carried it out will never die. Something of this spirit should animate every member of the Church of the Lord Jesus.

A Misstatement.

In the course of their reasoning, declaring the unconstitutionality of the Civil Rights Bill, the Court took occasion to say:

"There were thousands of free colored people in this country before the abolition of slavery, enjoying all the essential rights of life, liberty and property, the same as the white citizens. Yet not one at that time thought it was any invasion of their personal status as freemen because they were not admitted to all the privileges enjoyed by white citizens, or because they were subjected to discriminations in the enjoyment of accommodations of public inns, of public conveyances and places of amusement."

This expression displays either an unpardonable degree of ignorance of the real facts in the case, inhumanity, or both. Before the war it is well known that under the black code of all the Southern States free colored persons were not secured in life, liberty nor property. The free Negro could only hold property through a white agent. He had to give bond in many Northern States as a guarantee that he would not become a burden upon the State; and in the South if he travelled from place to place he was fined and imprisoned if after landing he remained over a given length of time. In default of payment of the fine he was sold to satisfy the State. His life was at the mercy of any mob. These are facts that can be established by the defunct black codes, and by a thousand unhappy witnesses. It is well known and universally conceded that before the war, in the South at least, many slaves fared much better than free colored persons. How the Supreme Court could say that such persons enjoyed before the war all the essential rights of life, liberty and property is a mystery to us. Again, the Court says: "Not one, at that time, thought it was an invasion of their personal status as freemen because they were not admitted to all the privileges enjoyed by white citizens." How far this is from the truth is better left to the decision of the unprejudiced consciousness of every man who believes the Negro to be a man with all the natural feelings of humanity. The Negro made any number of protestations, and if he sought no legal redress it was because he knew that he was confronted by a united judiciary that held that black men had no rights that white men were bound to respect.

A Texas dispatch says:

"The Texas Central has put on extra coaches for the colored travelers. These coaches are labeled 'Colored people's car,' and no white are allowed to enter them.'

These race coaches are being put on in Texas in compliance with the urgent orders of Gov. Ireland; a name that has become odious to the colored race wherever his name is mentioned. But by what constitutional authority does he issue such orders? Will the loyal, liberty-loving people of this Nation—"the land of the free and the home of the brave"—submit to such tyrannical usurpation of authority? Is every Governor a petty tyrant, to rule with no law but his prejudice and malevolence? Does the recent civil rights decision constitute every Southern Governor an autocrat, free to rob citizens of their rights? Have the 200,000 Negroes who fought for the preservation of the Union fought and bled in vain? Will this Nation see its most faithful allies in the South trampled upon by Southern tyrants, who were its treasonable enemies in the late civil war? The Christian spirit of the Nation, including the church in the North and the progressive element in the South, has declared that the Negro shall not take a single step backward, and in their sacred name we protest against this tyrannical usurpation by the Governor of Texas.

Race Troubles in Texas.

A few days ago the telegraph and the press were freighted with rumors of race troubles between the whites and blacks at Gause, Milam county, Texas. Nervous and exciting dispatches were telegraphed to Gov. Ireland, from Gause, to the effect that a Negro uprising had taken place, and that five hundred of them were under arms, ready to murder all the white people. It was pretended that an outbreak was momentarily expected, and the Governor was appealed to for help. The telegraph operator at Gause telegraphed that he was on the point of leaving his office to repair to a place of safety, and could lose no time in seeking a secluded spot wherein to hide his defenseless head. Intense excitement, it was pretended, prevailed all over that section of the State. Although the colored people, when being murdered by the white people of Marshall, Texas, just a little over a month ago, appealed to the Governor for protection, and obtained none; upon the request of the whites of Gause, a few days ago, who falsely represented that they feared a Negro uprising, Gov. Ireland immediately issued a proclamation calling the militia to arms. Two companies were mustered at once, and before midnight over 1000 men at Austin, Houston, Galveston and other places responded to the call, and were ready to march at a moment's notice.

In the meantime Gov. Ireland dispatched the following telegram to Superintendent Herrin, of the International road:

"The Negroes are in arms at Gause. We may need a special train to forward troops. If that should be so, please furnish it.

"JOHN IRELAND, "Governor.

Thus all the preliminaries, to put down the Negroes, were arranged at a moment's notice, when lo and behold! it was discovered that there was no uprising, and no unlawful assemblage, as the Negroes had merely assembled to express their condemnation of the Supreme Court decision relative to the civil rights bill, and had quietly dispersed.

Here, then, the whole State of Texas was thrown in the greatest fever of excitement because the colored citizens of Milam county, in the exercise of their most sacred constitutional prerogative, "peacably to assemble," had met to consider their grievances in the civil rights decision; and, doubtless, also to condemn the course Gov. Ireland had since adopted in the premises. For he, without any show of authority, has since made it his business to urge upon the various railroads to operate exclusive race coaches. This manly disposition on the part of the colored people, however, was so highly offensive to the whites (the idea of Negroes resenting even the grossest injustice), that they apparently desired to make this meeting an excuse to cry out "Negro uprising," and in the meantime to slaughter the blacks. Thanks to great prudence and wise counsel, however, a conflict was avoided and the excitement has subsided. How utterly groundless were the assumed fears of the whites can readily be seen, when it is known that Milam county, with a population of 18,659 has only 3952 colored people, or about five whites to every colored person. Seeing that the white people of Milam county monopolize nearly all the wealth, the intelligence, means of travel and communication, control absolutely the local and State governments, and outnumber the blacks in that county five to one, is it reasonable to suppose that the colored people would have even thought of such an uprising? No; why the very idea is simply absurd and ridiculous. This Negro uprising business, in this instance we fear, was intended only to be a repetition of the Marshall affray. Colored citizens had peaceably assembled there to organize a military company under State laws, and with the approval of the Governor, but they were broken upon, dispersed, and some killed, by white mobs led by some of their most respected citizens. This seems to be the latest improved tactics adopted in Texas to keep the Negro down. He must not be allowed to organize any military companies for the State militia, nor hold any club or political meetings whatever. If he does, according to a Texas correspondent, "the whites will arm and break them up." Such a state of affairs is intolerable in a free country, and deserves the condemnation of all good people. Sections of the South denying our people every privilege of school, free speech, peaceful assemblage and the equal protection of the law, should be effectively rebuked by their wholesale emigration to other States or sections where their rights will be protected. Our people had better understand it now, that they must look for the protection of their persons and property from the State in which they live, and if the State is recreant to its trust, protection need be expected from no other source; in such cases the only safety is to flee to places where justice is known to be administered without distinction on account of color. Such wholesome rebukes to persistent injustice will be beneficial to almost any intolerant portion of the South.

Dr. Tucker Rebuked—The Negro Vindicated.

The startling and groundless attack of Dr. J. L. Tucker against the Negro, last fall, when he apparently took the Episcopal Church Congress by storm, seems now to be very much discounted among his own brethren. His words had the effect to prompt many able and unprejudiced minds to ascertain the facts and to defend the race with both pen and tongue. In the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which recently met in Philadelphia, the Bishops of Alabama, North Carolina and Washington Territory spoke in vindication of the Negro character; and the deafening applause with which their addresses were received was a complete triumph for an injured race, and a stinging rebuke to the man who committed the assault against them. A correspondent Zion's Herald says: "Bishop Wilmer, of Alabama, who has been regarded as the exponent of Southern ecclesiastical aristocracy, was uncompromising in his attitude, and insisted upon giving the colored people ample opportunity to show their utmost ability. His remarkable statements," says this writer, "bristling with startling statistics and suggestions, fell upon the house of deputies and upon the assembled conservative bishops like a thunderbolt of revelation. Coming from such a source, poured forth in strains of vehement eloquence from the lips of one of the foremost bishops in the church, it cannot but excite wide-spread comment in church circles throughout the country." The same writer says in reference to this debate:

"But the greatest wonder of all transpired in the audience-room of this general convention here. In the presence of 50 bishops, 250 clergymen, and the same number of lay delegates, and an audience of a thousand more, the bishops of Alabama and North Carolina spoke in the most enthusiastic terms of the colored man when properly educated, and ignored any separate organization in the religious work."

Bishop Paddock, of Washington Territory, in the course of his remarks took occasion to say: "I am decidedly opposed to separating the colored people in their worship from the whites."

The Times-Democrat, in an editorial upon the civil rights decision, says: "There is nearly half a million colored people in Louisiana whose improvement every well-wisher of the State must desire and encourage, and whom we must all be unwilling to see take a single step backward."

Such sentiments, from such distinguished and influental sources in the South, bespeak a better day for the colored man, in both church and State. We say to our brethren, "Let not your hearts be troubled," but trust in God and do your duty, and all will yet be well, for "the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men."

New Subscribers.

We ask the pastors within the patronizing territory of the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, whether there are not families in the communities where they live who ought to take this paper? Are there not homes among all of your people now only visited by some paper of a doubtful import? We ask these pastors to help us in extending the circulation of the SOUTHWESTERN. The year 1884 will be a special year in the annals of the Methodist Episcopal Church? In May the General Conference is to meet in Philadelphia. The sessions will be interesting. Great overshadowing questions will be discussed, and plans for future work made. All over the country there are to be suitable celebrations of the centennial of the formal organization of American Methodism, all of which will be reported in this paper. We want to have a centennial boom for the SOUTHWESTERN. Let each pastor make a special effort to secure new subscribers on his charge. We ask for ten thousand subscribers. Any one wanting sample copies to aid, may send at once. Remember this is our church paper. No individual reaps any financial gain by its success. All the profits will go to the support of our superannuated preachers. Please brethren push the canvass of the SOUTHWESTERN.

In speaking of the Southern press on the recent Civil Rights decision the N. Y. World says: "A large majority of the newspapers adopt a highly conciliatory tone. In Georgia the policy of the leading railroad, according to Senator Brown, will be to keep the races in separate cars. Gov. Ireland urges the same course in Texas, but the vice president of the International Railroad decides that business will not justify it. The colored people will be restricted to certain seats."

The course of Gov. Ireland in this matter, however reprehensible it may be, will not surprise those who remember that in addressing the Colored Convention in Texas recently, he advised them to avoid the discussion of hotel and railroad grievances. To this piece of unreasonable advice the president of the convention, Wm. A. Grant, replied saying: "As long as the railroads sell us and our wives and daughters first class tickets, and defrauds us by compelling us to ride in second class cars, where there is smoking, chewing, drinking, and swearing, so long will colored men continue to agitate the question of railroad grievances." This manly declaration probably had the effect to make the Governor of Texas vindictive and belligerent in this matter. He urges separate cars for colored people. Very contemptable business for the Governor of the largest State in the Union.

The Trustees of Asbury University completed an agreement with Mr. W. C. Depauw, of New Albany, in effect that when the name is changed to Depauw University he will pay $2 to $1 of all subscriptions that may be paid from other parties, according to a schedule aggregating about $130,000. Also the City of Greencastle shall satisfactorily secure $60,000, to be paid Jan. 1, 1885, with which to buy additional ground, and Robert McKim, of Madison, shall build his proposed observatory at a cost of $10,000. By this agreement, if carried out, the University will receive about $400,000 besides a provision in Mr. Depauw's will for a certain part of his estate at death, now estimated to be worth $1,000,000. The change of name from Asbury to Depauw was agreed to by the trustees and by all the Bishops of the Methodist Church who have been consulted.

PERSONAL.

—Rev. J. S. Smart has changed his residence from Bay City, to Albion, Mich., where his paper, The Lamp of Life will hereafter be published. Albion is the seat of the proposed Asbury Centenary University.

—Bishop Gilbert Haven's son, Theodore, is preaching in Bromfield Street Church, Boston.

—Bishop Bowman's sermon in the Circuit Court room, at Chattanooga, Tenn, during the sitting of the East Tennessee Conference, the Holston Methodist, Church South, declares to have been "pure Gospel, delivered in a simple, chaste, elegant, forcible style."

—Bishop Foster, at the Central New York Conference, which held its session in Syracuse, paid a high tribute to the memory of Bishop Peck.

—The Rev. Dr. Matthews, pastor of Walnut-street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Kansas City, and formerly of New Orleans, reported, at the Southwest Missouri Conference, 200 additions to his charge during the past year.

—Rev. Thomas Kennedy died Nov. 1, at 2 p. m. Appropriate funeral services were held at the LaHarp Street M. E. Church, Friday at 3 p. m. The opening hymn, "servant of God, well done," was read by Bro. Albert. Prayer by the writer. Scripture lesson by Bro. Davage. Father Green gave an address suited to the occasion. The closing hymn at the church was read by Bro. Priestley. Bros. Hudson, Marshall, Mason, Barrow, Johnson and Montgomery served as pall bearers. At the grave the Ritual was read by Bros. Priestley, Ross and Osborn; the benediction was pronounced by Father Green. His brethren, who have known Bro. Kennedy during his ministry speak of him as a pure man and believe that the angels have borne him away to the home of the saints.

—Hon. Charles E. Hooker told the farmers at the Mississippi State Fair that Hon. Geo. B. Loring, the United States Commissioner of Agriculture, was a man of big brain and big heart.

—We the following from our esteemed Bro. Rev. T. H. Scott, Austin, Texas, tells its own tale of sorrow: "I am now at home sick with malarial fever. We lost our little boy Evans Braden last week. He was only twelve months and two weeks old. Pray that the Lord may give us strength to leave it all with Him." "Only twelve months old" but Evans Braden by his artless ways had made them full of sweetness and brightness; he was loved from the first; his visit to that home was like heaven's brightest angel; he filled it with joy and gladness; his little life was a precious treasure. Blessed infants of innocence and parting. Yes, brother, you shall have our prayers. We have been there and know something of your sorrow. We commend you to Him who said "I am the Resurrection and the Life, he that believeth in Me though he were dead yet shall he live."

—A very interesting case was tried before the Moot-court of the Howard University law class, in Washington, D. C., one evening recently. A. P. Albert, attorney for plaintiff, distinguished himself by his pleading, and won judgment for his client. He has been highly complimented on his maiden effort.

—The health of President E. A. Ware's Wife, of Atlanta University, having been greatly threatened, upon medical advice he spent the summer with her in the Adirondacks and is much encouraged by the improvement attained. He is now back at his post, as are Professors T. N. Chase and C. W. Francis.—American Missionary. We congratulate President Ware upon the improved health of Mrs. Ware, and hope she will soon be perfectly restored to permanent health.

—Dr. Adam Clarke wrote his great commentary on the Bible between the hours of four and eight in the morning. This early rising habit, much to be commended, is now largely an institution of the past.

—Wendell Phillips is to address the National Cotton Planters' Association at its meeting in Vicksburg on the 21st.

The Catholic Register announces the death of Father Lewis Martinett, who during forty eight years labored in the interior of China without having a single leave home.

It is with grief that we have to state that our colleague of the New York East Conference, and old-time friend, who has been so long a Boanerges on the walls of our Zion, the Rev. John S. Inskip, has been stricken with paralysis. The blow fell on Wednesday last. At the present writing he is speechless. Physicians say that even if he survive it is doubtful whether the voice that has been heard all around the world will ever speak in public again.—N. Y. Advocate.

—You can tell whether a man regards races as brutes by the terms he applies to them. The Richmond Christian Advocate calls male Negroes "bucks." Such a term, applied to human beings as good as the editor of that paper, is indecent and brutal.—N. Y. Independent.

—Rev. I. G. Pollard has been transferred to the Wisconsin conference.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

TEXAS.

J. T. Gibbons, Floresville: "Our 4th quarterly conference was held for Floresville Circuit Oct. 13th. Rev. W. H. Moseby presided. Reports showed that the circuit is not dead in every particular. Saturday night we listened to one of Bro. Moseby's burning sermons, which never fails to make the hearts of those that hear them rejoice. Sunday at half past ten, we rejoiced again in class meeting. At half past eleven, we heard, Bro. J. R. Walker of Riddleville. At three o'clock p. m., Bro. Moseby again caused us to feel as if we had never known trouble, although this has been a year of many sorrows to the writer. After much rejoicing, the Lord's supper was administered to 42 souls. Elder's collection, $10.60. A subscription of $32 was taken to purchase a suit of clothes for the writer. Good people. My successor will find them so. Your readers no doubt have heard of my sad bereavement. July 6th the light and joy of my home and of my life went out. She whom I had learned to love so fondly, and who shared all my trials and tread the rough paths of life by my side for four years, and who forgot her own weariness in efforts to make my toils less, and her own sorrows in endeavors to assuage mine, and who spared no pains to make our earthly home the counterpart of heaven. Flora has joined the militant host on high. She was only 19 years 6 months, and two days old, when God called her home. But was that the only trial of my life this year? No! little Albert, was next taken from me, just three months after his mother. He was 9 months, and 18 days old. God has spared me one little boy of three bright Summers, to share my sorrows. Two of us on earth, and two of us in heaven. Pray for me and my little son."

Wm. Long, Spring Hill circuit: "Last quarterly conference was held at West Chapel by Rev. A. Lockhart. The reports of local elders and class leaders were good. Missionary money amounted to $29.42. He that is mightier than we saw fit call my beloved wife to a home brighter than this."

D. Whitaker: "Elder Price held the fourth quarterly conference Sept. 22, and preached and lectured on the various societies of our church. Raised for missions $3, and something for the other causes. A resolution was passed opposing the pastoral limit. Dennis Briggs was elected delegate to annual conference."

LOUISIANA.

Elijah Clark, Shady Grove: "My third love feast was held Oct. 14th. Five were received into the church. Total received this quarter 10, on probation, 9 in full membership. Sabbath school is prospering, and the church is advancing."

Cornelia Hayman, Clinton: "On Oct. 14th, our new church, then completed, was dedicated. At 9 o'clock the Sabbath school marched in with banners flying. The school contributed $20. The dedication sermon was preached by Rev. Jno. Qualls, of Mount Carmel at 11 o'clock, assisted by the pastor Rev. W. P. Forest who preached at 1 p. m. We had a grand time. The house was crowded. Collection $66. The young ladies of the Sabbath school on the 13th, gave an entertainment under the leadership of the following committee. Cornelia Hayman, president; Rhoda Thomas, vice president; Hulda A. Griffin, secretary; Nancy Hayman, treasurer; Cassandra Kent, Victory Griffin, Alice Butler, Susan Mitchels, Laura Berry; Assisted by the following young men: Isaac Clemons, Judge Griffin, Levy Taylor. They realized $15.10 which they presented the pastor for his faithful performance of duty. Clinton is alive this year."

Nashville District Conference.

This conference convened for its biennial session in Bass M. E. Church, East Nashville, Tuesday morning, Oct. 23, 1883. Rev. Jas. Pickett, presiding elder, called the conference to order. Devotional exercises conducted by the Rev. P. Gregg. The Secretary of last Conference called the roll, to which about 50 members answered. On motion L. M. Hagood was re-elect. Secretary, with M. Williams and R. C. Walker assistants. The usual committees were appointed. The reports showed a steady increase. The make up of the conference and mode of conducting the affairs of church showed increased intelligence. Indeed there was a perceptible absence of the jargon common at some gatherings of the kind. A determination to elevate the intellectual, as well as other standards, was apparent. In a few cases small-pox had hindered the work. During the year but one member, Rev. Alfred Bowman, a local preacher, has died. The examinations were more worthy the name than heretofore, and the disciplinary plan adhered to more closely, and as a result many who came up local preachers of no books and less study, returned home exhorters. One was received from the Missionary Baptist Church, besides whom no person was received from any other denomination. The character of all local preachers and exhorters were examined and passed except R. L. Knowles (L. D), Spencer Sago and Nathan Booker, whose cases were referred to their preachers. The licenses of forty-two local preachers and forty-four exhorters were renewed. Three persons were recommended for trial in travelling connection, viz: G. J. Starnes, N. J. Stith and H. W. Simmons. Three recommended to presiding elder as supplies, viz: Wm. Battle (L. D.), Samuel Bodie and Palmer Crawford. The good people of Bass Street Church gave the conference a warm reception. Rev. J. H. Buckner, missionary to the Bermuda Islands from the British M. E. Church, and Prof. Birmingham, of Central Tennessee College, were introduced. The outlook seemed hopeful in that the regulations of discipline are to be adhered to. After the usual resolutions of thanks, the conference adjourned to meet at call of President.

Forty Billion Germs.

A Wonderful Theory that Concerns the Welfare, Happiness and Life of Every-one.

In his quiet and cosy library at the close of a busy day sat a gentleman and his wife, he absorbed in a new book and she in the newspaper. Quickly glancing toward her husband, she asked, at a certain point in the article,

"John, what is the germ theory?"

"The germ theory—well—yes; just look in the encyclopedia under 'Germ,' that will explain it so much better than I can."

Accordingly his wife opened the book at the word named and read: Germ Theory of Disease—A theory advanced by the ablest and best investigators and scientists of the times. It supposes the surface of the earth, the air and water to be inhabited to a greater or less extent with a peculiar growth of the lowest form of fungi—commonly termed bacteria, whose power of reproduction, under favorable conditions, is so great that a single germ will increase to fifteen million in twenty-four hours' time, and unchecked in its increase would grow to a mass of eight hundred tons, in three days' time, if space and food be furnished. There is no condition under which it can be said to be absent, unless it be from fire or air filtered through cotton-batting in numerous layers. A single drop of water containing a germ, put into water boiled, filtered and thus freed from bacteria will grow murky in a day or two from the development of new germs. When it is considered that it requires about forty billion to weigh one grain, some remote idea can be had of the capacity of germ reproduction. Professor Jno. Tyndall, in a late work, elaborately treats of the influence of germs in the propagation of disease and charges upon this cause, the inception and development of very many of the ailments most injurious to man. Professor Pasteur, an eminent French savant, has carried his original and beautiful experiments so far, and from them deduced such practical results as very greatly to diminish the number of cases of anthrax among sheep and chicken cholera among fowls,—proving his theory that these are essentially and actually germ diseases. These germs are carried into the system through the lungs, the stomach and possibly the skin, but through the lungs chiefly. Once in the system, they begin to develop, poisoning the blood, invading the nerve centers, disturbing the functional activity of the great organs of the body and inducing a general impairment of the vital processes. They are the cause of fevers, rheumatism, Bright's disease of the kidneys, pneumonia, blood poisoning, liver disease, diphtheria and many other ailments. Lately Professor Koch, a famous German physician, has proved that consumption of the lungs is due to this cause—the presence of a peculiar germ.

When the circulation is bounding, the nerves elastic and the system all aglow with life and energy, the germs seem to develop poorly, if at all. But with weakened nerves, poor digestion or mal-assimilation of food or a lowering of vitality from any cause, a change ensues, and in this impoverished and weakened fluid the germ finds a genial home and develops until symptoms of disease are distinctly manifested. This is seen in the every day experience of all. The healthy man resists the influences around him and does not take cold, while those whose systems have become weak from any cause readily contract colds. This is on the same principle as the germ theory. The germs attack any weakened spot in the body, and fixing themselves upon it, begin their propagation. It is plain therefore that it is only by fortifying the weak portions of the body that the germs of disease can be resisted and driven from the system. But this has proved almost an impossibility heretofore, and it has been the study of physicans for years how best to accomplish it. Within the past few years, however, a preparation has been attracting great attention, not only throughout the entire land, but among the medical profession and scientists generally, which is based upon this theory, and it may safely be said, no remedy has ever been found which can so successfully place the system in a condition to resist the germs of disease as Warner's Safe Cure. This article is unquestionably the best and most efficent that has ever been discovered for this purpose, and—

"I should not wonder, dear, it's a grand remedy, and that pamphlet we received the other day stated that Dr. Gunn, of the United States Medical College endorsed it. At all events the wonderful cures it is accomplishing entitle it to be honorably noted among the great discoveries of the present century."

However the facts above stated may be, the truth remains, that the germ theory of disease is the correct one and that the great remedy mentioned is the only one which has ever been found that can put the system in a condition to kill these germs before they obtain a hold upon the body, and undermine the life.

For seven years past Edwin Alden & Bro. Cincinnati, Ohio, have issued annually their American Newspaper Catalogue, but never duplicated it. It has differed year after year in that it has been modified by wants and experience of advertisers. To secure accuracy and reliability they have corresponded directly and through agents with every accessible Editor, Publisher, and Post-Master in the United States and the Canadas. Their chief aim has been to facilitate reference to localities and papers; and, for this purpose, their index is divested of all complexity, and their type is made expressly for the work. Thus they are enabled to give at a single glance and on the same line, place of publication, name of paper, number of pages, length of the advertising columns, frequency of issue, class or denomination, when established, and circulation: also—a very material item—whether co-operative or not.

AN ONLY DAUGHTER CURED OF CONSUMPTION.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidently made a preparation which cured his only child of Consumption. His child is now in this country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that Consumption can be positively and permanently cured. The Doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two 2-cent stamps to pay expenses. The Supreme Court refused some time ago to grant a mandamus compelling Principal Gallagher, of Public School No. 5, in Brooklyn, to admit Theresa W. King, a colored girl, to the school over which he presides. The Brooklyn Board of Education sustained Mr. Gallagher's position on the ground that several separate schools were provided for colored children. The General Term sustained the refusal of the Supreme Court to grant the mandamus, and the Court of Appeals has just affirmed the General Term decision.

Nature's Rest.

As a fond mother, when the day is o'er,
Leads by the hand her little child to bed,
Half-willing, half-reluctant to be led,
And leave his broken playthings on the floor,
Still gazing at them through the open door,
Nor wholly reassured and comforted
By promises of others in their stead,
Which, though more splendid, may not please him more;
So nature deals with us and takes away
Our playthings one by one, and by the hand
Leads us to rest so gently that we go,
Scarce knowing if we wished to go or stay,
Being too full of sleep to understand
How far the unknown transcends the what we know.

The Saloon Keeper's Gains.

"I have made a thousand dollars during the last three months," said a saloon keeper, boastfully, to a crowd of his townsmen.

"You have made more than that," quietly remarked a listener.

"What is that?" was the quick response.

"You have made wretched homes—women and children poor, and sick and weary of life. You have made my two sons drunkards," continued the speaker, with trembling earnestness; "you made the younger of the two so drunk that he fell and injured himself for life. You have made their mother a broken hearted woman. Oh, yes, you have made much—more than I can reckon up, but you'll get the full count some day—you'll get it some day!"

A minister of the gospel told me one of the most thrilling incidents I have heard in my life. A member of his congregation came home, for the first time in his life, intoxicated, and his boy met him upon the doorstep, clapping his hands and exclaiming:

"Papa has come home!" He seized that boy by the shoulder, swung him around, staggered and fell in the hall. That minister said to me: "I spent the night in that house. I went out, bared my brow, that the night dew might fall upon it and cool it. I walked up and down the hill. There was his child dead! There was his wife in convulsions and he asleep. A man about thirty years of age asleep, with a dead child in the house having a blue mark upon the temple where the corner of the marble steps had come in contact with his head as he swung him around, and his wife on the brink of the grave. Mr. Gough," said my friend, "I cursed the drink." He had told me I must remain until he awoke, and I did. When he awoke he passed his hand over his face and exclaimed:

"What is the matter? where is my boy?"

"You can not see him." "Stand out of my way! I will see my boy." To prevent confusion I took him to the child's bed, and as I turned down the sheet and showed him the corpse he uttered a wild shriek, "Ah, my dear child!" That minister said farther to me: "One year after he was brought from the lunatic asylum to lie side by side with his wife in one grave, and I attended the funeral." The minister of the gospel who told me this fact is to-day a drunken hostler in a stable in the city of Boston. Now tell me what rum will not do! It will debase, degrade, imbrute, and damn everything that is noble, bright, glorious and God-like in a human being. There is nothing drink will not do that is vile, dastardly, cowardly, and hellish. Then are we not to fight till the day of our death?—J. B. Gough.

Thus all hopes of real reform, either State or municipal, in Louisiana, coming from any portion of the Democratic party, has passed away. The only remaining hope left us must be through the reorganization—for, thanks to the masterly supineness of Republican leaders, that party has no presnt organization—of the Republican party of Louisiana, on such liberal and sound platform of state and domestic issues, and by such able State and municipal tickets as will command the respect and confidence of a defrauded and oppressed people.—St. Charles Herald.

Which Way are You Going?

A little girl went home from church, full of what she had seen and heard. Sitting at the table with the family she asked her father, who was a very wicked man, whether he prayed. He did not like the question, and in an angry manner replied, "Is it your mother or your Aunt Sally who has put you up to that?"

"No, father," said the child; "the preacher said that all good people pray, and those that don't pray cannot be saved. Father, do you pray?"

This was more than the father could stand, and in a rough way he said, "Well, you and your mother and Aunt Sally may go your way, and I will go mine."

"Father," said the little creature, with great simplicity, "which way are you going?"

This question pierced the heart. It flashed upon him that he was in the sure way to death. He started from his chair, burst into tears, and began to pray for mercy.

Which way are you going?

Marrying a White Man.

Miss Elizer Henderson, a young colored woman of Flushing, L. I., was married on Monday evening to Mr. Joseph Miller, a thrifty white German farmer of that vicinity. The ceremony was preformed by the Rev. C. C. Lasby, the pastor of the Flushing Methodist Church, at the house of a friend, where he was stopping temporarily. Some of Mr. Lasby's parishioners found fault with him for his part in the affair. He said the bridegroom was much sunburnt and almost as dark as the bride, so that he mistook him for a colored man. The bride is only 17 years old. Her family live in their own house, and have long been respected residents of Flushing.

Seeking the drift of public sentiment, a Sun reporter met the colored lawyer John F. Quarles, who is a resident of Flushing. Mr. Quarles said he had heard of no public indignation at the marriage, and he considered it nobody's business, except that of the couple. He had heard of such cases before. Mr. Quarles is himself married to a beautiful and accomplished white lady of French parentage.

A white hack driver in Flushing said that he had heard of no great excitement about the wedding, and that the marriage of whites and blacks is a very common thing in the neighborhood.

Inquiring among the colored people, the reporter found a division of sentiment. Some said that it was not right, and others said it was all right. A very pretty mulatto girl said: "I have not heard any excitement about it, but there was a good deal of excitement when I went to the High School."

Another pretty colored miss said: "I guess no colored girl that was in the habit of going in good society or that had any regard for her reputation would marry a white man."—N. Y. Sun.

MR. EDITOR—I desire to know and hear from any of the Keiling family, of Norfolk, Virginia. Address me at Weimar, Texas.

DOCK WATSON.

MR. EDITOR—My mother was Katie Lee, her husband St Warren, and belonged to Spencer and Ellen Warren. Ellen was a sister to Spencer, and he was a shoe maker. When I was parted from them they lived in Washington, and General Jackson was President. Sister and I were sold to a speculator named Simpson. Sister was Mariah, and the oldest child. My name was Harry Warren, and I was the oldest boy. Mother had three more children living with her, and one was dead. Grandmother was Mary. We were sold to John and Robert Starke; sister to Robert and I to John. I left her in Wilkinson county, Mississippi, near Woodville. I have not heard from or seen her since. I now live near Columbus, Colorado county, Texas, and go by the name of Jack Collins. Address, Rev. F. D. Collins, Ellenger, Texas.

MR. EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my brother, Calvin Kelly. He left home during the war. The last time I heard from him, in 1876, he was in Chicago, Illinois. Our father's name was George. He belonged to Lee Bentley, at Lawrenceburg, Lawrence county, Tenn. Our mother's name was Nancy; she belonged to Widow Sallie Kelly, on Knob Creek, 6 miles from West Point, Lawrence county, Tenn. There were eight children of us, five boys and three girls: Henry, Calvin, Louis, John and George; Violet, Adeline, Marion. Brother Calvin said in his letter that he had been married, and two children, a boy and a girl, were living; the boy was Thomas, I forget the girl's name. His wife and one child are dead. Our mother was dead when he left. Our father died Nov. 5, 1882. My name is Violet Welch now. Address me, in care of Rev. H. C. Welch, Lawrenceburg, Lawrence county, Tenn.

MR. EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my children. Their given names are Clark Wesley, Allen Jackson, and Mary Ann. Clark Wesley's father was Abraham Perry, belonging to Samuel Perry, who lived in St. Louis. I left Clark Wesley 3 miles above St. Louis, on the dairy farm of Dr. John G. Bryant, with Thomas Bryant, the Doctor's cousin. The father of Allen Jackson and Mary Ann was Jack Bryant, all belonging to Dr. Bryant. I left Jack Bryant and my children, Allen and Mary, in 1845, in the lead mines in a little town called Potosi, 75 miles below St. Louis. I was Dr. Bryant's cook, Charlotte Bryant, and was brought out by Jennie Jenkins, Maj. Curl (Kerl) & Co. to Mississippi, from thence to Lockhart, Caldwell county, Texas, where I have lived ever since with Mr. Crocket Harbert. I heard indirectly a while after I got here that my children were brought to Austin, Texas, and carried from there to New Orleans. Since then I've heard nothing from them. I have two children born since my stay in Texas. The girl is Josephine, the boy was William Henry, who died a few years ago. I desire that all pastors and readers of this inquiry will try to find them for me. I am old and my health has failed me; only a few more days remain to me upon earth, and I want to find my children and have them come where I am and take my property, etc., into their hands. I am trying to follow Jesus; have been a member of the M. E. Church 20 years. My daughter is also a member of the same Church. If I do not meet them again on earth I trust I shall meet them in heaven. Address Charlotte Harbert, care of Rev. R. H. Harbert, Lockhart, Caldwell county, Texas.

MR. EDITOR—I would like to know the whereabouts of my son. His name was Anthony Oats; he left me on Big Bear Creek, at David Oats' place. It was about the last of August when he left me. The last I heard of him he went to Huntsville, Alabama. His father's name was Phelix Oats. We all belonged to David Oats. My son had one brother by the name of George Washington, who died; his oldest sister was named Rosetta, next one Emma, third Martha Ann. Mary Jane was the baby. He named the baby Mary Jane himself, after me. My name then was Jane Oats. My name is changed now to Jane Friarson. The last word he said to me was to come North and he would try and find me and his sisters and brother.

A Phenomenal Maine Girl.

The antagonists of modern advanced education, if there be any, should have heard a little lecture that a gentleman gave on the street Wednesday morning. The question had arisen as to the tendency of modern advanced education to create a disgust for manual labor. The gentleman told an anecdote. A young lady who is very well known in Lewiston and Auburn, and who has had a liberal education in America, a course of study in the German schools, and who has since taught in some of the leading schools of this State and others, came home to her father's farm this Summer. The hours hung rather heavily. "Father, your office needs shingling," says she one day. The next day the shingles were on the spot, and the young lady proposed to have some fun and combine it in a lengitimate way with solid work. She built the stagings geometrical, ran the lines after Euclid, and shingled the office as neatly and expeditiously as the village Professor of shingling himself could have done. She pulled down the staging and erected it again over the ell to the house, and, in spite of parental injunction, shingled the ell and a sloping shed attached. She practiced music for pleasure in the meantime, however, and read German for a pastime. "Nothing," added the gentleman, "would be further from her own inclination than notoriety."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

The Weaker Sex
are immensely strengthened by the use of Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which cures all female derangements, and gives tone to the system. Sold by druggists.

"Why don't you feed that dog?" was asked of an old negro. "Why doan I feed him?" "Yes, why don't you feed him?" "Why doan I feed myse'f? Is'e as hungry as de dog is, an' sides dat he's got de vantage of me. He ken go out an' pick up a piece ob meat an' go' bout his business, an' de white folks doan say nuthin'; but ef I picks up suthin' to eat, da wants ter slap me in jail, sah. A nigger ain't got de chance ob a dog nohow."

Had I all the faith of the patriarchs, all the good works of the apostles, all the constancy of the martyrs, and all the flaming devotion of seraphs, I would disclaim them all in point of dependence, and rely only on free grace.—Hervey.

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I
Could not move!
I shrunk!
From 228 lbs., to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."
Dublin, June 6, 1881. R. FITZPATRICK.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

HE FEELS LIKE A NEW MAN.

"I have had Dyspepsia, with Constipation, two years, and have tried ten different kinds of pills, and TUTT'S are the first that have done me any good. They have cleaned me out nicely. My appetite is splendid, food digests readily, and I now have natural passages. I feel like a new man." W. D. EDWARDS, Palmyra, O.

Plantation Melodies

—AND—

REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

Another ground of these, and a thousand mistakes, is the not considering deeply that love is the highest gift of God—humble, gentle, patient love; that all visions, revelations, manifestations whatever, are little things compared to love; and that all the gifts above mentioned are either the same with or infinitely inferior to it. It were well you should be thoroughly sensible of this—the heaven of heavens is love. There is nothing higher in religion, there is in effect nothing else; if you look for any thing but more love, you are looking wide of the mark, you are getting out of the royal way. And when you are asking others, "Have you received this or that blessing?" if you mean anything but more love, you mean wrong, you are leading them out of the way, and putting them upon a false scent.—Rev. John Wesley.

In Persia they bottle up their tears as of old. This is done in the following manners: As the mourners are sitting around and weeping, the master of ceremonies presents each one with a piece of cotton wool with which to wipe off his tears. This cotton is afterward squeezed into a bottle, and the tears are preserved as a powerful and efficacious remedy for reviving a dying man after every other means has failed. It is also employed as a charm against evil influences. This custom is probably alluded to in Psalm lvi. verse 8: "Put thou my tears into a bottle." The practice was once universal, as is found by the tear bottles which are found in almost every ancient tombs for the ancients buried them with their dead as a proof of their affection.

Perhaps no colored woman was better know in St. Louis than "Mother" Priscilla Baltimore, who died on Nov. 23, aged 81 years. She was converted under the preaching of Bishop Mc Kendree. She bought her own freedom, and later that of her mother, her husband and a brother and moved to St. Louis 45 years ago. The St. Paul's African Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in her home with seven members; now it has a membership of 2,000. Mrs. Baltimore, during her connection with the Church, paid $5,000 of the debt herself. She was besides an indefatigable collector, and her large acquaintance in the city proved serviceable. When Aunt Priscilla was seen approaching with a subscription book down town, judges, lawyers, and business men readily opened their pocket-books. By her will she left all her property to the Church.—Northern Christian Advocate.

A WONDERFUL [illegible]d SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

WE DON'T SELL TO PEDDLERS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER. LESSON VI. Nov 11th. SAUL REJECTED. (Sam. xv, 12-26.)

Saul was the king of Israel. You know how pleased the people were because Saul was so tall and noble looking. They thought how grand he would look leading their army. God chose Saul to be the king, told Samuel about him, and now if Saul is cast out, it must be for doing something to displease God. God would not reject Saul unless Saul first forgot Him. Saul obeyed for a while. He feared God and remembered all God had done for his people and for him. Then all was well. It would always have been well if Saul had always done this. But Saul liked his own way, and that was often not God's way. Saul had to choose. Saul loved his own way better than God's command. He knew what God wanted, but would not do it. God bore it all, but Saul at last was punished. God said he should not be king. Saul asked Samuel to pray for him, but Saul was not sorry for his sin, only sorry he could not be king any longer. God did not hear or answer Saul. He knew Saul's heart was not right. God calls us his children [illegible] but often take our own. [illegible] should [illegible] then we would be [illegible] heaven. Here are the two [illegible] "Obeying [illegible] God's [illegible] [illegible] means our way." Ask Jesus to help you [illegible] way [illegible]

[illegible] to a [illegible] gone by what [illegible] I is [illegible] but [illegible] must a hundred." O! that all could measure their years in this way, but how many measure them by long night watches, and almost fatal coughing spells, which could have been cured by a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup taken in season.

Out of the 260,000 Indians there are 100,000 who have discarded blankets and are wearing citizens' dress, wholly or in part.

Is your scalp full of dry, husky scales and pimples? Use Dr. Benson's Skin Cure. $1. Druggist.

Something new in a monthly magazine is found in the November [illegible] which has an article on "[illegible] and the Modern Age," illustrated by seven [illegible] scenes, drawn and engraved with an elaborateness which has hitherto been seen in holiday editions of poets only. The article to which these illustrations belong is by Mr. Henry C. Potter, who in an alluring and yet practical way shows the [illegible] effects that Wordsworth's poetry is capable of producing on the American life of this day. [illegible] is a paper by Dr. McCosh, ex-President of Princeton on "Thomas Carlyle and His influence on the English Language." The poetry is delightful, comprising a pathetic piece by George Parsons Lathrop on the little boy he lost—his only child.

A mob beat and maimed ex-priest O'Conner, at Berlin, Mich., for assailing Catholicity in a lecture. He only escaped death by swearing never to deliver the lecture again.

TELEGRAPH ITEM.

UTICA, June 9, 1883.

Frank W. Hoffman, clerk of the American District Telegraph Co., Says: "Having had occasion to use a medicine for kidney trouble with a lame back, I was recommended by one of our Utica druggists to use Hunt's Remedy, as he had sold a good deal of it to many of our leading families here with great success for kidney, liver and urinary troubles. purchased some and have only used three bottles. It has cured me, and I can truly recommend Hunt's Remedy to any one in need of the best medicine for these complaints."

THE WIDOW'S MITE.

In compliance with your request I send you a statement of my case. I will write you with a double purpose, first to thank you for the great amount of good your medicine, 'Hunt's Remedy,' has done me, and secondly, with the hope that my recovery will induce some sufferer to do as I did, "use the great specific and be cured." For nearly a whole year I was an invalid, unable to go out of the house, and a great part of the time confined to my bed, a living, powerless subject of the most dreadful of all diseases, "kidney complaint." From the long suffering I became weak from the loss of strength, with a lack of vitality, and very much reduced in flesh. All this time I was taking various medicines, and under the care of our family doctor, and not receiving an article of help. I had almost despaired of getting well when my attention was called to Hunt's Remedy by a boarder in my family. I commenced taking it (unknown to the doctor) with but little hope of relief. This unbelief was soon dispelled, however, as I daily began to improve. I continued the use of Hunt's Remedy (and to make a long story short) [illegible] bottles, dispensed with the doctor, and to the surprise of all who [illegible] great satisfaction, [illegible] All pains and [illegible] I gained [illegible] consider [illegible] glad [illegible] place my testimony [illegible] many [illegible] "Hunt's Remedy," [illegible] I well know, [illegible] [illegible]

Humbugged Again.

I saw so much said about the merits of Hop Bitters, and my wife who was always doctoring, and never well, teased me so urgently to get her some, I concluded to be humbugged again; and I am glad I did, for in less than two months' use of the Bitters, my wife was cured, and she has remained so for eighteen months since. I like such humbugging.—H. T. St. Paul.—Pioneer Press.

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night sweats and cough, prompt measures of relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs; therefore use the great anti scrofulous or blood purifier and strength restorer, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to Cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For Weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections it has no equal. Sold by druggists. For Dr. Pierce's treatise on consumption send two stamps to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

There is a newly discovered cave under Lookout Mountains. A party of gentlemen penetrated it 1,235 feet. They found many wonders, the chief of which was a huge waterfall over one hundred feet high, the sheet of which being one foot thick. It was this which prevented their going in further.

THREE WARNINGS.

DEATHS.

Our hearts were made sad with the news that came to our home last evening from Bells Circuit, Alomo, Tenn. Bro. Wm. Dwegans, the much beloved pastor was dead and buried. This news shocked my family and my whole congregation in which he had so many friends and was so well known. He was a good preacher and a better pastor can not be found. He was one of the young giants of the old Tennessee Conference and one of the young travelling elder of the same conference. He joined the travelling ranks in the year 1875 and was ordained by Bishop I. W. Wiley Nov. 26, 1881 at Franklin, Tenn. From that up to now he has filled his post like a man, and has made his mark where ever he has been sent. He loved our church and did all [illegible] for it and his people. In his death Sister Dwegans has lost a noble husband, the old church a strong worker, the people a good pastor, the children a cheerful shepher, the Conference a giant. We ask the blessing of God on his widow. Blessed are they who die in the Lord.

BETTER THAN EVER.

The Inter-Ocean For 1884.

More new features have been introduced in The Weekly Inter Ocean in the last twelve months than in any other paper published in this country. Retaining all the old specialties and departments, the publishers have aded illustrated biographical sketches of persons prominently before the public at date of publication; illustrated articles on important historical and current events, or in elucidation of antiquarian research, or interesting engineering and mechanical problems; cable letters from London covering the field of European news for each week; special contributions devoted to reminiscences of army and political life; and new series of articles given up largely to personal gossip and recollections of prominent literary people.

The Inter Ocean will remain uncompromisingly Republican; will maintain its present attitude on the question of protecting American industries; will continue to devote special attention to trade, transportation, and economic questions; will retain the departments of The Curiosity Shop (a current encyclopedia of curious, interesting, and valuable information called out by inquiries of subscribers); The Woman's Kingdom (devoted to the progressive movements in which women are interested); The Farm and Home (covering topics of special interest to farmers, their wives, and their children); The Veterinary (containing answers to questions as to the treatment of horses, cattle, and other animals by one of the best veterinary surgeons in the West); and Complications taking in puzzles, enigmas, conundrums, etc.), all of which are peculiar to the paper; will give as much space as hitherto to serial and short stories, original and selected sketches and poems, and with increased facilities for news-gathering in the shape of special wires to New York and Washington, and experienced correspondents well placed at home and abroad, will more than maintain its high standard for enterprise and accuracy in all departments of news.

While so many improvements have been made in The Weekly Inter Ocean; the price has been reduced to one dollar per year, postage included. This puts a large eight-page (there are frequently twelve pages) paper in the hands of the reader at the low rate of two cents per week. The reduction in price and the recent improvements make The Weekly Inter Ocean not only the best family newspaper in the country, but the cheapest. The subscription price of The Inter Ocean is as follows:

Weekly Edition per year, postage paid $1.00
Semi-Weekly Edition per year, postage paid 2.50
Daily (including Sunday) per year. 12.00
Daily (excluding Sunday) per year. 10.00
Wednesday's Edition (with Musical Supplement) per year 2.00
Saturday's Edition (sixteen pages) per year 2.00
Sunday's Edition (sixteen pages) per year 2.00

Editorial Notes.

A compulsory school system has been adopted in both France and Italy. France is to have forty thousand new schoolhouses built within the next ten years.

A merchant in Jacksonville, Florida, has sold during the year sixty pianofortes and organs to colored families. The Inter Ocean says: "That is a good deal better than selling the colored families." And we say Amen.

"Education," says Edmund Burke, "is the cheap defence of nations." It is the safeguard of liberty. Let a free country foster it, and it will prove its salvation; in neglecting it, a nation digs its own grave. Let us educate at any cost.

We learn from the Methodist Advocate that the committee chosen to make arrangements for holding a Methodist Educational Convention met at Chattanooga, Nov. 5th, and decided, on account of the death of Dr. Fuller, to postpone the holding of the convention.

The telegraph announces that the Missionary appropriation for the Louisiana Annual Conference for the year 1884 as $5500 being $500 less than for the year now closing. Central Alabama $2,500, Little Rock $5,000, Mississippi $5,500, Texas and West Texas $4,000 each.

Circulars have been issued from Mobile in behalf of a fund to erect a monument to Raphael Semmes, who attained some notoriety during the late war by injuring the commerce of his country. He performed no deed, and exhibited no trait of character, entitling him to such a recognition by any of his country men.

After a vacation of about three months, the Methodist Preachers' Meeting was held in Wesley Chapel last Thursday at the usual hour. The minutes were read, and the temperance work was resumed, and meetings were arranged for the following districts in the order named: At Pine, Tuesday, Nov. 13; Mt. Zion, Wednesday, Nov. 21. These meetings are to be addressed by the pastors of the churches. It was voted that in the future the Preachers' Meeting be held at the New Orleans University, on each Thursday, at two o'clock p. m.

An Brenham (Texas) says: "Georgia has a Confederate pension list amounting to $25,000 per annum. One hundred dollars is allowed for the loss of a leg above the knee; $75 for the same loss below the knee; $70 for an arm above the elbow, and $40 for an arm below." These amounts, obtained by taxation, are paid as a bonus to ex-rebel soldiers who lost their limbs while some of the Georgia papers are advocating the separation of the school tax, so that colored children shall not derive any benefit from taxes collected from white taxpayers; it may be interesting to know whether the colored taxpayers of Georgia are not assessed to support these Confederate soldiers, whose shattered frames testify of the part they played in the task of seeking to perpetuate Negro slavery in this country. The two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil extorted from the race in this country gives the colored people a claim upon the wealth of the nation but these rebel soldier what do the colored people owe them?

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

East Tennessee Conference.

The fourth session of the conference was opened in Wesley Chapel Chattanooga, Oct. 10th. Bishop Thomas Bowman greeted the brethren with a pleasant smile and with encouraging words which inspired a cheerful, home-like feeling in each bosom. Rev. A. J. Fletcher acted as secretary, with W. T. Marley, O. Hypshire, H. N. Brown and B. H. Johnson assistants. The transfer of Rev. E. Provine from the Tennessee Conference was announced. The usual routine work progressed without friction or phase of unpleasantness. No item was slighted through hurry nor deferred for lack of time to consider. The representation of the two districts occupied the greater part of the first day. The Chattanooga district was represented by Rev. E. Provine. His report was carefully prepared and recounted many trials and successes, as among the principal events of the year's efforts. Rev. S. J. Harris, represented the Morristown district. He showed, in a report of moderate length, that the various interests on the work had been materially advanced and that the year had closed pleasantly. The examination and passage of character was not, in a single instance, interrupted by an arrest. It was shown that all the preachers had remained at their posts, notwithstanding the peculiar hardships endured, working faithfully to promote the prosperity of the Church. There seems to be a growing ambition, from the presiding elders down, to do more and better work in broadening and strengthening the Master's cause. The resolutions adopted by the conference on temperance, education, church literature and Sunday-schools were as strong as they were timely. Since the suspension of the Methodist Advocate at Atlanta, the conference had been deprived of the advantage of an official organ. This was felt to be a serious drawback. Fortunately for Methodism in East Tennessee, the conference by an almost unanimous vote adopted the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. It pledged its hearty support to the paper, and avowed its determination to labor to place a copy into every family within the bounds of the work. The conference was pleased to welcome representatives from three of our flourishing schools: Rev. J. Braden, D. D., President Central Tennessee College; Rev. Wilber P. Thirkield, Dean of Gammon Theological School of Clark University, and Rev. J. S. Hill, Principal of Morristown Seminary. The first named has for nearly a score of years been prominently connected with our educational work in the South. In scholarship, experience, Christian integrity and devotion to work, he has few equals in this part of the field. His addresses to the conference during this visit were pointed and weighty, leaving an impression not soon to be effaced. Bro. Thirkield is a young man, earnest of soul and winning in manner. His eloquent words fell with peculiar power upon all who had the pleasure of hearing him. Bro. Hill was as much as ever absorbed in his work at Morristown. He is doing a noble work which deserves to receive the most unstinted encouragement at the hands of all our preachers. There were several other distinguished visitors present: Dr. Savage, who spoke of the work of the American Bible Society, a work which the Bishop afterward strongly commended; Dr. J. J. Manker, who delivered an excellent address on the conditions of success in the Christian ministry; Dr. C. O. Fisher, who made a telling speech on the importance of an educated ministry among our people; Dr. Stowe, agent of the Western Book Concern, who, besides looking after the accounts of the preachers, delivered by request a very interesting address on Methodist literature, which made a good impression; Rev. A. P. Melton, who spoke of the educational wants of our people; Rev. [illegible] Carver, A. M., who spoke effectively twice during the session; Rev. W. H. Rogers, who gave an interesting account of his labors as Sunday-school agent; Rev. S. Tinker, who spoke bold words in favor of pushing the work of the Freedmen's Aid Society, and Rev. O. H. Bullington, representative of the Tennessee Conference. The anniversaries were enthusiastic and well attended. Four were held. Sunday was a memorable day. The limited seating capacity of the church made it necessary for us to secure the Circuit Court room for holding religious exercises in order to accommodate the large concourse of people. The Love Feast, at 9:30 a. m., was conducted by Rev. S. J. Harris. A great number of testimonies were given at this meeting. The Bishop preached an able sermon at 11 o'clock, and afterwards ordained Revs. S. M. Burnett, J. Crawford, and S. Masoner deacons. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. W. P. Thirkield preached with unction and power. The Bishop afterward ordained Revs. O. Hypshire, H. N. Brown, C. Boyd and A. Douglass, elders. Dr. Braden preached at 7 p. m. to a large crowd. He spoke plainly and succeeded in riveting the attention of his hearers. The collection for the day amounted to $57.78. Rev. Wm. Binford was granted a location at his own request. Rev. Jas. Yarnell was readmitted. Kingston was chosen as the place for holding the next session of the conference. The delegates to the General Conference stand as follows: Ministerial, Rev. H. N. Brown; reserve, Rev. S. J. Harris. Lay, Dr. J. P. Andaews; reserve, G. W. Mays. The statistical returns show a membership, including probationers, of 2890; raised for ministerial support, pastors, presiding elders and Bishops $4,153.90; missions $165.35; Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, $5.97; Church Extension, $41.35; Tract Society, $7.79; Sunday-school Union, $14.10. Freedmen's Aid Society, $2.08; Education, $10.05; American Bible Society, $6.80; Conference Claimants, $11.84. The conference received a draft on the chartered fund for $30 and $23 as its pro rata of the Book Concern dividend. The conference adjourned Monday a little before noon. The brief address of the Bishop before reading the appointments was delivered with much fervor. The brethren caught its spirit and all seemed to accept of their allotment in the old time Methodist fashion. On the whole the session was pleasant and harmonious.

In the death Brother Charles P. Pemberton we have lost a valuable member from the ranks of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Amid a crooked and perverse generation his light shone all around him. He occupied several important offices of the church and always took a prominent part in all that pertained to the good of the community in which he moved. He was not without his faults, or rather errors, but so many were his noble traits, and so many marks of glorious Christian character shone forth in his life and acts reaching to souls, and helping the fallen and distressed, and supporting the church in trial and peril, and beaming with benevolence and good will to all, that we think only of his noble faith and bearing, and account him an example of Christian fidelity worthy of our following. He was a strong supporter of the church of his choice; always defending her against the assaults of enemies, and ever most anxious to purify and keep above rebuke the little flock of which he was member and class leader at the time of his death. He was also a member of the Board of Church Extension of the Texas conference, and a trustee of the Wiley University. In these and other offices of the church he served successfully. The best of all, when he came to the gateway, beween this and the other world, the light of heavenly day shone about him. Prayer and praise were on his lips, joy in his heart, hope filled his soul, and so his spirit fled to the shores of golden light, and hover about his memory in blessed thankfulness and hope, "We sorrow not as those that have no life." Glorious hope of immortality!—the welcome song of angelic hosts have ushered him into the presence of the blessed.

Dear Editor, I have failed, because of many things, to write these tokens of esteem for the departed until now. But we wish to tell the friends of Brother Pemberton, and the church that "Our people die well." Clouds gather about us arising from the disturbed state of affairs in the South, false brethren and unfaithful friends discourage us, yet where faith holds fast, the shout of victory comes at the dark waters when most grateful to our imprisoned spirits. Strong faith and the glory of holiness is yet our heritage. Brother Pemberton left a family, a wife and small children, to look forward to a glorious reunion. He took good care to provide for the dear ones dependent on him by a good insurance policy. Thus kind to all, and careful for the welfare of those dependent on him, he departed this life August 30th, 1883, to join and swell the throng of the good on the golden shore of redemption.

The National Reform Association.

This is a society organized to maintain existing Christian features in the American Government, and to secure a suitable religious amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Among the features of the government which this association aims to conserve are our Sabbath laws, the use of the Bible in public schools, prayer in National and State Legislatures, and the Christian law of marriage in opposition to the law of divorce legislation now so common. Some suitable change in the Constitution is deemed by this society to be indispensably necessary since that instrument in its present form is extensively regarded as an expression of the secular theory of government, and is employed as an argument against all that is Christian in the usage and administration of our government. During the past year this society has greatly enlarged its operations. Four district secretaries gave their whole time to the work, holding conventions, addressing churches and public meetings, circulating petitions, and extending the membership of the organization. Eighteen conventions and nearly three hundred public meetings were held. The members enrolled during the year and contributing to its funds were about three thousand, representing all denominations of Christians, and including many prominent and influential men. The Hon. Felix R. Bruno, of Pittsburg, is president. During the coming year this association will still further extend its operations; at least eight district secretaries will be employed, some throughout the year, others during the most favorable months. Two conventions were held in Vermont in June, two in Minnesota during July, and nine thus far during September and October. The annual meeting of the National Association will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, on the 11th and 12th of December next.

For the publications of this society, and any information bearing on this movement, address the corresponding secretary, T. P. Stevenson, 1520 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Notes From Nashville.

DEAR BRO.—Rev. Jesse Price writes that he is closing up the conference year on the West Tennessee District successfully. The death of W. Dwegans, who was stationed last year on the Bells Circuit is very generally regretted. He was a very active and energetic young man. The place has been supplied by the presiding elder, who appointed Rev. Daniel Collire, P. C., who recently joined our church from the Baptists. Seay Chapel in South Nashville, is rapidly nearing completion, and will be a very valuable addition to church accommodation in Nashville. J. BRADEN.

The Union Signal tells a terrible story from Lincoln, California. A boy only twelve years old was found to be the victim of leprosy and was taken by the authorities to an island used as the asylum for such unfortunates. The medical authorities decided after careful investigation that the disease was induced by smoking cigarettes. The warning is evident.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

TEXAS.

W. McKenzie, Cold Springs: "The people made good crops, but some of them lost all by fire. October 17th Capt. Mitchell's gin-house was burned down and the colored people lost twenty-[illegible] bales of cotton. They are members of our church. The people including the whites, are helping them."

E. Jones, Hallettsville: "The church was dedicated October 21 by Elder [illegible]. He preached a noble sermon. We are [illegible] has expired. He has been a father to us. He superintended the building. A collection of $33 75 was taken up. The sacrament was administered to 49 persons. A collection of $5 60 was taken for the elder."

J. Smith, Beaumont: "My last quarterly conference for the year has been held. The church in town is moving on slowly. There were some additions this quarter. It has been a hard year, but some improvements were made on the church property. The presiding elder will close his four years with the good wishes of all. We are at work on the church, and we hope that all we do will be pleasing to the Lord."

Isaiah Clayton, Corpus Christi: "Our Sabbath-school work is prospering. There is no preacher in charge here, and has been none since Bro. Turner left. I am doing what I can in the Sabbath-school."

LOUISIANA.

Baptiste Drew, Booneville: "We had a protracted meeting for two weeks. There are 38 converts, 18 on probation, and the mercy seat is yet crowded. The young men are improving, and there is less card playing and whisky drinking among them. Bro. Murrall is doing good work."

P. B. McDonald, Longstreet: "Have just ended a protracted meeting of three weeks, with six converts, eight backsliders [illegible] church, and 22 on probation. I have had many disadvantages to labor under [illegible]. The people [illegible] of former mismanagement and I had to win their confidence. The District Conference encouraged me. The brethren raised $11 for building, and the lumber is on the ground, and we expect the church at Grand Cane to be up in one month."

W. R. Butler: "The church at Mansfield has been nicely painted. The foundation of Shady Grove church has been laid. At Bondeches the missionary money has been collected. V. Chapman is holding the fort, and we are moving on with our new church."

S. R. Hason, Shreveport: "On Scott circuit we are moving along very well. A protracted meeting at [illegible] resulted in 10 converts 2 additions. We are raising the benevolent collections. There is a great deal of sickness here. Six children died within a distance of half a mile in two weeks. Sister Hannah Jones, wife of a local preacher died on the 16th. She was converted many years ago, and lived a truly Christian life."

[illegible]

J. T. [illegible]: "At my [illegible] the people were glad to receive me, but their spirits are low [illegible]. Pray for my success."

H. Dunlap, Mansfield: "Our fourth quarterly conference was held September 7-8. Elder Price invited H. Erwin, a local preacher, to preach. There was a large attendance. Reports showed the circuit to be in good condition. The pastor was by resolution commended, and the people will be glad to receive him another year."

J. Sinclair, Spencer Circuit: "The good Lord has been with me. Conversions this year 23, added to the church 25, baptized 11, received in full connection 25. Received for pastor, $85 60; for missions, $8 60; for bishops, $1 50; for church extension, $1; for Freedmen's Aid, $1. We are working hard to complete our new church before Conference. We received $50 from the Church Extension society. Elder H. W. Key will preach for me to-morrow night. Pray for me."

John Crawford, Chattanooga: "[illegible], as I have learned the Chattanooga circuit was left out of the published list of appointments, and I find it does not appear in the presiding elder's list of quarterly meetings. I desire you to know that the circuit is still in existence, with a future growing brighter and brighter. Our first quarter was held October 20 and 21 at Harrison. We had a good time. The collection was, I believe, the largest ever raised at that point on such an occasion. The presiding elder, Rev. E. Provine, preached effectively. Yesterday, at Pleasant Grove, I baptized two children and received four persons into the church. You may expect some subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN shortly."

MISSISSIPPI

A. P. Payne, College Hill Circuit: "Elder J. C. Eckles was with us October 27 and 28 to hold our fourth quarterly conference, which was the beginning of his work on the district and in the South. Though Saturday was a bad day many of the brethren met and the business of the conference passed off nicely. At 11 o'clock Sunday Bro. Eckles preached a sermon to the people of Providence church, which was elevating and full of life, and which will not soon be forgotten. He stayed with us from Friday until Monday, and every action seems to have gained the hearts of the people. I may also say that this circuit is doing well. In the last protracted meeting nine were converted to God and as many joined the church. On this circuit many subscribed for the SOUTHWESTERN, and I am determined to collect up the last cent that is due for the paper by Conference. Also, vigorous and extensive efforts will be made to get as much money as possible for Rust University. We ask the prayers of all the brethren."

L. L. Shumpert, Columbus: "A large number of the members and friends of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Columbus, with the most profound secrecy to the pastor and his family, planned and carried into execution the most agreeable surprise that I ever witnessed. A few minutes after 8 o'clock Wednesday night, 24th instant, we heard an alarm at the door of the parsonage. They were invited to come in, and in they came and took possession of the parsonage entirely. Several young ladies, both Methodists and Baptists, of which the party was composed, entered the parlor, opened the organ and began to give us some of the sweetest and best music that we ever heard. Miss Mary Raney, Miss Mattie Evans and several others performed on the organ. Meantime, the party having been so well and completely organized their committee of arrangement, among whom were Mrs. Mollie Toland, Mollie Powell, Bettie Williams, Mrs. Fannie Moore, Ellen Green, Sue Young, Mattie Thompson, Anna Davis, Miss Anna Roberts and a great many more too numerous to name, who had gone into the dining room and had spread one of the most delicious suppers. Perhaps, Mr. Editor, it would take up too much of your valuable space to name all the good things that the sisters and friends of their own free will and accord had prepared, brought and spread, and invited all to eat. When my eyes beheld the table, and all thereon, the willing hands, the cheerful and merry hearts that had prepared it, which was a great surprise to us, I could but say as the Apostle Peter, 'Lord it is good to be here.' Our presiding elder was present and expressed himself most highly pleased. After supper the party retired. May God bless the party and speed the time that they may return."

Support of Ministers.

I have been examining recently the financial statement of our minutes, and have come to the conclusion that our annual conference, and for that matter other annual conferences should make inquiry in our conference as to amounts promised and received for support of the pastors. It is interesting reading if one could keep from becoming discouraged afterward. The Scriptures declare it to be the duty of the people to support their ministers. See Numb. 18, 21; Deut. 12, 19; Mal. 3, 9, 10; Matt. 10, 9-10; 1 Cor. 9, 11 and 15, and Tim. 5, 17, 18. The saying of some that preachers ought to perform manual labor daily as other men and preach on Sabbaths is too far back to be noticed. Every minister of the Lord Jesus must have money to make his house comfortable and supply himself with the material with which to do the Master's work and keep him from being governed by those among us who have this world's goods. The preacher's wife is a woman that ought to wear clothes just like any other woman; desires to have a home where she and her little ones will be comfortable and healthy, just like other women. If a preacher, wife and two or three children are to eat, sleep, and wash and iron, and study in a house with one or two rooms, the whole will be a complete failure. He desires to and must educate his children like other people. A preacher ought to have a home as a place of retreat, if nothing more. Then he must have money to clothe his family and himself. Often times I have recognized the preacher's wife by her dress, commoner and less of it than other members of the church. His children should not be compelled to go to church, to hear their father preach, looking shabby. His family is to be fed. Not out of the scrap pile, but from the same source other families are supplied. He must have [illegible] to pay his tailor, for, indeed, as Bishop Foster once said, we are the class of preachers who can not afford to go dressed shabbily anywhere. Let the life and character of the minister talk all they are able, but the minister, besides this, must have clothes sufficient to meet other public men and strangers without shame. I know that a good coat often hides a fool, but the minister makes a sad mistake who thinks he can best succeed among any people, anywhere, by looking like a tramp. Then he must pay the grocer, tailor and landlord when the bills are due, or expect the whole neighborhood to look upon him as a cheat and a fraud. Members of his church will often join the rabble who have not given one cent to support him. Ministers, the people declare, must be honest. Lawyers, doctors, merchants and school teachers may fail to pay, the State may repudiate its debt, but, when the minister gets behind in his accounts it is in everybody's mouth; and strange as it may seem, they never hunt the cause, but only want the fact that the minister failed to meet his obligation. Then the minister must have a separate room where he can privately commune with his God and his books. It seems to me a preacher ought to have a private "study" wherever he goes. In this he must have books, papers, pens, ink, stamps, religious and other periodicals that he may study and be God's counsellor to His people. But he must pay for all these. He needs many things, and if his salary is not paid him he cannot get them, or else if he gets them, he cannot pay for them, and thus disgrace himself. How many poor preachers have been ruined, as ministers, for life because of debts they have contracted for themselves or others, and could not pay, because the people they served would not pay. Many pastors have allowed members to use their names in buying books, periodicals and other things, and had to suffer, because the people refused to pay and he did not have the money to meet the bill. God never called any preacher to be a mendicant. They are God's freemen, ambassadors for Him, and ought to receive more money than they get, that they may turn no hungry, needy [illegible] from their doors. Last year there was estimated, as necessary to give a comfortable support to the preachers in the Tennessee Conference, $13,811 45. There was paid $8,780 88, leaving a balance of $5,030 57 due yet, that will not be paid this side the judgment day. Thus the 5236 members, in full connection, only gave about $1 60 each to furnish the pastor's salary and house rent.

When we remember that this is only about thirteen cents per month for each member, and that it includes house rent for the preacher, too, it is astonishing how they lived. The average salary for the year is $188 22. This is as bad as the salaries in the pioneer days of Methodism in this country. Talk about keeping husband and wife together under such circumstances! Why, it is barely possible to keep body and soul together. The time has come when a better state of affairs should begin with us. Something is wrong somewhere, either with the local methods of raising and handling this money or with the hearts of the people. If the former, it should be remedied at once, and if the latter, ministers should begin a series of meetings with the membership at the altar, and there, like the Apostles of old, wait the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Our Cooksville Meeting.

MR. EDITOR—You will learn from the following that Cooksville is in the Ex-prairie Circuit, Meridian District, Mississippi Conference. We have no church of our own at this point, but one built by the members of our church and the Zion Methodists. They out-number us in members, [illegible] possible to get our members to join them. In this they might be successful, but our members are too loyal to the old church, and they are in it to stay. Wild stories have been told them by the pastor of the Zion's relative to their origin and colored Bishops. But none of these things move them. The agreement made some years ago was that we should hold meetings on the first and third Sundays of each month, and the Zions on each second and fourth. To prevent us from holding our quarterly conference on the 20th and 21st inst, they convened in a mock district conference on the 30th and adjourned on the 21st. This would take up our time exactly, which they intended doing. Saturday, at 1 p. m., we, with about 25 of our quarterly conference brethren, put in our appearance and found them in session. After being introduced to the conference we seated ourselves. Then their pastor asked the following question, which in itself instructed them what to do: "Brethren, Elder Campbell is here; shall we adjourn and throw away all our work, or shall we proceed with our business?" The answer was, "No, we will not adjourn." Mr. Ask, their Secretary, who is a Christian gentleman, told them that their action was wrong; he said that the time did not belong to them, and that it was right for them to adjourn. But their hearts, like Pharoah's, were hardened and they would not. Did their action do us harm? The following will tell: We convened our conference the next morning, Sunday, in which we had a grand time. We preached to a nice congregation of attentive hearers; after which the stewards presented their claims and collection, amounting to $28 was taken up. This paid the bishop, elder and something to the pastor and to the benevolent cause.

May the Lord bless the good people of Cooksville. Their great kindness enabled us to leave almost forgetting that we had been troubled by the Zions, though their pastor did treat us with much contempt. May the Lord bless him, as he is an ignorant man and did not know any better, at least we don't think he did. Some of his people treated us very kindly.

Yours in Christ,

J. CAMPBELL.

The Solidarity of Methodism.

Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Baptists and Episcopalians have felt the disadvantages of their system. Prof. Tucker, of Andover Theological seminary, presented before the last national council of the Congregational churches a paper upon the difficult question, how acting pastors or stated supplies could be recognized and invested with fuller powers, and brought into closer official relations with the churches they serve. The fact that the stated supplies in his denomination are two and a fourth times as many as the pastors, with a continual increase in that direction, seems to necessitate some such action. The precise piece of ecclesiastical mechanism that will fit the case has not yet, however, been discovered. In the Presbyterian church, the committee on pastoral relation, in the report to the general assembly in May, 1881, after deploring the number of vacant churches, among other causes of their being in that condition specifies the following: "A want of system in bringing those who are able and willing to work and the vacant churches together." To meet this need the committee recommend the following plan: A committee in each presbytery to prepare a list of the vacant churches and the unemployed ministers, "who shall send" the ministers to the vacant churches, and that all unemployed ministers, able for service, who refuse to be placed on the list and work under the direction of the presbytery, if not excused, be retired, and so reported to the general assembly. This plan approaches very nearly to the system under which the Methodist presiding elders work.

But this persistent seeking of one's own selfish preferences in the settlement of a pastor not only results in the general disadvantage of leaving many churches without a pastor to suffer and decline, but it often produces unhallowed and pernicious agitations. The choice of a new pastor often imperils the well-being of a church. Divisions and distractions spring up. Said Rev. John Angell James:

"It must be admitted that, on these occasions, our principles as independents and our practices as Christians have not unfrequently been brought into disrepute. We have been accused of wrangling about a teacher of religion till we have lost all our religion in the affray; and the state of many congregations proves that the charge is not altogether without foundation."

Again he says:

"We carry into the sanctuary and into the church our pride, our self-will, our personal taste. That spirit of mutual submission, brotherly love, and surrender of our own gratification to the good of others, which the word of God enjoins and our profession avows would keep the church always happy and harmonious, and enable it to pass in safety through the most critical circumstances in which it can be placed. Instead of seeking the good of the whole, the feelings of too many of our members may be thus summarily expressed—'I will have my own way.'"

Our itinerant polity, properly worked, will insure against these evils. The spirit which Mr. James recommends as the remedy for the evils incident to the Congregational polity—mutual submission, the surrender of personal preferences to the greatest good—is the basis of our itinerancy. Both ministers and societies with us waive personal choices, in order that the great ends for which the church is founded may be more fully accomplished. Is it objected that, under the itinerant polity, churches sometimes receive undesirable ministers? I reply, Do not churches which call and settle their ministers often find themselves mistaken in their choice, and burdened with an undesirable minister whom they cannot easily get rid of? But if a Methodist society gets an undesirable minister, is it not better thus than to be left a year, possibly several years, without any pastor; and can it not, for the general good, be patiently borne for a year, when exchange can easily be effected?

It is also true that a Methodist minister will sometimes have an undesirable society; but that is not so bad as to have no place, and to be obliged to go about the country exhibiting himself and seeking a call. He will certainly bear it, if he [illegible] servant of God, when he considers it part of an administration for the general good. What then is the conclusion to which we come, as regards the question of church polity? We learn that the denominations which retain their personal preferences in deciding the pastorate, do so to the detriment of the general good; and that those who forego their personal preferences, do so to the advantage of the cause at large. It cannot be impertinent to ask, Which is the more Christian: to please ourselves, as ministers and churches, to the injury of the cause of God, or to sacrifice personal preferences for the good of the cause as a whole? And which kind of church polity recognizes the fundamental principle of the gospel, that we are "members one of another?"

1. It is very plain, therefore, that the itinerant economy of Methodism by which its preachers are assigned to their fields of labor, which has occasioned so much criticism, and the other great connectional features of our church polity are founded upon the most vital principle of God's spiritual kingdom, that we are "members one of another;" yea, more, our church polity is deeply rooted in the fundamental race principle, which recognizes the whole human family as "members one of another." Let this principle be everywhere discarded in common life and the race will not survive one generation; let it be discarded in the church of God, and weakness and disintegration must follow.

2. From this discussion we see the logical and vital relation of our "general superintendency," to the economy of Methodism, and how incongruous a diocesan episcopacy would be in our peculiar polity.

3. We see, too, the indispensableness of the presiding eldership in our church organization, and especially to the working of our itinerancy. It is not only a legitimate but a necessary concomitant of our polity—a connecting link and an administrative factor.

4. In this light, too, we see why our peculiar tenure of church property, especially the clause required to be put into all the deeds of churches and parsonages, is necessary. It is a wise and legitimate provision for any church which maintains an itinerant ministry. Without it the ministers could not be stationed. No society which assents to the itinerancy can logically refuse to conform to this condition. The unifying bond that binds us in a common life must include the sanctuary as well as the individual. The church property must yield to this self-sacrificing spirit for the good of the whole. The same thing is true of all our connectional institutions and funds, the book concerns, the colleges, etc. They must be held by such tenures that they may subserve the general church.

5. Our system of providing for the superannuated preachers by funds raised from the societies at large is also germane to our peculiar church economy. Having shared in whatever disadvantages are involved in the itinerancy for the good of the cause at large, and the societies having reaped the advantages of these self-sacrificing labors, it is fitting that the pecuniary support of the worn-out servants of the church should be made a common cause.

6. So also all our connectional collections are a part of a great scheme. The collections for foreign missions, for home missions, for church aid, for freedman's aid, education, etc., are put before all our people on the principle that we are "members one of another."

7. The administration of discipline upon ministers by conferences, rather than by individual societies, as in other denominations, is also based on this principle. An itinerant minister belongs to the church at large, and is liable to be appointed anywhere.

8. But this peculiar economy cannot endure the inordinate self-seeking, the unscrupulous scheming, the selfish combinations of overambitious men, either in the ministry or in the laity. These things are foreign to its spirit, and the effect of them can only be ruinous. Every instance of such exhibitions is a breach of good faith with our polity. The germinal center and the animating spirit of the polity of Methodism is self-sacrifice of the individual for the good of the world. It should be administered on this principle. It can be perpetuated on no other. An inordinate, scheming selfhood will destroy it.—Dr. Dorchester in Methodist Quarterly.

Saved by a Hyena.

Mr. Gobat, a missionary to Abyssinia, retired on one occasion, in a season of deep spiritual depression and gloom, into a cavern, and there poured out his heart in earnest supplication, beseeching that God would not desert him, but encourage him in his trials. He remained in the cavern for some time. When he arose from his knees, his eyes had become accustomed to the darkness, and he saw that he had been there with a hyena and her cubs, which yet had not been suffered to attack him. At the very time when he deemed himself forgotten, he received this striking manifestation that the God of Providence was nigh to shield and protect him.

"On another occasion this animal was made the instrument of his deliverance from a violent death. While laboring among the wild tribes of the Druses, a messenger was sent from one of their chiefs, whose influence it was important to secure, with a message entreating Mr Gobat to visit him. The latter, however, was unable to do so, in consequence of indisposition. A second messenger repeated the invitation, but still, contrary to Mr. Gobat's expectation, he was prevented from complying with the chief's wishes. A third messenger prevailed on him to set out, by the assurance that if he went at once, he might spend the night with the chief, and be ready to return in the morning so as to join a ship about to sail for Malta, in which Mr. Gobat was anxious to embark. On their journey the guides lost themselves in the [illegible]

There are few more certain evidences of the deterioration of man's moral nature than the increasing tolerance with which he views low standards of conduct, as held by others in that sphere of society in which his lot is cast. Honesty naturally revolts from dishonesty, purity from impurity, virtue from vice; and although goodness and mercy are tolerant of the sinner as a person, they are never tolerant of the sin. That world-wear which brings a man to look contentedly, or even with pleasure, upon forms of evil in others which before would once have roused within him the feeling of indignation at the wrong and of pity for the offender, is very far from being a thing to be proud of, for it reveals a wrongful acceptance of things as they are, and a growing disbelief in man and the redeeming power of Him who has made man. There are many hateful things in the conventionalisms which rule in human society, but there is none which is more hateful than that which accepts evil as necessary evil, and is willing to make the best or (the worst) of it as it is. What can be said of the moral worth of a community in which it can still be a matter of question whether virtue or honesty is a possibility? And, above all, what can be said of a Christian, who repeats approvingly the cynical question of the profligate? To be so tolerant of evil that contact with it evokes no feeling of antagonism, is a sure evidence of moral and spiritual danger; to be so tolerant of it as to believe that little but evil exists, or is to be looked for, is a certain sign of accomplished moral degradation. There are few enough St. Georges in the world, and their number will not be increased until men are more ready to recognise dragons, and to smite hotly and unsparingly accordingly.—Sunday School Times.

Doing Nothing Wrong.

Mr. Spurgeon once said to his people, "Many church members think that if they do nothing wrong and make no trouble, they are all right.

Not at all, sir; not at all.

Here is a chariot, and we are all engaged to drag it up. Some of you do not put your hands to pull. Well, then the rest of us have to labor so much the more, and the worst of it is, we have to draw you also. While you do not add to the strength that draws, you increase the weight that is to be drawn.

You may say, 'I don't hinder,' but you do hinder and you cannot help hindering. If a man's leg does not help him in walking, it certainly does hinder him. Oh, I cannot bear to think of it, that I should be a hindrance to my own soul's growth is bad indeed; but that I should stand in the way of the people of God, and cool their courage, and dampen their order—my Master, let it never be.

Sooner let me sleep among the clods of the valley, than be a hindrance to the least work that is done for Thy name."—Christian Guide.

A Colored School and Education.

A correspondent from Bruley Landing to Baton Rouge, Truth: A few days ago I received from Mr. F. A. Woods, the teacher of the school for colored children, an invitation to visit that institution; and as it was several years since I had visited a colored school, this invitation was accepted. I would not be true to say that I went entirely without dread of being somewhat nauseated with the musky perfume ascribed to our colored brethren, the more so as the day was far from cool, and I had learned that Mr. Woods had 70 children—41 girls and 38 boys, attending his school. But I was most agreeably disappointed—to employ a paradox. The church which also serves the purpose of a school-room, was as sweet and clean as a church should be, while the youngsters themselves were the perfection of rustic negro purity. In point of discipline, I have seen many a squad of French soldiers worse than they; while their work—their writing, reading, spelling, geography, etc.—was of a nature so well gotten up as to throw into the shade not a few of our more pretentious white schools. And all this with the scantiest facilities, for Mr. Woods has neither black-boards, desks nor charts. Much credit is certainly due that gentleman. He is unquestionably, as good a manager as he is an efficient teacher.

But, apropos of education. I do not think our people here will ever be greatly benefited by public schools until we have that estimable system of compulsory education which obtains in England and New England. There is unquestionably a disposition on the part of parents to prefer their children to run around like what either the prophet Isaiah or Jeremiah—which was it?—designated as "wild asses' colts," than to attend the public schools. Let us have compulsory education! Let us have inspectors to see that every parent who fails—even once—to send his or her child or children to the public schools, without some just cause or impediment and don't let the cause be elastic—let us see, I say, that every such sinner be taken by the collar, hauled before a justice fined, and "hocked" until such fine be paid. Here, in my humble opinion, is one of the stepping stones to the moral and material progress of our dear old Southland.

The National Debt Record.

Democratic statesmen seem to be nervous about the rapidity with which the Nation's debt is being paid under Republican rules. At the close of the war the National debt amounted to $2,756,431,571. The interest on this vast sum was nearly $151,000,000 yearly. Democrats all over the land foretold in doleful words that it never would be paid, and that the bonds in time would be worth only their value as waste paper. Republican statesmen set about the great undertaking of arranging a financial system to meet the great emergency. It needs no argument except history to show that they have succeeded. During the Lincoln and Johnson administrations $323,659,698 of the debt was paid. During General Grant's two terms $413,496,441 was paid. Under President Hayes $199,625,277 was paid, and so far under the Garfield and Arthur administration there has been paid nearly $281,000,000, making a total of $1,217,649,746, or more than one-half the entire debt of the Nation.

This has been done while the people of the land scarcely felt the burden. Nay more, they have prospered as no other people on the face of the earth have prospered. It is to-day "the land flowing with milk and honey"—upon whose fair and fertile acres and upon whose busy cities the eyes of the world are looking with longing admiration, while the Nation has been paying its honest debts with such rapidity it has remembered its crippled heroes, and poured out millions in pensions, carrying upon its rolls 304,000 disabled heroes. In view of such facts, the men who would inaugurate a change of system, and place in power the men and the party which principally caused the great debt and the threatened disaster, will assume a large responsibility. If any man of sense will offer a single good reason why Democrats should be placed in power and sweeping changes made in all the affairs of the Nation let it be done in the light of these facts, which cannot be successfully denied or set aside.

Do You Think to Pray?

Ere you left your room this morning
 Did you think to pray?
In the name of Christ, our Saviour,
Did you sue for loving favor
 As a shield to-day?

When you met with great temptations
 Did you think to pray?
By his dying love and merit
Did you claim his Holy Spirit
 As your guide and stay?

When your heart was filled with anger
 Did you think to pray?
Did you plead for grace, my brother,
That you might forgive another
 Who had crossed your way?

When sore trials came upon you
 Did you think to pray?
When your soul was bowed with sorrow,
Balm of Gilead did you borrow
 At the gates of day?

The Bible vs. Dancing.

Rev. Dr. Patton, in an able article in an exchange on the subject of dancing, thus sums up his conclusion:—

Having carefully examined every text in the Old and New Testaments in which the word occurs, we are led to the following conclusions:—

1. That dancing was a religious act among idolators as well as worshipers of the true God.

2. That it was practiced as the demonstration of joy for victories and other mercies.

3. That the dances were in the daytime.

4. That the women danced by themselves; that the dancing was done mostly by them.

5. No instance is reported in which promiscuous dancing by the two sexes took place.

6. That when the dance was perverted from a religious service to mere amusement, it was regarded as disreputable, and was performed by the "vain fellows."

7. The only instance of dancing for amusement mentioned are of the worldy families described by Job, the daughter of Herodias, and the "vain fellows." Neither of these had any tendency to promote piety.

8. That the Bible furnishes not the slightest sanction for promiscuous dancing as an amusement, as practiced at the present time. The dancing professor of religion must not deceive himself with the impression that he is justified by the word of God.

Why He Brought Them Back.

A small boy with an intelligent face went into a fruit dealer's store and depositing a box of grapes on the counter stood looking down.

'I don't want the grapes, my little fellow,' said the dealer. 'I've got as many now as I can sell. Take them away.'

'They are yours,' the boy said looking up.

'Mine?'

'Yes, sir. Yesterday evening I came along here and took this box of grapes from the stand at the door. I knowed it was stealin', an' my mother always told me not to take anything that didn't belong to me, but I couldn't help it. Just before I left home my little sister that was sick said: "Oh, if I had some grapes like them I saw down town, I could eat 'em." We didn't have no money an' nobody knowed us 'cause we had just moved into the house. Mother washed clothes, but when sister got sick she had to quit. When I took the clothes home the lady told me to come next day for the money, but when I went there the house was shut up and the people was gone, so we didn't have money to get grapes with. Mother said, "Never mind, we would get some money after a while." I saw her go into the other room, an' when I watched her she had her face buried in a pillow and was prayin.' I come away down town an' stood aroun' a long time waitin' to get a chance, an' after a while, when you wasn't lookin', I took a box an' ran away with it.'

'But why did you bring it back?' the dealer asked.

'Because,' replied the boy, choking down a sob, 'when I got home the little girl was dead.'—Arkansaw Traveler.

Prohibitory laws do not prohibit, says the opponent to prohibition. This argument has about as much force in it as would the argument that hanging does not prevent murder, and the penitentiary stealing. There will always be found men to break any law; but who thinks of abolishing the law because of it? Rather do they, if possible, make it the more stringent. Even so let it be with the vice of drinking. What if some do defy the temperance enactments made, keep on at it, till drinkers shall be made as odious as any other law breakers.—Christian Recorder.

The Doctor's Mistake.

One of the old mistakes of the profession was to think that there were no other ways of curing disease except those which had been handed down from former times.

It is not to be denied that the Doctors have done great things for the world. But when it comes right down to the real curing of disease, it must be admitted that Brown's Iron Bitters has done enough to earn the generous gratitude of this whole present generation, including the medical profession. There are no mysteries or secrets about the compounding of Brown's Iron Bitters. This preparation of iron is the only preparation which will not injure teeth or stomach. In this it is beyond comparison better than the other preparations, which are mischievous and injurious.

You need not fear a mistake in trying Brown's Iron Bitters. Your druggist has it. It gives vigor to the feeble, and new life to the dyspeptic. Children take it, not only with safety, but with great advantage.

Of the 28,000,000 of people in Italy 17,000,000 can neither read nor write. King Humbert's new law requiring parents to send their children to school has awakened the bitterest opposition from the Pope. The Protestant schools are doing a wonderful work in Italy. The Pope speaks of them as secular and atheistical, but his voice is not heeded, the attendance upon them is constantly increasing.

At the Anniversary of the Sunday school Union and Tract Society, held at Cincinnati on the 3d inst, Dr. Freeman said the relation of the Tract Society to our missionary work was overlooked. For the Freedmen in the South, we issue, in connection with the Sunday-school Union of our church the Good Tidings which has been published since 1869 at a cost of more than $27.000. The whole number of copies circulated during the year is 1,189,200; total number of pages 4,756,800. Refering to our Sunday schools he said that we have 250,000 teachers and 1,600,000 scholars, all of which means the upbuilding of Christian character on a common foundation, God's word being the instrument.

The brother who wrote us that he had preached to a hundred people, and they had responded with a collection of six cents, no doubt has cause to feel troubled. Another brother in Texas asked leave of the pastor of an adjoining place to hold service in his church on a certain day, the congregation being without a place of worship and waiting the completion of their building. Consent was given, the [illegible] were holding service, and had taken a collection, when the strange pastor ascended the pulpit, took charge of the services, announced that he would preach in the evening, demanded and received the collection of the day, and dismissed the congregation. The [illegible] say that if such preachers are to Christianize the world it is on "a slow wheel of progress."

Recently a woman who kept one of the most disreputable houses in this city was murdered in the midst of her sin and guilt. Wicked as this woman had been it was the desire of the people that she should have a Christian burial. An application was made to several clergymen to attend her funeral but they all declined. Finally Rev. Dr. Ahrens, pastor of the German M. E. Church South on Dryades street, was called upon, and this good man, just like his Master, went to the house of the [illegible] with words of instruction, warning and admonition to any and all who might be present. We [illegible] who in this instance acted the Good Samaritan? We [illegible] and we turn away from the [illegible] but we have [illegible] for the men who go [illegible].

[illegible] Wentworth, correspondent of Zion's Herald, makes the following mention of certain church dignitaries who were at the late session of the Genesee Conference:

"That pleasant-faced gentleman [illegible] the [illegible] Christian [illegible] Rev. Dr. [illegible], of Central New York Conference. May he live and edit a [illegible]. [illegible] just ready to rush around [illegible] Rev. Dr. Buckley, of the Christian [illegible] York city). He is a [illegible] "[illegible]" looking [illegible] be expected. [illegible] Sanford Hunt, [illegible] at home, for he [illegible] Good Dr. De [illegible] and bright eyed, and [illegible] of his French ancestry [illegible]"

Keeping to the Right.

The study of history, ancient or modern, is in order at all times, especially these times. With the general facts and figures of the dead nations of antiquity there should be no hesitation, no difficulty in turning to chapter and page. All of those who have gone before us have helped more or less to make the history we are now reading, while the daily occurences of the present are put upon the record and will soon become history. The Methodist Episcopal Church has a wonderful history. A history to be thankful for in many respects. Our fathers generally had the good sense and grace to meet all emergencies as they providently came along. Taken as a whole they made a grand and glorious history. We are not ashamed of it. Still the Church is making history, and those who come after us will have it to read. To-day we read the record of our fathers with very little embarrassment. It is well for us not to forget that those who come after us will soon be reading up our records. And it is for us to say whether they shall do it with shame or pleasure. The Negro, "our brother in black," is before the church for consideration. He is certainly here, and notwithstanding all that has been said about his colorization and the redemption of Africa through him, he is just as certainly here to stay, and was never attracting more attention than now.

The M. E. Church, South, after waiting nearly twenty years, holding on to her anti-bellum views, having nothing to offer the Negro race but to hoe corn, raise tobacco, groom horses, scrub floors, run errands, and be the drudges of the whites, is coming to the front, and is crying out for his educational rights, his elevation and Christian enlightenment. And we certainly bid her a hearty God speed. There is work enough to do in this direction. That [illegible] of "altar against altar" that scares some of [illegible] in the North scares nobody here, save those who desire to have the Negro kept in ignorance that they may the better [illegible] him. We are more concerned about the position of the Methodist Episcopal Church. We do not think that she can afford now to go back from the position she assumed just after the war.

We shall hail with delight the day when white men can talk ten or fifteen minutes to a colored congregation without telling them that they belong to an inferior race. We know that it is easy to assert, but where is the evidence that the colored people are unequal in intelligence to the whites? We have in the South, on the same territory, both colored and white conferences, and though our white brethren have enjoyed all the advantages of freedom for two hundred years, [illegible] do their conference work any better, to put it in a mild form, than the colored. Nor do they pay any more per capita for the [illegible] and benevolent purposes of the Church. In schools with anything like equal opportunities the children of colored people make as rapid advancement as those of the whites. And since emancipation more per capita of the colored people have learned to [illegible] than the white. [illegible] of race inferiority are not founded in fact. We fear they are the result of prejudice.

If the Church "believes in the brotherhood of man, and recognizes no differences among men founded on accident of color or condition," we think that she should honor that faith; honor it or abandon it! With imaginary results, defeats or disasters the Church has nothing to do. She never loses by adhering to and applying principle, but is uniformly covered with shame and disgrace when she turns aside from it. It is as true of churches as individuals "he that will save his life shall lose it." We sometimes hear this:

"Christian education of the masses will result in a voluntary and necessary mixing on a common plane. This is now the policy of the Church. This, too, suits both races, and as fast as young men and women leave the schools with heads and hearts trained, they recognize and acknowledge each other whatever may be their extraction."

This is certainly a very pleasant theory, and we wish it were in harmony with the facts in the case, But we are acquainted with a series of, to us, painful events that spoil it. Take only one: At the great National Educational Convention held at Ocean Grove, last summer, a number of educated colored Christian gentlemen were present and delivered addresses no way inferior to those of their paler brethren. But was there anything like a "voluntary mixing on a common plane?" The furthest thing in the world from it. Here in this great center of religious influence, caste, a thing of society, made the most invidious and unchristian distinctions, and these men were denied the commonest civilties of life.

What a contrast. Fifteen years ago the Methodist Episcopal Church declared there should be no distinctions on account of color, that a black man was as good as the Caucasian. Of all the American churches she declaimed loudest against distinctions growing out of race or color. Is it true that this grand old church is to go back on her past record, repudiate all that she has said about the brotherhood of man, and recognize a difference among her members founded on the mere accidents of color or race? Is she to copy the worst side of Southern character, yield to a mere prejudice that is a thousand fold meaner than avarice, repudiate a Christian principle, and adopt a wicked "policy?" We are not prepared to accept of this as the voice of the Church. But as this is a question which touches and materially affects the future of our Church in the South, we cannot "[illegible] like dumb, driven cattle." The Church has fought with too many beasts in this Ephesus to begin a retreat. Better lift up the standard and press on.

Rev. Thomas Kennedy.

Rev. Thomas Kennedy was born in Alexandria, Va., in or about the year 1818, and died in this city Nov. 1st, 1883, aged about 65 years. He was born a slave, and came to Louisiana with his owners, a family of Baily's about forty five years ago. He was converted to God when quite young and joined the Methodist Episcopal church. He was among the first members of the old Gravier street Methodist church, and in 1844 when Wesley Chapel, the first regular Methodist church for the colored people in this city was built, he was one among its most faithful founders. In those early days he had already felt the Divine call to the ministry, and successively received exhorter's and local preacher's license. Being a slave, he was rather circumscribed in the exercises of his ministerial gifts, but to the full extent of his ability, he continued to preach Christ and him crucified, until freed by the fiats of war and the will of God. The suffering and persecutions which he, and others of those Christian fathers of his class, underwent in this city, with its then intolerant Romish hatred of Protestantism, can scarcely be estimated. His quiet, uncomplaining patience rested in the comforting knowledge that "our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." No sooner was he declared to be free, he confered not with flesh and blood, but in the glory of his freedom, continued to preach as never before. December 25, 1865, the day upon which, the now sainted Bishop Thomson organized the Mississippi Mission Conference in this city, Bro. Kennedy presented himself for admission on trial. He was the third, in a class of twelve admitted on that day. Of this number there linger among us only five. Revs. Anthony Ross, Wm. Marrell, Emperor Williams, Henry Green and Samuel Osborne. The latter two are honored to the front, as paternal superannunates; the former three continue in effective work; while seven, a holy number, have gone home to their reward. At this first conference, Bro. Kennedy was ordained to deacon's orders, by Bishop Thomson, and appointed to Franklin and New Iberia, where he did excellent work, under the Presiding Eldership of Rev. B. K. Diossy, who preceded him to the Saints everlasting rest. The following two years he spent in Donaldsonville, during the latter year of which he successfully held the first camp meeting ever held in that section of the State, and the only one that had thus far been held in this conference. December 22d, 1867, he was ordained an elder in the church, by Bishop Ames, who has also preceded him to the Kingdom of glory. He next spent another year in Franklin; then three years in Natchitoches; thence he returns to Donaldsonville and adds three more years to his previous labors here. In the conference of 1876, after ten years of hard and faithful service he took a supernumerary relation, so as to rest a while; but he had no rest, for when informed by Dr. Daily, presiding elder of the Upper Coast district, that he was needed to supply the work at Ashland and Lafourche, he volunteered into service, doing efficient work as a supply all that year. Pressed by the needs of the times, and his own devotion for the cause he loved so well, at the following annual conference he had his relation changed to effective again, and was appointed to Woodlawn. In 1878 he was appointed to Napoleon circuit, in 1879 to Assumption, and in 1880, Bishop Harris appointed him to Algiers, where he remained three years, doing the work, and living the life of an evangelist. Bro. Kennedy's last appointment was at La Harpe street church, to which he was appointed, last February by Bishop Hurst. He was not here long however before his sweet spirit, quiet and loving disposition, began to attract to him and his church many friends and attendants. But in the midst of his labors and successes, the Master was preparing for his honorable discharge from the warfare, to take him to rest and eternal peace. About seven months ago he had a paralytic stroke from the effect of which he never fully recovered. Notwithstanding his sufferings and infirmities, he continued in his pastoral work until he almost died in his tracks occupying his pulpit on Sunday night, Oct. 21st, and returning home to lie speechless from that night until Nov. 1st, instant at 2 p. m., when his weary spirit took its flight to realms of endless bliss. Though speechless he was conscious to the last, and gave many signs and evidences of his well-grounded hope. A respected Christian father in Israel, and a devoted and consistent minister of the word has been called off from the wall of Zion; has crossed the Jordan, and has gone home to his reward. May the mantle of this glorified Elijah fall upon some faithful and worthy Elisha. Bro. Kennedy leaves a devoted wife, the companion of nearly forty years pilgrimage, to mourn his loss. She clung to him as an ivy to the oak. This dear, aged sister, is blind and helpless, needing the kind benevolence of the many friends of brother Kennedy. We commend her to the consideration and charity of the church and conference in which Bro. Kennedy spent his life. Our loss is his eternal gain. We shall see him again.

"Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

Shall our Public Schools Go?

To most Americans few questions could be more absurd, to their very marrow they feel that it is utterly impossible to preserve our free institutions without free public education. As they expect the nation to be perpetual, they of course take it for granted that the breath of our national life is never to be withdrawn. But strange as it may sound, unwilling as some are to recognize the fact, ridiculous as the statement may be pronounced by others, it is nevertheless true that in this land there is a mighty host determined that our system of free schools shall go. As to the attitude of the Roman Catholic Church there can be no question. Here is a mighty power, marshaled in solid column, directed by some of the acutest minds on earth, making a tireless attack on our public school system. As to the religious dogmas of this church we have nothing to say; whether the Pope or church or both be infallible, whether the Virgin Mary be immaculate and a proper object of worship or not with none of these questions do we meddle here. We look at Romanism not as a Methodist, but as an American citizen. We know that on the part of all true Romanist questions of duty are not decided by their reason or private conscience, or by a written revelation, but by the anthority of what they deem the infallible church, or Pope. To this authority they submit their reason and conscience. And to this anthority they look for the only reliable interpretation of the written revelation.

Their pretended objection to our system of free schools is that they give only a secular or intelectual education. Just here Romanists and certain prominent Protestants in the South unite. But the real objection on the part of the Romanists is not that the education is secular as intellectual. They are wiser than their Protestant adversaries; they recognize the truth that man has a physical, mental and moral nature that cannot be disentangled and nourished apart any more than flesh and blood and bone can be nourished apart in the process of digestion. They have found, after centuries of experience in the best schools in Europe and America, that knowledge goes from intellect to conscience as surely as blood goes from the heart to the lungs. And they know that education genders independence of thought which is the deadliest foe Romanism can have. Here in the State of Louisiana Romanism and Bourbonism are one, and have determined that our free schools shall go by withholding the means necessary to their support. This is the situation. American frees chools are the fortress of free thought. Here our children are taught not to accept anything upon authority, but to demand a reason for every thing. The best instructor is he who teaches this lesson the most thoroughly, but free thought is a deadly foe, both to Bourbonism and Romanism, and these stand with their hands upon the throat of our common schools resolved to strangle them. As a nation we are Christian and Protestant. Christianity is an established religion, not by law, but by public sentiment. Hence our Sabbath laws, and the customary devotions at the opening of courts and legislative sessions. But Louisiana as a State is under the influence of Romanism Bourbonism, with a school population of 273,845, and with less than $70,000 appropriated for their education. No State in the Union pays so little per capita for the education of her children than Louisiana. The great Exposition is coming; intelligent men and women from all parts of the Nation will be here. Men of wealth will also be here. And no people know better than the people of New Orleans how to make themselves agreeable. But intelligence and wealth are not captivated these days by simple courtesy and sociability. Men of wealth and intelligence with families, seek homes where there are opportunities for the education of their children. The people of this great city and State need the influence of a strong free-school system. At this point where every other kind of strength concentrates, we need the strength of a thorough system of education.

Mrs. Elvira O. Williams.

At 9:30 p. m., on Tuesday, Nov. 6, 1883, passed from labor to reward, after a brief illness, Mrs. Elvira O. Williams, a native of New York and for many years a resident of New Orleans, in the 56th year of her age. At the time of her decease, as from its first organization she was a very earnest and faithful member of Ames Methodist Episcopal church; she was also in the employ of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, as one of its missionaries in this city, and in charge of the mission school at Wesley Chapel. In the church, and among a large number of acquaintances outside, in fact by all who knew her, the intelligence of her sudden death was received with feelings of profound sorrow. She gave to her beloved church a full measure of her means, and her undivided affection from the first to the last moment of her sojourn on earth. She stood by it, equally steadfast in its years of prosperity and adversity. She had strong convictions of the right, and expressed them when she judged the occasion demanded, but none could be more gentle or sympathetic when wounds were to be comforted. Her mission school enlisted her affections in no ordinary degree; and amid numerous difficulties and trials (the greatest being ill health) she was comforted by the abiding faith that she was doing work approved by her Lord Jesus. Sister Williams is at rest, after a life well lived, and work well done. She will be missed at the weekly prayer meeting of her church, of which she was a regular attendant; from her mission school by her pupils; from every place she walked in this life. But she leaves behind a precious legacy, in addition to her example and abundant Christian testimony, a devoted and only son, who has inherited her inclinations to serve the Lord, her love of the truth, and who is now the highly esteemed Sunday school superintendent and a member of her church. May God comfort him in his affliction, and bless him for his own, and his sainted mother's sake. The funeral services, at Ames church on Wednesday afternoon were conducted by pastor, J. C. Vaughan, assisted by Presiding Elder, L. P. Cushman; the grave was covered with flowers copiously showered upon it by loving friends.

The Elections.

On Tuesday, Nov. 6th, the Republicans increased their majority in the Connecticut Legislature, and their vote in the State.

In Massachusetts Ben. Butler was defeated for Governor. Mr. Robinson, his Republican opponent, receiving a majority of over 10,000. The balance of the ticket and the Legislature elected is also Republican.

In New York the Republicans elected a majority of the Legislature; and their candidate for Secretary of State was elected by over 19,000 majority, caused by whisky men scratching Mr. Maynard, the Democratic candidate, for his temperance record. The balance of the Democratic State ticket was elected by majorities of 10,000 and 16,000. Seth Low, Republican, was re-elected Mayor of Brooklyn.

In New Jersey Leon Abbett, Democrat, was elected Governor by about 4500 majority, and the Democrats retain the Legislature by a small majority on joint ballot.

The Republicans carried Pennsylvania by majorities of 16,000 and 17,000 for Auditor and State Treasurer.

Maryland elected a Democratic State ticket and legislature by reduced majorities, the Republicans making considerable gains over previous years.

In Virginia the Democrats defeated the Mahone coalitionists by a majority on joint ballot in the Legislature, and over 20,000 on the entire vote of the State. In Charleston, S. C., 100 guns were fired in honor of the event.

Nebraska increased its Republi can vote over last year by 10,000 on candidates for Supreme Court Justice and Regents of State University.

Minnesota elected a full Republican State Ticket.

Mississippi elected to its Legislature, Senate—35 Democrats, 2 Republicans; House—100 Democrats, 20 Republicans and Independents of all kinds. The Fusionists appear to have vanished from the scene of their late jubilant campaign. What became of them? Once in a while one is heard of creeping into a small and unimportant office, as if he had been overlooked in the management of the count.

On the whole the Republican outlook has been improved. The defeat of the demagogues, Butler, Mahone and Fusion leaders in Mississippi, is hailed with rejoicing everywhere. The triumph of Republicans everywhere with leaders representative of clear convictions of right is apparent, and carries with it a lesson that should be heeded by the party in Louisiana. The defeat of a Democratic candidate in New York because of his moderate temperance record, is both singular and significant, and the triumph of a Republican by such a mishap is no cause for rejoicing; neither is the defeat a trophy the whiskey men will long boast of, as it will spur the prohibitionists to greater activity in future contests. The intolerant appeals to race prejudices in Virginia have been noted all over the country, and demonstrated that Bourbonism is still a chief Southern characteristic to be of necessity antagonized by all the modern forces of civilization.

Seeking Light.

MR. EDITOR—Recently I heard a so called preacher say in the course of his sermon that "the stable in Bethlehem where Jesus was born was made out of a solid rock and that the manger in which they laid him was solid granite." I do not have many books to read and am not what would be called a well instructed man, but I would like to have you tell the readers of the SOUTHWESTERN what authority men have for making such a statement. INQUIRER.

We are as much in the dark as our correspondent. We have heard just that statement made in the pulpit but we do not know by what authority. That man made his boast that he was no "book larnt" man. We do not know his authority except it be found in his profound ignorance. We were thankful that he was not a Methodist.

Now we ask, in all true candor, if it is not time to shut down and keep out of our pulpits all men who glory in their shame. The Lord said to his people "I will give you pastors according to mine heart which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding." Of course we had nothing to say as to this man's moral character, he had the "holy whine" and that pleased some of the people, but he had no ability to feed them "with knowledge and understanding." His talk was sounding brass and tinkling cymbal. Let us give no encouragement to men who cannot or will not learn. Let us as Methodists keep all such out of our pulpits.

New Orleans Under Democrat in Rule.

The condition of this city, touching its school facilities, police, drainage, and general policy, was never worse off than at present; not even excepting the much abused days of Republican supremacy in this city. While some of the Northern cities are having public evening schools in addition to their regular day schools, New Orleans, to-day, has not a single public school open. Our shame of a police force, is unpaid, and subsists according to the City Item, by a system of blackmailing. The Violet Hall affair, in which seventy eight innocent peaceable and inoffensive colored men and women were arrested and fined $2.50 each, is a fair example of this system.

The following, from the Evening Chronicle, a paper in sympathy with the present administration, is a fair statement of the situation:

"Now even, at the time we write, the creditors of the city cannot get their just dues, a deficiency is very likely to be the consequence of present complications; our streets are not in as good condition as they ought to be; our drainage is woefully deficient; a large portion of the city is periodically inundated and impassable after a respectable shower; our police force is but a helpless skeleton, and our public schools are closed during half the year.

The surveillance of the guardians of the peace is eked out by private watchmen and Farrel's protection police, and the purification of our streets and buildings by the Auxiliary Sanitary commission.

Instead of electric lights we have miserably poor gas, hardly sufficient to make darkness more visible, and our water is unfiltered, of a cafe au lait color, and rather a solid than a liquid.

These and more are the principal draw-backs from which we have been suffering, lo! these many years, and is it, therefore, unnatural, that dissatisfaction should be the rule among the overburdened taxpayer, who is forced to pay his imposts for specified objects for which he, nevertheless, does not receive the promised equivalent?

For The SOUTHWESTERN.

ASCENDED.

[Tribute to the memory of Mrs. E. C. Williams, who died Nov. 6, 1883. Published by request of a friend.]

One more loved one gone before us,
Gone to make our pathway straight,
Stretching through the gloomy valley
To the gleaming, pearly gate!
One more sainted life transplanted
To the garden of our Lord;
One more angel joins the chorus,
Chanting songs of sweet accord.

One more star in heaven gleaming,
Shedding forth a golden ray
O'er the path of loved ones toiling
Up life's rugged, weary way.
One more jewel in the kingdom,
Placed by Him who rules above,
In the precious, royal setting
Of his pure and perfect love.

Angels called her from the mortal—
Called her from its sin and strife;
From the death of living sorrow
To the joys of endless life.
Angels whispered, "Come up higher,"
As they guide her heavenly flight
Up the shining, spiral stairway,
To the land of perfect light.

Cheer up, mourners, for your loved one,
Freed from sorrow, grief and pain,
Hovers o'er on shining pinions,
Drawn by love's magnetic chain;
Cheer up, mourners, for the Father
Guards your friend with wondrous care,
And will help her care and holy
Till you join her 'ever there."

Cheer up, mourners! cheer up, loved one,
For a Messenger Divine,
Whispering words of holy comfort,
Comes with garments all ashine;
Comes to guard you from all evil,
Comes to bless you with her love,
Comes to guide you o'er the pathway
Leading to her home above.

Let us bow in meek submission
'Neath the heavy iron rod
Laid upon us in affliction
By the mighty hand of God.
As we strive to pierce the curtain
Veiling Him, the Holy One,
Let us whisper in our anguish,
"Not my will, but Thine, be done."

MISSISSIPPI.

Elijah Graves, Pelahatctrie: "I came to this circuit, Feb. 5th, 1883, finding 2 small churches, with a membership of 75,—no church, no quarterly conference records, nor any regularity—in any thing. I am thankful to say that we have had a good time this year. We have purchased both church and quarterly conference record's, and they are being kept properly; have purchased a pulpit Bible; also, we have erected a small parsonage with $40, only one room in use; $25 in the treasury for a church bell; and $6 worth of Sunday-school books this year. Our Sundayschools have not been very flourishing, caused from late organization. We have had spiritual blessings. Down to the present we have added to the church in full, 35; conversions, 18; on trial, 19. The circuit is very poor. Our financial report is not so good, paid pastor $192.25, paid elder $22.50 to date.

TENNESSEE.

We are glad to learn that Rev. S. L. Clark, pastor of the Mount Zion charge, Central Tennessee Conference, is in the midst of a wonderful work of grace. Quite a large number have been converted already, and Bro. Clark is still pushing the battle.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER. LESSON VII. DAVID ANOINTED. (1 Sam. xvi: 1-13)

Saul was sorry he must give up being king, but he was not sorry for his sin. Samuel was full of trouble. God spoke to him again, and told him to go and see Jesse. This Jesse lived in the little city of Bethlehem in Judea. You all know that city, and could tell a great deal about the little baby once born there. God said he would find a new and better king. Poor old Samuel was afraid to go for fear Saul would kill him if he found a new king. This new king was to be one of Jesse's sons. Samuel trusted God and went his way to the little city to find the king God wanted. Samuel did not know the man God had chosen. No one but God knew. Jesse had eight sons, and seven of them came before Samuel. One of them was taller than the rest, and Samuel saw how grand and good he looked and chose him, but God said no. Then Samuel said, Jesse, are these all your sons? No, said Jesse, there is one more, but he is away tending the sheep. Samuel told Jesse to send for him; so he was brought before Samuel. When he came before Samuel the Lord told Samuel to pour the holy oil on his head, for this one, this young David, Jesse's youngest son, was to be the king in Saul's place. It must have seemed strange to them all. He chose David, so it was right. God never changes. He sees the heart and knows his servants. The boy or girl who loves him many wear an old ragged dress, may have to black boots, or do some other hard work, but God sees their heart and they are his. What does that mean? It meant to be king to David; but to us it means to be a king's child. God is King of all, and those who love him and obey him are children of the King.—Western.

The Housekeeper.

It is a good plan to dip a broom into warm water and shake it thoroughly before sweeping a carpet, and at intervals during the process, taking care to have clean water each time; in this way the dust is prevented from rising, and the carpet looks bright and clean. The sweeping should be done as much as possible one way, the length of the room, not cross, or zigzag.

LEMON BUTTER.—Dissolve one cupful of sugar in the juice of one large lemon; beat three eggs light; add and mix well; add a piece of butter the size of a walnut; cook till thick, stirring constantly.

TEA CAKE.—Two pounds of flour, half pound of lard, half pound of sugar, (not too coarse,) one tablespoonful of baking powder, two eggs, a few caraways; rub the lard well into the flour; well beat the eggs, add sufficient warm milk to make the whole into a moderate paste; bake as soon made, about half an hour; not too hot an oven. To be cut open, and buttered hot.

APPLE PUDDING, BAKED.—Butter a basin well, and line it with a thin suet crust; fill it as closely as possible with apples cut rather small; add sugar, a little lemon peel and a wineglassful of water. Put on the cover. Bake it in a steady oven for two or three hours. When half done [illegible] a [illegible] under the [illegible] the juice should boil [illegible] sugar over.

[illegible] of fine flour, [illegible] and four whites of eggs, and a very little salt; fry them very thin, in fresh butter, and between each strew sugar and cinnamon. Send up six or eight at once.

ALMOND SPONGE CAKE.—Twelve eggs, leaving out the whites of [illegible] of white pulverized sugar, two ounces of bitter almonds, half pound of [illegible] good weight. Blanch and roll like a paste. While rolling almonds, wet them with rose water [illegible] by [illegible] which will take [illegible] Break the eggs in a [illegible] and then break them up with [illegible] Add the sugar and beat until light and creamy; then beat the almonds in, then add the flour, stir it lightly, bake in a square pan, ice on bottom and cross with a knife.

The Gardener's Monthly calls [illegible] on a [illegible] as [illegible] one of [illegible] of modern botanical science to the practical horticulturist, as by this knowledge he can save many a valuable tree. When one has been [illegible] roots get injured, and the supply of moisture, in the best cases, is more or less deficient. Any dead branch, or any weak one, should therefore be at once cut away.

SOUP OF COLD FOWL.—[illegible] over quarter of a pound of rice, wash it in several waters, and put it into a saucepan with two quarts of boiling water, and a teaspoonful of salt, and let it boil, put with either two cupfuls of the scraps of cold poultry, or the carcass of a cold chicken or turkey, and let them boil together until the rice is very soft and the poultry boiled to shreds; add, while soup is boiling, sufficient boiling water to prevent the rice burning; when the rice and poultry are tender pour them into a sieve set over an earthen bowl, remove the bones, and rub the rice and poultry meat through the sieve with a potato masher, after rubbing the rice and poultry through the sieve put them again into the sauce pan, stir with them about a quart of milk, or a sufficient quantity to make the soup of the consistency of cream, season it palatably with salt, pepper, and a little grated nutmeg, let it boil once, and serve as soon as it boils.

BEEF AND TOMATO SOUP.—Cut about a pound of the remains of cold roast beef, beefsteak, in half inch dice, put them into a saucepan with a quart of tomatoes, peeled and sliced, or a can of tomatoes, and boil these ingredients slowly together; if the soup is thicker than thick cream, add enough boiling water to make it the right consistency, season it palatably, let it boil for an hour, and then serve it. This soup may be varied by boiling a cupful of rice with it, of course adding sufficient water to make it the proper consistency, and seasoning it palatably. Or bread may be cut in half-inch dice, fried brown in plenty of smoking-hot fat, and put into the soup at the moment of serving.

Prohibition on Sinai.

BY REV. W. T. SLEEPER.

(EXODUS xx. Hab. ii. 12, 15.)

On Sinai's lofty height
Our God in dreadful might
Said: "Thou shalt not."
Thou shalt not steal, nor kill,
Nor do thy neighbor ill,
For this [illegible] fulfil—
"Thou, thou shalt not."

The trumpet blast [illegible]
"No license" was the word,
A wrong to do.
[illegible] thy neighbor love,
Goodness and truth approve,
And give to God above
The honor due.

"Tempt not thy neighbor's lip,
The cup of death to sip,
Thy woe 'twill be.
Build not thy house with blood,
[illegible] the [illegible]
Which the Almighty God
Will lay on thee.

That is a false order of reckoning, therefore, which includes as a factor in the problem of Republican success an expected stampede from the Democratic camp on account of sympathy with any sort of reform. Such chickens never hatch according to calculation. The prevailing Democrat, imbued with the true Democratic spirit, has a knack of gratifying his sentimental views in politics without bolting his party ticket. This makes him inconsistent, of course, and gives room to question his sincerity; but it does not alter the fact that he is always particular to have himself counted against the Republicans when an election takes place, which goes to show that the theory of disrupting the Democratic party by coaxing its members over to the Republican side with new moral issues is one from which very slender results are to be expected.—Globe Democrat.

You never get to the end of Christ's words. There is something always behind. They pass into proverbs; they pass into laws; they pass into doctrines; they pass into consolations; but they never pass away, and after all the use that is made of them they are still not exhausted.—Dean Stanley.

Dr. Howard Crosby says: "Giving is worship. Every one should give, whether rich or poor. The cent of the straitened is as much needed for worship as the dollar of the richer. The poor man should no more omit giving because of his poverty than an [illegible] praying because of [illegible]. No Christian has a right to except this from his worship."

Elder Wilson, one of the Mormon preachers recently indicted for vagrancy in Clayton county, Ga., is preparing a defence. He says that the authorities of the Mormon Church have authorized him to make it test case, and, he adds, that they will supply all the money he requires.

"Its too late to save me, said a poor old drunkard, when urged to reform. "It is too late to save me, but, oh! for God's sake save the boys." With the consciousness of his own degragation, he pleads not for himself, but "for God's sake, save the boys."

Lady Beautifiers.

Ladies, you cannot make fair skin, rosy cheeks, and sparkling eyes, with all the cosmetics of France or beautifiers of the world, while in poor health, and nothing will give you such rich blood, good health, strength and beauty as Hop Bitters. A trial is certain proof.

In Philadelphia, last year, thirty-four murders were each traceable to intemperance, and twenty-one assaults with intent to kill proceeded from the same cause. Of over 38,000 persons arrested 75 per cent. were caused by intemperance; of 18,305 persons committed to city prisons, more than two-thirds were the consequence of intemperance.

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever.

My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I
Could not move!
I shrunk!

From 228 lbs., to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign, but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

Dublin, June 6, 1881. R. FITZPATRICK.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters.

A Kentucky paper says: "We were walking along the street the other day when we noticed a heavy set, black-haired man. We soon discovered him to be Bishop Kavanaugh, of the Methodist Church, who is eighty years of age, and in active service as a bishop. Taking him by the arm, we expressed our surprise that his hair should be so black. 'Yes,' said he, 'I tell my brethren that I have been so green that I can not get ripe.'"

"Are your domestic relations agreeable!" was the question put to an unhappy-looking specimen of humanity. "Oh, my domestic relations are all right," was the reply; "it is my wife's relations that are causing trouble."

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. feb14-1y

BETTER THAN EVER.

The Inter-Ocean For 1884.

More new features have been introduced in The Weekly Inter Ocean in the last twelve months than in any other paper published in this country. Retaining all the old specialties and departments, the publishers have added illustrated biographical sketches of persons prominently before the public at date of publication; illustrated articles on important historical and current events, or in elucidation of antiquarian research, or interesting engineering and mechanical problems; cable letters from London covering the field of European news for each week; special contributions devoted to reminiscences of army and political life; and new series of articles given up largely to personal gossip and recollections of prominent literary people.

The Inter Ocean will remain uncompromisingly Republican; will maintain its present attitude on the question of protecting American industries; will continue to devote special attention to trade, transportation, and economic questions; will retain the departments of The Curiosity Shop (a current encyclopedia of curious, interesting, and valuable information called out by inquiries of subscribers); The Woman's Kingdom (devoted to the progressive movements in which women are interested); The Farm and Home (covering topics of special interest to farmers, their wives, and their children); The Veterinary (containing answers to questions as to the treatment of horses, cattle, and other animals by one of the best veterinary surgeons in the West); and Complications taking in puzzles, enigmas, conundrums, etc.), all of which are peculiar to the paper, will give as much space as hitherto to serial and short stories, original and selected sketches and poems, and with increased facilities for news-gathering in the shape of special wires to New York and Washington, and experienced correspondents well placed at home and abroad, will more than maintain its high standard for enterprise and accuracy in all departments of news.

While so many improvements have been made in The Weekly Inter Ocean, the price has been reduced to one dollar per year, postage included. This puts a large eight-page (there are frequently twelve pages) paper in the hands of the reader at the low rate of two cents per week. The reduction in price and the recent improvements make The Weekly Inter Ocean not only the best family newspaper in the country, but the cheapest. The subscription price of The Inter Ocean is as follows:

Weekly Edition per year, postage paid	$1.00
Semi-Weekly Edition per year, postage paid	2.50
Daily (including Sunday) per year	12.00
Daily (excluding Sunday) per year	10.00
Wednesday's Edition (with Musical Supplement) per year	2.00

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION

By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.

Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of these are familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social meetings and home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold sifted from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. R. W. Todd. "Having carefully read your [illegible], and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

The cures which are being made by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 Girard St., Philadelphia, in Consumption, Catarrh, Neuralgia, Bronchitis, Rheumatism, and all chronic diseases by their new Vitalizing Treatment, are indeed marvelous. If you are a sufferer from any disease which your physician has failed to cure, write for information about their new Treatment, and it will be promptly sent.

The Testimony of a School Teacher.

Mr. H. L. Soper, principal of the High School at Pepperell, Conn., in relation to a matter which has given him much anxiety and pain: "My wife and I have both ... Hunt's Remedy, and find it really a superior article. A year since ago my kidneys became weak and sluggish owing to ... and finding relief in ... continued its use until I had used four bottles, when I became well. Since my cure I have suggested its use to a great number of people, who I know have been benefited by using it." And to substantiate this statement, Mr. ... Clark, assistant superintendent of the High School, says: "I can certify to the value of Hunt's Remedy, having received great benefit from its use. ... commenced ... when my kidneys became affected with inflammation of the passages, but the ... of this valuable medicine effected the disease. I can now ... recommend it to all suffering as I was." May 31, 1883.

A Rubber Bag.

This most remarkable statement was made by Mr. Frank B. Lee, clerk in the office of N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., Little Falls, N. Y., on the 8th of June, 1883.

Mr. Lee says: "My father has been troubled for over twenty years with severe kidney and bladder disease, suffering the most acute pain when urinating. He became so bad that he was obliged to give up all business. His condition was such that his urine would drop constantly, and he was obliged to use a rubber bag, the weakness was so great. He used many kinds of medicine without deriving any benefit, until he was urged by one of our druggists in Little Falls (Mr. Skinner) to use Hunt's Remedy, as he had known of its being used in many cases with great success. I purchased one bottle, and he commenced using it, and he was so improved that he got along without the rubber bag. He used in all twelve bottles, and it has entirely cured him. Father is sixty-two years old, and we consider it a most wonderful cure, and cheerfully recommend Hunt's Remedy to all afflicted with kidney, liver, or urinary troubles."

All the evidence published in regard to Hunt's Remedy can be relied upon; it is true in every particular.

He Had Enough.

Ex-Governor St. John vouches for the genuineness of the following letter from an ex-saloon keeper:

DEAR FRIEND: i write a lines to let you know i Received your letter a few days ago. Kansas is a— of a country. i just laid out 4 weeks Jail for selling Beer. i got enough of it. P S. don't come to Kansas to start a saloon.

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I
Could not move!
I shrunk!
From 228 lbs to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains all left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign, but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."
Dublin, June 6, '81. R. FITZPATRICK.

CHAPTER II.

"Malden, Mass. Feb. 1, 1880. Gentlemen—
I suffered with attacks of sick headache."
Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner.
No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure until I used Hop Bitters.
"The first bottle
Nearly cured me;
The second made me as well and strong as when a child.
And I have been so to this day."
My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious
Kidney, liver, and urinary complaint,
Pronounced by Boston's best physicians—
"Incurable!"
Seven bottles of your bitters cured him, and I know of the "Lives of eight persons."
In my neighborhood that have been saved by your bitters,
And many more are using them with great benefit.
"They almost
Do miracles!"—Mrs. E. D. Slack.

How to Get Sick.—Expose yourself day and night, eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters.

The Sun.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million of copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it and if his wife, or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

Terms to Mail Subscribers.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid, as follows:

USE THE

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

NEW BOOKS.

PRAYER AND PRAISE; or, Hymns and Tunes for Prayer Meetings, Praise Meetings, Revival Meetings, etc. Edited by Rev. Atticus G. Haygood, D.D., and R. M. McIntosh. Published by J. W. Burk & Co., 148 Second street, Macon, Ga. Price, 60 cents.

This volume is not offered to the Christian public as a Church hymn-book, but as its title, "Prayers and Praise," indicates, it is sent forth as a helper to be used in prayer, praise, class and revival services. We do not propose to give a long notice of it. What we do say is very hearty. We know of no better collection now in use by the American churches in their social and revival meetings than is found in "Prayers and Praise." "The Editors" are correct in the statement: "This book contains the cream of many collections," while the new verses and tunes must delight all who hear and learn them. We wish our brethren great success in its circulation.

THE CHRISTIAN LEAGUE of Connecticut. by Rev. Washington Gladden, L.L.D. The Century Company, 33 East Seventeenth street, New-York.

This book is the ripe fruitage of Dr. Gladden's labor as a Christian pastor. He sets forth the practical means by which a united Christian influence [illegible] in all com[illegible] ed is for [illegible] carefully re[illegible] der these [illegible] and act upon the [illegible] but in the spirit of [illegible] united, Christian [illegible]. Christian League [illegible] here described, will awaken churches [illegible] and parish [illegible] ciety.

AMONG THE MONGOLS. By Rev. James Gilmore, A. M., with illustrations. American Tract Society, 150 Nassau street, New York. For sale by W. D. Stillman, 24 Camp street, New Orleans. Price, $1.50.

The author of this book is a missionary of the London Missionary Society, Pekin, but the book is not a missionary's report, nor a mere traveler's diary. By repeated visits Mr. Gilmore made himself familiar with the language and life of the Mongol tribes who inhabit that portion of Asia lying between China on the south and Siberia on the north. Fully sixty per cent. of the Mongolians are priests. Our author describes them as outwardly devout, but as the greatest sinners in Mongolia, and the temples as the great centres of wickedness. The people look upon the priests as sacred, and conclude that they can do whatever they wish; hence the morality of the masses is heartbreaking. They usually travel on camels, but have a passion for a horse. The keeping of cattle, camels and sheep constitute the greater part of the [illegible] people. [illegible] most heartily co[illegible] this book. The index is complete and will render this volume an easy book of reference on any subject of which it treats.

LITTLE GLORY'S MISSION, with "Found at Last," by Mrs. C. S. Beasey. American Tract Society, 150 Nassau street, New York. For sale by W. D. Stillman, 24 Camp street, New Orleans. Price, 75 cents.

No long notice is needed of this volume. The story of Little Glory's Mission is full of interest. In various ways it illustrates the evil of the use of strong drink. The book is practical, it argues strongly for temperance, and will be surely read by all who begin it. We most heartily commend it for the Sunday-school library and for the family. It is good reading.

Stall's Lutheran Year-Book for [illegible] all branches of the Lutheran [illegible] both in the [illegible] the World, and [illegible] of Luther [illegible] ever published in this country. Its varied tables present the home and foreign missionary work from the beginning; benevolent contributions to its various boards, [illegible] tions; the names and [illegible] of all the Lutheran ministers in the United States and Canada, etc. It is also replete with valuable statistics of other denominations, Sunday schools, [illegible] of the world, growth of [illegible] centuries and [illegible] growth of Roman Catholic [illegible] and Protestant populations, receipts of all the foreign missionary societies of the United States, growth of the Protestant foreign missions of Europe and America, besides many other valuable and suggestive tables. 84 pages. Price 25 cents. For sale by all book dealers.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Minchahan for October has a portrait of Dr. Wild and a sketch of him by the editor. The magazine is of good print and contains a variety of literary matter of a fair order. Terms, $1 75 per year; Minneapolis, Minn.

The Chautauquan for November is, as usual, full of good reading. As a monthly, devoted to true culture, it has few equals. The Chautauqua literary and scientific circle is faithfully and creditably represented by such an organ. The present number has among other interesting subjects: German History—Rev. W. G. Williams, A.M., II; German Literature; Physical Science, II; Sunday Readings, selected by Rev. J. H. Vincent, D.D.; Political Economy, G. M. Steele, D.D., II; Readings in Art, II; Selections from American Literature; Republican Prospect in France; Earthquakes, Ischia and Java; Electricity; Napoleon's Marshal's; Eight Centuries with Walter Scott; Chautauqua and Editorial Notes, etc. Dr. Theodore L. Flood, editor and proprietor, Meadville, Pa. Price, $1 50 a year.

Mr. Cable will contribute to an early number of The Century the as-yet-unreported address on "The Lease System in Southern Prisons," which he delivered at the recent Conference of Charities at Louisville, Ky. The reading of his paper is said by persons who were present to have been one of the striking features of that interesting meeting. Mr. Cable has made a careful and [illegible] study of the prison systems of all Southern States, and [illegible] exposition he makes is likely to be of interest to the public of the whole country.

[illegible] The Living Age for the weeks ending Oct. 27th and Nov. 3d, contain The Religion of the [illegible] Quarterly Review; [illegible] Amsterdam, Contemporary; Some Things of Old Spain, All the Year Round; Lord Beaconsfield's Character, Temple Bar; Contemporary Life and Thought in France, Contemporary; The Expediency of Killing Eminent Men, Saturday Review; The Cause of the Weakness of French Negotiations, Economist; Extinct Miseries of Human Life, Saturday Review; Some Recent Biographies, Fortnightly; Earth Movements in Java, Contemporary; Some Reminiscences of Jane Welsh Carlyle, Temple Bar; A Chinese Martyr of Our Own Times, Month; Ines de Castro, Belgravia; Le Mascaret, Saturday Review; The Distance of The Sun, Times; Cherry Roper's Penance, Argosy; the continuation of "The Wizard's Son," the conclusion of "Poor Little Life" and "Along the Silver Streak," and the usual amount of select poetry. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Mrs. [illegible] will contribute to the December Century a paper on George Fuller, the Boston artist. Mr. W. B. Closson, also of Boston, has engraved two of Mr. Fuller's most important works, "The Turkey Pasture in Kentucky" and "Psyche," to accompany the paper, each occupying a full page.

Mr. George W. Cable's new novel of New Orleans life, "Dr. Sevier" (pronounced Se-vere), begun in the November Century, will reveal, it is said, in a larger measure than his previous stories, Mr. Cable's charming faculty of humorous characterization. The interest of the novel centers in a young married couple from the North, many of whose experiences are drawn from actual life.

The Wheelman for November has a fine engraving of the Columbia Bicycle Prize Cup, a full description of which is given by Mr. Charles E. Pratt. Maurice Thompson contributes a delightful literary essay on the Influences of Outdoor Life in Literature, in which he evinces a deep love for nature, and for poets and writers who draw their inspiration from nature. A rather novel view is taken in cycling as an aid to scientific readers by a new writer. Mrs. M. H. Catherwood writes a most interesting bicycling story, Part I appearing in this issue. The news department is full. John Burroughs, Maurice Thompson, Edith M. Thomas, Will Carleton, [illegible] Reid, Geo. [illegible] Mrs. M. H. Catherwood, [illegible] Munroe, Paul Pastnor, John Boyle O'Reilly, C. A. Hazlett, and many others will contribute regularly to the magazine.

The [illegible] for November is [illegible] A portrait of Rev. Joseph Cook, and a comprehensive and [illegible] sketch of his life and work with a characteristic sermon delivered at the dedication of The New England Congregational Church, Saratoga Springs, is a prominent feature of this number. D. L. Moody's opening sermon at the late Convention in Chicago, a thanksgiving sermon by Dr. J. T. Duryea and another by Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage are the sermons given in full. $2,50 per year. 25 cents single copy. E. B. Treat, 757 Broadway, New York.

To steal an umbrella is at last a crime. But if a man steals a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, to cure his cough, can it be called a crime?

The appropriations for the foreign missions were then taken, each in order, the recommendations of the Board considered. The session was a very interesing one and a large degree of unanimity prevailed. Bishop Bowman presided in the afternoon.

Thursday Nov. 8, Bishops Harris and Foster presiding. Provision was made for preparing a missionary address to the Church. On motion of J. M. Phillips the grant of $6,000 for property at Rosario, South America, was reconsidered and, after considerable debate, withdrawn. It was then agreed to add $12,000 to the appropriation to Italy for the purchase of property in Naples. The Bulgarian mission was taken up and after a long and spirited discussion in which Dr. Buckley, Bishop Hurst, Dr. Fowler and Bishop Foss were the chief speakers, it was agreed to continue the mission and to provide for it more liberally, $15,482 being appropriated. The other appropriations made during the day were to Mexico, $34,000; to Japan, $35,648; to Arizona, $3,600; to the Black Hills, $3,600; to Dakota $13,525.

On Saturday morning the English-speaking Domestic Missions were considered. Rev. W. S. Edwards, of Baltimore, member of the general committee representing the conferences along the South Atlantic and most of the Gulf States, said he had had great difficulty in getting responses to applications for information, and must rely chiefly on the bishops to represent these conferences. Much disapproval was expressed because the proper reports from missions connected with conferences have not been made to the representative members of the committee by the presiding elders. Bishop Foss stated that one great difficulty in getting information was that so many of the preachers, including presiding elders, are comparatively illiterate, and might find difficulty in reading the written letters sent them. Bishop Harris heartily indorsed this statement. Bishop Foss offered a motion which was adopted, instructing the missionary secretaries to prepare circular letters containing questions so framed as to draw out the precise information needed, and to be forwarded to the members of the committee for their nse in correspondence with the presiding elders. Much was said about the work in East Tennessee. In response to proposals to cut down the appropriation below last year's allowance, Bishop Bowman said this was a new conference; had many new fields, and the time to cut down had not yet come. Little Rock was represented by Bishop Hurst, who said there was an enlargement of the work, and a larger appropriation needed. He held the last conference, and deemed the condition of the work very promising.

Bishop Hurst also represented the Louisiana Conference, and thought about the same amount was needed as last year. Bishop Simpson said he thought we must begin to retrench a little in the larger conferences and moved that instead of $6,000 the sum should be $5,500. Bishop Foss, who had held the conference, moved the further reduction of $500, and thought the $800 given to the Ames Church should be withdrawn. Bishop Simpson deprecated too sharp and sudden reductions. The amount was fixed at $5,500. For the Mississippi Conference, next taken up, Bishop Hurst favored the same appropriation as last year. Bishop Simpson, while favoring a slight pressure to foster self help, thought the amonnt for this conference should not be reduced. The bishops generally concurred in this view, and good words were spoken concerning the activity and zeal of this conference. For South Carolina a motion to reduce by $500 prevailed.

Bishop Warren spoke very highly of the improvement, enterprise, and liberality of Tennessee Conference and favored giving the same amount as last year—$3,000. Bishop Simpson favored $2,000, making the amount the same as the Lexington Conference. The Texas Conference has sixty preachers and many new fields. Bishop Bowman favored continuing the same amount as last year ($4,000) which was agreed to. The same action was taken concerning the Washington and West Texas Conferences.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Wm. Davis, Washington: "There is a good sugar crop in the parish, and wages are good. I have $23 on my Gilbert Haven subscription, and have made some collections for the paper."

MISSISSIPPI.

[illegible] J. S. Bell, Philadelphia: "This circuit has been mightily shaken during the month of September by revivals at each of the four preaching points. The presence of Jesus was felt in converting power, and 45 were added to the church. All were converts save a few backsliders and three from the [illegible]. There were [illegible] on probation since the meetings closed, [illegible] admitted to full membership, [illegible] from the M. E. Church, South. Methodism is holding her own, and [illegible] along against all opposition."

[illegible] W. Ivy, Enterprise: "Another [illegible] meeting at one of my preaching points closed with six converts, one an Indian lady, who is happy in the Lord, converted and joined the church. Her brother is a mourner."

[illegible] White, Meridian: "On my way to preach I stopped at a residence, and finding no one in save the children I fell into conversation with the eldest daughter, aged 12 years. I asked when her father came home at night. She said at [illegible] o'clock, and she wished her father didn't keep a bar. I asked her why so, and she said because he was robbing so many little children out of their rights. I asked her what she meant by that expression. She said their fathers went there and spent all their money for whiskey, when their children needed something to eat and clothes to wear, and were running around the streets getting no education, when the money ought to be saved to send them to school with. What a good thought for a little girl of that age! I would to God that the older people would have that thought."

[illegible] E. Jordan, Roseneath: "Elder [illegible] requested Rev. P. Harris to hold my third quarterly conference, which he did in an acceptable manner. Sunday-school is in good condition. Received this [illegible] converts, 1 addition, 7 [illegible] on probation. We need something for [illegible]."

TEXAS.

[illegible] A. Patton writes from Gold [illegible], that at Orange Rev. A. [illegible] is preaching in a [illegible] in East Texas [illegible] and he has a comfortable parsonage. [illegible] has a fine organ. All [illegible] accomplished with [illegible] months, to the great satisfaction of the congregation and the improvement of the community.

George W. Norris, Sloan Street Church, Houston: "This church is in the eastern part of the city, in the midst of Baptists and sinners, and whiskey and beer drinkers. They oppose us in every way they can, but the Lord is on our side [illegible]. We owe $164 66 in [illegible]. The church was bought from the M. E. Church, South, last year. Our people have been doing all they can to raise money for the church."

TENNESSEE.

J. F. Moreland, White Bluff: [illegible] requested me [illegible] my [illegible] rough [illegible] region of Tennessee [illegible] furnace [illegible] it is next [illegible] any one denomination [illegible] a church. All have [illegible] by the proprietors, [illegible] con[illegible] [illegible] rife, [illegible] year [illegible] two [illegible] 150 [illegible] 39 have joined my church this year. All are converted at the furnace after which the charge is named, with some few exceptions. We have 134 living members "which can be seen and read of all men," and who are willing to do for the church and cause what their hands find to do, and all they want is to be taught what is for the good of the church. As impracticable as it may seem these members at this place, if they would worship God in any way, must have a church of their own. This point alone pays $400 to her pastor, $40 to presiding elder, and $40 benevolent collections of the church, and generally takes 10 or 15 copies of the church paper. More would take it is they did not live so far from the postoffice and get their mails so irregularly. The upper end of my work is so far away, over a rough country and among so many dangerous streams that I believe that it would be for the good of Methodism to form it into a separate and distinct circuit to be known as the White Bluff Circuit. This would give the pastor on this work three very good preaching places, with 75 members, and in the midst of a good farming country, to-wit: the Harper and Cumberland river bottoms. This circuit will pay well if placed in the hands of a smart and energetic man. I have nothing to complain of. I might have done better if I had not had so much to do. I have found out that we need concentration as well as consecration, but I will not take up your time. I will just say that the Cumberland Furnace is up to the times in all her church work. Pray for us that as we grow older we may grow stronger in the cause."

O. Seward: "The Murfreesboro district conference convened at Alexandria Oct. 25. Six elders, 2 deacons and a large majority of local preachers responded to their names. The conference met in the new church; a change from fair to cloudy weather was unpleasant. A decided stand was taken on temperance work, and many members joined the temperance society. Father John Seay gave $50 to this church for which he has our thanks. All outside work is complete, and the vestibule is to be covered, but we are pressed with debt. Collections during conference for the new church $20 25. Session closed to meet at Murfreesboro. The quarterly meeting of this circuit was held Oct. 27. Paid this year to date $25. Resolutions of the Alexandria congregation: Resolved, That this membership tender a vote of thanks to Father John Seay for his generosity and kindness toward us; also, Resolved, That this membership organize in a Temperance Society to dismiss snuff, tobacco and whiskey, to promote cleanness and holiness and going on to perfection."

For the Southwestern.

West Tennessee District.

Dear Editor—Allow me space in your valuable paper to give a gist of the work done on my district this conference year. I am closing my fourth round with usual success. The Lord has enabled me, with fair health, so far to meet all my points with cheerful greeting, and all of my men have stood at their posts like heroes. One died at his post, Wm. Dweguns, one of our best men. Bro. Martin Morrison and Bro. H. Moody died this year in full hope of heaven. There has been a great deal of sickness on my district this year. I have held two district conferences, one sub-district conference, eight Sunday-school institutes, which have proven of interest to our church.

The first point is Memphis circuit, in Shelby county, south of Memphis, Bro. J. W. Pickett, pastor. He has had fair success this year, and has two preaching places but no churches of our own. At the fourth quarter a special committee was appointed to buy and commence building at once. Some of the money has been raised. This circuit has 166 members, 30 on probation. Paid the elder $55; the pastor, $165; for missions, $13; and something for all the other societies. There were 28 converts, and 230 added to the church.

Memphis Station—Bro. C. L. Fields, has had fine success. He has repaired his church neatly and revived the Sunday-school cause. He has 95 members, on probation 7, added to the church 10, and had 7 converts; paid elder $25; raised for missions $8, for bishops $3, Sunday-school Union $4. Bro. Field has a flourishing congregation.

Pleasant Grove Circuit—Bro. L. M. Moores, has four deeded churches, and four preaching places. This is his third year on part of this circuit. Bro. Moores has done good work. He has built a fine church at a little town on the C. P. & O. R. R., named Atoka, a prosperous little place. The people love him. Paid to pastor $267, for missions $30, and something on all the other claims. Bro. Moores is a good preacher.

Mason Circuit—Bro. J. B. Marbrey, has two preaching places, two deeded churches in fair condition. He had the church at Mason paid for, deeded and repaired some. Raised, through the trustees, $300. He has 190 members, 25 on probation; has had 51 converts; added 68; paid elder $55; to pastor $170, for missions $18. This is where our Preparatory School is. This school had its best year under the leadership of the Rev. C. B. Alexander and wife. Bro. Marbrey is a good pastor and has a fine congregation.

Brownsville Circuit—Bro. H. Primm, pastor. This circuit has two preaching places, two fair churches deeded, and 92 members. Paid elder $9; pastor $75; missions $8. Bro. Primm is a good pastor.

Bell Circuit—Bro. Wm. Dweguns was a good pastor. He fixed up one church and built a new one. There are 190 members, 18 probationers, 13 converts. Paid elder $50; pastor $235; for missions $25. There are fine Sunday-schools.

Cypress—Bro. A. Burdett, has six preaching places, four deeded churches, 315 members, 23 probationers; paid elder $60; pastor $150; for missions $11. Bro. Burdett has done a good work this year; had 28 converts, added to the church 60; taken in two new points and has fine day and Sunday-schools.

Sharon Circuit—Bro. Barr is a good pastor. He has three preaching places, 70 members, 9 probationers, added to the church 20, converts 17, paid elder $16; pastor $70; for missions $4.

Martin Circuit—Bro. J. L. Massey, has done done noble work this year; paid for a church lot in Martin, moved the church on to it, and made it neat for services; moved and built a parsonage on the lot and made preparations to build a new church. He has 85 members, probationers 210, added 40, converts 28; paid elder $30; pastor $139.45; for missions $10, and something on all the other claims.

Mansfield Circuit—Bros. H. Dunlap and Hall have nine preaching places, four deed churches, taken in three new points, had 45 converts, added 60 to the church, have 254 members, 50 probationers, and have had fine success this year; commenced building a new church in Paris. This is Bro. Dunlap's third year on this circuit. Paid elder $40; pastor $194; for missions $10.

Holy Rock Circuit—Bro. Kirby is a good young pastor. He has 38 members, had 6 converts, 12 joined the church. Paid elder $3; pastor $27, and for missions $5.

Henderson Circuit—Bro. T. Woods has done good work. He has 160 members, probationers 38, converts 38, added to the church 42. He has four preaching places, three deeded churches. He has built a parsonage. This is Bro. Wood's third year.

Linden Circuit—Bro. G. C. Harden has 80 members, 18 probationers, 10 converts, added to the church 26; paid elder $15; preacher $95; for missions $4. Bro. Harden has taken in two new points, and has one deeded church and four preaching places.

Flatwood Circuit—Bro. H. C. Welch has three points, 85 members, 7 probationers, 7 converts; paid elder $10.40; pastor $50; for missions $4. Bro. Welch has done a good work.

Lawrenceburg Circuit—Bro. J R F Summerhill has built one new church and repaired the one in town. He has 65 members, probationers 27; he had 13 converts, added to the church 16; paid elder $25; pastor $146; for missions $9. They are preparing to have a high school at Lawrence.

Waynesboro Circuit—Bro. E M Manson is a good pastor; he has six preaching places, two good deeded churches, 190 members, 21 converts, added to the church 40 members; paid elder $40; pastor $164; he has taken in two new points.

Purdy Circuit—Bro. J B Bradford has taken in two new points; he has 95 members, probatoiners 15, converts 14, added to the church 42; raised for missions $4; paid elder $10; pastor $87; there are two deeded churches, and both were repaired. This circuit bids fair for the future.

This has been a pleasant year with me and my men; our quarterly conferences were all pleasant; everybody loves to have them. We have had over 200 converts and 440 conversions on the district this year; raised for missions, the report shows, $185. Rev. L N. Taylor, of the Missouri Conference, visited my district and district conference, and preached and lectured with great acceptability.

Yours in Christ,
Jesse P. Price.

The Freedmen.

THEIR EDUCATION FOR CITIZENSHIP.

Free America is in peril. At that word, in 1861, the nation rushed to arms. Not blinded, but suddenly enlightened by their fears, all saw the threatening calamity. To avert it was worth blood. That richest, patriotic, humane offering of man for man was poured forth, until the land was soaked, and, thus nourished, freedom grew, America was saved. In 1862, we said: The nation has passed its peril; the danger is over. And our soldiers stacked their arms and went to their homes to stand on guard, awaiting any call which should summon them to her defense. Then, of visible foes that threatened us, armed civil rebellion was foremost. Trampled down, it ended in failure, and some who failed in it are glad it failed, as all ought to be.

Again, to-day to those on the walls who believe that eternal vigilance is the price of safety, to the watchful citizens of the United States, we send the resounding cry: Free America is in peril. Awake to save her! But where rises the danger? From foreign invasion, from an inundation of hordes of people not Americans, upon our plains. The whole world gazes with wonder on the American republic as the richest, freest of lands, the home of liberty, the field of fortune, and dazzled by her progress, like moths to a candle, they fly hither. Ignorant, with no American ideas save a crude notion of freedom from oppression, bonds, military conscription and impoverishing taxes, the superstitious minions of the pope, or worse still, atheists revolting from iron-bound tyranny to direful fancies of communism, converge as floods from every side, rushing down upon America. As panic-stricken passengers from a foundering vessel overfill and sink the boat into which they lead, so these foreign, un-American peoples threaten to sink us by their weight. And, that they do not mean to do this, and, in ignorance imperil American institutions, does not diminish the real danger.

They add three-quarters of million people a year to our population, who are ignorant of American traditions, history, and methods. They constitute (especially those of a priest-ridden, false faith, and those of no faith) by far the largest part of our criminals. They come in continually increasing numbers; we can not stop them; we do not wish to. But we need every true American to help save America by assimilating these peoples, by leavening them with American ideas, by standing firmly and devotedly up to the true meaning of republican government, viz: manhood responsibility, and by adhering steadily to the Protestant faith—the only faith that secures moral virtue and civil allegiance. We need every English speaking Protestant American as an ally.

In this new peril and for the deliverance of America six millions of freedmen—yeomen, native to the soil, thorough Americans—are indispensable allies. They are devoted patriots; they love America with unusual ardor. Well they may. For their birth to liberty she endured pangs which almost took her life, and had done so but for the mercy of God. At their nativity they were all baptized in blood and named American citizens. Wonderful name! to take the place of the brand of the slave! They opened their own veins to make that baptismal tide flow full; and, forgetting abuses, their gratitude for a never-to-be forgotten birthright will make them forever loyal. Whatever their vices, into which they stumbled when slaves, loyalty has been, and will forever be, their virtue.

To their children's children none will have such reason to teach American history and to keep alive American traditions as the American freedman. He is loyal to his heart's core. He speaks the English tongue, the language of power and progress, the language of the free. And however he may have abused it ignorantly, no Jesuitical sophistry has ever taught his tongue false oaths. He is a Protestant, as much as the Hebrews were protestants against Egyptian idolatry. He wills to be a Protestant, and shall be, if he is helped to fulfill the one condition of Protestantism, which is that a man shall read, love, and obey the Bible every day and everywhere.

He is a yeoman. The soil is his. He made it his by unpaid service, has bought it with the wages of labor. Permanent, not shifting his habitation, adopted to our climate, loving our institutions, holding our traditions, professing our faith, the freedman against the ignorant, un-American, wandering foreigner, is a most valuable citizen.

We are speaking, of course, rather of the native qualifications and natural aptitude of the freedman than of his immediate fitness to assist in saving America. And their establishment in that high citizenship, their power, their stability, their value as allies, all depend largely on our Freedmen's Aid schools. Our schools teach them Protestant Christianity versus papal hypocrisy; American history, over against the hatred of abandoned monarchies; which sums up the political creed of so many immigrants; personal responsibility and duty, in opposition to communistic dependence and weakness. It is a marvel, and yet no marvel, that they flocked to our first schools—a marvel as though instinctively they saw their destiny, yet less a wonder, because we took the schools to them. When the value of the Freedman as his country's powerful helper is acknowledged, then will it be seen how God led Christian educators to labor urgently to make him a good man, "for God and home and native land."

While the eager desire of the freedmen for education lasts—and it seems to increase with years—let us furnish that education. They may, perhaps, lose the desire. The inspiration which was from heaven, may cease to work unless we furnish the privilege, as is our duty and their need. Not one teacher now instructing them, not a worker, nor a friendly observer but sees vast needs, to meet which, he holds but comparatively scanty means. Methodists you have done in the feedmen's schools what you have always been doing. When you make the freedmen or any other men good Methodist Christians, you make them true patriots, the saving salt of the nation, their country's hope.

Plan, then, larger beneficence—as large as the freedmen's needs, and larger yet—as large as the country's peril; and more; after the pattern of Christ's love—greatest of all things. Give for the uplifting of these citizens by the tried and proven means of our aid society and its schools, a means which lacks nothing of being equal to its work, except the men and the money that you have and can give to it.

Plan for the permanency of free institutions in America; and to lay a part of the great burden of the great fabric on the educated freedmen. They have wondrous vitality. The prophecies that they would perish when no longer bred, by masters for sale, have been falsified by history. They multiply in numbers despite their ignorance, vice, poverty, robbery, and murder, to all of which they have been subjected in the infancy of their freedom. God will give them manhood yet out of that scarred infancy, but we must carry them his gift.

In the great city building in Philadelphia are four massive, central pillars which uphold an immense superstructure. They are carved on their capitals to represent the four races of the four continents. There is the almond-eyed Asiatic, the red Indian of America, the swarthy African, the dominant European. Africa has upon it an equal load with the rest, and stands strong under the burden. So on the freedman's broad shoulders must stand, or for lack of his support must fall, the American republic. With the citizenship of all American citizens, loyal, pure, and educated, though it should rain immigrants, we can hold* them by the conservative patriotism of our people and make them such as we are. And that the Africo-American may hold up his share of that burden, which he is willing to assume, give him the bread of knowledge and of truth, by the hands of our teachers; and for that your children's children to the latest generations will bless your patriotism, your wisdom, and your piety.—Western Christian Advocate.

Forgiveness.

A soldier was about to be brought before his commanding officer for some offence. He was an old offender, and had been often punished.

"Is he here again!" said the officer, on the man's name being called over; "flogging, disgrace, solitary confinement, everything has been tried with him!"

Whereupon the sergeant stepped forward, and, apologizing for the liberty he took, said;

"There is one thing that has never been done yet, sir.;

"What is that?" said the officer,

Well sir," said the sergeant, "he has never been forgiven."

"Forgiven!" exclaimed the colonel, surprised at the suggestion; but when he had reflected for a few minutes, he ordered the culprit to be brought in, and asked him what he had to say to the charge.

"Nothing, sir," he said "only I am sorry for what I did."

Turning a kind and pitiful look on the man, who expected nothing else than that his punishment would be increased with the repetition of his offence, the colonel addressed him, saying: "Well, we have tried everything with you, and now we are resolved to—forgive you."

The soldier was struck dumb with amazement; the tears started in his eyes, and he wept like a child. He was humbled to the dust; and thanking his officer, he retired—to be the old refractory, incorrigible man? No! From that day forward he was a new man. In him kindness bent one whom harshness could not break. The man was conquered by mercy and melted by love.

School children have nervous headaches. Dr. Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills, are a sure remedy.

A Southern Correspondent on National Aid to Overcome Southern Illiteracy.—If the Federal Government Superintends Other Grants, Why Should it Not This?

Special Correspondence of The Inter Ocean.

NEW ORLEANS.—In view of the alarming and somewhat startling disclosures of the United States census reports, and the text of the speeches recently delivered at Ocean Grove, Monteagle, Chautauqua, and Louisville, there should be few, if any, intelligent patriots who will not agree that some well directed effort to lessen the quantity and power of ignorance now prevailing in this country is most desirable. That the practical ideas submitted to Congress by the Hon. Henry W. Blair, of New Hampshire, and others, have been slow in gaining popular favor, affords another illustration of the usual course of all real reform measures. First, public opinion must be set right, and then the people will demand of their Congressmen the necessary legislation. And it is well that it is so. Had it been possible for the crude plans of two or four years ago to have been hurried through Congress, many details would have been overlooked, and, perhaps, the first outburst of National generosity would have resulted in the early squandering without adequate results of the bounty offered for more efficient school systems.

To those who give to the National Constitution a broad interpretation, revealing ample powers to provide for the common defense and general welfare, no opposition suggests itself to any careful plan to distribute the moneys derived from the sale of public lands among the several States on the basis of illiteracy.

[illegible] they insist not only that [illegible] shall appropriate a sum [illegible] apportioned from the National Treasury, but also that the National apportionment should be guaranteed to accomplish its object by the exercise of some control over its disbursement? This is a question which deserves serious consideration. It is not necessary to dwell with stress upon the condition of the South after the close of the war, for all practical purposes to-day the subject is as [illegible] as the story of the stranded [illegible] the great deluge. It is [illegible] place to call the matter a [illegible], for illiteracy is a [illegible] from every race. The [illegible] statesman to ponder [illegible] upward of one-tenth of the [illegible] of the United States [illegible], and that through the ballot box this fact is making its [illegible] upon the social and political future of the country.

[illegible] State's rights theories, [illegible] in the way of [illegible] the general welfare [illegible] regarded with ex[illegible] and open enmity [illegible] of National authority, [illegible] obsolete. The [illegible] of the late States' rights [illegible] demand for appropriations to build levees along the [illegible] Mississippi River, to [illegible] channels of the rivers, [illegible] of cities, erect [illegible] and even to feed [illegible] from yellow fever [illegible]. In each and every instance [illegible] demands have [illegible] to the properly qualified [illegible] the National Government [illegible] the expenditure [illegible] moneys appropriated.

[illegible] MUST SUPERINTEND.

[illegible] can [illegible] district [illegible] public [illegible]. Yet [illegible] the [illegible] speak[illegible] un[illegible] have su[illegible] the dis[illegible] the ben[illegible] oppose the [illegible]. Why [illegible] made be[illegible] of school [illegible] answer-ed that the States have the machinery under way to be utilized for the purpose of establishing public schools, will it not be answered that each State has a board of public engineers capable of supervising the works of public improvement within its borders? No doubt, in either case, emergencies might justify the use of State agents in the execution of National measures, but not the entire withdrawal of the National right to control.

These thoughts are suggested by the course of events in the past eighteen years. The enforced poverty entailed by the war has long disappeared. For years the press and immigration agencies of the South have chanted a continuous song of marvelous prosperity. There have been bountiful crops, extension of railways, erection of manufactories, opening of mines; but, alas, in some States an increase of illiteracy among the whites, a decrease of school facilities for the blacks in some, for both whites and blacks in others. All along the line there is a strong opposition to public schools. Poverty cannot be made to cover not only the general neglect, but the willful breaking down of the public school systems by deliberate legislation, as in the case of Louisiana.

THERE ARE OTHER REASONS

confronting us to account for the present shameful, deplorable condition of affairs. There is the Roman Catholic opposition as a minor factor in the case; but the plain truth is that a great majority of the people of the South are opposed to public schools which must embrace, under the operation of the later amendments to the Constitution, the extension of equal privileges to the Negro. They believe the logical result of education in the Negro mind, accompanied by a corresponding accumulation of this world's goods, will lead to demands of "social equality," and a general necessity for bloodshed to restore the equilibrium as the present generation think it should be. Whatever opinions may be held as to the prospect of this hideous nightmare disappearing from the Southern mind, the practical feature of moment is this: To-day the enemies or lukewarm friends of public schools predominate in several States of the Union.

IS IT WISE

to commit to their keeping a fund which they sincerely and religiously believe will operate to their detriment? Is there not danger of its being used to obtain political ends; call it white supremacy, salarying Democratic stipendiaries, or what you will? It so strikes the thoughtful men on the ground, who have fairly studied the situation, that while National aid is desirable, it should be surrounded by safeguards to insure the full measure of benefits expected to accrue therefrom. The President might be empowdered to appoint in each State, say twelve educators, who, with six selected by a State, should be trustees, under bond, to disburse moneys to the educational officers of a State, when proper conditions, such as an equal amount in the public treasury equal facilities to citizens of all classes, had been complied with. In States where officials were known to be friendly they might be included in the number of appointees by the President at his option; but in any event men of different political sentiments to be included in the membership of each board. No genuine educator can desire a partisan use of National aid, and it should be removed as far as possible from the clutches of the corrupt tools of party leaders. Let the money be given freely, but guarded with business-like fidelity.

In 1826 a youth in Maine sold a jackknife for a gallon of West India rum, which he retailed, and with the proceeds bought two gallons and eventually a barrel, and afterward a large stock. He became rich, and died leaving property worth $80,000, which was divided among four children, three boys and a girl, who engaged in every folly and extravagance. The daughter married unfortunately and her husband soon wasted her patrimony, when she died. Two of the sons died in dissipation and poverty. The remaining son, who for many years has lived on the kindness of those who knew him in his prosperity, recently died suddenly and unattended in a barn, where he was in a drunken sleep. On his pockets being examined, all that was found in them was a small piece of string and a jack-knife.—Home Gazette.

Patient and Pure.

Pure and patient! Lord the plea
Of my soul must rise to thee,
For thou dost know
All the bitterness I bear;
All the way of heavy care
In which I go.

Patient in my weariness,
Patient in the ills that press,
I would be still.
Thou, who knowest temptations power,
Keep me in each trial hour
Pure as thy will.

Make rebellious thought of mine
Captive to thy thought divine.
Obedient.
Though my weary feet must bleed
Let me go where thou dost lead,
E'en thus content.

Teach me, make me, what thou wilt,
Take away each thought of guilt
That would allure.
Tremblingly I seek thy side;
Keep me, O thou Crucified,
Patient and pure!

Only a Crack.

"Can you not see it?"

"Where?"

"That little crack stretching across the ice ahead! Look out, Tommy!"

"Nonsense!" says Tommy; skating over that thin little line of danger. "Only a crack!"

It is lengthening though—widening!

"Look out, Tommy!" is the warning again sounded to the returning skater.

"Shut up!" says the offended Tommy, pushing on; but the ice does not "shut up" at all. It yields, opens, and lets Tommy down into an Arctic bath.

"Help-p-p-p!" is the cry ringing out all over the pond. "Fetch a board there!" Throw him an end of your comforter!" "Get a rope!" "Quick; quick!" are the excited outcries on either hand.

At last Tommy is pulled out, his hands purple, his lips white, his teeth chattering. A minute more and he would have been stretched out on the bottom of the pond. what a serious risk he ran!

"Only a crack!"

That is the trouble with Frank Peters. He takes now and then a glass of beer.

"Shut up!" he says to mother, father, Sunday-school teacher, and all the time the crack is opening, widening, a gap to-day and it may be a grave to-morrow. Look out!

Good Advice to Young Men.

President Porter, of Yale, recently gave this sound and wholesome advice to the students:

"Young men, you are the architects of your own fortunes; rely on your own strength of body and soul. Take for your star self-reliance. Inscribe on your banner, 'Luck is a fool, Pluck is a hero.' Don't take too much advice, keep at the helm and steer your own ship, and remember that the art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Think well of yourself. Strike out. Assume your own position. Put potatoes in a cart, go over a rough road, and small ones go to the bottom. Rise above the envious and jealous. Fire above the mark you intend to live. Energy, invincible determination, with the right motive, are the levers that move the world. Don't swear. Don't deceive. Don't read novels. Don't marry until you can support a wife. Be civil. Read the papers. Advertise your business. Make money and do good with it. Love your God and fellow-man. Love truth and virtue. Love your country, and obey its laws."

At Detroit, Miss Frances E. Willard was unanimously re-elected President of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

THE MORAL OF IT.

We may moralize as much as we please about pain; but the fact is, that we don't like it while it lasts, and that we want to get rid of it as soon as we can. Whether caused by rheumatism, gout, disordered liver, weak nerves, irregular kidneys, bad blood, or anything else that is just the reverse of what it should be, the sooner it is out of the system the happier we are. Whether pain is the result of imprudence or of accident, or is sent as a punishment for our sins, may be a nice question for the philosophers to argue; but people who are suffering want first to be rid of the pain, after which those who are fond of argument may argue the matter to their hearts' content.

Above all theory, argument, and philosophy, comes the delightful fact that BROWN'S IRON BITTERS drives pain away. Sufferers run no risk in trying this medicine, the only compound containing iron which carries no mischief with it. Those who have used it will tell you so; and you can try for yourself by buying a bottle of the nearest druggist. 7

[illegible], Editor.
A. E. P. ALBERT, D. D., Assistant.

THURSDAY, NOV. 22, 1883.

This paper will be sent from this date to [illegible] to any new subscriber who sends two dollars with the order.

The Directors of the Conference [illegible] Charities have concluded to open an office in the first district of New Orleans, and begin their excellent work in the densely populated [illegible]. We hope they will give through the press frequent reports of their labors.

The circular issued by Director-General Burke for the World's Exposition [illegible] the [illegible] classifications and all information as to its organization and objects required. Mr. Burke has visited leading Northern cities to enlist all classes of the general public in the Exposition, and has everywhere been cordially received.

There is a Voice that speaks within every one. There may not a sound be heard falling on the ear. The busy world may be enjoying its pleasure or quiet. In life we may be single, isolated, and we think alone, but we are not alone, we cannot get away from God's presence nor the voice, that speaks within us, and to us. He makes suggestions of duty and bids ours to hearken to this voice, in times of the severest temptation, in society's gayest hours, when business loads the day with burdensome cares. "Wisdom uttereth her voice in the streets, she crieth in the chief places of concourse, in the opening of the gates; in the city she uttereth her words saying, I am thy salvation; turn ye, turn ye, why will you die!" Give the Lord a hearing. Listen to His voice.

There are no journals in this country that express a deeper interest in the education of the masses than the Roman Catholic. By them the church is uniformly represented as the warm friend of a liberal education. And while she opposes our system of free schools, it is not that she is opposed to education. She opposes these because the education they give is secular or infidel. As an offset to this assumption so often made the Inter Ocean [illegible] Spain and says: "According to official data just received at the Bureau of Education, Spain, with [illegible] hundred thousand priests and a population of 16,333,[illegible], has [illegible] persons who can neither read nor write. Such a condition [illegible] does not exist in [illegible] civilized country on earth. Will some of our Roman Catholic friends please explain and tell us how far these facts go toward demonstrating that the Mother Church is the friend and promoter of public education?"

The illiteracy of any people is its greatest curse. It is the hot bed of crime and poverty. Education gives birth to frugality, independence and wealth. It gives prominence to sobriety, integrity and character. It is an armor of defense more reliable than that of Saul or Achilles. Let the masses be educated, and the country is [illegible]. The nation's welfare is at [illegible] and demands that national [illegible] to the States in [illegible] and preparing for intelligent [illegible] the ignorant [illegible] in the South. To protect [illegible] against the oppressive [illegible] on the cotton and [illegible] plantations of the South our [illegible] education. The State [illegible] its trust in the matter [illegible]. School facilities [illegible] and inefficient. [illegible] means let our [illegible] educate their children at [illegible] and deliverance will [illegible] then, like the Irish [illegible] will continue in a [illegible] serfdom to the [illegible] of the South. [illegible] your only salvation. [illegible] if you can, in [illegible] if you must, but [illegible] you do educate.

A Square Issue.

We always like a square issue, and respect the man who squarely and fairly makes one. Recently Hon. J. E. Bryant of Atlanta, Ga., representing the Southern Advance Association visited New England, and being a Methodist he asked and obtained leave to present his cause before the Boston Methodist Preachers' Meeting, and spoke at great length. At the close of his address he requested that they indorse his Association, when the following deceptive resolution was introduced:

"The Methodist Preachers Meeting of Boston and vicinity having heard the Hon. J. E. Bryant, the Secretary of the Southern Advance Association of Atlanta, Georgia, which is assisting in the education, and elevation of the masses of the South, and in the cultivation of a national feeling and a love of the American Union, cheerfully recommend him and the cause he represents to the favorable consideration of all benevolent people."

We have spoken of this resolution as deceptive, this may seem severe, but it is not unguarded, there is no violence to the proprieties of language in its present use. The resolution speaks of educating the masses of the South, whereas the Southern Advance Association only contemplates the education of the whites, the lesser part of the masses, while the colored people are passed by unnoticed, and uncared for.

After the reading of the resolution Rev. J. W. Hamilton, pastor of the Peoples Church, L. R. Thayer, D.D., Presiding Elder of Lynn District, with others asked that it should not then be pressed to a vote. It was therefore laid upon the table until a subsequent meeting, when Mr. Hamilton, Dr. Thayer, and others presented their objection to the resolution, and when by vote of the meeting, Mr. Hamilton was requested to have the paper he had read published for wider circulation. In compliance with this request the address has been printed under the caption of "Going Forward by Going Backward." Squarely and fairly does he state his objection to the "Southern Advance Association," and "the trend of the Methodist Episcopal Church toward a settled system of caste." He thought it unwise for the meeting to endorse the Southern Advance Association, because it was undenominational and must fail, and because colored children were to be excluded from its schools, the Association devoting itself exclusively to the one work of educating the whites. No one denies, but that they stand in need of help, but not half so much from an inability to help themselves as from a want of disposition. "Multiplied thousands," says Dr. Haygood, "deny their own children education because it costs money. Money is their God. There are many white men in this country who are by some said mischance, the fathers of families and the owners of good properties, but they are too mean and too near barbarism to educate their children. They are traitors to the sacred trust of fatherhood, and a disgrace to the human race." They doubtless need help, Mr. Hamilton does not question this, but he would not give even his implied approval of schools from which any person was liable to be excluded merely an account of his color. Mr. Hamilton is entirely right, we want in this country no schools, no churches from which colored people are to be excluded. We have yet to meet with the first person who advocates separate schools or churches exclusively for colored or white people on Christian principle. It is born of prejudice against the colored man because he his colored. "Avarice is a mean spirit, but this sort of prejudice is meaner. It is cowardly and ignoble, it is root and branch utterly unchristian." God is not in it. He will curse it every time. Tested by the light of the Cross—the Sermon on the Mount—the the brotherhood of man—the oneness of believers in Christ, and of the Judgment day, we know of nothing more unbecoming in a professed Christian than this unholy prejudice that turns so many otherwise Christian men into the most complete Pharisees. Let us look at this matter for a moment. All over the South the colored and white work together as employers or employes. Nor are white men the only employers in the South. We know of colored men owning large plantations, who rent land and otherwise give constant employment to white laborers. Before election they meet together in conventions, during the canvass white and colored speakers sit side by side, and address the same audiences. White merchants are glad to sell their goods to colored people, and buy of them too; white lawyers practice law for them, and white doctors are glad to attend them when sick; all of this is done without the least social discredit. In view of these well known facts we have become persuaded that the demand for separate schools for the colored and white students who are seeking the benefits of a primary or a higher education grows out of a mean, cowardly, ignoble, and unchristian prejudice. Standing on the platform of the Sermon on the Mount, or the Brotherhood of man, and the oneness of believers in Christ, no man will yield to it for a moment. When the General Conference of 1876 yielded to the caste clamor and gave sanction to the division of church work, on the color line, there was an awful step backwards. We know the prophesies of a wonderful era of prosperity that was sure to follow which were then urged as grounds for the division. And to day we know that not one of them has been fulfilled. That division was a concession to an unholy and unchristian prejudice. It was a fall backward in the march of the spirit of Christian brotherhood. It was an Appomattox to caste, a Bull Run to Methodism. And we now have the pitiful and painful sight of the Methodist Episcopal Church giving aid to schools from which our colored children are effectually excluded.

Bishop Foster and a Democratic Special.

The Times-Democrat published in Sunday edition of Nov. 11th a special dispatch from New York, which represented Bishop Foster as saying some things before the Methodist Missionary Committee of a character not pleasing in this latitude. Read:

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Bishop Foster to-day addressed the missionary committee in favor of withdrawing from work among the white people of the South. He painted a picture of Southern pride, pauperism, ignorance and idleness. The condition of things there is not now and ever has been satisfactory, but is much more so in regard to the blacks than the whites. Under the old slave regime the moneyed slave-holders were "the South;" all the rest were slaves and poor white trash. All the religious expenses of the country were borne by the slave holders, who would have considered it an impertinence for a poor white to contribute anything to build a church or school-house for himself. Hence generations have grown up to whom the propriety of ever doing anything morally or spiritually for them or any other part of the world has never occurred. When one gets below the upper crust no one can tell what is patriotism and what is not. As we in the North understand it, the thing does not exist. Every dollar the Methodist Episcopal Church spent among these people has been wasted; every dollar yet to go there will be worse than wasted. Bishops Wiley and Simpson, while they admitted that Bishop Foster's picture was correct, thought that it was a good reason why the church should stay in the South.

In the Monday edition appeared an editorial entitled "The Gospel of Hate," and a report of interviews with leading Methodist brethren of the Church South based on its own dispatch. Last Saturday our neghbor of the Price, Current had something to say under the head of "A Libel upon Our People." This gives us a fair opportunity to observe that the average secular editor is not well posted in church history, and is very hasty in reaching large conclusions on a small quantity of information. While such men as Bishop Keener and Dr. Galloway were courteous enough to await some authentic report of what Bishop Foster did say, the secular editor appears to be little troubled with scruples of that sort, and follows the popular love for a sensation. We do not know, at this writing, what Bishop Foster has said. A careful perusal of our New York dailies fails to afford any clue to expressions similar to those attributed to Bishop Foster in the Times-Democrat special dispatch. The New York Times said:

The General Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church discussed yesterday morning the work of the church in the southern States. Bishop Foster, Gen. C. B. Fisk, the Rev. Dr. Olin, and Mr. W. L Skidmore favored a discontinuance or decrease of the mission appropriations for the white Southern Conefernces, as they thought that the Southern Methodists fully covered that field, and, now that good feeling had been restored between the two divisions of the church, it was better that the fund be apportioned where it would do the most good. Bishops Warren and Bowman and the Rev. Dr. Buckley opposed any reduction but thought that the work in the South should continue. The discussion occurred on a motion to apportion the Austin (Texas) Conference $7,500, and those who opposed reduction or discontinuance of Southern appropriations were sustained by the passage of the motion by a large majority.

This is contradictory to the views of the author of the special dispatch and leads to the suspicion that he must have been filled with campaign enthusiasm over the defeat of Wm. Mahone, or have been imposed upon in some other way. Have the New Orleans papers disseminated a libel upon Bishop Foster? Can their love of justice be relied upon to correct erroneous versions, and to give a fair synopsis of what Bishop Foster did say?

Wives at Auction.

The history of Virginia begins with an auction sale, not however in a store beneath the green trees of Jamestown. In a letter still to be seen, dated London, Aug. 21, 1621, and directed to a wealthy colonist of that settlement, the writer begins by saying: "We send a shipment one widow, and eleven maids for wives for the people of Virginia. There hath been special care in the choice of them for there hath not one of them been received, but upon good commendations. In case thy cannot be presently married, we desire that they be put with several households that have wives until their husbands can be provided." But the writer of this epistle had no reason to fear that any of these maidens so fair would be left over. The archives contain evidence to prove that these, first cargo of young ladies, were put up at auction, and sold at 120 pounds of tobacco each, and it was ordered that this debt should have precedence of all others; the lone widow was not left alone, she went along with the rest.

About two months ago a New Orleans dispatch to a New York paper asserted there was not a public-school open in Louisiana. This was incorrect, because there were a few schools open at that time, which is usually a vacation season. It was true, however, that a large number of the schools had been closed for want of funds, the prospect for their future existence was gloomy, and to-day the schools open are for short terms, while New Orleans schools which usually open in September have been postponed to December. In some way the erroneous statement mentioned, which prefaced a letter of Superintendent Fay to the president of the school board, of Bienville parish, has been quoted by several journals as part of the Superintendent's utterances. In consequence some well intended criticism of a really deplorable condition of affairs has been to a degree overdrawn. But this did not justify Mr. Fay's remarkable attempt at correction in a letter from Alexandria to the Times-Democrat of this city, wherein besides criticizing the Eastern and Western papers, he deemed it proper to give vent to a comparison between Louisiana and Massachusetts schools. His letter is simply curious as a vain and useless display of literary conceit and sectional bias, exemplifying the proverb that "a little learning is a dangerous thing." This is the second time in his official career that the State Superintendent has demonstrated his incapacity to deal with matters outside of his limited official routine and brought discredit upon his honorable official position.

E. S. Lewis, in a communication to Zion's Herald of seventh inst, in which he gives an account of the dedication of the Philander Smith College at Little Rock, Arkansas, refering to Bishop Wiley's address says:

"The Bishop made a tremendous hit by appealing to the colored people themselves to say who it is that bulldozes and cheats and reviles them—the educated white man or the ignorant ruffian. They all know the answer to this, and it isn't difficult for them to see the logic that requires for the equalizing of the races a liberal education for both."

We cannot think that Bishop Wiley ever made any such statement as the above. It would be just as proper to say that the members of the Masonic Fraternity or Odd Fellows were a set of cheats and revilers as to say that the members of the White League or Ku-Klux were made up of the ignorant ruffians of the South. The most successful bulldozers cheats and revilers of the colored people are not among the ignorant white trash so called. It is enough to mention the connection of Senator Butler with the Hamburg massacre. We think there has not been a single instance of bulldozing in the South since the war that has not been led by educated men. The recent action of Gen. Early and other Virginians, on the Danville murders, is concurrent testimony of this fact.

Bishop Loughlin, Roman Catholic bishop of Brooklyn, is emphatic in his denunciation of excursions, moonlight picnics, etc., on account of their evil tendencies and the moral ruin they bring to many. On these excursions and picnics large quantities of liquors are sold to boys under age. The Roman Catholic churches of Brooklyn have planted themselves solidly against these evils, and Bishop Loughlin in a recent sermon said: "It is in my power to refuse the whole sacrament of the church to those who disobey this command." Every church and pastor should raise their united power and influence against these growing evils. Thousands of young people are initiated into the way to their ruin directly through the immoral tendency of these agencies. And how much of the many family troubles have their origin in these, eternity alone will reveal. Especially is this true of the large numbers of poor people who flock to the cities on excursions, not knowing whither they are going, becoming easy preys for sharpers and wicked designing men. If you value the future of your sons and daughters keep them away from moonlight picnics, and see that they do not go on wild-goose excursions unless you can accompany them.

From the Northwestern's report of the Missionary Committee: "Bishop Foster having arrived as Alabama was called, made an address which it is not often the privilege of the committee or of the church to hear. It was not a plea for anything, and yet its entire scope and bearing was to convince the committee that the best thing the church could do was to retreat as gracefully and as soon as it can from the white work in the South."

We have received a copy of the printed minutes of the Columbus District conference, of the West Texas Conference, held last September.

The November Wide Awake might fitly be called a boys number, since almost every one of its stories, outside the serials, has a boy for the "leading character." Opening with frontispiece, "Autumn Leaves," there follows a stirring narrative poem, of the late American war, entitled "The Bravest Boy in Town." Benny's Wigwam," is a touching little record of the homelessness of the Indian in the land the race once owned and never sold. Then comes "My Arizona Class," written by Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, describing her work in one of the Arizona schools while General Fremont was Governor of Arizona; faithful portraits of the General and Mrs. Fremont accompany the article. "Two Persian Schoolboys," by Mary J. Safford, describes with much accuracy as to dress and customs, a Persian lion hunt in the time of Darius. The amusing story of the number is the one by Cappie Hicks, describing "How Mr. [illegible] had his Picture Taken." The last of the John Spicer Lectures is delivered by one of the audience, and the subject is "Boys," and Marion Harland gives her last "Cookery Lesson" to the Wide Awake Cooking Society. The New England Journal of Education speaking of the National Education Assembly for 1883, says: "It was the most remarkable gathering ever held in our country in matters connected with the schooling of the people. The volume of addresses is the most interesting collection of popular educational documents ever given to our people, and should be in the hands of every educator, legislator, and intelligent citizen in the land."

1. Education and Man's Improvement.
2. Illiteracy in the United States.
3. National Aid to Common Schools.
4. The Negro in America.
5. Illiteracy, Wealth, Pauperism, and Crime.

10. Tabulation of Illiteracy and Educational Facts from Census of 1880—ten tables.

It is a book for all who want information on any of these great practical questions. The addresses are carefully prepared and revised by the authors, and are filled with information and incidents. The authors are nearly all engaged in actual work in the fields of which they speak. The book should be in every public library. A full table of contents is supplemented by a carefully prepared index.

A special feature of the book is a series of ten tables, compiled by the Hon. H. R. Waite, Special Statistician U. S. Census, and the Hon. John Eaton, U. S. Commissioner of Education, giving complete data upon the illiterate and educational status of the United States, each State and also of the South as a section.

The Rumseller's Song.

REV. CHAS. WHEELER DENISON.

The rumseller sat in his den alone,
Singing his thoughts in an under tone.
Shrouded in silence, his work was done
Since the rise and set of the daily sun
He had squared his books, he had counted his gains;
Then he started the night with his spirited strains;
And he sang as he hoarded his wages of sin:
"I gather them in! I gather them in!
I gather them in!"

"The old with their thin and frosty hair,
The young with [illegible] dark and fair,
The smiling [illegible] and the bride,
The brother and sister, side by side,
Captive and bound in the toils I spread;
On to their doom my victims tread—
Stranger and neighbor, alien, kin,
I gather them in! I gather them in!

"The [illegible], the orator, learned and [illegible],
The [illegible] of the dirty crowd,
The [illegible] child of the [illegible],
[illegible] stooping [illegible]
In the golden rays of the morning light,
In the darkness, and stillness, and dead of night,
From the desert wastes, from the city's din
I gather them in! I gather them in!

"Through all bars of time, through all regions of space,
I trade in the [illegible] of the human race!
My license to kill is all free from a flaw,
For the votes of good Christians enacted the law!
The ballots of party I hold in my hand,
And the leaders are backs to obey my command!"
So the rumseller sang of his wages of sin:
"I gather them in! I gather them in!

An astonishing, and at the same time valuable discovery, has been made in Lower California, and the Mohave Desert—that grape cuttings inserted in the trunks of the cactus trees on the desert grow and thrive as vigorously as in cultivated land. By the use of a chisel, a man can plant a large vineyard in a day, and the vine so planted will climb the cactus and grow luxuriantly without cultivation or irrigation. The dry hot sands of the desert will afford a fine place for drying raisins. In addition to grapes, it has been proved that melons, cucumbers and tomatoes will grow from cactus stock, so that the desert may soon bloom as the rose. The cactus often grow to twenty or thirty feet in height, so that they furnish both soil and trellis for the vines.

Henry Watterson occasionally talks real sense. In his speech before the Bankers' Convention he asseverated that "the South never knew what independence meant until she was taught by subjection to subdue herself. We lived from hand to mouth; we had our debts and our 'niggers.' Under the old system we paid our debts and walloped our 'niggers,' but under the new we pay our 'niggers,' and wallop our debts. (Laughter and applause.) We have no longer any slaves, but we have no longer any debts, and can exclaim with the old darkey at camp-meeting who, whenever he got happy, went about shouting: 'Bless the Lord; I'm gittin' fatter and fatter.'"

The medical fraternity are urging people to cultivate the "art of running." It develops the muscles, they say, strengthens the limbs, exercises the will, and promotes the circulation of the blood. They might add that it is also helpful in a case of violent disagreement with a fellow-citizen of larger dimensions than yourself.—Globe Democrat.

A Mason's Affair.

I have been troubled for a number of years with kidney and bladder difficulty; at times have suffered a great deal with the weakness caused by the inflammation and intense pains in the back and loins. I tried many medicines that were recommended, but none of them seemed to reach my case until one day I related my case to one of our druggists here in Auburn. Mr. Smith was very urgent that I should try Hunt's Remedy, for he knew of many who had used it with wonderful success. I purchased a bottle and used it, and found a good deal of benefit, and commenced to improve rapidly, and the pains in the back were relieved. I gained strength and vitality, and after using four bottles I have been completely cured, and have recommended it to others, and give this statement voluntarily, believing that, from my own case, Hunt's Remedy is all that is recommended, and you can use this as you choose for the benefit of the public.

Labor a Burden.

For a number of years my wife has been a severe sufferer at times with indigestion and kidney and liver troubles. She had such severe pains in the back that she at times became very much debilitated, and the least labor was a burden. I feared that would terminate in Bright's Disease, as there were the symptoms. She had no appetite at times. She tried several medicines, but received no temporary relief from them until she commenced using Hunt's Remedy, which was recommended to us by druggist Smith of Auburn, saying that it had been used by a good many with the greatest success for the cure of kidney, liver and bladder troubles. She commenced using it, and found by the use of only one bottle she had been relieved of the pains in her back, had regained her appetite, and could rest well and attend to her household duties, and we can truly say that Hunt's Remedy is a most wonderful medicine, and cheerfully recommend it to the public.

The Cincinnati saloon-keepers are terrible sticklers for "personal liberty," but they want it all on their side. It has been the custom of certain poor women to keep coffee stands at the public markets. The saloonkeepers have organized to break up this business, since it interferes with the sale of beer, and they have induced the Board of Health, which has control of the markets, to prohibit the sale of coffee at the public markets.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. jel4-1y

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

Could not move!

I shrunk!

From 228 lbs., to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

Dublin, June 6, 1881. R. FITZPATRICK.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters.

The Negro Problem in the Closet.

The Negro is a human being.

An educated gospel preacher is most efficient.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should use the most efficient means to benefit accessible humanity.

The Negro is accessible.

Therefore the M. E. Church, South, should do all she can to help educate preachers for the Negro.

Yours prayerfully,

BETTER THAN EVER.

The Inter-Ocean For 1884.

More new features have been introduced in The Weekly Inter Ocean in the last twelve months than in any other paper published in this country. Retaining all the old specialties and departments, the publishers have added illustrated biographical sketches of persons prominently before the public at date of publication; illustrated articles on important historical and current events, or in elucidation of antiquarian research, or interesting engineering and mechanical problems; cable letters from London covering the field of European news for each week; special contributions devoted to reminiscences of army and political life; and new series of articles given up largely to personal gossip and recollections of prominent literary people.

The Inter Ocean will remain uncompromisingly Republican; will maintain its present attitude on the question of protecting American industries; will continue to devote special attention to trade, transportation, and economic questions; will retain the departments of The Curiosity Shop (a current encyclopedia of curious, interesting, and valuable information called out by inquiries of subscribers); The Woman's Kingdom (devoted to the progressive movements in which women are interested); The Farm and Home (covering topics of special interest to farmers, their wives, and their children); The Veterinary (containing answers to questions as to the treatment of horses, cattle, and other animals by one of the best veterinary surgeons in the West); and Complications taking in puzzles, enigmas, conundrums, etc.), all of which are peculiar to the paper; will give as much space as hitherto to serial and short stories, original and selected sketches and poems, and with increased facilities for news-gathering in the shape of special wires to New York and Washington, and experienced correspondents well placed at home and abroad, will more than maintain its high standard for enterprise and accuracy in all departments of news.

While so many improvements have been made in The Weekly Inter Ocean; the price has been reduced to one dollar per year, postage included. This puts a large eight-page (there are frequently twelve pages) paper in the hands of the reader at the low rate of two cents per week. The reduction in price and the recent improvements make The Weekly Inter Ocean not only the best family newspaper in the country, but the cheapest. The subscription price of The Inter Ocean is as follows:

Weekly Edition per year, postage paid $1.00
Semi-Weekly Edition per year, postage paid 2.50
Daily (including Sunday) per year. 12.00
Daily (excluding Sunday) per year. 10.00
Wednesday's Edition (with Musical Supplement) per year 2.00

Plantation Melodies —AND— REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. B. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

[continued from previous column] lectual character of the stage audience, and the inveterate bondage of the stage to the low tastes and vulgar spirit of its patrons. It cannot be accused of having written this condemnation in a spirit of religious fanaticism; it is a piece of plain common sense observation.

The Charge d'Affaires in Port-au Prince has been instructed to insist on the payment of an indemnity by the Haytien Government to Frenchmen who suffered a loss during the revolt, and take steps to ascertain the extent to which property has been damaged. The French cruiser Minerva will visit Port-au-Prince and Cape Haytien. The French Government will do its utmost to protect Frenchmen in Hayti.

Bishop Turner, of the African Methodist Church, has been displaying an altogether unseemly excitement in consequence of the fact that the Supreme Court could find no constitutional warrant for the Civil Rights act. He thinks the Nation will receive "the hisses of man, the curse of God, and the ridicule of all ages" unless something is interpreted into the Constitution that does not exist there. He wants fire-eaters instead of conservatives among his race. He is somewhat inconsequential in his wrath, for he says that he always [illegible] what he now raves against, and believed that the negroes could not exist in the country which he is angry that they do not subdue to their demands. He evidently takes no satisfaction in the confirmation of his views. Sensible negroes will refuse to share in the good Bishop's excitement. The Civil Rights act did them no good. They are not driven out of the United States because it is swept out of the way, and they will not be driven out of the States. Let them strive to improve their condition and invite sympathy instead of repelling it and it will yet be well with them according to their deserts.—N. Y. Times.

The Sun,

NEW YORK. 1884.

About sixty million of copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife, or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without the waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

Terms to Mail Subscribers.

WEEKLY—$1.00 a year. A WONDERFUL And SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

THE MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

Southern White Conferences.

DEBATE IN GENERAL MISSIONARY COMMITTEE.

(Report in Western Christian Advocate.)

Pending the appropriation to the Alabama Conference, Bishop Foster gave his views at length upon the white work in the South. He said: We have come to a point where the relative clams of the domestic and foreign work must be considered and adjusted. Some departments of the domestic field ought to have your utmost attention and liberal appropriations, and those are such as are embraced in your colored and frontier work. In these the Church should expend its energies and material resources freely. But to a large degree the white work in the South is in an unsatisfactory condition. Witht he best of intentions we have used a good deal of money there, and have tried to do a good deal, which, to me, has seemed unnecessary to perform, because others were there who ought to do it, and who would have been likely to do it if we had not attempted it. The bishop went into a history of the influences and training to which the poorer and non-slaveholding people of the South had been subject, showing how they had come to be lacking in frugality and thrift, and to be considered, and to consider themselves as constituting no part of the real South, and as having little to do with the management and support of either political or religious organizations. The expenses incurred for the support of ministers, and for the Churches were borne by the moneyed class of the South—by the "real South"—and this policy had been exceedingly detrimental to the people generally and to the cause of Christ. It tended to pauperism and to pride of caste, to ignorance and idleness. It produced a whole class of population, large in numbers, composed of people who never had any ideas of thrift, and no principles that would lead them to support for themselves or their neighbors schools or Churches. After the war, the North projected into Southern territory a great number of people who have been doing there a great and noble work—a work which merits the highest crown the Redeemer can give for heroic Christian activity. The bishop proceeded to specify some Southern white conferences which, in part or in whole, he thought are far from doing their duty, either in the way of self-support and church building, or in efforts for social improvement, for education, and for the salvation of the unconverted. They seemed in all these particulars to partake more than they ought of the characteristics to which he had adverted. He gave facts which substantiated this view, and which produced a most decided impression that either a radical improvement should be demanded in those conferences, or that the Church should materially change its policy in respect to [illegible].

[illegible] Wiley said: If we appro[illegible] after this speech we shall not [illegible] to our Southern white [illegible]. I have seen many of the [illegible] Bishop Foster has pre[illegible] and shall not come [illegible] them. But suppose [illegible] to concede that a [illegible] of white people [illegible] country are very [illegible] even debased, [illegible] been very badly trained in all educational and benevolent matters; and suppose that there are multitudes that might be included in this class, what is our duty in the premises? The Church South is doing nothing or very little for them, and has never shown any desire to do any thing for them. This is a reason why we should do something. I attended the Alabama Conference. It is a characteristic conference—very small, with few ministers and small lay membership. I held the conference in a little log church in the woods. Windows it had none, save holes cut through to let in the light. The nearest house was three quarters of a mile distant, where the principal man of our Church and of that section lived. The pigs made their bed under the floor of the house, and the chickens roosted all around. And this leading man eked out an existence from a miserable farm of 45 acres. He could neither read nor write, and he was glad that his little boy could do both for him. My heart was pained to know that back of this man there were millions in the same state of illiteracy and poverty; and I felt that we ought to go down there and do more than ever for that people. In Church work down there, as Bishop Foster has said, the poorer whites had in former times not been wanted nor welcomed. The whole life of that region had centered around aristocratic people. And the fact that ought to touch our hearts is, that thousands of poor white men all over our land are ignorant and pauperized, and no man has cared for their souls. And if any other Church is moving now in their behalf it is because we have been there and have done something for them. I heard one of the leading men of this country say, not long ago, that this demand for universal education was the greatest humbug of the age; and another prominent gentleman has said it was a great wrong to the masses to give them the idea of popular education. But this idea is broad, and all denominations are moving forward under its pressure. I do not diminish the solemnity of the facts which have been presented. The inference I would draw from them is, that we should go down there and give those people what they need. The preachers are no better than the people. They are inexperienced. They have little skill. I had great difficulty to find a man in the Alabama Conference suitable to make secretary. I did find one, a probationer, a student in Andrews Institute, a school conducted in a building no better than an ordinary stable. Let us go on as we have been doing; and to this we are constrained by circumstances which we can not disregard.

Bishop Simpson said: I will confine myself to the question before us—the Alabama Conference, and what appropriation it should have. The only general question outside of this is, as to the policy or propriety of abandoning the white work in the South altogether. Some things have been done foolishly, it may be; but this is not the place to judge of that. The General Conference has made those conferences, and the question whether the General Conference has done wisely is out side the province of this committee to consider. Four years ago I visited Alabama, and I am not sure that there was a building of ours in all that State, except at one point, where we had a half finished house. We held conference at a camp meeting in the woods. The Ku-klux were within hearing distance of us, and we could hear their yells. All the men who attended that conference came expecting that they might die if it should be known that they had attended our conference. But they came to stand for their faith as they had stood for their country. One of those men had organized a company during the war and marched them 300 miles until he and they could join our army. We have now two conferences, and about 13,000 Church members there. Something has been done. There are no two conferences in the South that have increased as those in Alabama have. Two years ago I held the conference in Alabama. I was delighted with it. I had no idea that such growth and progress could be made in so short a time. Just imagine two conferences, one white and one colored, where a few years ago men were killed for their faith. We gave them last year $2,250—half as much for a conference as some of your pastors here get for salary. But look at another fact of growth. From 1878 to 1882 the New England Conference did not increase 900, but Alabama increased last year 930 members. The increase of the whole Church last year was only 2 per cent.; the increase of Alabama was 20 per cent. Now, then, is there any advance in other directions? There are 108 churches in the conference, of the probable value of $27,265, and a few parsonages. There is something there, certainly, and some money has been paid. We voted to the Central Alabama (colored) $2,500. Shall we not give these white people $2,250? I hope you will.

Dr. Buckley siad: The first fact for us to consider is that we are in the South, and only one of two things is left for us to do:—we must plan to stay here, or go out. In the next place we must ask, Were we wise to go there when we did go, and in the way that we went? On this subject no one can entertain a reasonable doubt. We ought to to have gone there, and as we did. With regard to Texas, I may say that it offered us when we went there the most magnificant field for work of any state in the South. But a great calamity overtook us in the South. It was a change in our policy. At first we were enthusiastic over the fact that blacks and whites were to sit together, as it will be remembered our first conferences were mixed. We could have fought, bled, and died on that line; but it is a fact that we have given up that issue, consequently we have no settled, definite policy there upon which we could fight to martyrdom. But I take issue with the statement that the Church South is the same as our own. It has no record on temperance, and the leading man in Dallas, Texas, when I was there, owned a railroad, and ran excursion trains on Sunday, and encouraged drunkenness and vice. That Church has abolished probation, and now takes into its fellowship all who apply. Its revivals are no better than the wildest efforts of Mrs. Van Cott. When I was in South Carolina I found eleven societies that had no class meetings. It is, therefore, a great mistake to say that the spirit of that Church is the spirit of old-fashioned Methodism. It has no appreciative influence on the religious and moral character of the people down there. There are people down there, of course, who are in favor of every thing that is good. But while that is so, we can not make an issue on a generality. On the other hand, some of our own societies are a disgrace to our work and to our church. But if we work there we must take the people as we find them, and make our church there from the material we can gather. One thing, however, is certain, that we can not mix the races; we can not do it even here in the North. Dr. Buckley here related an incident that occurred some years ago in the New England Conference, which objected to receiving a transfer of twelve intelligent, cultivated colored men. It is easy enough to sit in Boston and say what ought to be done in Illinois and Texas. I was well received as a traveler when I visited Texas on five seperate occations; but if I went there to plant Churches I should expect and should receive a very different reception, and yet fraternity can not be denied. But our policy should be to put our money where we can do good, and the most good. If we can't succeed in Texas we can't succeed anywhere in the South. We have suffered a great deal by the secularity of our ministers there. In 1877 I found in Dallas the most flourishing of our charges I have ever found anywhere in the South. At that time the wealthy Church South worshiped in a little stucture in which I counted eighteen broken window panes in the windows, and they had not energy enough to repair them. Mr. Buckley did not think that always the right man had been sent down South, and he gave some facts and incidents to support this opinion.

Bishop Bowman remarked: There are 5,000 or 10,000 people in Galveston who never go to church any where. When I was there we had more people in attendance at our Church than at all the other Churches put together. In Austin the mass of the better part of the population are gathering around our Church there. When I was there we had the house full, and the congregation gave us $2.700 to reduce the floating debt of the Church. Brother Dougherty is the pastor of our Church near the capitol, and presiding elder of a small district. If you reduce this appropriation you will greatly damage the work.

General Fisk said: How is it that in the Austin Conference, after all the money we have spent there and the large immigration, we have decreased there?

Bishop Bowman replied: It is not so in the first place. The appearance that it is so is because accurate reports have not been made to the conference. Another reason tending to that result is that many of our people who go down there are Methodists from policy not from principle. They go to the Church South for social and commercial reasons. But there are whole counties in Kentucky to day where, according to the testimony of the Southern Church, there was no Church of any sort until we went there. In Clinton, Mo., we were the first to build a Church of any sort. I have traveled mile after mile over parts of Alabama without seeing a church. I stopped at one little church which I found without a window or a chimney, and a flock of sheep made their fold in it. And I was told that a preacher attended a funeral there a short time before when, because of the smoke, he could not see one of his congregation. In Texas we don't go into any place where the Southern Church is well established and doing work, but we go where no Church exists. We go where there is an opening for us to establish a Church and get people converted. Now Brother Skidmore seemed to intimate that we have done nothing down there, but we have two strong colored conferences, a German conference, and this white conference. You can't realize what we have done there. Eight years ago I went down there, and I thought they would of course place me in some colored family, but I was placed in a family of Episcopalians. And when I inquired the reason, I was told that had I gone to a colored family, I should have been mobbed. But last fall I went there, and was three times the guest of colored men, and was treated by white people with all the courtesy I could desire. Said a prominent colored man to me the other day. "Build your schools down here for the white people;—every one of them strengthens us" We have had embarrassments down there. But we can not make men, and we can not make places; and yet we have had places for which for years we could not get the man we wanted. But now we have the right kind of men, and we must give them a chance. And then they will show you results. But they can't stay there unless you sustain them.

On Sunday night, Nov. 11th, Rev. J. H. Riddick, of the Washington Conference, at Staunton, Va., preached to an immense audience of white and colored citizens, on the Danville riot. On Tuesday evening a mass meeting of colored citizens was held, by which it was recommended that the first Sabbath in December be set apart to deliver funeral orations for the colored men recently massacred in Virginia. A committee was appointed to, and confer with other committees in different parts of the State, to consider the feasibility of emigrating from that State to other sections of the country.

An Arkansas writer is amazed at the number of persons in his State who have absolutely and persistently resisted every effort at progress. He adds that in southern and southeastern Arkansas are hundreds of farmhouses that have not yet had a cooking stove, and that a railroad surveyor tells him of many farmers who have set their faces resolutely against railroads, on the ground that the locomotives would scare game out of the country. A reporter for the Sun who was recently in Arkansas saw a farmer who was trying to sell out because a railroad is to be built within thirty miles of his farm.—N. Y. Sun.

The chief drawback to the successful beginning of work in the new cotton mill in Charleston, S. C., was a lack of weavers. Those who are working are from the North, and others are to be drawn from the North, as it is, the Courier says, cheaper to import skilled operatives than to teach [illegible] hands.

The Ministry.

I am inclined to think it highly probable that for sometime to come, as in former years, no small part of the work of the Church, in the South especially, is to be committed to those of our preachers who have enjoyed but a very limited opportunity for obtaining the intellectual preparation necessary in order to enable one to secure to largest measure of efficiency in the ministerial calling. As might be expected they are more or less deficient in mental discipline, and labor under disadvantages which are at once a source of embarassment and hindrance. They were at the organization of the conferences, and in a measure since then, the only men available, so the authorities deemed it proper to send them forth to gather in the people and minister to them as best they could until our theological schools were ready to furnish young men thoroughly equipped to enter the field, not for the purpose of displacing their seniors, but to aid them in carrying forward the work with much greater rapidity and on a much larger scale. I am happy to say the young men cherish no wish for the early retirement of these veterans in the service. Long may their battle-scarred but dignified forms be seen moving to and fro on the earth, bearing the standard of the church of their choice. We regard them as constituting an unique class who are, strictly speaking, to have no successors. The peculiar conditions under which they were reared, and which have given color to their lives, are destined soon to pass away, never to return again. They are the concluding link in a chain which stretches back into the dark and bitter past. It is due them to state that notwithstanding their meagre attainments they have struggled right valiantly. They have toiled heroically in the upbuilding of our cause through years of privation and suffering. Everywhere they were confronted by opposition, and it seems that malice was never more busy and productive than when in the act of inventing devices with which to drive them from their posts. But they went on undaunted, trusting in God and organizing societies in the sparsely settled country districts, and in the thickly populated towns and cities, where, under the stimulus given by their earnestness and tireless efforts churches, mostly rude in design, have been erected. Of course these will in a short time give way to larger and finer structures, more in keeping with the growing wealth and population of to-day. For brevity's sake I must omit to mention many other instances in which the ministrations of these worthy men have proved serviceable to the people and strengthening to the church. Such a retrospect, while calculated to inspire a feeling of rapture ought, also, prompt them that remain to greater diligence in every part of their work as true ambassadors for Christ. On the basis of their past achievements they should now aim to build more broadly and successfully. To this end every means of improvement within their reach should be eagerly grasped and turned to the best account. They should never let go their faith in progress, for by this alone can they be kept out of those ruts which never fail to shorten the term of a preacher's acceptability. Age and experience are valuable elements in any pursuit, but the chances of success are largely in favor of those who add to them a constantly expanding mind, an unyielding purpose and a soul which never flags. If our older brethren of whom I have been speaking wish to continue active in the work which they helped to inaugurate, let them determine to adapt themselves with the times; and should any of them, through extreme age, impaired health or natural weakness of mind be compelled to stay in the rear, let them resolve to submit cheerfully to their lot. No amount of complaining will alter the appointments which Providence makes. When the time comes which must practically end my active ministry, should it come before my departure from this life, let me instead of finding fault with the people, or blaming the bishop, or speaking disparagingly of the young men crowding around me, sit down patiently at the Master's feet and praise him for every moment he has permitted me to enjoy the precious privilege of preaching the gospel to dying men. There would I sing and pray and shout till invited to come up higher where superannuation is exchanged for immortal vigor. Fathers, I entreat you to leave off complaining at the things which unmistakably form a part of God's arrangement. Don't pass into the sour age just when you should ripen for heaven. Take your young brethren—not by the throat—but by the hand and welcome them into fields made memorable by your sacrificing labors. Commend them to your flocks over which you exert an influence. Speak kindly, earnestly and frequently of our schools and of those who give instructions therein. Watch for opportunities to encourage the young to seek an education. Endeavor as far as practicable to get the people to take and read the SOUTHWESTERN, which is a power for good wherever it circulates. Stand up nobly in defense of every good cause, and then you may rest assured that you will be loved and honored by the church although you may never shine among the brilliant constellation of her best educated minds. Stand by the Church and the Church will stand by you. Grow sullen, complain, find fault with everybody and everything, growl at your own shadow, and then be sure you will be shunned if not disliked as a troublesome bore.

D. W. HAYS.

Chattanooga, Tenn.

Hot Springs District.

The third quarterly conference for Hot Springs Station was held Sept. 29-30. Bro. Crawford, the pastor, is one of the few preachers of this conference who joined the traveling connection when this whole State was a district in the St. Louis conference. He has been laboring hard for our cause in Hot Springs, and while no great revival has swept over the city, yet the spiritual condition of the society in the main is good. The quarterly love feasts are the best I ever attended. This is a difficult place to hold, it being a watering place, and depending largely upon the visitors for the success of all branches of business. Bro. Crawford has had some success this year—a small increase in membership, and has, upon the whole, done quite well. He has some earnest workers, both in church and Sunday-school, and we are expecting a good time yet this year.

Pine Bluff Circuit, under the pastorate of Rev. O. G. Brooks, is moving along grandly. The third quarterly conference for this work was held Oct. 6-7, at St. Mary's Chapel. The services were well attended, and the spiritual interests good. Quite a number have been added to the church on this work this year, and they are coming up with their finances better than ever before. It was on this work that our beloved Bro. Tabor passed from labor to reward. As I stood over his grave in the Chapel yard I could not refrain from weeping, as his devotion to our work and the Master's cause, and his heroic endeavors to elevate the fallen passed before memory's view. His body rests in the grave, but the soul, God's polished diamond, has gone to be a star in a more brilliant constellation above.

Red Land Circuit is under the pastorate of Rev. J. G. Thompson, who is doing good work there. The third quarter was Oct. 12-14, but owing to illness I could not attend. The services and business was attended to by the pastor. This is a promising field of labor, and the wheat is ripe unto the harvest.

Watson, under the care of Bro. Pinkett, is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances. The pastor is having a hard time, is laboring among an ignorant, superstitious people, who through fear of death from conjurors and witchery are all their life in bondage. In the midst of such a people it will take years of toil to bring them to light and establish our church. The third quarter for this work was held Oct. 20-21;

Pine Bluff Station, Rev. S. Johnson pastor, is moving on smoothly. Bro. Johnson is laboring hard to complete the new church and is succeeding quite well. About 20 have joined the church this year, and the church work in every respect is looking up. The third quarter for this work was held Nov. 4-5. On the 4th, Bro. Tillman, one of the pillars of the church was buried. His funeral was attended by a large audience.

The third quarterly conference for Little Rock was held Oct. 28-29. The pastor, Rev. W. O. Emory, has been laboring under serious difficulties, but notwithstanding this has had some success both financially and spiritually. A good number have been added to the church and several baptized, and as the cause of the difficulties is now removed we hope for great things in this charge before conference. This charge has sustained a great loss in the death of Bro. J. M. Bell, district stewart, who fell asleep in Jesus after an illness of 35 days. We are now ready to begin the work of the fourth quarter. We hope the brethren will bring up the benevolent collections, with an increase over last year, in all enterprises as they have in Church Extension. May God give us grace and strength to do the work faithfully.

Local Preachers.

Local preachers filled one of the most important places in the economy of early Methodism. Much of the grand work of the old Church has been done by them. Many of the largest Methodist churches were built up at first by some pious local brother anxious to bring souls to Christ. They were seeking work—not the honor of being known as preachers, nor of being able to write "Rev." before their names—but work; actual good hard work for the Master. This being the case they did work, and they were able to see the fruits of their labors. But the last few years of Methodism have seen a change, in many parts of the country at least. There are those who doubt the wisdom of continuing the office of Methodist local preacher. Now why is this? No part of any machinery is ever discontinued so long as it is able to do the work it was set to do, if the work still needs to be done. Local preachers, then, must have outlived their usefulness in the opinion of some. I do not believe this. But I do believe that the church would be greatly benefitted by a greater zeal and earnestness on the part of local preachers. Instead of feeling slighted by not being asked to preach at district conference, or by not being called upon to do the pastor's work, let them find unoccupied territory and there build up a society of God's people. Let them fill the place of the pastor when called upon to do so and help to hold up his hands at all times. Let them aid in getting the collections. When the people see more of this kind of work, and hear less complaints about not getting your rights, they will begin to think that the church can not yet quite do without local preachers. When they see you and your pastor working hand in hand for the upbuilding of Zion's walls, they will be persuaded to be better Christians. Above all things prepare for your work. The people will not much longer bear to hear you unless you have something to say which they wish to hear. The day has about passed when they will listen to your preach that Jonah swallowed a whale and that the Jews were not looking for Christ. Read. If you cannot read, then learn. Do not venture to interpret the Bible unless you can, and do read it. The school children will laugh at you if they find they know more than you, and they will keep on learning. You can't keep them back; you must keep up with them. Slavery was the great wall between the colored people and education. Now that has been brushed away by the hand of the Almighty, and nothing else can stay the tide of education and schools. If you are to be leaders of your people you must attend these schools if possible; if not, you must work to qualify yourself as best you may, but aid the schools; send your children to them; talk for them; pray for them; visit them; tell your neighbors they must not forget them. We received lately evidence that the local brethren can do something when they try. It was a five dollar bill from Bro. C. A. Curry, of Bedias, to help our Seminary. He was here at school last year and saw the need of helping the institution to assist such as he. During the summer he has been telling of our needs, and has induced some to help him send this money. Now are there not others who will follow his example both in getting all the good possible in the school, and in helping it from the outside. Let this conduct become general and we shall hear less of the opposition of the local preachers and the preachers in charge.

Marshall District.

MR. EDITOR:—I closed my work on this district at this place on the 11th. Sorrow and gladness are so evenly balanced in my thoughts at the prospects of going to another field, among strangers, that it is hard for me to tell which I feel the most. The preachers that I have been associated with for the last four years I have learned to love. All without exception have done all they could to make my visits among them pleasant, and so far as I know there is not an unkind thought between myself and one of the pastors. We have many men and women on this district that love God and the M. E. Church, and I believe from the kind treatment of me, they love the presiding elder, and knowing that I must leave them, perhaps to meet no more in the world, it fills my heart with sadness. I hope in the change that will soon take place, they will receive a better elder, and a better man than they have had for the last four years. Permit me through the SOUTHWESTERN to thank the preachers and the people for their kindness to me while among them, and may I not add without offense to any, that while I thank all, there are a few that I feel under special obligation to, and will never forget their uniform kindness and Christian bearing to me. God bless these brothers and sisters, and when the storms of life are over may we meet in heaven where they will be no more parting. Our reports this year will show a decided improvement in all the departments of church work. Our benevolent collections may fall a little below last year. We have done a grand work in the way of church building and in the improvement of our church property.

Six new churches have been completed, worth from four hundred to two thousand five hundred dollars each, and four built some time ago, completed, making in all ten built or completed this year—giving this district a number of good churches not surpassed by any in the conference with two or three exceptions.

I close this letter in the language of St. John: "Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to Him be glory and dominion for ever and ever—Amen!

Your brother, W. L. MOLLOY.

Paris, Texas, Nov. 15.

Card from Bishop Warren.

To my true yoke-fellows for ministerial education:—Fifteen months ago I began to ask individuals, and occasionally a congregation, to unite together to build a training school for the ministers of our 2,000,000 of hearers in the South. The building was to cost about $24,000 and be endowed with $20,000. One partner took for his end of the yoke the $20,000 endowment, and $7,000 toward the building, leaving the people I am addressing to carry the end of the yoke representing $17,000.

I am able to report that the building, 112x55 feet, four stories high, built of brick and elegantly trimmed with cut stone, is done and occupied. Dean Thirkield and his excellent wife, daughter of Gilbert Haven, are already at work. Its endowment has been paid and every dollar of claim against it canceled. Laus Deo! It stands as a work of faith, a labor of love, and a monument of some toil and sacrifice.

During the progress of this work, I have felt constrained to help our school at Morristown, Tenn., $1,050, our College at Athens, Tenn., $200, and other schools less amounts, because the treasury of the Freedmen's Aid Society was always overdrawn and our treasury was always overflowing.

I thank God that this work has been the means of introducing me to some of the best of God's noble workers. The kindly sympathy I have had from ministers, members, and non-members has given me a new appreciation of the working power of our holy religion. This money is sacred, as having in it the widow's mite, the superannuate's generosity, the [illegible] tance, and especially the gifts of two blind girls dependent on their own labor for a maintenance. God must bless the institution!

I am now engaged in raising $1,000 to pay on its furnishing, at $50 per double room. Almost any Sabbath-School could furnish a room, or a single room at $25, and have its name put on the door.

I need the immediate payment of every dollar that has been subscribed to help meet this new obligation.

Our principal partner, the Rev. E. H. Gammon, of Illinois, has already entered into agreement, on his part, with me, on the part of the true yoke-fellows, to put a building for the Department of Medicine on the same ground next summer. This partnership is not to be dissolved. It is ready to take in more partners, who can keep their hearts open toward heaven for dividends.

This training school is a part of Clark University at Atlanta, Ga. Said University has 450 acres of land—the wise provision of Bishop Gilbert Haven for future endowment—at Atlanta. It has a college building worth $40,000; the building just finished; a school of carpentry, one of iron-working, one of domestic economy for the girls, a President's house of ten rooms, a house of eight rooms occupied by Prof. Crogman—the last five built by the students in carpentry, and paid for by this partnership before its present organization.

The Medical Department is imperatively demanded, and already partially endowed. Of course, all is under the patronage and control of our Freedmen's Aid Society.

From now to early summer I shall need to put this cause among the many others that the love of God and the needs of man lay on your hearts. We will not fail each other. Yours in labor and love.

[illegible] of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for the Fiscal Year of Eleven Months, Ending Oct. 31, 1883.

In order to present a full report in connection with our annual meeting, held in November of each year, we have changed our Fiscal year, closing it October 31st, instead of December 31st. In so doing we have shortened last year and this to eleven months each.

At the commencement of the present Fiscal year, Dec. 31, 1882, we had in the treasury a balance of	$63,795 10
We have received on general funds, for donations, etc.	139,007 34

On general account, donations, etc.	$129,880 05
On loan fund account, loans to churches	102,384 79

At the [illegible]	[illegible]
	$84,530 00
This exceeded the balance [illegible] to the amount of	$30,734 80

[illegible]	261
[illegible]	68
[illegible]	113

[illegible] day [illegible] over, [illegible] pre- [illegible]

A comparison of the [illegible] of last shows [illegible]

[illegible] $15,217 28 [illegible]

[illegible] remember that [illegible] each [illegible] part of it [illegible] that [illegible]

[illegible] number of churches, costing, on the average, over $1,850 each. One of the number reported last year failing to build, as agreed, returned the money, and it has been placed elsewhere this year. During this year we have received 43 special gifts against 68 for the year preceding, a decline of over one-third. This gives us 184 frontier churches toward the 400 originally contemplated. We earnestly urge our friends everywhere to respond generously to this special appeal until at least the 400 churches originally contemplated shall be procured.

During the year we have had applications from frontier churches, anxious to build under this plan, for more than double the number of special gifts received.

The rapidity with which the country is being developed, especially in the West and Northwest, along the lines of our great railways, imperatively requires a large increase of zeal and liberality in the prosecution of this work. Let every pastor faithfully present this cause to his people as the Discipline provides, and let our generous friends, who can afford to contribute liberally, send in their special offerings for frontier churches, and in the years to come all will rejoice together over the glorious work accomplished.

Hot Springs District Conference.

Dear Editor—On the 8th, at 12:30 a. m., Rev. L. W. Elkins and I boarded the train at Little Rock, en route for seat of the Hot Springs District Conference. Six o'clock in the morning found us at Fulton where we met Rev. B. Spencer, our pastor at this place. We took breakfast with a good Baptist brother, from thence across the country fifteen miles to Baber's Chapel, where the Conference opened at 2:30 p. m., Rev. L. W. Elkins, P. E., in the chair, by reading the 61st chapter of Isa., singing hymn 778, and prayer by W. O. Emory. W. O. Emory was elected Secretary, and G. B. Donley assistant. The following traveling preachers were present: G. B. Donley, G. W. Baber, M. Lockman, J. T. Thompson, Osborn Wheeler, Edward Spencer and W. O. Emory. There were three or four who had whipped their wives that applied for licenses, and the conference handled them without gloves. The high character of the Church was lifted in the minds of people of that community by the manly way the conference handled those suspicious characters. A man who some years ago was expelled by one of the districts of our work in Texas, said to have had more than his share of wives, applied for license, but the brethren let him know that the church did not want any such men to preach to her people. It was gratifying to see how determined the conference was to put an end to this class of men. I could not help drawing a contrast between their action and that of another class of brethren called to look into the conduct of a brother. Now, the brethren that conducted this investigation were of that class who are called "men of great sacrifice," simply because they preach, and in some cases "pound" the gospel to the "poor colored people." [illegible] brethren it was shown that the accused had put away his wife, and would not let her remain another night, although he said "she was as pure as an angel." It was also shown that this saint was known to be shut up in a room often until as late as 12 and 1 o'clock at night with a little maid. [illegible] all this these saintly apostles [illegible] "We exonorate Rev. ——, [illegible] under the circumstances believe he is right."

[illegible] conference, although composed of men that are called very [illegible] and untrustworthy by some [illegible] bosses," who must keep [illegible] under ever before the [illegible] that they may hold fast [illegible] they have attained, [illegible] very differently from this, [illegible] by their action, that men [illegible] expected to preach in the old [illegible] must be men of one wife, and must not be sitting about until such hours as the above with the daughters of mothers who take them to their homes as messengers of the blessed Jesus.

On the whole the conference made character for the church on this line.

Bros. W. M. Lee, G. W. Thompson and W. H. Henry were recommended for the traveling connection. The conference adjourned on Saturday at 3 p. m.

Then came the fourth quarterly conference in the afternoon. The meeting for this quarter on Sabbath was a feast of fat things for this people. Rev. L. W. Elkins, P. E., preached at 11 o'clock from the text "The work of the Lord is tried." Rev. G. B. Donley preached at 3 p. m., and the writer at night. The quarterly collection was $24, which was a big thing for this place, when we consider the age of this society, and the trouble they have had as a result of the local war in that part, not long since. Rev. G. W. Baber, the pastor, organized this society less than two years ago. They have put up a good house, far better than the most country churches. They have something over a hundred members. This is one of the finest fields to be found anywhere in which to do work for the Lord.

We returned to Fulton on Monday, preached for our good people there that evening. On Tuesday, at 11 o'clock, took the train for the City of Roses.

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

Could not move!

I shrunk!

From 228 lbs to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains all left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles, I am not only as sound as a sovereign, but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

Dublin, June 6, '81. R. Fitzpatrick.

CHAPTER II.

"Malden, Mass. Feb. 1, 1880. Gentlemen—

I suffered with attacks of sick-headache.

Neuralgia, female trouble, for years, in the most terrible and excruciating manner.

No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure until I used Hop Bitters.

"The first bottle
Nearly cured me;
The second made me as well and strong as when a child.
And I have been so to this day."

My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious
Kidney, liver, and urinary complaint.
Pronounced by Boston's best physicians—
"Incurable!"
Seven bottles of your bitters cured him, and I know of the "Lives of eight persons,"
In my neighborhood that have been saved by your bitters,
And many more are using them with great benefit.
"They almost
Do miracles!"—Mrs. E. D. Slack.

How to Get Sick—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters.

We have to go to Washington to learn that there are 7000 colored voters in Boston! There are really but 2000 to 3000, and they are loyal as truth to the Republican party.—Boston Commonwealth.

Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription."

Always becomes the favorite remedy of those who try it. It is a specific for all female "weaknesses" and derangements, brings strength to the limbs and back, and color to the face. Of all druggists. Being entirely vegetable, no care is required while using Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For sick headache, constipation, impure blood, dizziness, sour eructation from the stomach, bad taste in the mouth, billious attacks, pain in the region of kidney, internal fever, bloated feeling about stomach, rush of blood to head, take Dr. Pierce's "pellets." By druggists.

A Cheerful Giver.

"I was once attending a missionary meeting in Scotland," said a minister in making an address. "There it is the custom to take up the collection at the door, as the people go out. A poor woman, in going out, dropped a sovereign into the basket. The deacon who held the basket, said 'I am sure you cannot afford to give so much as that.' 'O yes I can' said she. 'Do take it back,' said the deacon. She replied, 'I must give it. I love to give for Jesus' sake.' Then the deacon said, 'take it home to-nigth, and if, after thinking it over, you can send it in the morning. In the morning I was sitting at breakfast with the deacon, when a little note came from this woman; but the note contained two sovereigns. 'You wont take them?' I said to the deacon. 'Of course I shall' said he. 'I know that good woman well, If I send them back she will send four next time." This was indeed, "loving to give."—The Well Spring.

Is your Life Worth a Dollar?

Perhaps that seems a high price for it, considering how poor your blood is, and how your whole system is prostrated, debilitated, and enfeebled. People have been heard to say, under such circumstances, that they would not give the toss of a copper for the choice between life and death. But when it comes to actually drawing near the grave, a man naturally draws back, and says he does not want to die. Life is very precious, and even to a broken-down man it is worth saving.

One dollar will buy a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. That one dollar may start you on the road from misery to recovery. A man must take a very mean view of himself who is not willing to invest that much in making one serious effort to rescue himself from deadly debility, and to step into the enjoyment of solid health. Brown's Iron Bitters vitalizes the blood, tones the nerves, and rebuilds the system. Its work is well known. Invest that dollar in a bottle 8 which we gain by trial or practice. In the Word of God men are represented as depraved beings. "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." The movements of the natural heart are "evil continually." But their case is not helpless; these sinners may become saints. As sinners they may have some idea of the possibility of that wrongful change called regeneration, but they know nothing of its nature. They have a theory but they have no experience. Indeed, few things are more common with unconverted people than to ridicule every phase of religious experience. Nevertheless Jesus came "to give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins." Hence Paul wrote to the Romans, "Ye have not received the spirit of bondage again unto fear, but ye have received the spirit of adoption whereby we cry Abba Father." The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God. Just how God gives a person to understand that his sins are forgiven him we do not pretend to explain. "The wind bloweth where it listeth," and men hear "the sound thereof but cannot tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth, so is every one that is born of the Spirit." The process of this work is hid from human eyes, and is beyond the reasoning of mortal minds, but the fact of the possibility of a conscious, happy religious experience for every one who truly repents of his sins and turns to the Lord for salvation, is no longer a question of doubt. The Christian has a peace that is like a river through believing. "The love of God is shed abroad in him by the Holy Ghost given unto him;" and his mind is kept "in perfect peace." He is happy because he knows his sins are forgiven him, and he delights to speak of it. Those meetings that are appointed for the purpose of narrating Christian experience are a delight to him. He not only loves to tell what the Lord has done for his soul, he also loves to hear others tell the same old story. The relation of Christian experience has frequently led sinners to seek the Savior. A full, joyous experience makes a man strong and active in the service of God, and makes that service a delight.

In Ignorance and Without the Gospel.

Rev. S. A. Mitchel, in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, makes a plain statement of facts as to the moral, religious and social condition of the people in certain portions of Georgia and Florida. He says "I speak from personal knowledge," and then proceeds to give us what he calls a sample of the "sixty thousand heathen in two States situated in the heart of Christendom." He refers to Camden county, and says "the people are thought to be guilty of every sin forbidden in the Decalogue. The Sabbath is a regular hunting day, a day of business, "They know but little of God's Word, but few of the men, women or children can read one sentence of the precious Bible. These people are too poor to educate their children, and these are going in the way their fathers trod—in the way of ignorance, vice and folly." We doubt the propriety of calling these communities "heathen;" they are ignorant and vicious but not heathen; they sin against some light, but not against more knowledge, because they are ignorant. We think that the Methodist Episcopal Church is a "debtor" to these ignorant and wicked communities—that God calls her to go and build churches and establish schools among them and teach them to read the precious Bible. If William Taylor can find men who will volunteer to go to India and South America, to teach and preach, it does seem to us that our Church ought to be able to find men who will go down to Georgia and Florida, and preach Christ's Gospel to American sinners who [illegible] to be guilty of every sin forbidden in the Decalogue." Certainly this is an open door, and going here it cannot be said we are "erecting altar against altar." These are communities where Christ has no altar. We earnestly hope that the Church will send some consecrated heralds of the cross to build the walls of Zion in these dark corners of our own land.

Senate Committee on Capital and in New Orleans.

The Senate Committee on education and labor recently held a session in Manchester, N.H., one of the large manufacturing cities of New England. Some of the members of that committee are Southerners who are not fully acquainted with the condition of the New England communities, or the exact relation that exists between New England men and money. There can be no doubt as to the good influences of the information these men will derive from the persons who were brought before them.

Col. Warren O. Livermore, agent of the Amoskeag Company, said they had on their pay-rolls between 5,500 and 6000 people. The pay for the common hands averages: males $1.61 per pay day, and females 95 cents. The cashier of the Manchester Savings Bank said their bank had over $10,000,000 on deposit; that the average deposits in Manchester among the operatives was $330. In this bank they had from 1200 to 1500 deposit books held by operatives in this city. Ex-Governor Smyth said: "During a residence of forty-four years in Manchester, he had scarcely seen any loafing during laboring hours. We owe our prosperity to the fact that the people have worked together, and he did not see why another Manchester should not be built up in many places in the South."

These statements betoken a high state of prosperity, not much in harmony with the recent utterances of Wendell Phillips, which we republish:

"The hand writing on the wall is so plain none but a fool need mistake it. New England is doomed just as sure as natural laws will produce fixed results. New England has no soil worth mentioning, and her wealth has all been derived from her manufactures. These are gradually leaving her, and eventually they will go; some to the West, but most to the South, where the advantages for profitable manufacturing are all located. The coal and iron in the South are easily gotten at, and inexhaustible in amount, and the iron mills, foundries and machine shops can go to them better than they can be carried to the shops. Then the cotton and woolen mills must go there, for the raw materials are and are to be produced there most cheaply, uniformly and better. This, of itself, is no small matter. As the South grows stronger and stronger, the wealth, culture and power of the country will be centered there, until she will become not alone the mistress of America, but the central empire of the world."

Surely "the hand-writing is on the wall so plain none but a fool need mistake it." But we in the South need not fear. New England is not "doomed." There is no unrest there. Manufactures of all kinds are multiplying everywhere. The star of hope never rose higher and shone brighter. The homes of her people are not cursed with "morgages," nor are they "crippled" with debts. Her farmers raise neither cotton or sugar-cane, but they do raise more corn, wheat, barley, rye, oats and potatoes per acre than Louisiana, Mississippi or Alabama, and the best blooded cattle and sheep in America. According to the late census, the deposits in the savings banks of the poor people of New England would be more than sufficient to purchase the entire State of Louisiana or Mississippi. What we in the South need is a little more of New England.

Now is the time for pastors to get cash subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN.

[illegible] employes are more attentive to the wants of the traveling public than the Louisville & Nashville. To persons caring for health and comfort we commend this road. Wednesday, 14th inst., we left New Orleans for the Tennessee Conference, taking this route. Early in the course of our journey we fell in company with Rev. Mr. Featherstone, a minister connected with the M. E. Church South. Mr. Fetherstone is a man about 40 years old, medium size, clean face, small eyes, short and sharp nose, with thin and compressed lips, and with all quite a talker. He has spent the seven past years in California, and says it is no place for a Southern clergyman, especially if he is a member of the M. E. Church, South. He gave us the results of his observation and experience on a number of points.

THE CHINESE.

He regards these as an honest, industrious, frugal people. Thinks that they cannot compete with the Negro, as one Negro will do more work than two or three Chinamen. When they get converted to God they make earnest and devout Christians.

SCHOOLS.

The school system of California was copied from New England, and is having a bad influence all over the State. 1. It imposes a very heavy tax. 2. It is levelling in its nature. 3. It tends to infidelity, licentiousness and communism. In answer to the question, "What do they teach in these schools?" he said, "Reading and writing, English grammar, physical geography, history, higher and lower mathematics, intellectual, physical and moral science, German and Latin languages." We soon learned in the course of this conversation that our brother was not pleased when it was even intimated that it was even possible for him to be mistaken in his conclusions. And we concluded to ask questions and listen to his answers. But we could not see how schools where the above named subjects were taught could tend to infidelity, etc. "It was this system of education," he remarked, "that made New England so proverbial for its infidelity and licentiousness. From recent published statistics he had learned that there were more infidels and illegitimate children in the New England States per capita than in any other section of the country, save Ohio, which was in fact a part of New England." We said to him that we had always taken the people of New England to be a moral people to say the least. "No," was the quick reply, "I used to think so, but upon recent investigation I have found them to be an exceedingly immoral people. New England is the hot-bed of socialism. I get this information from books and papers published in Europe where this matter is well understood." This was about all we could hear about our own native home, and as we wished his opinion on other questions, we incidentally referred to Dr. Haygood as one of the prominent men of the South, and asked his opinion of the Doctor and his critics. "Ah, yes," he said, "I understand Dr. Haygood, he is a premature progressive man; it was a great mistake when he was elected bishop, and a great blessing when he refused to be ordained. I wrote a sharp and strong reply to his speech at Monteagle that was published in the St. Louis Advocate, and another equally as sharp and strong and sent it to the New Orleans Advocate, but Dr. Galloway, who is a personal friend of mine, has not published it." Of course we said nothing, but it was a wonder to us why our brother around on Camp street should allow so "strong and sharp" a paper to go into obscurity. Before reaching Mobile our Bro. Featherstone left the cars, and we were sorry. He had been tapped in the right place, and was full of the matter; he seemed honest in his convictions. But no Southern or Northern minister can succeed in [illegible] cursed by the system of human slavery, who can speak lightly of the system of free schools of America.

MOBILE.

This is a pleasant city of about 40,000 inhabitants. Rev. George Winn, pastor of the Methodis Episcopal Church, met us at the depot and gave us a real Christian greeting, taking us directly to the parsonage, where all the wants of the physical man were attended to. In the evening we preached to an attentive congregation, and secured thirteen subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN. Bro. Winn is a sensible man; he thinks that the best way to save his people from the influence of the proselytes of the city is to have them become acquainted with the doctrines and history of the Church. He thinks that a reading church is always enterprising, progressive and evangelistic. From the start our church has had a struggle in this city, but under the pastorote of Bro. Winn there has come an era of prosperity. The entire work embraces three points, known as Ford River, Dog River and Mobile. At each point there are good Sunday-schools. Since conference he has received thirty-seven into the church. He is now holding revival services and thus far as one of the results he has received ten on probation. The night we were present a number of mourners were at the altar for prayer.

At Montgomery the pastor was away, but his wife, like a sensible woman, subscribed for the SOUTHWESTERN.

BIRMINGHAM.

This is one of the most enterprising and rapidly growing cities in the South. Business men from New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio are coming here to make this city their permanent home. Whatever of stagnation there may be in other sections of the South there is none here, Northern men, with Northern brains, money and enterprise are the life of this new city. The church that does not plan for the future of such a town must be smitten with spiritual blindness. We have here two churches, white and colored. W. P. Miller, D.D. has charge of the white congregation; Rev. Israel Townsend of the colored; both of these brethren report a good degree of prosperity in their work. Bro. Townsend's church has been recently plastered without contracting debts. His Sunday-school and congregation are increasing. He has received over thirty into the church during the year.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

This is one of the most delightful cities we have ever visited in the South. It has a population of about 80,000. We know of no American city of its size that can point to so large a number of literary institutions. First in order stands the Vanderbilt, the great school of the M. E. Church, South, with its spacious buildings, ample grounds tastefully laid out; then the State Normal School, the Montgomery Bell Academy, Ward's Female Seminary, under the care of the Cumberland Presbyterians, Dr. Price Ladies school. According to the Nashville Banner of the 14th inst., the young ladies at one of these schools must be great lovers of butter. That paper distinctly says that one of them, with not over 300 pupils, consumes 400 pounds of butter per week. The Roman Catholics have their St. Celia School. Connected with the Vanderbilt there is a Dental, Medical and Law School. These are all for the education of white young ladies and men. For the colored there are the Fisk, Roger Williams and Central Tennessee, and the Meharry Medical School. The city has seven or eight nice schools for the white children and three for the colored. About one-third of the population of the city are colored. The Central Tennessee and Meharry Medical School are under the supervision of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. J. Braden, D.D., is president of the College. Mr. [illegible] our work in the South a great many mistakes have been made. Too many halt, lame and blind have been employed to give vitality and push to the work. But in the selection of J. Braden, D.D., and George W. Hubbard, there was no mistake. For years these men have occupied their present position, giving each year increased evidence of their adaptation to the work. The college never had so large a number of students enrolled as now. At chapel service Monday morning nearly every seat was occupied. A blessed religious influence pervades; some twelve or fifteen have been recently converted to God. Monday morning, when the president gave an opportunity for those to speak who had a new experience, quite a number arose and spoke, and over twenty arose asking the prayers of Christians. The number of students attending the School of Medicine is each year increasing, but it is not half so large as it should be. All over the South there are open doors for educated colored physicians. Our wonder is that the pastors do not send more of their enterprising young men to the Meharry School of Medicine. C.

According to Zion's Herald the troubles among the Jews in various parts of Europe seem to broaden and deepen:

"The gravest troubles seem to occur in Russia, and this largely for moral reasons. An imperial commission has been formed there for the purpose of studying and fathoming the question, if possible, containing members of very different views. Some of them would remove all the disabilities of the Jews, and others would put even more strain on them than now exists. In the meanwhile the present officials have issued new regulations against the Jews engaged in the liquor trade, showing that the sad rum question is at the bottom of much of the hatred against them. It is very clear that by means of their liquor shops in many parts of the realm, especially in Southern Russia, they have fairly enslaved the peasants with debts and seized most of their lands under foreclosure. It is this which causes much of the bitter feeling which in that region exists in regard to them."

Whether Jew or Christian, all whiskey sellers are much alike. We think that forced emigration or colonization of all whiskey dealers, whether to Palestine or some volcanic isle we do not much care, is about the only thing that will bring the rest of the human family deliverance.

Church Extension Committee.

This Committee met in annual session at Philadelphia, Nov. 15th, Bishop Simpson in the chair. The annual reports of the corresponding secretary and the treasurer were read, and will be found in another column of this paper. Committees were appointed on apportionments, to audit Chaplain McCabe's accounts, to prepare a quadrennial report of the Committee to the General Conference, to prepare a minute in regard to the death of Bishop Peck, and to inquire whether any disciplinary changes are needed in regard to Church Extension. The following churches were exempted from the rule of limitation, to receive such aid as they need from the board: Lebanon, Penn.; Twenty-ninth Street, Philadelphia, not more than $1,000; Centenary Church, Philadelphia, not more than $5,000; Moriah, New York, $200; Oshkosh, Wisconsin, not exceeding $8,000; Chattanooga, Tennessee, Holston Conference.

On the second day resolutions were adopted to allow loans to be made to churches costing more than $10,000; to make six per cent. the maximum interest to be charged by the board on its loans to the churches; to recommend the board to provide for a vacation of six months for Chaplain McCabe, to give him needed help, and to recruit his health.

The committee on disciplinary changes reported no change is needed in the interest of Church Extension, adopted. A resolution was adopted recommending the [illegible] a [illegible] declaring the "Louisiana Lottery Company an institution dangerous to the morals of the people, subversive to good government, a disturbing, corrupting element in politics, and one which the highest interests of society demands shall be abolished as soon as the result can be legally accomplished." Only a few months ago Hon. E. W. Robertson was defeated for re-election to Congress on that issue, and his political brethren should recall him from retirement to active service. That would be giving the anti-Lottery sentiment some practical effect. Mr. Robertson is an able lawyer, and pointed out the legal course subsequently followed by Postmaster General Gresham, which is approved by good people everywhere. We suggest to the Ouachita delegation that Mr. Robinson be presented by them for the office of Attorney General. It would be refreshing to see a regular Democratic convention put up an anti-Lottery candidate for any considerable office, but it is never too late to reform.

[illegible]

It is frequently asserted that colored and white students will not attend the same school or sit together in the same classes, and as the mission of the Church is to all this is presented as a reason why the Church should build caste schools. But what are the facts in the case? Do they attend the same schools and sit in the same classes? By a special act of Congress the Howard University was built from the unclaimed bounty money of colored soldiers, expressly to give colored people the benefits of a higher education. But white and colored students sit in the same classes. In the medical department the white students out-number the colored, while in the law department the colored are slightly in the majority. At Berea, Kentucky, a school for both colored and white has been in successful operation for years. In the law department of the Straight University, New Orleans, the white graduates are largely in the majority. These facts have no tendency to corroborate the statement so often made that colored and white students will not attend the same school.

We know of no man in the Methodist Episcopal Church who was more severely and unjustly criticised by his friends and enemies than the late Bishop Gilbert Haven. But as [illegible] pass on men are coming to place a higher estimate [illegible] his work. The [illegible] criticisms of the living man are being reversed, and his thoughts and plans with reference to the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South are taking their rightful place. The church is coming to realize that all divisions [illegible] are not among [illegible]. The passions of [illegible] blinded their eyes and [illegible] their judgments are passing away. They are coming to realize that policy never [illegible] to success but always to defeat, and [illegible] that nothing but Christian integrity will place [illegible] of men unfading [illegible] the church [illegible] the color line and [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] Christ, a new life will be given to Southern work.

—The Duches of Edinburgh, daughter of the late Czar, is the brightest and most amusing talker of the British royal family.

—Dr. J. B. McFerrin, agent of the Southern Methodist publishing hous at Nashville, continues to be very ill but his freinds are hopeful and report favorable indications.

—Mrs. Judge Merrick, at the tenth annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union Detroit, Michigan, was cordially received. She represented the local work in New Orleans.

—Miss Alice Downey, recently instructed in English, in Indiana Asbury University, was married, at Greencatle, to Rev. Fred Porter, pastor of Lincoln Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago, Dr Alexander Martin officiating.

—Rev. Dr. Cushman of the Southwestern Christian Advocate, paid our sanctum a short visit and ourselves a pleasant surprise yesterday morning. We regretted very much that the Dr. could not stay over a day or two with us but his time was filled, and he could but give us a flying call.—Birmingham (Ala.) Review.

—The two addresses on the subject of "The Negro—His Needs and Claims," delivered by Prof. Crogman, of Clark University, Atlanta, Ga., before Henry Ward Beecher's congregation in Brooklyn, N. Y., have been printed in pamphlet form. Price 25c. For copies apply to Prof. Crogman. The audiences appreciated them highly, as all will who read them.

—Messrs. D. Lothrop & Co., of Boston, have furnished us with a lithographic portrait of Mrs. G. R. Alden, known to the literary world by the nom de plume of "Pansy," and editor of the pictorial magazine of that name, issued by them. Mrs. Alden is a busy and noble woman. It is said that her books have a larger sale than those of any other living American writer.

—Dr. Marion Sims, the noted physician and surgeon, died suddenly in New York, 13th. He was 73 years of age, a native of South Carolina, but studied medicine at Philadelphia. In New York, in the eight years following 1853, he succeeded in causing the establishment of a hospital for women. He went to Europe in 1861 and 1864, and took up his residence with the American colony in Paris. Some of his medical works have been translated into German and French. He was the discoverer of several surgical processes by which human suffering has been greatly relieved, a benefactor to the race.

—The Sunday States, Nov. 18th, suggests R. B. Forman to the Democratic convention for Attorney-General. Mr. Forman graduated from Centre College, Kentucky, at 19 years of age, soon after enlisted under General Morgan in the Confederate service, was captured, exchanged, reported to Gen. Basil Duke, and remained in the army until the close of the war. He has been a very active Democrat; was chairman of the McEnery returning board, and chairman of the committee to resist the Kellogg government. He was a conspicuous member of the Constitutional Convention of 1879. He possesses the required legal attainments for the position named, and his election would be a victory for Bourbon Democrats. This ought to be satisfactory to the Baton Rouge convention.

—Governor Begole, of Michigan, elected as a Greenback Democrat, on an anti-free pass platform, is mentioned by the N. Y. Times: "In August he urged, in the heat of virtuous indignation, that the offering of passes should be made a penal offense; in December he began to collect his passes; in January he solemnly advised the Legislature to beware of the railroad companies, and before the adjournment of the Legislature he was try- [illegible] proud of its Governor." It appears that when Governor Begole applied for his second book of passes, the first being "used up," he requested a book for Mrs. Begole also, and this was too much for the railroad officials. His letters of application have been published, and they are marvellous for their evidences of inconsistency and bad spelling.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

W. H. Osborn, Centreville: "Our Sunday-school is prospering and doing a good work. A grand cake feast was given for the purpose of buying a heater for our church as a present from our Sunday-school, for a Christmas present. May the Lord be with all good people that work together for his work."

George A. Payne, Bertie: "I have just returned from a pleasant trip, visiting friends. I left home Oct. 9th and returned the 22d. I visited Bro. Chinn's prayer meeting at Thibodaux. He is closing a fruitful year. At Houma I found Bro. Ford, an intelligent and loving leader, and has made great efforts this year. In New Orleans I visited Bro. Hudson, who is improving his church. Bro. T. Jackson was laboring in a protracted meeting, and doing good work bringing souls to Christ. I visited relatives in the upper end of St. John parish. Here the church was occupied by an anniversary of the St. John Benevolent Society, in joint session with a St. James Society. The St. James has a membership of 175, the St. John 80. The pastor of the church is the President of the St. John Society. The non-religious members took one part of the day for the discussion of benevolent matters, and the other for wine and beer drinking. I call this an outrage of the Lord's day. Verily, the heathen are at our doors. May the time not be long before the blessed M. E. Church shall have extended her work to that place. At Whitehall I found Bro. Gayden hard at work with a saw and hammer in his hand. I filled his pulpit on Sunday and on Monday started for home."

J. F. Marshall, New Orleans: "The superintendent of our Sunday school, Miss Lizzie Taylor, is what may be truly considered an exception among her class of workers in the Lord's vineyard. Though of a delicate constitution and feeble health, she has an open ear to the call of duty. Many has been the time when it was thought she would linger in doors by reason of ill health, she has been found in the sanctuary at the head of the Sunday-school army, marshaling her little forces against the battalions of sin, as though she heard ringing in shrill notes the Savior's warning, "He that findeth his life shall lose it, but he that loseth his life for My sake shall find it again." The Sunday-school is in fair condition, doing a work the effects of which the future only can reveal. On the 19th inst., a concert by the school was a credit to all the participants. Miss Elizabeth Lightfoot presided at the organ with grace and efficiency. The audience was delighted with the singing, which merited their applause. Thus passed an evening of enjoyment with little and big, which they seemed reluctant to let go by."

A. J. Pickett, Pleasant Hill: "Our school at Pleasant Vally is a grand success. We are building a school house 18x23, and will move out of the church in a few days into the new building. It was built by direction of Anderson David, the steward of the church, and a faithful worker for the Lord. Pray for us."

Sarah Osborne, Centreville: "The classes gave a grand fair, Nov. 10, for the benefit of our pastor; the amounts raised by each class were as follows: No. 4, $10; No. 2, $10.75; No. 3, $9.45; No. 5, recently organized for religious instruction under the leadership of our pastor, $4.20. We feel that the Lord has wonderfully blessed our labors this year; [illegible] every heart. [illegible] total amount of $34.40."

H. J. Wright, Natchitoches: "The Reapers Missionary Society gave an entertainment Nov. 9th, under the management of Messrs. Israel Shepard, Geo. W. Duncan, King Mickelberry, Chas. Jones, Jack Culpeper, Wm. White and the pastor, with the following ladies of the society holding tables: Miss Maggie Yarborough, Miss Cornelia Hason, Mrs. Jennett Jefferson, Mrs Lotto Phenix, Miss Lucy Hather, Miss Ella Lewis, Miss Lucretia Bell, and Mrs. Mary Robinson. We opened at 7 o'clock, sold out by 9, and at 10 p. m. were at home. God bless this society and those who desire to see the work progress. Give the children a chance. We talked of this one week, worked one day, and in a neat manner and a social time with the children, in three hours we realized $26.30. Well done, Reapers, well done."

W. L. Amos, "Booneville: "Bro. Wm. Murrell commenced a protracted meeting the 1st of October, carried it on two nights and then obtained the privilege to visit his family. He left the church in the hands of the board, viz: W. L. Amos, A. Bahm, B. Drew, and N. Randolph, and with the assistance of Bro. S. Green we performed our duty as local preachers and Christians. After two weeks Bro. Murrell returned and found many mourners at the altar. The meeting was continued. Forty converts came crying they had been lost but were now found; 12 were reclaimed; 24 joined on probation. The spirit is reviving in Booneville. Lord's supper was administered to 182. Pray for us."

TEXAS.

James Morton, district steward, for himself and others, including Mitchell Williams, Jack Reed, Jno. Russell, Adam McCampbell, Spencer Littlejohn and Charles Liddell, writes from Paris: "Believing you have the interest of our cause at heart, I write to give you some idea of the growth and prosperity of our church, and the noble work which has been accomplished by our worthy minister, Rev. Taylor Moore, who is a determined worker, and by the aid of God has already accomplished more good than any brother who has preceded him. He has already, by his indomitable energy and the help of the good people both white and colored, built three churches, Bethlehem, St. Paul and Owsley Chapel, which was dedicated by Bro. Moore on the 4th inst. We have had many valuable additions to our membership, Bro. Moore having baptized 109 this year. We never received any money for missionary purposes until since Bro. Moore came on this circuit, and very recently some of the sisters contributed $5 each. Owsley Chapel has paid Bro. Moore his salary in full and have their receipts for the same. We are particularly desirous that he shall be continued on this circuit, that he may finish up the good work he has just begun. St. Paul Church has paid up their assessment of $75, with the exception of $3.05. Hoping that you may favor us with mention in your paper, and that God may prosper your valuable paper, we are your brothers in Christ."

MISSISSIPPI.

Isaac Moseley, Columbus: "The Columbus Circuit is prospering. This year 37 conversions, received 51. A horse was bought and paid for to assist the work, and it was a great help."

ALABAMA.

W. W. Coxe, of South Butler circuit, Alabama conference reports to date, received on probation 18, full connection 16; has built one church house almost with his own own hands; has devoted his own means to pay for part of the lumber; has received only $15 for support this year; has a wife and three children, and needs help to relieve himself from debt.

TENNESSEE.

J. W. Osment, of Short Mountain circuit, reports 11 conversions and 7 additions at Jones' school house; and 22 conversions and 19 accessions at Osment Chapel.

Sixty Addresses by American Educators.

8vo. 272 pp. Price, stiff paper..$1.25
Cloth................................1.75

The New England Journal of Education speaking of the National Education Assembly, for 1883, says: "It was the most remarkable gathering ever held in our country in matters connected with the schooling of the people. The volume of addresses is the most interesting collection of popular educational documents ever given to our people, and should be in the hands of every educator, legislator, and intelligent citizen in the land."

The sixty addresses are arranged topically, as follows:

1. Education and Man's Improvement.
2. Illiteracy in the United States.
3. National Aid to Common Schools.
4. The Negro in America.
5. Illiteracy, Wealth, Pauperism, and Crime.
6. The American Indian Problem.
7. The American Mormon Problem.
8. Education in the South since the War.
9. Christ in American Education.
10. Tabulation of Illiteracy and Educational Facts from Census of 1880—ten tables.

It is a book for all who want information on any of these great practical questions. The addresses are carefully prepared and revised by the authors, and are filled with information and incidents. The authors are nearly all engaged in actual work in the fields of which they speak. The book should be in every public library. A full table of contents is supplemented by a carefully prepared index.

A special feature of the book is a series of ten tables, compiled by the Hon. H. R. Waite, Special Statistician U. S. Census, and the Hon. John Eaton, U. S. Commissioner of Education, giving complete data upon the illiterate and educational status of the United States, each State and also of the South as a section.

Remove from the fire and stir in two teaspoonfuls of soda; pour the foaming mixture into the mixing dish, and stir in flour till it is pretty hard enough to roll and cut well.

HOME MADE CANDY.—All children are fond of candy, and if pure, a moderate amount is not injurious. In these day of adulteration, that made at home is the safest to give them. It is a simple matter to make chocolate caramels; all that is needed is one cup of sweet milk, [illegible] of molasses, half a cup of sugar, half a cup of grated chocolate, a piece of butter the size of a [illegible] stir constantly and let it [illegible] and turn it [illegible] buttered plates; when it [illegible] to stiffen, mark it in squares, so that it will break readily when cold. His Own Executor

A Well-known Gentleman's Philanthrophy and the Commotion Caused by One of His Letters.

(Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.)

We published in our local columns yesterday morning a significant letter from a gentleman known personally or by reputation to nearly every person in the land. We have receive a number of letters protesting against the use of our columns for such "palpable frauds anq misrepresentations;" therefore, to confirm beyond a doubt the authenticity of the letter and the genuineness of its sentiments, a reporter of this paper was commissioned to ascertain all the possible facts in the matter. Accordingly he visited Clifton Springs saw the author of the letter, and with the following result.

Dr. Henry Foster, the gentleman in question, is 63 or 64 years of age and has an extremely cordial manner. He presides as superintendent over the celebrated sanitarium which accommodates over 500 guests and is unquestionably the leading health resort of the country. Several years ago this benevolent man wisely determined to be his own executor; and, therefore turned over this magnificent property worth $300,000, as a free gift to a board of trustees, representing the principle evangelical denominations. Among the trustees are Bishop A. C. Coxe, Protestant Episcopal, Buffalo; Bishop Mathew Simpson, Philadelphia, Methodist Episcopal; President M. B. Anderson, of the University of Rochester; Rev. Dr. Clark, Secretary of the A. B. C. F. M., Boston. The benevolent purpose of the institution is the care: 1st.—of evangelical missionaries and their families whose health has been broken in their work. 2nd.—of ministers, of any denomination, in good standing. 3rd.—of members of any church: who otherwise would be unable to secure such care and treatment. The current expenses of the institution are met by the receipt from the hundreds of distinguished and wealthy people who every year crowd its utmost capacity. Here come men and women who were once in perfect health, but neglected the first symptoms of disease. The uncertain pains they felt at first were overlooked until their health became impaired. They little realized the danger before them, nor how alarming even trifling ailments might prove. They constitute all classes, including ministers and bishops, lawyers, judges, statesmen, millionaires, journalists, college professors and officials from all parts of the land.

Drawing the morning Democrat and Chronicle from his pocket, the reporter remarked, "Doctor that letter of yours has created a good deal of talk and many have questioned its authenticity."

"To what do you refer?" remarked the Doctor.

"Have you not seen the paper?"

"Yes, but I have not had time to read it yet."

The reporter thereupon showed him the letter, which was as follows:

CLIFTON SPRINGS, SANITARIUM CO., }
Clifton Springs, N. Y., Oct. 11, 1883. }

Dear Sir: I am using Warner's Safe Cure, and I regard it as the best remedy for some forms of kidney disease that we have. I am watching with great care some cases I am now treating with it, and I hope for favorable results.

I wish you might come down yourself, as I would like very much to talk with you about your sterling remedy and show you over our institution.

Yours Truly,
[Signed] HENRY FOSTER, M.D.

"I do not see why anybody should be skeptical concerning that letter," remarked the Docter.

Isn't it unusual for a physician of your standing and influence to commend a proprietary preparation?"

"I don't know how it may be with others, but in this institution we allow no person to dictate to us what we shall use. Our purpose is to cure the sick, and for that work we use anything we know to be valuable. Because I know Warner's Safe Cure is a very valuable prepration, I commend it. As its power is manifested under my use, so shall I add to the completeness of my commendation."

"Have you ever analyzed it, Doctor?"

"We always analyze befo e we try any preparation of which we do not know the constituents. But analysis, you know, only gives the elements; it does not give the all important proportions. The remarkable power of Warner's Safe Cure undoubtedly consists in the proportions according to which its elements are mixed." While there may be a thousand remedies made of the same elements, unless they are put together in proper proportions, they are worthless as kidney and liver preparations.

"I hope some day to meet Mr. Warner personally, and extend fuller congratulations to him on the excellence of his preparations, I have heard much of him as the founder of the Warner Observatory, and as a man of large benevolence. The reputed high character of the man himself gave assurance to me in the first place that he would not put a remedy upon the market that was not trustworthy; and it was a source of a good deal of gratification to me to find out by actual experiment that the remedy itself sustained my impressions."

The conclusion reached by Dr. Foster is precisely the same found by Dr. Dio Lewis, Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Ex-Surgeon-General Gallagher and others, and proves beyond a doubt the efficacy of the remedy which has awakened so much attention in the land and rescued so many men, women and children from disease and death.

From New-Orleans comes the report that large numbers of Chinamen are seeking to file intentions to become citizens with the view of gaining the good graces of ruffianly persecutors, who, it is supposed, will cease their persecutionns when the Chinamen are in a fair way to become voters. It is said that the Constitution of Louisiana makes "a declaration of intentions" ample qualification for becoming an elector. We take it that this means that a foreigner may vote in primary elections, under the State law, provided he has signified his intention to become naturalized. The Democrats, who are never weary of crying "The Chinamen must go!" are responsible for this attempt to legalize the Chinese vote. It has again and again been decided that no Chinese person can become a voter under the laws of the United States. But in Louisiana, it is apparent, a Chinamen is a "good enough" citizen for a primary election, especially if he is in Democratic hands.—N. Y. Times.

The "Catholic monarchies" in France and Spain have nearly destroyed our religion in both countries. We have a supreme contempt for "Catholic monarchies" which have seldom failed to persecute the Church within their jurisdiction if it would not yield to their control.—Washington Catholic.

That is so; but who sustains the "Catholic monarchies" in destroying "our religion" in France and Spain? Certainly the Catholic people brought up under the instruction of the church. It does not speak well for the church to have begotten such children that will turn and destroy her; neither is it a good showing for her when they, having outgrown her follies and superstition, throw her aside as unworthy of their confidence and respect. She is a failure in having such a people or in being so corrupt and powerless as not to retain their love and esteem. Either way she is in a bad fix.—Christian Statesman.

MRS. CELLIA SOUES.

It seems impossible that a remedy made of such common, simple plants as Hops, Buchu, Mandrake, Dandelion, etc., should make so many and such great cures as Hop Bitters do; but when old and young, rich and poor, pastor and Doctor, lawyer and editor, all testify to having been cured by them, you must believe and try them yourself, and doubt no longer.

Gov. Proctor Knott, of Kentucky says emphatically that he will not remit fines imposed upon convicted gamblers.

The Earl of Lytton has written six poems of considerable length for the Youth's Companion. They are strongly characteristic of the author of "Lucile," and are the first contributions he has ever made to an American periodical.

A new Methodist Church in a certain locality which is adorned with a large cross on its steeple, drew from an old Methodist who stood gazing at it, the remark: "Do you see that big cross on that church? well, I remember, when the Methodists were poor, each member bore his own cross; but now," he added, "they have become rich, and they have stuck their cross on the top of the church."

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

Could not move!

I shrunk!

From 228 lbs., to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life." Dublin, June 6, 1881. R. FITZPATRICK.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters.

Do not think that suffering interferes with service. On the contrary it helps it on. When, therefore, we offer our prayers to God, and ask him to take us and make us, don't let us forget to put up another petition between these two and ask him also to break us. That is a short and comprehensive prayer. "Take me! break me! make me!" God answering that prayer can do something for us.—Theodore Monod.

It is a celebrated thought of Socrates, that if all the misfortunes of mankind were cast into a public stock, in order to be equally distributed among the whole species those who now think themselves the most unhappy would prefer the share they are already possessed of, before that which would fall to them by such a division.—Addison.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

HE FEELS LIKE A NEW MAN.

REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Christmas selections for 1883, with new songs, and responsive series for Christmas celebrations, is a neat publication of John Church & Co., music dealers, Cincinnati, O. Price 50c.

The poet Whittier ought to be one of the poets of Christmas, because his quiet spirit is so much in sympathy with the "solemn joy" that underlies the merriment of the day. His contribution to the Christmas number of Harper's Magazine is virtually a Christmas poem, for it tells anew the story of "The Supper of St. Gregory" and of his beggar guest, who proved to be the Founder of the Feast Himself.

The Christmas Number of Harper's Magazine promises to bring together the most remarkable gathering of authors and artists ever grouped under one (paper) roof. The former include, among others, George William Curtis, John G. Whittier, Miss Thackeray (Mrs. Ritchie), E. P. Roe, William Black, W. D. Howells, George H. Boughton, Austin Dobson, Charles Reade, Edward Everett Hale, and Charles Dudley Warner; while among the artist are E. A. Abbey, James C. Beard, George H. Boughton, F. S. Church, Frederic Dielman, Alfred Fredericks, A. B. Frost, W. Hamilton Gibson, Alfred Parsons, Howard Pyle, C. S. Reinhart, W. L. Sheppard, and Jessie Curtis Shepherd. There will also be illustrations from paintings by G. F. Watts, R.A., and from unpublished sketches by Thackeray, Frederick Walker, and Dante Gabriel Rossetti. The number will include four plate-paper pages in addition to the usual size of the Magazine.

We have received the first number of the Biographical Magazine, an illustrated monthly, published by the Pictorial Associated Press, New York, at 10 cents a copy, and $1 a year. The purpose of the publishers, is to publish, with illustrations, "the biographies of persons whose lives commend themselves to public attention as eminently worthy of emulation;" and of such, who by reason of extraordinary circumstances, claim public recognition.

To a nation like our own the character, intelligence, the general moral and intellectual stature of its average citizen is a matter of the [illegible] consequence. A people may have a few very learned men, a few very brilliant writers, while the average pitch of the national intelligence and morality is so low as to make the average citizen an element of danger rather than of hope. To us in this country it is of the greatest importance that such shall not be the case with our own people. And so far we have reason to [illegible] that it is not. But if at any point that "eternal vigilance" which is "the price of liberty" is needed, it is so at this. Floods of ignorance and vice roll in on us from the old worlds. There is also with us as with other nations the danger of wrecking the national intelligence and morality both upon the shoals of materialism, [illegible] godlessness, infidelity, and corruption. There are those who have it in charge to see that this shall not be. Let them look to it, and be true to their trust.—Standard.

A Railroad superintendent has given the San Francisco Call an estimate of the cost of an average [illegible] a first class railroad. For an express train: Locomotive, [illegible]; baggage car, $1,200; [illegible] car, $5,000; dining room [illegible], first class Pullman's, [illegible]; total $120,000. The [illegible] train represents [illegible]. Some Pullman [illegible] each. The average [illegible] of a freight train, is still [illegible] a passenger train, if [illegible] and value of property [illegible]. Sometimes the [illegible] trains aggregate [illegible] $300,000.

The Sun,
NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million of copies of The Sun have gone out of our establishment during the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without the waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know The Sun, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

LADIES' SOLID GOLD WATCHES!
Almost every young gentleman prides himself upon carrying a watch of some kind, and gentlemen can with perfect propriety, carry a silver watch, an imitation gold, or a nickel watch, provided it is a good time-keeper. Although ladies have the same pride about carrying a watch, and take the same pleasure in doing so that gentlemen do, still the great majority of ladies do not carry watches. There are two reasons for their not doing so. First it is not considered quite the proper thing for a lady to carry any but a Gold Watch, and second, Gold Watches have heretofore been so high in price that the majority of young ladies could not afford to own one. Realizing this condition of things, we have, after much time spent in experimenting, and at great expense perfected a Beautiful Ladies' Watch, with solid Gold Hunting cases, which we are enabled to sell at the extremely low price of FIFTEEN DOLLARS, making it the CHEAPEST GOLD WATCH IN THE WORLD! and placing it within the reach of almost every young lady in the land. This watch is sold by retail firms at $25.00 each and upwards, but we sell thousands and are satisfied with a very small profit. Young gentlemen who have desired to make their favorite sister or sweetheart a present of a Watch, and who have been prevented by the high price of watches from doing so, can now purchase An Elegant Gold Watch, without feeling impoverished a whole year afterward. We make the cases of our New Ladies' Watch of Solid Gold, Elegantly Engraved, and in very truth, they are "Things of Perfect Beauty." They have fine Nickel Movements, and are fully guaranteed for time. Every Watch is put up in a beautiful velvet lined Case and sent by Registered Mail on receipt of $15.00. Or we will send the Watch C. O. D. If you send $3.00 on account, the balance to be paid on delivery. If you order before Christmas, and send full amount of cash, we will ENGRAVE YOUR INITIALS FREE OF COST. We send a Double Extra Fine Gold Plated Opera or Long Chain with the Watch on receipt of $3.00 additional. Send money by Registered Mail, Post Office Money Order, or Draft on New York to World Manf'g Co. 122 Nassau Street New York

We feel a real pleasure in calling our readers' attention to these splendid watches. A careful inspection satisfies us that it is one of the most beautiful, useful and thoroughly well made watches that ever adorned a lady's person. It is indeed an extraordinary bargain.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER. LESSON IX. Dec. 2, DAVID'S ENEMY, SAUL. (1 Sam. xvii, 1-16.

After David killed Goliath, Saul was so pleased with him that he took him away from tending his father's sheep and brought him to his palace. That was a great change, but it did not make David proud and wicked. In the palace David soon had a friend; this was Jonathan, Saul's son. He loved David so that he gave him his own grand coat or robe, and his bow and spear. The Bible says he loved him as his own soul. Saul put David in the palace, but God gave David the spirit of love and peace; that made him so many friends. Our text says David behaved himself wisely in all his ways, and the Lord was with him. All the people loved and respected David, because he obeyed King Saul, and was not proud because of his high honor. Once when they came home from war the people met them, singing for joy, and sang "Saul hath slain his thousands, but David his ten thousands." Saul heard it, and Satan filled his heart with a jealous feeling. Saul said next thing will be, he will be king, and he was angry. That was another bad step. Next came another bad companion, Hate. So the next, and Saul trying to kill David. He flung his spear at him to kill him, but God was with David, and he escaped. Then Saul put him in battle, hoping he would soon be killed, but God was keeping watch, and David was safe. ... had told Saul he would ... David and try to murder him, ... would not have believed it when ... took David home. One ugly ... brought another sin in his heart ... Then they brought ... until Saul's heart was a murderous heart. One ugly sin always ... the door for another, until they take the whole heart. Don't ... the door of your heart for ... your heart to them, ... the key by loving him, ... keep these ugly sins ...

MARRIAGES.

Nov. 20th, 1883 at New Town, La., at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Henry Matthew, Rev. H. J. Wright officiating elder, Richard White to Miss Ellen Matthew.

"One must be poor to know the luxury of giving." That may be so, but we think anybody can enjoy the luxury of giving his fellow-sufferer a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup to cure his cough.

DEATHS.

Sister Ellen Jefferson, wife of Rev. James Jefferson, our able Sunday-school superintendent, departed this life in full triumph of faith Nov. 1. She requested that her little son be reared in the fear of God, and spoke of her willingness to meet her Redeemer. Her remains were carried to the M. E. Church, were we paid the last and our best tribute of respect. May the husband, son, and her mother and father receive the blessing of Him who has said 'I am a husband for the widow, and a father for the fatherless." A. HARRIS.

Danville, Texas.

We were pained by the death of Bro. J. H. Young, Oct. 29, 1883. He attended Alcorn and Holly Springs Universities for some years. He was a faithful member of the Vaiden Church, a vigorous Sabbath school superintendent, and a day school teacher who met the approbation of the community at large. He leaves parents and a host of friends to mourn his loss. J. C. HOUSTON, Winona, Miss.

Scrofulous ulcers, and all kinds of skin diseases yield to Dr. Benson's Skin Cure. Great success.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Harper's Magazine for December is a Christmas number, with an extraordinary wealth and variety of papers, poems, and pictures by an array of authors and artists seldom, if ever, brought together before. This will take the place of the mammoth Harper's Christmas of 1882, which will not be repeated this year. The number has four extra plates, in addition to its usual 160 well-filled pages. The illustrations alone have cost, it is stated, over $10,000. The opening paper is by George William Curtis, the first distinctive article outside of the Easy Chair that he has written for years. The poet Whittier contributes a most worthy and beautiful Christmas poem, "The Supper of St. Gregory." Thackeray's daughter contributes a delightful personal sketch of her father's friend, the poet Tennyson, for which he has himself given her material. E. P. Roe, of whose novels 100,000 copies have been sold, begins "Nature's Serial Story." William Black, in a pleasant letter, tells of his beloved West Highlanders. "Nest Builders of the Sea," by C. F. Holder, will delight students of nature. Mr. W. D. Howells contributes a delightful farce, "The Register." Charles Reade has a characteristic story, "There's many a Slip 'twixt the Cup and the Lip," and Edward Everett Hale one of his extraordinary inventions describing "Colonel Ingham's Journey to the North Pole. Two strong features are Mr. Abbey's thirteen illustrations for Pope's "The Quiet Life," and others for a pretty poem, "The Milkmaid," by Austin Dobson. The Dobson has a pleasant introductory Christmas bit from the pen of Charles Dudley Warner.

The November number of The Pansy proves afresh that a periodical in which so much space is devoted to Sunday reading, may be ... and filled with as much ... and ... as the ... Its religious ... and strong ... a year. D. Lothrop & Co., publishers, Boston, Mass.

No intelligent reader can fail to be interested in the contents of the North American Review for December. The question of the telegraph has the place of honor, Gardiner G. Hubbard pointing out the great advantages that would result from the proposed "Government Control of the Telegraph" and showing from the experience of several European countries the benefits to be derived from the incorporation of the telegraphic with the postal service. Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, of Harvard University, shows the "Evils of the Sub-Treasury System," in absorbing and withholding from circulation the specie that is constantly needed to insure stability in the world of finance. "The day of Judgment", by Gail Hamilton, is a caustic review of the less amiable moral traits of Thomas Carlyle. Henry George writes of "Overproduction," an idea which he declares to be preposterous, unless more wealth is produced than is wanted. Gen. W. B. Franklin sets forth the views of naval and military experts as to what is absolutely needed to insure the "National Defense". An article on "Railroad and Public Time", by Prof. Leonard Waldo, of Yale College observatory, explains the system of uniform time standards now being introduced into the railroad service of the United States. Finally, there is a discussion of the question of "Morality without Religion", by F. A. Kider and Prof. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton College. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. The strike of the freight handlers appears to have been ill considered and not likely to prove successful. While laborers should protest against a reduction of an already low rate of wages, and capital should not be unreasonably used to oppress them, it is also true that all laborers have an equal right to obtain employment, or be employed at the same rate as union men. Union men should not attempt to create a monopoly in the labor market. It will generally prove as futile as butting one's head against a wall.

While at Murfreesboro we had a delightful Christian home with a Mr. Henry, who, with his wife and son, a young man 22 years of age who is engaged in business with his father, are all members of the M. E. Church, South. They received us at first as if we were their kin, and made us forget that we were in a strange land. When the time of family prayer came all hearts seemed glad. Religion and the Church are kept prominent in this family, their children will not grow up and go astray from God. God bless this dear family for their work's sake.

The People's Adviser of Jackson thinks fusion was a good thing, and this paper misled in its comments on the result of the late election. We have no sympathy with politicians of the Gen. Chalmers stripe, and we do know that Hon. John R. Lynch added to his laurels by a manly campaign on a platform suited to his convictions. Fusions generally operate disastrously, because generally made to gratify personal revenges or to accomplish temporary results. Steady adherence to principles, and the depositing of ballots representative of honest convictions, is essential to wholesome government.

Prior to the late elections there seemed to be a feeling all through the South that the Democratic party was sure to displace the Republican party in the administration of the National Government. Prayer and Faith.

The great interest that is now taken in the subject of prayer and faith, no doubt occasioned the extensive ceremonies connected with the commemoration of the 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, the founder of Protestantism, who developed and taught in an age of great spiritual darkness, that "the just shall live by faith." Human nature did not then accept readily the simple teachings of the Bible, nor does it now. When we read a great truth, expressed ever so clearly, we are apt to question and examine it to see if we cannot find something incomprehensible about it after all, so that we may speculate upon it, or to find an excuse for rejecting it if it does not coincide with popular views. Luther tried the same thing, but he believed the Bible and trusted in the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and he was able to teach not only his convictions but the result of his experience. By his labors the world has been greatly blessed, and very many have been enabled to "come off more than conquerers by simple faith in God, and have gone to their reward, while there are many living witnesses to the truthfulness of His promises, who love the memory of the great reformer.

I have lately read several articles on prayer in our papers. People all agree that prayer is good, but they seem to have different degrees of light. I read an essay on the subject in which the writer asserted that as God is unchangeable, nothing that we can say, can move Him. Our affairs were arranged long ago, and He is not likely to change any part of the great laws of the universe for our especial benefit. Prayer works a change in us, not in God. He has commanded us to pray, and out of obedience comes many blessings. This theory may have good in it, but it represents God as lacking in the life-like tenderness of a father. He is unchangeable, in that He fulfills His promises. I read another article by one whose idea is that answered prayer is the obtaining of something which we would not have had if we had not prayed. That gives more clear light and it is in accordance with "Ask and it shall be given you, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." That passage of Scripture is explicit, and it needs no added light to make it more clear. It plainly teaches that we need not go far back into the past or far away into the future to find God. We are to ask now and we shall receive now if we do not put obstacles in the way. That passage may seem still more interesting if we will notice that the words ask, seek, knock forms an acrostic on prayer—A S K. I read a short article in the SOUTHWESTERN, dated Oct. 25, from which I wish to quote a few lines: "It is hard for some minds to rest in a spiritual Christianity; cure incurable diseases; and settle by divine revelation the location of a church or the election of a school trustee! To such people Christianity is nothing unless it can run a saw-mill or tear the veil off all that God hides from our sight." I do not think that the writer of those words stopped to think, or he never would have written them. If it is necessary to locate churches or elect school trustees, or run saw-mills, ought not God's guidance be sought? There are those who think that God is not interested in the little affairs of our common, every-day life. I know a woman in our own neighborhood who complained that her petty annoyances interfered with her spiritual prosperity. A friend advised her to take such troubles to the Savior. "Why, the idea!" said she. "When I have great troubles I take them to the Lord, and He helps and comforts me, but He intends that I shall manage small affairs myself," and so she was letting small affairs over come her. If we have not God's guidance continually it may be hard to find Him when the great troubles come. I often read accounts of answered prayer, which are excellent comments on prayer. They prove the truthfulness of God's promises more clearly than any one's theories. I read of a man who in answer to prayer was instantly cured of using tobacco. He had been a slave to the disagreeable habit for 35 years. Some of his own words are, "If God did in answer to prayer so change my taste that I did, without any inconvenience or desire for it, give up the habit though it be as dear as the apple of the eye, what is it that He will not do for those who love Him? I know of a truth that God has in His goodness and mercy given me love in my heart, peace in my mind, and has even taken away that impure taste for the filthy tobacco plant so that I have only taste for that which is pure." I have read, too, of a poor drunkard who was instantly cured of all desire for intoxicating drinks. He was far gone but had some asperations for good left in him, and he earnestly wished to be freed from his terrible bondage. Some temperance workers persuaded him to sign the pledge and unite with the church. For a time he did well, but was tempted and fell; again he was helped upon his feet, and again he fell, and so he went on until his friends became discouraged. They feared he would disgrace the church, but they well knew if he was put out he would go straight to destruction. They agreed to pray especially for him, and God heard their prayers, and took the miserable man "under the shadow of His wings," and he became a useful member of society and a substantial citizen. I read of a woman who had not spoken above a whisper for three years. She believed that God would restore her voice if she would ask Him, and so she went down into the cellar, so as not to be interrupted, and there she prayed. Her voice became stronger and soon she ended her prayer in praises to God in a strong, clear voice. God cares for the body as well as the soul, but the interests of the soul are of the first importance. "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you.' The fact that we underestimate our privileges, and that we fail in a degree to meet the requirements of God is very certain, and so our spiritual power is not what it might be.

"Oh what peace we often forfeit,
O, what needless pains we bear,
All because we do not carry
Everything to God in prayer."

We read in the Bible that "He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to clean us from all unrighteousness." Not only can He forgive our sins but rid us of them, root them all out, heal the dreadful disease, and make us "every whit whole." We may, like the poor drunkard, go to Him and have all desire to sin taken away. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin," and so if the sin of unbelief is all rooted out, where is there a limit to the power of faith? This is a subject that is worthy of our consideration. While we have the Bible we need not accept any one's theories. We can read and think for ourselves. If we have right conceptions of God it is not hard to trust Him or to be good. We may get up to where His yoke is so very easy that it will bear us, where our "joy may be full, our soul hunger satisfied. Then our light can shine so that we may do good that will be enduring. God is not "afar off," and it does not require long or loud prayers to make Him understand our wants. "Lord help us" is sufficient for many emergencies, but we are to pray in faith and thankfully. Whenever a sense of a need is felt prayer should at once be offered. "In everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God.

Honor to Whom Honor is Due.

MR. EDITOR—Will you permit a Southern Methodist minister to say a few words of praise for one of your preachers. Rev. L. W. Elkins, presiding elder in Little Rock Conference, is doing a work in South Arkansas that few men would or could do. His labors are appreciated by all earnest Christians. Once I heard him preach from the text, "The Word of the Lord is Tried," and in comparing the Bible and the Christian religion with other systems of religion he handled the Zend Avesta of Zoroaster, the Vedic Hymns of the Hindoos and other ancient systems of worship, with an ease and grace that would do credit to one of riper years. It is grand; it is heroic for one of his ability to devote his time and talent to the elevation of the colored people. May God send a thousand more such men as he is to do mission work among the freedmen. May God hasten the time when our Church shall fall into line with yours to elevate and educate this needy people. God bless you and your work. Yours in Christ, a

SOUTHERN METHODIST MINISTER.

Okolona District Conference.

To the ministers and members of the Okolona District Mississippi Conference:—You are hereby notified that the second session of our conference will convene in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Columbus, at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, January 10, 1884. You will come prepared to go direct to the annual conference. Those of you that have not all the amount assessed to your charge for benevolent purposes collected, only have a few weeks left to get the balance. Brethren, be determined to get every cent apportioned to your charge. I am glad to know that some have collected more than was assessed, let others do likewise.

Yours in Christ,

J. M. SHUMPERT, P. E.

Rust University.

DEAR SOUTHWESTERN—Please say that we have received the following for Rust University since our last writing: Rev. B.L. Nevils, Okolona, $10; Rev. J. M. Shumpert, Columbus, $20. If the brethren could realize our great distress I think they must come speedily to our relief.

Respectfully,

W. W. HOOPER.

Bishop Wiley's Address.

MR. EDITOR.—I notice in the SOUTHWESTERN, received to-day, that you discredit my item in the Zion's Herald of recent date thus: "We cannot think that Bishop Wiley ever made any such statement as the above." As the quotation was indirect, on its face, I am not responsible for a deviation from the exact words used by the Bishop. As to the idea conveyed I thought I caught it, but your words deny me this. Now, while most of your readers may profit by your correction, all will not be convinced without some stronger dictum from you than this. There are, for instance, many scores in this neighborhood who heard the Bishop, and they will want a little heavier statement than this to outweigh the testimony of their own ears. There are also many others who have doubtless been as grievously misled by the New York Advocate as the readers of Zion's Herald were by me. Witness these words in the issue of Nov. 8th:

"Who are the people who stand the most aloof from you, whose prejudices are the most bitter against you, whose hostilities are the most cruel? Who form bands of ku-klux and of midnight assailants? Is it the refined and cultivated and Christian people at the South? Is it not the ignorant, the narrow, and the debased? Is not, then, the highest hope of your salvation the Christianization and education of the people?"

In fact, as I quote this, I see that mine is but a feeble report by the side of it, and no one will fail to notice how much better your comment fits this than mine. Something must be done with it, my dear brother, or somebody will get an injurious impression that I am not the man you are after, but that your honest words were intended as a slant upon one who has been more in the South, and knows more of the work than either of us can know.

Respectfully,

E. S. LEWIS.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 24, 1883.

[It seemed to us hardly probable that any well informed reader of the history of the county during the past eighteen years could hold the views expressed by Bishop Wiley. We know them to be misleading, and not well founded. The klans and their midnight raids are inspired by the intelligent leaders of the South, and the participants are as well known and as well approved by Southern society as Confederate soldiers of the late war. —ED.]

Rev. A. D. Mayo, general agent of the Peabody Fund, said recently in a lecture in New England that there are in the South four million whites under twenty-one, of whom nearly half have never attended any school. In many States the schools, such as they are, are open only from three to six months in the year. The school system is almost broken down in Louisiana, he said, through the bitter hostility of the Roman Catholic clergy. Boston pays twice as much annually as the whole State of Georgia for the instruction of its children. And not more than one-tenth of the colored voters, and one half of the white voters, can do more than read the ballots which they vote.—Zion's Herald.

The Nihilist organ states political prisoners in the Peter and Paul fortress, both men and women, are driven to insanity by barbarous treatment, and often kill themselves.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

TENNESSEE.

Francis J. Wood, Bells Depot: "I noticed in the issue of ADVOCATE, Nov. 8, 1383, the death of William Dwegans. It was my privilege to hear him prech a short time before his death at Bridge church. He then said he had been up, 30 nights in succession, and though a young man, comparatively, yet he could not preach then as heretofore; that his church sent out its ministers, where at times they were compelled to preach in open houses, under bush arbors, and by the time the minister was 40 or 45 years old, he was done dead from continued exposure. I met him once after that and congratulated him on his success as a minister. The next thing he was quite sick and next he was dead. I then thought of his remarks about the open houses, as was the case of Bridge Church and that in the edge of a creek bottom. Elder Jesse Price passed through a few days ago and asked me to assist him in selecting a lot at this place for a church. I told him I would do so with pleasure. Now the question arises, where is the money to come from to build the house? The colored people here are too poor to build. It is all they can do to pay the preacher, and poor pay at that. Elder Jesse Price talks hoarse, looks care worn and needs rest."

SOUTH CAROLINA.

The effort is being made in the South Carolina Conference to raise the missionary collections by regular contributions of one cent a week. Where this is impossible, eggs are recived in lieu of the coin, and sometimes a hat full of eggs is collected in a service. Our brethren are aiming toward self-support, but they still need the encouragement and aid of the grants from the Missionary Society.

Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, at Cold Spring, was dedicated the 11th inst, by the pastor, Rev. M. L. Centers, assisted by the Rev. E. T. Curnick. There was [illegible] a large attendance, and [illegible] Centers proved himself [illegible] of beggars by raising [illegible] $600. [illegible] Addresses of the National Educational Assembly.

The compendium of addresses [illegible] by the members of the National Educational Assembly, held [illegible] Grove, New Jersey, 1883 3, [illegible] issued by Dr. Hart- [illegible] under the title Educators in [illegible] is one of the important [illegible] century. We know of [illegible] would rank [illegible] discussed are those that [illegible] the heart of every loyal [illegible] every intelligent Chris- [illegible] Man's In- [illegible] in the Repub- [illegible] [illegible] able value. Its influence may tell till the last day in the mortal life of the race. Ten of the ablest of these addresses are devoted to the discussion of the Negro in America, more in number than is given to any other theme save the allied one of education in the South since the war. One is struck with the pathos, the power, the eloquence of the colored speakers, the Rev. B. F. Tanner, D.D., Bishop Jabez Pitt Campbell, D.D., and Rev. J. C. Price, A.M. We can understand now how the last named gentleman made so profound an impression at the late Ecumencial gathering in London. The Republic does not contain a more genuine natural orator. The Rev. J. W. Hamilton, of the People's Church, Boston, Mass., made also one of the finest addresses of the sixty, on the assimilation of the Negro in America, and we may say here, that though the hateful spirit of caste was manifest at Ocean Grove during the sessions of this Educational Assembly, none was manifested in the Assembly, and assuredly none in the addresses delivered.

Dr. Tanner demonstrates one absurdity, the localization and the wickedness of the so-called color line. He avers that it comes too late to be effective. One-half of the American Negro race is mixed with white blood, and much of it the best blood of the South. "Is the partial Negro to be taunted as to his birth?" His reply is "that among the people with whom our white fellow-countrymen of English and European descent love to claim kindred, it has never been esteemed honorable or sensible to despise the natural sons of great men." He shows this color-line distinction to be "meddlesome, in that, as a third party, it essays to make its own that which is purely the business of the parties of the first and second part. It is foolish in that it hopes for success. It is tyrannical, in that it restricts human liberty in matters where, of all others, liberty should be enjoyed. It is immoral, causing bad relations between those joined of God, but separated by man." Were it to become widespread and enduring, the results would be most disastrous to the national safety, as Dr. Tanner unmistakably shows. "Let us have peace; peace now and peace forever," he concludes.

In view of the clouded future, the Rev. J. W. Hamilton cheers us with the assurance that "there is a presiding genius in every nation, whose counsel and control will not permit a people to live and thwart the purposes and plans of human history.... There are no shackles forged that can bind a human soul. The slave-holder determined to lose sight of the soul of his slave. But the sorrowing and the sighing, the hope and joy of the Negro, thrilled him with the soul-presence, which ever and anon threatened, till it finally snapped the chains of his bondage, and set him eternally free. A master called his slave to account for relating his Christian experience, and said, 'That can't be, for you have no soul.' The slave replied, 'Well, massa, if de black man hab no soul, religion make his body feel mighty happy.' "This nation of ours now can be but one people. We can have no solid South as against a solid North, and no people of one section antagonistic to a people of another section. There must be one nation, America. We are not a German, nor an Irish, nor an African people, but the American people. No two races can live side by side in this land, one the reproach of the other. We can not be confederated; we must be assimilated. There can be no distinction of rights, no restriction of privileges." [illegible] all the talk about ours being a white man's government is folly. [illegible] a government of the American people, be they of any or every [illegible] "The last census gives far [illegible] than one-half of the Negro [illegible] of the nation as unable [illegible] or write." In eleven of our [illegible] the number of illiterate [illegible] the votes cast in [illegible] Presidential election by either of the political parties. Should these illiterates unite under any strong, impassioned, successful leader, they would have absolute control of legislation and offices in those States, and of the election of twenty-two U. S. Senators. Give us, then, an educated suffrage or we perish. Mr. Hamilton continues: "The restriction which closes the door of any school of the nation to the Negro, because of his race or previous condition, is a thrust at his rights before the laws, and an attack upon the national integrity. Thirty-five years ago Charles Sumner delivered his famous argument on the unconstitutionality of separate colored schools in Boston, and in six years from that time a public meeting was held in the same city to celebrate the 'triumph of equal school rights in Boston.' That meeting was a pledge of the certainty of a similar triumph throughout the Republic. A color-line school is a menace, threatening the peace and welfare of the community." He comments caustically upon the religious restrictions hedged around the Negro. "We build churches which he is not permitted to enter unless he slip in unnoticed, when God is alone, or with the congregation, when he is hired as a sexton. The enemy of the Negro has commissioned the very messengers of God until they stand in their pulpits, behind the altars, to pronounce against a man because of his race and his skin. These ministers prefer to save those men and women from death who have a certain worldly importance. Because a man has money, or friends, or talents, or influence, or a white skin, more prayers are offered for his salvation than for the man who possesses none of these recommendations. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor that He, by the grace of God, might taste death for every man. That He tasted more death, or doeth more for one man than another, the New Testament nowhere reveals." The late Dr. Draper attributed the color of the skin to the action of the liver. When we find religious (and temperance) conferences so organized that a man, competent to fill, and eligible to the office of a U. S. Senator, would be refused membership in them upon the ground of his color, may we not relegate the whole matter to the action of the liver? In the one case the secretions of the bile seem to have taken to the blood in finding the surface; in the other, have they not taken to the prejudices?" He deals strong blows against caste, and for assimilation. "The nation, by law, has eliminated every distinction of political, business, social, educational and religious rights against the Negro. Let him be educated intellectually and morally, and become a land-owner, and his political and social rights will take care of themselves. Put a controlling interest of Western Union, and the presidency of a great trunk line in his hands, and he will not need to be elected to have influence in Washington. Give him a few millions to carry round in his pocket, a clever education to take care of his money and position, and an election to the U. S. Senate from some Southern or some Western State, and prophecy will be fulfilled at once, when seven women shall lay hold of one man; and they will be white women at that. The first men, who were of the earth, earthy, were not white, if the Bible has properly and significantly named him—'Red Earth, and the last man which is from heaven will be like him.' The ideal or typical man will blend in himself all that is emotional and passionate in the darker races, all that is perceptive and intellectual in the European races. He will also be composite as regards color. The miscegenetic or mixed races are superior mentally, physically and morally to those that are unmixed. This fact is historically established. Wherever on the earth we find a community which has intermarried for generations, we find evidences of decay in the physical and mental powers. When the bronze castings were being completed for the statue of liberty on the capitol at Washington, the foreman who had superintended the work from the beginning struck for higher wages, feeling assured that no one but himself could complete the work. The head of the foundry appealed to the slaves who were assisting in the moulding. 'I can do that well,' said one of them, an intelligent, ingenious servant, who had been intimately engaged in the various processes. The Negro took the foreman's place, and the work went on. The black master-builder lifted the ponderous, uncouth masses and bolted them together, joint to joint, piece by piece, till they blended into the majestic Freedom who to-day lifts her head in the clouds above the capitol, invoking a benediction upon the Republic. Let it be remembered that the great Master Builder is building out of our diverse civilization a great people whose chief glory shall be in doing His will. Shall it be that the weak, the despised, the rejected among us, shall come to honor, and the high and lifted up shall be cast down? 'Let no man take thy crown.'

The Negro has shown that he can excel in law and medicine, in architectural and botanical drawings. In one large city he leads the business of horse-shoeing over white competitors. He bosses the moulding floor in a large foundry. He commands equal wages with the best white carpenters. In painting, shoe making, engineering, bookbinding, tailoring and other industries he makes his way in the teeth of trades unions that resist his progress to the utmost. Benjamin Bannecker, the Negro astronomer; Thos. Fuller, the Negro mathematician; James Derham, the Negro physician; Frederick Douglas and J. C. Price, the Negro orators; Blind Tom, the Negro musician; Dr. Blyden, the Negro president, all attest the inherent capacities of the colored race.

In conclusion, let every one who can scrape or save a dollar and seventy-five cents purchase the invaluable book from which we have made the above citations.

Some Things About Trinity Charge, Houston, Texas.

BY REV. I. B. SCOTT, A. M., PASTOR.

DEAR EDITORS—Doubtless before you are able to have this appear in your columns my pastorate of two years at the above-named charge will have expired. When assigned here I was comfortably situated as teacher at the Prairie View State Normal School of Texas. I was receiving a fair salary, and had all expenses paid. Being so well satisfied, busy, and having but recently been transferred from the Tennessee Conference on account of Texas being my home, I hadn't the least idea the conference would interfere with me. Accordingly I did not go to Marshall to conference, but simply sent in a request that I be granted a supernumerary relation, or at any rate be left without work. You can not imagine how surprised I was a week after Conference closed to receive information to the effect that I had been appointed to this charge and must go immediately to my work. I obeyed, and while I sit here to-night I feel glad that I did, although my financial affairs are not in as healthy a condition as they would doubtless have been had I continued to work for the State. Many advised me to remain where I was, and I am sure they were as anxious to have me come as I was to come, but I believe in being subject to the higher powers. Just here it may not be out of place to say, it is a sin and a shame to slander a people as many did the people of this charge just after my appointment here. Some said one thing and some another, but on the whole seemed to fear I should be swallowed boots and all. This has not happened yet and it is nearly conference time the second year. However, it is not too——yonder comes a crowd now; what shall I do? But, then, God was with Jonah in the whale's belly. Well, they have gone; and I am not swallowed yet. The crowd was composed of ladies of the Sewing Circle and a number of gentlemen. The ladies came to present my wife with a nice dress, as a token of their appreciation of her labors with them, and to bring me $25 they had raised to pay my traveling expenses to conference. One said, "Sister S., should the conference send Bro. S. back to us another year we intend to make it even more pleasant for you than we have made it this year. You see we have just got fairly at work. However, should you not return, the sewing machine, window curtains, matting on the floor and the many little things we have placed in the parsonage will add to the comfort of our new preacher's family." But this was not all. Another lady said, "Bro. S. here is $35 to get you a new suit of clothes to wear to conference." "Bless the Lord, O my soul." One of the gentlemen, Mr. Edwards, came to bring a basket of groceries his wife sent Mrs. S., and another, Bro. Vance, gave me a new hat to wear to conference. Several others gave something. And so it has been ever since we came, first one and then another doing something to add to our comfort. I am "nothing but a boy," and even during the short time I have lived I have seen worse people than these. They are credited with having one of the finest churches in our Southern work, and I do not think people ought to blame them for being proud of it; especially when they erected it by their own united effort. They do not shout as much as some people, but that is no sign they are "stuck up," and the fact of there being many intelligent ones among them is rather to their credit than the contrary. To make a long story short, our congregation here is like others I have seen, it contains some good people and some bad ones. Our district conference convened here some weeks ago. Reports showed considerable increase in membership, several new churches being built and an upward move in finances. Rev. F. C. Moore, our presiding elder, increases in popularity every time he meets with us. He is a devoted Methodist, and seems both to be interested and to understand what is required of him in this work. At our fourth quarterly conference we had a very pleasant time. The committee reports were especially encouraging. The Committee on Church Extension reported $10; on Missions $10.60; on parsonage furniture, had secured through trustees a new set of furniture and made some other improvements about the parsonage; on church music, had reorganized the choir and otherwise advanced the musical department of the church; on Sunday-schools, had brought in quite a number of new scholars, attended teachers meetings, etc. The Sunday-school has been organized into both missionary and temperance societies. The children had a grand temperance jubilee on Sunday night, and I feel sure an impression was made for good. Both the presiding elder and pastor have been paid up for the year, and I am not at all ashamed of my report on the benevolent collections.

On the whole, brethren, this has been a very pleasant year with us. While we have met the devil and had him to contend with, our condition could have been worse than it is. Now, then, I am going to conference, and if the bishop sends me where I want to go I shall be satisfied, if not, I wont—just like the rest of the brethren—notwithstanding I shall obey.

The majority of our fifty-seven subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN are responsible parties, who appreciate the paper and pay for it. We hope to be able to make the editors happy in a few days.

From Argenta District.

I have just closed up my third round on the Argenta District, Little Rock Conference. Our work at Jacksonport has been for several years, and is now, laboring under a very great disadvantage.

Years ago, the Iron Mountain railroad, while in way of construction, missed the town of Jacksonport just three miles, and a railroad town was commenced just three miles away. The name of this town is Newport. This has been carrying the business from Jacksonport to Newport, and with the business also the people. This of course compels our people, who have to hire and do job-work, to leave the one place and go to the other to get work to do. This causes the people to be very unsettled in mind. All of these things, with a scattered membership, have a very heavy draw upon our church work in Jacksonport. I sometimes think about railroads, like a good Baptist brother thought about the Lord, once. He said, (when some one spoke of the goodness of the Lord) "After all, when we take account of all the destruction caused by storms, floods, death, etc., he did not know but that the Lord did about as much harm as he did good." So I think of railroads in some cases. They cause the people to loose as much, if not more than they gain. They cause towns to go down here, and spring up yonder. But after all of these disadvantages our work in Jacksonport is in very good condition, spiritually. We have built a church in Newport; therefore, we gather in all who go from Jacksonport and other places. Bro. A. J. Phillips, who has charge, is doing all that can be expected under the circumstances. He is holding his own. Our work at Batesville is moving along grandly under the pastorate of Bro. G. W. Taylor. We have done about a hundred dollars worth of additional work on our little Chapel in this place this year. The good people of Batesville are doing a good part by their pastor this year. We have a good Sunday-school at this place. Our Newport circuit is not doing very well this year. This is a hard field. Bro. Kitchens, the pastor, has been sick a great deal this year. The Argenta circuit is moving along slowly. The pastor has been absent from the work so much this year that nothing of very much importance has been done. It is true that circuits and stations, in the church, cannot do well without pastors. Dear brethren, please remember that our conference is within three months of us. Please push your benevolent collections. We don't want Dr. Fowler, or any one else, to have to come down here and tell us of our neglect. Yours truly,

G. W. SAMS.

[illegible] Anniversary.

Our Church Extension Anniversary this year was celebrated by two meetings in Philadelphia, one in Trinity Church; the other in Broad Street.

Bishop Bowman presided in Trinity Church, and Bishop Simpson in Broad Street. Both houses were well filled, and interesting addresses were delivered.

IN TRINITY CHURCH, of the report of the Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer was read. BISHOP BOWMAN pointed out the Providential origin of this work, coming as it did into the field just at the close of the war, when the whole South, with all its needs, was thrown open to our Church; and at a period from which also dated, a greater and more rapid development of the West. He showed how this agency had entered this field and accomplished the great work indicated in the report that had just been read. He rejoiced over this success, and expressed the hope, that there might be large increase in the future so that the enlarging wants of the field might be fully met.

DR. S. L. BALDWIN, formerly Missionary to China, spoke at greater length, of the grand purpose of this organization "Church Extension"—as the enlargement of the Methodist Episcopal Church and assigned reasons why this work should be prosecuted with great energy. He said this should be done.

1. "Because our Church is a great Temperance Agency." He ran a parallel between the nefarious opium traffic in China, and the liquor traffic in this country; pointed out the evils in both cases, and the fact that in both, a pure Christianity is the only remedy. "Fill this [illegible] with Methodist Churches [illegible] Methodist Church agencies, and the liquor traffic [illegible] away. This work should be [illegible]."

2. "Because Methodism is pre-[illegible] the great antagonist of [illegible] As Ameri-[illegible] in the Vatican [illegible] a map of this [illegible] which was traced, [illegible] centres of popula-[illegible] likely to become [illegible] so that the policy [illegible] could anticipate [illegible] of future populations. [illegible] St. Paul's? Shall America perish? God forbid! I believe that the royal cross of St. George shall continue to wave over England, and the stars and stripes over America; and the cross of Christ over all! President Warren of the Boston University tells us, that in his researches he found a most instructive map of which our Church Extension map reminds me,—an old map sketched at an early period of American history, across which in bold letters ran the Latin inscription 'Terra Sancti Crucis,'—The land of the Holy Cross. Let this work of Church Extension go forward; fill the map of our country with these crosses representing our churches, and ours will be indeed the land of the Holy Cross."

He gave example of the marvelous development of the country in the North-west, especially along the lines of the North Pacific R. R. and urged that all join hands in doing the work that this wonderful development requires.

CHAPLAIN McCABE, having come in from the meeting in Broad Street, made the closing address, giving a very interesting account of a trip in Dakota, made some weeks since, dedicating some churches that had been commenced a few months ago, and inaugurating new enterprises. He spoke of the dedication of a church at Mitchell, built by Church Extension Plan No. 6, at a cost of $5,600. It would seat 500 people, and on the day of dedication was, "full inside and out," people were there in crowds. A grand service of dedication was held at which $2,000, the remainder needed to cover the indebtedness of the church, were subscribed. This enterprise had been inaugurated by a donation of $250, and a loan of $750 from the Board of Church Extension. That $1,000 put it on the way to the grand result realized.

Next day after this dedication, he traveled seventy miles by private conveyance, to another town, arriving late at night, and, the day following, took his stand on the corner, and began to sing "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." The people came together, and were soon made to understand that the "Bridegroom" was the Lord Jesus coming in His Church. He distributed his books, and they kept on singing until 500 people had gathered around him. "Now," said he, "we will take up a collection to build a Methodist Church. The Board of Church Extension will help you." One man in the crowd pledged $500, other followed, until $4,100 were pledged. Then he gave them a free lecture at night, and told them at the close, that he had charged them nothing to get in, but would charge them $900 to go out. In a few minutes that amount was raised, making $5,000, toward a new church. Recently he saw Bishop Simpson presiding over the Dakota Mission Conference in that same church, though still unfinished.

He gave an instance of a meeting held in New York State some months ago, in which he had urged the claims of this work, hoping to impress some rich men who were present. At the close of the service a woman came to him and said, "hold out your hand Chaplain," he held it out, and she counted fifteen $10 bills and placed them in his hand. He said, "you ought not to give so much," she said, "that is not all," and brought out a check for $100, and placed on the bills and said, "I must build one of those frontier churches. It is not what you said this time that led me to do it, but what you said when here before. I have taken boarders, and have done my own work to earn this money, in order to build this church, and you must take it." The result is there is now on the frontier, secured by the money this poor woman earned, a church that will seat 350 people costing about $1,800.

IN THE BROAD ST. CHURCH BISHOP SIMPSON presided. After reading the Report of the Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer by Rev. J. S. J. McConnell, CHAPLAIN McCABE entertained the audience with a brief address and singing, giving some account of his trip in Dakota, similar to that given in Trinity, as above.

DR. OLIN spoke of the large scale on which everything is being done in these modern times. From the small beginnings of Railroad enterprise, which some in the audience would remember, great corporations had taken hold of this work, until now we have more than 100,000 miles of railroads threading the continent in every direction from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Similar enterprise had characterized Ocean navigation; great steamship companies had been organized and commerce greatly enlarged. So for the purpose of spreading the gospel, the Church unites its power through our Missionary Societies, and through this Church Extension agency, for planting Christianity in our own country, and spreading the Gospel throughout the world. "Some of us remember, that in the General Conference held in this city in May, 1864, the present Corresponding Secretary of this Board urged upon the Conference the organization of this work. Many scarcely perceived what was contemplated, or what was possible. Now that nineteen years have rolled away, the report read here to-night of the work of the last year, discloses something of what was then held in view. Steadily this work has grown, until now it challenges the attention of the Christian world as it goes forward building a church for every day in the year, with a large surplus, hastening on to the time fore-shadowed in the Church Extension Song—

'We're building two a day.'"

BISHOP WARREN gave some very interesting instances connected with the work in the South. He said he was once laboring in a town, trying to induce representative men of the town to build a church, which was greatly needed. It was important in connection with one of our large schools. He showed them the advantage which the school had been to property, making it worth at least 50 per ct. more than it would otherwise have been. He urged every possible argument. He offered to subscribe $100 himself, and finally raised his offer to $500. He said, "I was annoyed and vexed. I could not move them. I tried raillery, and all sorts of effort. Meeting some of them on a street corner, I returned to the charge with all the zeal which had accumulated from former experiences. While urging them to give, a poor widow of one of our preachers who had fallen in our Southern work, and who was a small pensioner upon our Superannuated fund, came along. She was keeping boarders for the support of herself and family; struggling along as best she could. She approached me and said, 'Bishop are you going to build this church?' 'Yes,' I said, 'we are.' 'Well,' said she, 'I want to pay you the first money, and will give you $25 for the purpose.' I said to her, 'I could not think of taking so much from you.' She said, 'I have consecrated it to God; we have needed a church here so long, and now we must have it; I ask the privilege of paying in the first money.' I turned to those around, and one of them was actually in tears, and another said, I was never so ashamed of myself in all my life. Here is this poor woman giving without solicitation, anxious for the success of God's cause among us. I never saw it in this light. Put me down for $100.' Others followed, and now we have a church standing there in its beauty and power a monument to that widow's liberality, who was the Lord's indeed."

He urged that Christians should be true to themselves, true to Christ true to Christianity. That their lives should be brought into harmony with the great principles of the gospel, until all the jargons and discords that come out of human narrowness, and selfishness should be silenced in the grand harmony that would swell over the world when every Christian life shall be accord with the spirit and life of Christ.

Justice Harlan's Dissenting Opinion.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Justice Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court, in his dissenting opinion in the civil rights cases says:

"The opinion rendered proceeds upon grounds entirely too narrow and artificial. The substance and spirit of the recent amendments to the Constitution have been sacrificed by subtle and ingenious verbal criticism. The constitutional provisions which were adopted in the the interest of liberty and for the purpose of securing thorough national legislation, if needs be, upon the rights inherent in a state of freedom, and belonging to American citizenship, have been so construed as to defeat the ends the people desired to accomplish, which they attempted to accomplish, and which they supposed they had accomplished by changes in their fundamental law. The court has departed from the familiar rule requiring that in the interpretation of constitutional provisions, full effect shall be given to the intent with which they were adopted. The power conferred by the thirteenth amendment does not rest upon implication or inference, and the power to enforce it by appropriate legislation was expressly granted. Congress, therefore, may enact laws to protect colored people against deprivation, on account of their race, of any civil rights enjoyed by other free men in the same State; and such legislation may be of a direct and primary character, operating upon the States, their officers and agents, and upon those wielding power under the State. The National Legislature may, without transcending the limits of the Constitution, do for human liberty and the fundamental rights of American citizenship, what it did with the sanction of the Supreme Court for the protection of slavery and rights of masters to fugitive slaves. In every material sense, applicable to the practical enforcement of the fourteenth amendment, railroad corporations, keepers of inns and managers of places of amusement, are agents of the State because amenable to the public regulations; and a denial by these instrumentalities to any citizen, on account of his race, of any of the rights secured by law, is a denial by the State, and the supreme law of the land has decreed that no authority shall be exercised in this country, upon the basis of discrimination in respect to civil rights, against freemen and citizens on account of their race, color or previous condition of servitude. The assumption that the general government cannot, in advance of hostile State laws, or of hostile State proceedings, actively interfere for the protection of any rights, privileges and immunities secured by the fourteenth amendment is authorized by its language."

A quack doctor heads his advertisement: "Ho, all ye dyspeptics!" That's just what dyspeptics won't do. If they would all hoe vigorously they might not need any medicine.

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I
Could not move!
I shrank!
From 228 lbs., to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life." Dublin, June 6, 1881. R. FITZPATRICK.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters.

The Weak and the Impure.

The merry little mountain brook, as it lightly dances over the rocks and sparkles in the sunshine on its way down to the river, is pure and clean. It is active; therefore, it is healthy. It is vigorous; therefore, it resists impurity.

But the sluggish pool, where the current is not strong enough to keep the water in motion, is stagnant and foul. Dirt and rubbish are thrown into it, and stay there. Impurities and vile odors make it a breeder of disease and an object to be avoided.

When the blood is strong and rich and red, and vigorously courses its accustomed rounds through arteries and veins, the system is hearty and healthy.

When the blood is thin and poor and weak, impurities and defilements creep into it, and it has no strength to cast them out. Then the system runs down.

Brown's Iron Bitters contains the only preparation of iron which can enrich the blood, and make it pure, vigorous, and healthy. A dollar a bottle, at the nearest druggist's. 9.

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

THURSDAY, DEC. 6. 1883.

Subscribers Wanted.

To all Pastors and Members of the M. E. Church in the Southern states:

It is clearly discerned by all active workers for the church that a strong, vigorous church paper is required, at a central point, to direct the way for success on the line of pure Christian and Wesleyan principles; and by recording the facts of current history, and giving utterance to the wishes of the membership, to assist the Church and Christianity in general.

We are trying to make the SOUTHWESTERN all that our friends have a right to expect, or that we could desire; but we must remind you that your diligent and steady co-operation is absolutely needed to increase our circulation, give us a living support, and to permit us to convey to you each week, in a convenient form, glad tidings from all the fields of labor.

The SOUTHWESTERN is the only official paper of the Methodist Episcopal Church South of the Ohio River; it has been adopted by special vote in seven annual conferences, and circulates in all the Southern States. While the paper now visits thousands of homes each week, there are thousands of others in which it might be placed, as the pastor's assistant and advocate of the church, by a very little effort on the part of its friends.

Begin at once. Send in single subscriptions, lists of five, ten, fifteen, twenty-five, fifty and seventy-five. We rely upon pastors as our agents, but live Methodists everywhere should feel an interest, and send their money right on; and especially from points where pastor's visits are few and far between.

Only FOUR CENTS A WEEK, or TWO DOLLARS A YEAR, is an amount within the means of all. Let us hear from you. Specimen copies sent on application.

Backsliding.

Few things are more common than backsliding, and yet nothing is more criminal or cruel, and we know of nothing that more dishonors God. All backsliders are not alike. With some the form of godliness is kept up, but they have no power, no present joyous experience. Their prayers are said but they have no fellowship with Christ. In their judgment they approve of things excellent, but the life and savor of godliness is gone, and they do not seem to realize it. Others are more like the "prodigal son," they see their folly, they feel their guilt, and mourn over their lost condition. They see how they have sinned away their comforts and cannot restore them, and like him they resolve to return, anxious to see their Father's face, hear His voice and once more enjoy His smile. They have no exalted views of themselves, but are willing to be servants, to do the meanest work, if they can only be assured of His pardon. They see nothing but emptiness and vanity in and about themselves. If they stay they are sure to perish. There is but one way, "I will arise and go to my father" where there is "bread enough and to spare." I cannot live here. I can but die before him. "He arose and went." He quit the country where he had been living and returned to his father's house. Good intentions may keep us from outbreaking sins, but good resolutions put into practice send us directly to our Father's house. The man in whose heart the Holy Spirit has began to work will not be content with thinking and resolving, he will arise and return to his injured Savior, and frankly confess his own sins, making no attempt to palliate or excuse them. Action, present action is what is needed. Feelings, and tears and remorse, and wishes are all well enough in their place, but they amount to nothing until they are accompanied by action and a return to the Lord, who alone can heal all of our backslidings and love us freely.

Benevolent Societies.

Such organizations, for the relief of the distressed and the burial of the dead, are so numerous, among our people, that they can scarcely be enumerated. They include, the Masonic, Odd Fellows, Pythians, Tabernacles, Patrons of Husbandry, Wise men, Calanthe, Eastern Star, Household of Ruth, U. B. F's, Knights of Cush, and any number of other societies. All of these, and many more, are in active operation, having the burial of their dead as their final mission. This is certainly a laudable mission. The Good Samaritan, whose sole purpose is to relieve the distresses of our poor unfortunate humanity, are worthy of our admiration and support; but God has a living mission for our people, for which provisions must be made. The fact that the Negro is increasing in this country faster than any other people plainly tells us that God is not ready to bury the race. Let the race be in no greater hurry to bury itself than God has indicated his purpose to have them buried. As a race [illegible] ored people already have too [illegible] societies to bury them. What they really need, now, are societies to save their earnings, and to go into business. Plantations must be bought, factories must be established, mercantile houses must be started, steamboats and railroads must be operated. These and many other enterprises, sources of profit and wealth to other races, invite the attention of the colored people of this nation. A dozen plantations, business houses, factories, steamboats and railroads, owned and successfully operated by Negro gold and brains, will accomplish more in the satisfactory solution of the Negro problem than all the political and Colored National Conventions, indignation meetings, and the like, can possibly do in any give length of time. The benevolent societies may be [illegible] short, however, in supplying the supreme need for the living present. Let the benevolent societies continue burying their dead; in the meantime joint stock companies should be organized, and should enter in all the avenues of legitimate business. This can be, and ought to be done. Moneyed leaders of the race here have an excellent opportunity to display their patriotism and financiering ability. Our people spend for hall—and park rents in this country probably not less than $20,000,000 annually. Their excursion bills will probably double this amount. Those who doubt whether there is sufficient capital among our people to warrant action upon these suggestions will doubtless be benefited in perusing these figures. Our people must be educated, they must establish character, they must amass wealth. Without seeming to be sacreligious we would denominate these the trinity of earthly powers; Education, Character, Wealth. No tutelary deity of human fancy has such omnipotent power in building up a people. These our people must appropriate to themselves, or they must give up the race for equality. Education Character, Wealth; these are the test.

And in this age of utilitarianism, with many people, no force is as strong as the latter. Ever since Israel bowed to the golden calf, the world has ever continued to worship it; be it owned by whatever race of people. Societies to inculcate economy, and to combine small capital for business enterprises; joint stock companies, etc., Should now occupy the attention and cooperation of our people. Let this line of action be adopted, and be faithfully and successfully carried out and the Negro's civil and political rights will be assured, the adverse civil rights decision to the contrary notwithstanding.

Moral Depravity.

People who are ever inclined to magnify the faults and moral depravity of the colored people, and to ignore their excellent qualities, will doubtless profit by a careful and reflective reading of the following excerpt from Zion's Herald: In speaking of social vices, it says that in licentiousness:

"Papal countries bear the unenviable palm. The statistics of illegitimacy may be taken to represent one-half of the crimes included under the term licentiousness; and bearing this in mind, the figures of the papal countries are appalling. In the intensely, universally papal country of Bavaria, the proportion of illegitimate births is 22.64 per cent.—the highest of any country in Christendom. In the intensely, universally papal capital, Vienna, it is nearly 55 per cent.—the highest per centage given in Christendom. More than every second citizen the traveler meets in the gay promenade of that city, is bastard. France ruled for a thousand years by Romanism, and now divided between it and infidelity, returns 16 per cent. of illegitimate births; and Paris, with her 33 per cent., ranks next to Vienna in this social corruption. Papal Austria shows 1.35 per cent.; Italy 10.57 in her large towns, and 56.5 in her rural regions. Rome, the headquarters of the Papacy, returns 17 per cent. of bastards. More than 30,000 children yearly are abandoned by their parents in that priest-ridden, Pope-cursed country, Italy. The method of procuring similar statistics in Spain is untrustworthy; but of the most Catholic city of Madrid, about 15 per cent. is illegitimate. These, as compared with the statistics of illegitimacy in other countries, are fearfully high. In the rank next to these, we find Sweden, notably Stockholm, and Denmark; but we must remember that the State churches in those countries are quite as dead as the Papal Church. They have no restraining power over the populace."

We quote these facts, not in defense of the immoralities of any race or class of people, but rather to show that man, after all, is largely the child of circumstances, and that his wickedness and moral obliquity are not dependent upon the color of his face.

Bismarck's health is better.

Tennessee Conference.

The seventeenth session of this conference was held at Murfreesboro, a town of about 5,000 population, situated in one of the richest farming sections of the State. About three miles from the town, the battle of Murfreesboro, or as it is more generally called, of Stone River was fought. A friend took us over the battlefield and pointed out the several places of interest. A little off is the National cemetery, a beautiful place, where some of the thousands of the brave men who fell on that day are buried.

The conference opened Wednesday morning at nine o'clock. Bishop J. F. Hurst, D.D., in the chair, and opened the conference with usual religious services. The Secretary of last year called the roll when most of the preachers answered to their names. J. Braden, D.D., was unanimously elected secretary, and S. P. Bell, assistant. After which the Bishop, assisted by a number of the elders proceeded to administer the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. This was the first time Bishop Hurst had met the Tennessee Conference, but he soon gave the brethren to understand that he was not there half so much as their superintendent as their brother. There is noting slack twisted in his make up, he cannot be coaxed or compelled to give his sanction to what he believes is a violation of the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God or the brotherhood of man. The usual committees were ordered, when Rev. James Picket, presiding elder of the Nashville District, reported his work. The small pox had strongly interfered with the work on his district for three months and over, some of the churches had been closed, but after it disappeared the brethren rallied, and a good year's work has been done. Six or eight new churches had been erected and three new parsonages built.

In the afternoon A. H. Gillett, Agent for the Sunday-school Union for the South and West, as is his custom, gave a talk full of information and suggestions We welcome Bro. Gillett, he has an open door here in the South, where our church stands in need of just such workers. His visits to our conferences will be productive of great good.

Thursday morning conference assembled at half past eight, religious services conducted by B. James, one of the old members of the conference. The minutes of yesterday were read and approved, when H. W. Key, presiding elder of the Murfreesboro District, reported his work. During the year Bro. Key had spent some three months in the North to raise funds to liquidate the debts and complete the church at Murfreesboro. While gone he collected near nine hundred dollars, paid the debts, and now our people have as nice a church as there is in the city. The district had enjoyed a year of peace and prosperity.

J. P. Price, presiding elder of West Tennessee District, submitted his report. There had been an unusual amount of sickness among the people. Three of the men employed on the district had died during the year. Aside from holding his regular quarterly conferences, he had during the year held two district conference, and ten Sunday school institutes. A blessed religious influence had prevailed on all the stations and circuits. A large number had been added to the church. Hon. Thos. R. Caldwell, from Shelbyville, was introduced and addressed the conference. Judge Caldwell was a strong Union man, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He said to us that it was not the desire of the people that the conference divide on the color line. It all originated with about three or four preachers, who voted to get rid of all the men who had come down from the North. While we do not speak from any personal experience, we have the best authority for saying that transfers from the North have not as a rule received a very cordial welcome from some of their brethren. Quite recently one of the leading members of the Central Tennessee Conference said to his presiding elder, that they did not want any more transfers from the North, giving as a reason "the men from the North do not understand the Southern people." We wish always to be counted in favor of our church, work in the South. We believe that her mission is to all the people, but we venture to suggest to our brethren, that turning a cold side to the men the church sends South is a kind of work that may be overdone. Friday morning conference assembled at the usual hour. Religious services were conducted by James Pickett. The minutes of the preceding day were read and approved. The brethren to be received into full connection, were called. They had each been before the committees, passed their examination, were duly recommended by their presiding elders, the usual disciplinary questions were asked, when Bishop Hurst gave them an address replete with sound Christian sense. There were five of them, and each promised to abstain from the use of tobacco. There is not a member of this conference that either chews or smoke the weed.

The hour for the election of delegate to the General Conference had arrived. The ballots were taken; on the third, H. W. Key was declared elected, and Calvin Pickett as the reserve. These are two good men. In the afternoon the Lay delegates assembled in the same place, and after due organization elected Coleman Brown as delegate to the General Conference. Here the pastor handed us a postal, and when we read of sickness at home we instantly set our face in that direction, when after thirty hours of continuous ride, we reached home, thankful to find the loved ones all slowly improving. The average pay of the stationed members of this conference is about one hundred and eighty dollars per annum, and how the missionary committee could find it in their hearts to cut down their missionary appropriation $300, we do not understand. We incline to the opinion that the apostles will find some of their truest successors in this Tennessee Conference. The mere college president, the conference editor, the connectional officials who have behind them a salary of from three to five thousand dollars, are unworthy to loosen the latchet of the shoes of these heoric men. There is nothing of the lobby or ranoidnuction about them. When we heard one those men in open conference report his entire receipts for the year as $56 15, we said that $300 cut down was too bad. We think that it is about time to reorganize the missionary committee, and let it be composed of men who believe that the Methodist Episcopal Church has a mission in the South. To the men who have so much to say about an era of good feeling, springing up all over the South, we have but this word. Take your families, your churches, your politics, and came down here and live; and you will be better prepared to speak.

God as our Creator and benevolent Preserver has a right to command and require of us obedience to His commads. Such is his nature that He cannot command anything trifling, impure or unkind. Wisdom, holiness and kindness are stamped upon all of his requirements. There may be mysteries about some of the doctrines of the Bible, but there is no ambiguity about the commands. So men need make no mistakes in reference to the perceptive will of God. Sometimes they attempt to distinguish between what they call essential and what is non-essential, but no man can set aside God's law. Sometimes they set themselves above God and require his children to obey them in opposition to God. There is, however, but one course to take. The believer's duty is plain; he is "to obey God." He cannot consult custom, or friends, or feeling; he has but little to do with imaginary consequences; he is to ascertain the will of God and, with a cheerful and willing heart, do it. The path of stern duty is the path of safety. The way of obedience is the only honorable and happy way. For a time man's judgment way be against us, but in due time God will correct that, and when the great day shall arrive God will commend us before angels and men, saying, "Well done, good and faithful servants, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

The Value of a Religious Paper.

There comes to us from time to time the most gratifying testimony as to the value of a religious paper to the family and church. A correspondent from Cartersville, Va., in a communication to the Religious Herald gives an account of a newly organized Baptist church in that town. Within a year its membership had more than doubled; the church out of debt; the pastor paid regularly each month. This is a wonderful story, but the correspondent gives the kernel of it: "Every family connected with the church takes their church paper. The pastor sees that not a single family is without it." When we read such a sentence and remember how often the statement comes to this office, "Our pastor never refers to our Church papers in or out of the pulpit," we know what keeps the church down. It is a well established fact that a religious paper materially aids in the education and training the child at home. It helps the parent in his work. There is no way in which the same amount of money can accomplish so much in the way of education. All churches recognize this truth. A correspondent of the Christian Observer says, "I shall urge every family that is able to take your paper. It will help me greatly in my work. A good religious poper is a pastor's right arm." This is the thought of an intelligent Christian pastor. In training the young in developing their minds, and purifying their hearts, nothing is more helping to the paston than a religious paper.

Dr. Buckley has in the New York Advocate a column "Answers to Inquiries," and promises to answer any suitable question that may be sent by a subscriber. Recently some person sent the following question:

Q. 1314. What are the books necessary for a young man to study law, who knows nothing of it? and is it a good paying profession, and one a young man could engage in conscientiously?

Here is the laconic answer:

A. Here are three questions about the practice of law. Is it a good paying profession? We have known lawyers whose annual income was over $100,000 a year. We have known one who went crazy because he could not make a living, and another who did all kinds of outside work in order to pay his office rent, and finally had to take his sign down. Is it a profession a young man could engage in conscientiously? It depends on three things: First, whether he has brains enough to give his clients an equivalent for what they pay him; second, what the nature of his conscience is; third, in what sort of a way he intends to practice law. The books necessary for him to study are: First, English grammer; second, arithmetic; third, geography. After he has mastered these three, he will then be in condition to go more deeply into the subject, and would do well to apply to a lawyer.

The Donaldsonville Chief and Iberville South warn the public against a party of "Turkish" tramps, who are traveling and undeserving of public charity.

Hon. James Russell Lowell, United States Minister to Great Britain, was elected Rector of the University of St. Andrews, defeating Hon. Edward Gibson, M. P., by 18 votes.

The law of God on this subject is so plain, that none but the wilfully blind need misunderstand. It is imperative. A Christian may only marry a Christian. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, or what communion hath light with darkness. And what concord hath Christ with Belial; or what part he that believeth with an infidel?" This law of God every Christian is solemnly bound to observe. The child of God who marries an unconverted person as truly violates the law of God as the individual who lies, swears, or steals. We see no special sanctity in celibacy, to us marriage is preferable because God instituted it, and made it both lawful and honorable, but it is a sin for a Christian to marry an unconverted person. Look at it. The body of the Christian is the temple of the Holy Spirit, while the body of the unbeliever, no matter how moral, or amiable is the temple of Satan. The Christian is a member of the body of Christ, but the unregenerate person is a member of the body of Satan. The Christian has been quickened, he is alive to God; every unconverted person is dead in trespasses and sin. In a word, they are traveling different roads, going in different directions, observing contrary rules, and serving opposite masters, and "two cannot walk together except they be agreed." Those who set aside this law of God will surely bring sorrow to their own souls.

For the benefit of our readers who have anxiously looked for the dissenting opinion of Justice Harlan on the Civil Rights bill, we admit a portion of it in another column of this paper. It is worthy of the man and of the cause in question. "The National Legislature may," he says, "without transcending the limits of the Constitution, do for human liberty and the fundamental rights of American citizenship what it did with the sanction of the Supreme Court for the protection of slavery and the rights of masters to fugitive slaves." As Chief Justice Taney has been execrated for his Dred Scott decision, so should Justice Harlan be held in grateful remembrance for his manly, able and consistent dissenting opinion in the recent civil rights decision.

PERSONAL.

—Robert, the young son of Gov. Robert E. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, died in Harrisburgh, Nov. 19.

—W. B. Gray, of the Morgan City Free Press, and L. E. Bentley, of the Donaldsonville Chief, called last week.

—Judge Ruffin, colored, nominated by Gov. Butler, has taken his seat. He is received by the bar with great favor.

—General Grant has headed with $1,000 a subscription for Gen. Fremont who is old and poor, but served his generation long and well.

—Rev. D. K. Stevenson, of Pittsburgh Conference, pastor of the Second Methodist Church, at Johnstown, Penn., died of typhoid fever, Nov. 21st.

—Dr. M. W. Taylor is confined to his bed at his home, in Jeffersonville, Ind., with malarial fever, and has been ever since Tuesday of last week.—Western 28th.

—Charles W. Siemens, one of the greatest scientists and engineers of the age, died in London, Nov. 20, from rupture of the heart, occasioned by a fall about ten days before.

—Rev. Thomas Peterson, President of the Louisiana Freedmen's Baptist Association, a native of Virginia, and a resident of Louisiana for about 53 years, died in Carrollton, last Saturday. He was a preacher of considerable native ability, and beloved by his people.

—Judge Charles Luzenberg of section B. Criminal District Court, having resigned, Gov. McEnery appointed Joshua G. Baker, a grandson of ex-Governor Baker, to succeed him. Mr. Baker, as assistant district attorney, won the confidence of the bar, who are pleased with his promotion:

—Rev. Wm. C. Webb is meeting with success at Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, Philadelphia. During revival services 20 united with the Church. On Sunday Nov. 18, the pastor presented the cause of Church extension, and at morning and night contributions to amount of $2,500 were made. The Church gave $900 last year.

—Dr. Birmingham, the Dean of the School of Theology at Central Tennessee College, was present at the Tennessee Conference. The work in the South is all new to the Dr. but he is charmed with it. He does not think that the preacher of these times should be a one-sided dwarfish sort of a fellow, but a real man, a wise, good, and true man. So when he puts his mouth to the Gospel trumpet it will give no uncertain sound.

—Dr. Young, whom the Bishop introduced to the Conference as his pastor when at home, was present at the Tennessee Conference to represent the interests of the Church Extension Society, and the conference gave him a hearty welcome. He is one of the men, who can talk to a colored conference without telling them that they are Negroes. In an honest, plain and practical way he speaks to them as if he believed in their manhood. His words were with power upon the minds of the brethren, and only good can be the result of his visit.

—Mrs. Hitchcock, wife of Rev. Dr. Luke Hitchcock, who came to Cincinnati from Chicago, to attend the annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, met with a painful accident on the 20th inst., at the residence of her son-in law, Mr. T. H. Brown, by falling down stairs. Her collar bone was broken, and she sustained other injuries. She may be confined to the house for several weeks. Dr. Hitchcock has been with her since Wednesday last.—Western, 28th.

—Rev. John S. Inskip was able to go by rail to Philadelphia to be present at the annual meeting of the National Camp-meeting Association, held in that city Nov. 22d. His general health is greatly improved, and he is able to move about pretty actively, and is fully conscious, though able to talk but little. His entire restoration is possible in time if he is careful, and arrangements made to assist him in his work. His unexpected presence incited thanksgiving and profound feeling among his associates.—N. Y. Advocate.

—A brief note from the Rev. Dr. J. C. Hartzell dated at Luzerne, N. Y., Nov. 22, contains the welcome news that Mrs. Hartzell, is somewhat better. "For nearly two weeks," he writes, "I have been watching day and night at her bed-side, with scarcely an hour's uninterrupted rest."—N. Y. Advocate. In a note of same date to this office, Dr. Hartzell said: "Mrs. Hartzell is improving slowly and can now be carried in a reclining chair to an adjoining room, and out on the porch in the fresh air."

—Arrangements are being completed to place in position in Circle Park, Indianapolis, the statue of the late war governor, senator and statesman, Oliver P. Morton. The statue will be of bronze eight feet in height. It was designed by Franklin Simmons, an American artist, and cast in the city of Munich. It will be placed on a granite pedestal, and when mounted will measure seventeen feet from the ground. The figure alone will cost $9,500; the monument complete about $11,000. The statue will be unveiled in December, and Hon. R. W. Thompson will deliver the memorial address.

Sixty Addresses by American Educators.

Edited by REV. J. C. HARTZELL, D. D.

8vo. 272 pp. Price, stiff paper..$1. 25
Cloth........................ 1 75

The New England Journal of Education speaking of the National Education Assembly, for 1883, says: "It was the most remarkable gathering ever held in our country in matters connected with the schooling of the people. The volume of addresses is the most interesting collection of popular educational documents ever given to our people, and should be in the hands of every educator, legislator, and intelligent citizen in the land."

The sixty addresses are arranged topically, as follows:

1. Education and Man's Improvement.
2. Illiteracy in the United States.
3. National Aid to Common Schools.
4. The Negro in America.
5. Illiteracy, Wealth, Pauperism, and Crime.
6. The American Indian Problem.
7. The American Mormon Problem.
8. Education in the South since the War.
9. Christ in American Education.
10. Tabulation of Illiteracy and Educational Facts from Census of 1880—ten tables.

It is a book for all who want information on any of these great practical questions. The addresses are carefully prepared and revised by the authors, and are filled with information and incidents. The authors are nearly all engaged in actual work in the fields of which they speak. The book should be in every public library. A full table of contents is supplemented by a carefully prepared index.

A special feature of the book is a series of ten tables, compiled by the Hon. H. R. Waite, Special Statistician U. S. Census, and the Hon. John Eaton, U. S. Commissioner of Education, giving complete data upon the illiterate and educational status of the United States, each State and also of the South as a section.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

P. F. Robinson, Darowville: "We are moving onward. At union meeting we raised $122.55; other collections for church building were $223, making a total of $345.55. Thanks to friends, we have a chapel that will seat 400 persons with ease. Another year's labor will make this charge a first-class one."

Rev. W. Brooks, of Glencoe, feels sadly "dismounted" over the disappearance of a little black mare, "all I had to carry me from place to place to preach the gospel," he says. As this horse was his property for nine years, and has sped the gospel over many miles of Attakapas prairies, it is hoped the useful animal may be returned to its lawful owner. It was branded D. C. on the left hip. A liberal reward will be paid for its return.

MISSISSIPPI.

N. Toole, Waynesboro: "My last protracted meeting closed Oct. 31. Rev. O. Gillespie, of Shubuta, spent three days with us. Ten professed to be happily converted. Elder Campbell when he visited us was not well, but seemed to be improving. I am trying to raise missionary money."

H. H. Mitchell, Holly Springs: "The young ladies of Asbury Chapel gave a festival on the night of the 2d of November, in the interest of our church, and raised $72.45. It was the grandest affair of the kind we have seen. The young ladies deserve much praise for the efficient manner in which they conducted the supper. The stewards were very happy and felt grateful to the young ladies for the timely aid received. When the financial wheels of the church are almost dragging in the mire $72.45 is no small lift. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the stewards were happy and feel greatly relieved. But perhaps the pastor was the happiest, as the money was raised for his benefit, and came as it did in a needy time. As one good turn deserves another, it is to be hoped that the young ladies will find it necessary to do likewise for some other church enterprise."

TEXAS.

J. L. Smith, Milican: "We are moving on nicely. The charge has improved during the year by adding a parsonage, well, organ and bell. We propose to send 18 subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN."

B. F. Pinkard writes: "Times are hard, money is scarce, and the people are slow to educate in Limestone county, Texas."

TENNESSEE.

Dr. Braden writes from Nashville, Nov. 29th. "Bishop Hurst stopped and preached at College Monday night. Dr. Young exhorted, and 12 students were forward for prayers; about 20 have converted. School is so full that we will be compelled to refuse any more than have engaged rooms unless they find rooms in families in the city."

The labor problem was not solved in California by the exclusion of the Chinese. The ranch-owners and other agriculturists in all parts of the State are said to be in great need of farm laborers. Since the passage of the exclusion act the Chinese laborers have raised their prices, and many of them have returned to their native country. One farmer received for his grapes this season only enough money to pay the Chinese who picked them, and others were unable to find Chinese who would pick their fruit at any reasonable price. The native Californian is unwilling to do such work as the Chinese have been doing, and immigrants do not add to the number of available workmen, because they take farms of their own. It is said that some of the large ranches cannot be managed profitably except by the employment of gangs of Chinese under contract, and more than one ranchman would be glad to see the Chinese coming again without restriction.—*N. The Housekeeper.

A divorce was granted, a few days ago, in New York, as the result of a quarrel about a seal-skin sacque, which the husband protested he was not able to purchase.

PRUNE PIE Let 2 pounds prunes soak over night, then stone them, add 1 pound light brown sugar, place on a stove, stew until done, add the grated peel and juice of 1 large lemon, and salt to taste, (we like more than some) a piece of butter the size of a walnut, trifle of flour. You want them juicy, if dry they are not good.

MOLASSES HERMIT CAKE—2 eggs, ½ cup sugar, ½ cup molasses, ½ cup shortening, 1 one cup chopped raisins dredged with sugar, dissolve 1 teaspoonful soda in a tablespoonful of milk, add cinnamon, cloves and salt to taste, and a tiny bit of ginger, flour to roll, cut in rounds, bake in a quick oven.

Both the fly and the mosquito are great scavengers in infancy. The one purifying the air we breathe, the other the water we drink. They perform, in this way, an indirect service to man which few perhaps appreciate, and which somewhat atones for their bad habits in maturity.

POMMES AU RIZ.—Scoop out the cores and peel some fine apples and stew them in clarified sugar. Boil some rice in milk, with a pinch of salt, a few strips of lemon peel and sugar enough to sweeten it. Leave on the fire until the rice is quite soft and has absorbed nearly all the milk; remove the lemon peel and place in a dish, arrange the stewed apples finely on the rice and put in the oven until a pretty golden color.—La Cuisine.

STEWED FISH.—Cut up some soles, whiting, cod or any other fish, flour and fry them in hot fat; slice an onion and fry that also, then put them both together in a stewpan with a bunch of sweet herbs and just cover them with water. Season to taste with salt, pepper, pounded mace and a clove or two. Add sufficient flour to thicken the gravy and a couple of spoonfuls of mushroom catsup; stew gently until thoroughly cooked and serve in a deep dish with some forcemeat balls made from the trimmings of the fish.

Before a young man can marry a Mexican girl he has to tell her parents on the door-steps of the house what his prospects in life are. In this country he does not say anything about his prospects until they start to housekeeping and she asks him if he expects her to cook his meals, wash the dishes, set the bread and boil the clothes all in one utensil, a frying pan. Then he murmurs something about purchasing a second-hand iron kettle next week.

OX TAIL SOUP.—Three ox tails, two small pigs' feet, two or three slices of an onion, some celery [illegible], half a dozen each of cloves, [illegible] and peppercorns. Divide the ox tails at the joints and lay them in hot water half an hour. Cut the pigs' feet in small pieces; put them in a saucepan, with a small bit of butter. Put all together into the soup kettle, add the spices, pour in three quarts of warm water, and simmer slowly for two hours. A Human Furnace

A Phenomenon of a Burning Mine Repeated in the Physical System.

A few years ago one of the most important coal mines in Pennsylvania caught fire. It started slowly but soon obtained such headway that it spread through the greater portion of the entire mine. To flood it with water would extinguish the fire, but well nigh ruin the mine; and still the flames continued to increase. At that juncture a young man stepped forward and suggested that all the entrances and vent holes of the mine be covered and secured, thus shutting off the supply of air. His advice was followed and the flames were finally subdued.

To compare the condition of this mine with many phases of the human system, is most natural and appropriate. "Fire in the blood" is not a mere expression, it is a most serious fact. How it originates, it may be impossible to say; but that it burns and rages with an increasing fury, the one who is its victim only too painfully knows. The blood is the life. It is designed by nature to purify, strengthen and sustain the system. It is too often made the channel through which poison and death are transported. Poisonous acids coming through the veins and arteries inflame and cause a fire just as real as the one which existed in the mine. They burn and irritate causing the brain to become weak and the nerves unstrung; they carry pains to the muscles and leave agonies in the joints; they bring destruction instead of strength; they devastate the very portions of the body that most require help, and they hasten the approach of death in its most horrible form. These things have been felt by innumerable people who have been the victims of rheumatic disorders, and the agonies they have endured confirm this description.

There is but one way by which this fire in the blood can be extinguished, and that is by shutting off the supply of these poisonous acids. The lactic, lithic and uric acids come in to the blood through the liver and kidneys, and they remain in solution in the blood producing inflammatory rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, gout and all rheumatic fevers and affections. When they are deposited as gritty crystals in and near the joints, they cause articular rheumatism; when in the muscles, muscular rheumatism and lumbago; when in the tissues covering the nerves, sciatica; when in the face, head and nerves generally, neuralgia. In every case they are painful; in most instances, dangerous. Inflammatory rheumatism is likely locate in some joint and become chronic, or suddenly attack the brain or heart, causing apoplexy or heart disease. The fire in the blood must be extinguished—the supply must be shut off. This can only be done by guarding the portals to the blood—the kidneys and liver; and no means has ever been found for accomplishing this which can equal Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure. It acts directly upon the seat of the disorder; it extinguishes the fire by controlling the supply and removing the cause.

The well known standing of H. H. Warner & Co. of Rochester, N. Y., the remarkable success which Warner's Safe Cure has achieved, being indorsed by no less a personage than Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Dean of the United States Medical college, New York, and the fidelity with which they have carried out all their promises to the public, should be a sufficient warrant that the above statements are true. They, however, guarantee to cure ninety-five per cent. of all rheumatic troubles, especially acute, knowing full well that the demonstrated power of the remedy justifies them in so doing. Nothing can be fairer than this, and those who suffer in the future from rheumatism with such an offer before them, do so on their own responsibility, and can blame no one if living pain and untimely death are the results.

CAST THY BURDEN ON THE LORD.

One day when thought my outer sense did close,
And held the inner fast,
Before me like some saddening dream arose
A vision of the past.
In due procession earth's long-vanished years
Moved to a mournful chime
(The groans of men, women's half-stifled tears)
That echoed through all time,
And likewise through all time that there seemed to float
Sweet as an angel's song.
From realms of restfulness, another note,
Unheeded by the throng.
It offered strength out of a boundless store,
Spoke peace for vague alarms,
And bade them cast the heavy loads they bore
Into a Father's arms.
And yet how few the listeners it found
Among the way-worn crowd!
That tender pleading mad excitement drowned,
Or lamentations loud.
Some, heavy laden, unbelieving heard,
Some vented mocking mirth,
And some lived on as deaf to every word
That wooed their souls from earth.
Some railed at life, whose bitter heritage
Their spirit dared defy.
And fought with fate, and cried from youth to age,
"Nay, I will conquer—I!"
Then, impotent, passed out of human ken,
While others came and went;
And still to-day the voice holds forth to men
A wealth of love unspent.
Alas! our ears are dull, our minds too cross
To take its meaning in;
Or else we only listen hugging close
The secret grief or sin.
So strong, so weak, so strangely loth to fling
The burden from thy breast,
Oh! foolish heart that will do anything
But seize the proffered rest!
Too hard for thee the struggle; lo, 'tis past,
And strength is thy reward,
When Love no longer vainly whispers, "Cast
Thy burden on the Lord."

THE TOURIST.

And so you've returned from Europe,
Now tell us how much did you see?
"Oh, we took in a lot of old castles,
And trotted about in Paree.
We saw all the things in the guide books,
Did the classical dodge when in Rome;
But between me and you and the bed-post
We are mightily glad to get home.

With every wound thou shalt stop to bind,
Or teardrop stay, thou too shalt find
Thy views expand,
While grateful love thy path attends,
The praying poor are richest friends;
Who for his God most liberally spends,
By liberal things shall stand.

A man may hear the Gospel, but unless he renders obedience to its requirements it will not save him. A knowledge of duty, unless that duty is performed, will only increase the sinner's guilt and condemnation. "He that knoweth his Master's will, and doeth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes."

ALICE CARY'S DYING HYMN.

Earth, with its dark and dreadful ills,
Recedes and fades away;
Lift up your heads, ye heavenly hills,
Ye gates of death give way;

My soul is full of whispered song;
My blindness is my sight,
The shadows that I feared so long
Are all alive with light.

And while my pulses faintly beat,
My faith does so abound,
I feel grow firm beneath my feet
The green immortal ground.

That faith, to me a courage gives,
Low as the grave to go;
I know that my Redeemer lives;
That I shall live to know,

The palace walls I almost see,
Where dwells my Lord and King;
O grave! where is thy victory?
O death! where is thy sting?

A great revival was held in Kimber Methodist Episcopal Church, Danville, Ill. The Methodist of the city united in the work. Rev. Thomas Harrison, in conjunction with the pastors, labored five weeks, and the city and surrounding country was aroused. Seven hundred and thirty had knelt at the altar up to the 15th inst.

Lost Friends.

[We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers. All others will be charged fifty cents. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.]

MR. EDITOR—I desire to inquire for my mother, who belonged to Henry Harper. Her brother was called Hill. She married Hall. Collins was my step brother; brother was Ed. Williams. There were three girls and I was the oldest—Violet, Minnie, and myself, Harriet. I left her when about 12 years old, a half mile from Louisburg. The last I heard from her she was about three miles from Cornersville, Marshall county, Tenn Henry Harden gave me to his daughter. Betsey Clark married Lewis Clarke, and he brought me to Lawrence county from Crockett county, to near the town of Friendship. I was called Harriet Clarke. I married William Harville, but I now go by the name of Sherrill. My sister Minnie was married and she lived near Nashville. I have eight children. Address me at Friendship, Tennessee.

HARRIET SHERRILL.

MR. EDITOR—I desire information of my mother, Winnie Brown She belonged to Priestley Brown, in Rappahanock county, Virginia. It has been near 15 years since I last heard from her. Address me at Mashulaville, Miss.

FRANK BROWN.

MR. EDITOR—My sister belonged to Willis Calcoat; her name is Lydia Calcoat; she was sent to Cincinnati, Ohio, and set free there, about 30 years ago. Our mother was Sallie Smith; my oldest sisters were Celia and Ann Smith; the next oldest sister was Eveline; my sister had a playmate named Clara Ann. Lee Calcoat carried her to Natchez so she could take the boat for Cincinnati. The last account my sister Ann went to Texas with a Dr. Riley. A woman knew her by the name of Martha Riley. My name is Jane. Address A. D. Townsend, Brookhaven, Miss.

MR. EDITOR—I desire to hear from my relatives. I first belonged to Jackson Stephen, and he lived seven miles from Lynchburg, Va. Stevens gave John Rucker the hiring of the girls and their mother. The girls were Julia and Fannie. My mother was Sophia James. John Rucker's cook was Elvira. I had a brother Hezekiah Jackson Powell; Aunt Elizabeth raised him. I first lived with Frank Royal, then with George Curl, who was a carpenter; I also lived with Robt. Lee; I lived one year with Capt. Shields; one year with Abram Beagns, a policemen. Walker, a negro trader, sold my sister. I heard Julia was sold in Tuscumbia. John Rucker sold me; my name is Fannie; he sold me to Selfwoodsuff The last man I lived with was Lindsey Pagit, a tailor. Tom Rucker's cook was Alcy. Address me at Brookhaven, Miss.

MRS. A. D. TOWNSEND.

DEAR EDITOR—I wish to inquire about my people. My mother, Fannie Holt, belonged to Wm. Holt. My father was Thos. Olive, and he was sold to Mr. Taylor. My grandmother, Sarah Holt, belonged to the same man my mother did. Sisters were Dollie, Angeline and Fannie Jane. My brother was Wm. Holt. I was sold in Columbus, Tenn., by Calvin Holt, my young master, to Wm. Styles. He brought me to Mississippi, where I yet remain. I left my mother, father, sisters and brother 2 miles south of Mooreville, Tenn. My aunt, Malinda Whitaker, belonged to the McCain Baptist Church. I was turned over to Hurch McGhee by Wm. Styles. Address me at Oktoc, Miss. CHARLOTTE MCGEE.

MR. EDITOR—Please allow me to say something in favor of those who have relatives and friends who they would like to know of their whereabonts. I notice in the SOUTHWESTERN a special charge given to the ministers to read the list of lost friends and relatives from the pulpit. I do not remember of ever hearing one read from the pulpit in my life. It might have been done at times and places when I was not present. I am a member of the M. E. Church, am a teacher, and go from one county to another teaching. I find these neglects mentioned everywhere I go. Now, I do not write this to mar any brother's feelings, nor to be called smart, nor to be thought of, nor to be spoken of. I say these words because they ought to have been said by some one long ago.

BETTER THAN EVER.

The Inter-Ocean For 1884.

More new features have been introduced in The Weekly Inter Ocean in the last twelve months than in any other paper published in this country. Retaining all the old specialties and departments, the publishers have aded illustrated biographical sketches of persons prominently before the public at date of publication; illustrated articles on important historical and current events, of in elucidation of antiquarian research, or interesting engineering and mechanical problems; cable letters from London covering the field of European news for each week; special contributions devoted to reminiscences of army and political life; and new series of articles given up largely to personal gossip and recollections of prominent literary people.

The Inter Ocean will remain uncompromisingly Republican; will maintain its present attitude on the question of protecting American industries; will continue to devote special attention to trade, transportation, and economic questions; will retain the departments of The Curiosity Shop (a current encyclopedia of curious, interesting, and valuable information called out by inquiries of subscribers); The Woman's Kingdom (devoted to the progressive movements in which women are interested); The Farm and Home (covering topics of special interest to farmers, their wives, and their children); The Veterinary (containing answers to questions as to the treatment of horses, cattle, and other animals by one of the best veterinary surgeons in the West); and Complications taking in puzzles, enigmas, conundrums, etc.), all of which are peculiar to the paper; will give as much space as hitherto to serial and short stories, original and selected sketches and poems, and with increased facilities for news-gathering in the shape of special wires to New York and Washington, and experienced correspondents well placed at home and abroad, will more than maintain its high standard for enterprise and accuracy in all departments of news.

While so many improvements have been made in The Weekly Inter Ocean; the price has been reduced to one dollar per year, postage included. This puts a large eight-page (there are frequently twelve pages) paper in the hands of the reader at the low rate of two cents per week. The reduction in price and the recent improvements make The Weekly Inter Ocean not only the best family newspaper in the country, but the cheapest. The subscription price of The Inter Ocean is as follows:

Weekly Edition per year, postage paid	$1.00
Semi-Weekly Edition per year, postage paid	2.50
Daily (including Sunday) per year.	12.00
Daily (excluding Sunday) per year.	10.00
Wednesday's Edition (with Musical Supplement) per year	2.00
Saturday's Edition (sixteen pages) per year	2.00
Sunday's Edition (sixteen pages) per year	2.00

Postage prepaid in each case.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

HE FEELS LIKE A NEW MAN.

"I have had Dyspepsia, with Constipation, two years, and have tried ten different kinds of pills, and TUTT'S are the first that have done me any good. They have cleaned me out nicely. My appetite is splendid, food digests readily, and I now have natural passages. I feel like a new man." W. D. EDWARDS, Palmyra, O.

Plantation Melodies

—AND—

REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION

By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.

Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed and are now given for the first time very the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

General Grant has written another letter in favor of Fitz-John Porter, restating the positions taken in his former letter, and urges that justice should be done to an officer who had been unjustly treated. The letter is creditable alike to the author and to the man whom he seeks to benefit. Injustice was done to General Porter. Congress ought to repair the injury.

In connection with the adoption of the new system of standard time, it is worth remembering that the difficulties of the old system were graphically pointed out, and the new system of division into hours earnestly urged, in the columns of The Christian Advocate, by Bishop Warren, more than three years ago.—New York Advocate.

Inflammatory Rheumatism. An Astonishing Cure.

The following case is another remarkable proof of the really wonder-working power of Compound Oxygen. The astonishing result could hardly have been expected than we were at the result which attended its use; for when we examined her condition we did not believe that we could do anything for her, and frankly told her so.

"PHILADELPHIA, June 10th, 1882.
STARKEY & PALEN. Dear Sirs:—In reference to my case of Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I suffered so long and so severely, I consulted you in February last. Eighteen years ago I discovered a knot in the inside of my fingers; it gradually spread all over my body, settling in my feet in 1876, so that I could not walk from January, 1880, without suffering acutely. I had to use crutches, and was prostrated for days, when the trouble would attack my arms. All sizzling, burning pain and hanging of my feet and ankles would cause me to scream with pain. I had to be lifted in and out of bed, and was in a most miserable condition. I was induced to try your treatment, and the first night after using the Compound Oxygen I had no pain in my feet. This greatly encouraged me. After using a month I noticed a decided change in my arm, but not in the knots. During the next month I decided improvement in my feet, and a little more in my arm. I had the misfortune to sprain my ankle, which laid me up for a few days; but I commenced the Oxygen again, and it soon cured the sprain. I continued the use of the Oxygen for a few days longer, when I felt so much better that I left off the treatment. I have not had a return of the rheumatism in any form since, and I feel that I am a cured woman. I shall lift my testimony for Compound Oxygen in every place I can, for I know it has cured me. Yours, MRS. ELIZABETH ROBERTS, 1409 Mt. Vernon St., Philadelphia."

The Sun. NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million of copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same sort of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife, or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs which presents the news of all the world without the waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

THE MARVELLOUS WEBBER SINGING DOLL.

A MECHANICAL WONDER.—Last year we first introduced this CHARMING ROYALTY to the children of America, and it is safe to assert that no Toy ever devised attained such immediate popularity. Fully aware of its merit we had thousands of Dolls ready for the Holiday trade, notwithstanding which the supply was exhausted early in December, and hundreds of children who came to our store were disappointed. We have been accumulating stock for the past nine months, and shall endeavor this year to fill all orders the day of receipt. The Doll has been improved in every way since last year. Instead of the stiff German body, as in all imported Dolls, our Doll has an AMERICAN MADE BODY with limber joints, so that it will sit easily and gracefully in any position. The arms is of Flesh Kid with separate fingers. These are positively the finest bodies ever put in a Doll. They are of graceful and natural shape, and much better and more expensively made than the best imported bodies which they will outwear many times. The WAX Heads with long hair are of the best French and German make, made especially for this Doll, and they are as beautiful as life, long hair, beautiful eyes, and delicately tinted cheeks. We consider them the finest Doll's Heads ever imported into this country, and that without the Wonderful Singing Attachment THE DOLL ALONE IS WELL WORTH THE ENTIRE PRICE. THE SINGING ATTACHMENT is concealed within the body. It is one of the most marvelous inventions of the age. Its shape and location are shown in the sketch. It is a Perfect Musical Instrument, finely made, not liable to get out of order, and so arranged that a slight pressure causes the Doll to sing one of the following airs: "Home, Sweet Home," "Greenville," "I Want to be an Angel," "There is a Happy Land," "Sweet Bye and Bye," "Bonnie Doon," "Can I Leave Thee," "A B C," "Dearest Mother," "The Pilgrim" (German), "Frohe Botschaft" (German), "Tell Aunt Rhody," "Dy a Down," "Yankee Doodle," "Coming Thro' the Rye," "Girl Blue the Prince of Wales," "Grandfather's Clock," "Child's Song," "Last Rose of Summer," "Joyful Morning" (German), "Good Night to Ladies," "Do Re Mi," "Do Re Sol, the Wood," "The Mocking Bird" (German), "Home, Sweet Home" (German), "When I Was a Little Boy," "Sailor's Home," "Hail Columbia," "Rule Britannia," "Auld Lang Syne," "God Save the Queen." Walking and talking Dolls have long been made, but they are expensive, soon out of order, and do not afford the little ones half the pleasure and entertainment that our Wonderful Singing Doll does, which is the Greatest Novelty in Dolls EVER OFFERED FOR SALE, and is the most useful and appropriate present that can be made to a child. We can furnish three sizes. No. 1, 21 inches high, price, $4.75. No. 2, 24 inches high, price, $5.25. No. 3, 28 inches high, OUR NEW STYLE, price, $6.50. Those Prices include Boxing. All three sizes are equally perfect and complete, but the larger the Doll the larger the singing attachment, and better head. Sent to any address on receipt of price. Discount to the Trade. Address all orders to THE MASSACHUSETTS ORGAN CO., No. 57 Washington St., Boston, Mass. U. S. A. FINE COSTUMES for these dolls with underclothing lace trimmed, finely made, $3.00 to $5.00 extra.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER. LESSON X. Dec. 9. DAVID'S FRIEND, JONATHAN. (1 Sam. xx, 32 42.)

Saul became David's enemy, but Jonathan remained his firm friend. Saul's daughter was David's wife, and once when Saul meant to kill David, she found it out and saved him. She laid an image of wood in David's bed, and hid him, so the men who came to kill him only found a wooden man. Saul thus drove David away, and for years David went about wandering from mountain to mountain to keep away from Saul. Once Jonathan talked to Saul and Saul called David home. But as soon as David gained the battle, the evil spirit came again, and Saul told Jonathan David should be killed. Jonathan pleaded for David, and it made Saul so angry he threw a spear at him and tried to kill him. So Jonathan told David all about his danger, and he helped David to go away again. They parted in a field, and after that Jonathan was always watching to [illegible] Saul's plans to catch David, and many times saved his life. Jonathan was David's friend, and [illegible] all these things to David because he loved him. He gave him his robe, and pleaded for his life [illegible] it made his own life in danger. We call this a grand act. Don't you want such a friend? We all have a Friend who did more because he loved us than all this. [illegible] friends are dear and precious, but above all, over all Jesus is our dearest, our best Friend, because he loved us when we forgot [illegible]. Let us promise him never to forget him.—Western.

NEW BOOKS.

CENTRAL AFRICA, JAPAN AND FIJI. A story of missionary enterprise, trials and triumph. By Emma Raymond Pitman. American Tract Society. 150 Nassau street, New York. For sale by W. D. Skillman, 94 Camp st., New Orleans. Price $1.25.

We have in this volume the trials and triumphs of modern missionaries in three of the most interesting mission fields the church has attempted to enter. The "heathenism of Central Africa" says our author "is not like that of China or India, in as much as in many cases they are ignorant of the duty of worship and destitute of the very idea." Hitherto, like beasts of burden, they have lived and died, unblest by the faintest Gospel light, "not knowing one year from another." "They had not the least idea of God or of a future State." There are three principal fields of missionary labor in Africa, the West coast, South Africa and various parts on the East coast. At present thirty-three missionary societies are laboring in Africa, representing by their labors the Christian efforts of Europe, England, Scotland and America. In Japan resident missionaries are in all cities, representing sixteen societies, and 176 missionaries are at work. Among the common people the news of the Saviour is gladly welcomed. But in no missionary field are the fruits of missionary labors more clearly manifest then in Fiji. Here the Gospel of Christ has worked a moral transformation that is perfectly wonderful. Here we must pause. We know of no one book that gives so much reliable information as to Central Africa, Japan, and Fiji as this. To any one who wants to know the trials and triumphs of the cross among those who sat in gross darkness, we commend this book.

"PEACE" and "REST" are the titles of two neat little volumes received from Anson D. F. Randolph & Co. 900 Broadway, New York. Price 35 cents each.

The books are red edge, cloth bound, and contain choice poems by well known authors. Suitable for all seasons they are especially adapted for holiday gifts.

Littell's Living Age For 1884.

For forty years The Living Age has been published with uninterrupted success, and has enabled its readers, at small expense of time and money, to keep pace with the literary progress of the age. Frequent in issue, and unequalled among periodicals in amount of matter, it furnishes an unrivalled compilation of a great and growing literature which embraces the productions of the most eminent living writers in all departments of literary and scientific work. And as this literature grows year by year in extent and importance, The Living Age becomes more valuable. Filling the place of many periodicals, it can hardly be dispensed with by any American reader who desires a thorough compendium of the best literature and thought of the time. Its prospectus for 1884 is commended to the attention of all who are selecting their reading-matter for the new year. Reduced clubbing rates with other periodicals are given, and to new subscribers remitting now for the year 1884 the intervening weekly numbers are sent gratis. It can be taken by the most delicate invalid without creating the disgusting nausea which is such an objection to the Cod-Liver Oil when taken without Lime. It is prescribed by the regular faculty. DEATHS.

Sister Josephine Davis died Nov. 23. She was a member of the church in Clinton, La., and moved to New Orleans last year. She passed away in the triumph of faith. She leaves behind a husband and two children. T. G. MONTGOMERY.

On Nov. 13th Sister Susan Cotton died in full triumph, at Mashulaville, Miss., leaving a husband and two children.

E. C. COLEMAN.

Our church and community sustains a great loss in the death of Bro. David Benson, a local preacher, and most faithful member, native of this State, aged 24 years; who resigned all that is mortal and passed peacefully away to join the ranks of immortal spirits in the world beyond, November 28th.

It may be said of this young man that he was an exemplary character. Converted when a boy, his youth has been given to Christ and His church. Full of faith, a zealous and even enthusiastic worker for the Lord; who preached both by precept and example, leaving a record clear as the sunlight and worthy of imitation, his place will be hard to fill. His last words were cheering to Christians, and convincing to the unconverted —among which were these: "I am a soldier." "I am ready and only waiting for Jesus to come." "I don't have to pray now, I have done my praying."

He also expressed a desire to do more for the Lord, saying he had done so little. But the Master was pleased with his labor and called him to reward. He was given an honorable and respectable burial by his brother Odd Fellows and Mt Zion B. A. Society, being a member of both. He leaves a sister, two brothers and a host of friends to mourn his loss. But truly our loss is his gain.

J. F. MARSHALL,
Pastor Mt. Zion M. E. Church.

It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Editorial Notes.

A Catholic school for colored children has been opened at Bay St. Louis, Miss. Keep your eyes opened, Protestant Americans. Rome would only be too glad to build up a black Ireland in the heart of America.

Peter is commanded by the Master twice, to feed his lambs; while he is commanded but once to feed his sheep. Feed the flock of Christ, brethren, especially the lambs. Nurture them in both church and Sunday school.

Hon. James G. Blaine has blundered again. His recent letter proposing to distribute a whisky tax among the States, does not receive serious consideration anywhere. The late proposition of a government employe to distribute the whisky would receive more votes, [illegible] objectionable. [illegible] to ally the government with the whisky traffic will be [illegible] opposed, as was [illegible]

The President's message to Congress reports friendly relations with all foreign powers; suggests a [illegible] to consider the rights [illegible] States in the [illegible] cause of the enormous expense and increase of the civil service list. He alludes to the alarming illiteracy and suggests national aid. The strongest constitutional weapons are demanded in the attack on polygamy, and he favors the assumption by Congress of the entire political control of Utah, and the establishment of a commission with powers and duties defined by law. Forests on the public domain require protection. The Worlds Exposition at New Orleans receives favorable mention. The civil service law has been beneficial in its workings. Legislation is needed relative to the Executive office, and to provide for a constitutional head to the government in case of the death or disability of both President and Vice-President. Any legislation to guarantee the enjoyment of equal rights by all citizens of the United States will receive the President's unhesitating approval. On the whole the message is a creditable State paper.

Birmingham, Alabama, has been the scene of a disgraceful lynching affair. The victim, Lewis Houston, aged 20 years, was accused of rape. He stoutly denied the charge and fellow boarders declared that he slept in his room on the night in question. Houston said he could prove his innocence, and he had previously sustained a good character, but a mob forced the jail, and hung him in the rear of Capitol Park, without giving him the slightest opportunity of securing corroborating testimony. As usual "a Negro riot" arose in the imagination of the guilty, and a military force was called out to allay the excitement. It is almost unnecessary to mention that Houston was a Negro, for it is generally understood that only such are reserved for these outbursts of mob law.

The New York Times, we have ever esteemed as an exemplary and commendable sheet. But its recent burlesque upon the colored Knights Templars, stamps it with the stigma of one that has fallen from grace. In editorially it said: "The colored Knights believe that when De Molay was sentenced to be burned, ostensibly for heresy but really for chicken stealing, he imparted to his faithful colored squire the secrets of the order, which consisted of certain methods of preparing whitewash. The colored Knights of this country wear swords only in public. Their real weapon is the whitewash brush, and it is said that in the seclusion of their 'asylums' they apply whitewash to new members as a part of the rite of initiation. Colored Templarism is entitled to credit for its share in preserving the secrets of mediæval whitewhashing, but it could be wished that it did not, out of fancied respect to the memory of De Molay, inculcate upon its members the duty of chicken stealing."

Sheriff C. C. Duson, the popular and efficient officer of St. Landry parish, is after the liquor dealers as shown by a letter to the editor of the Washington Argus enquiring about some boys who were drunk at a sugar mill near that town. Selling liquor to minors is rather a dangerous occupation when such a thorough official as Sheriff Duson is on the alert.—People's Vindicator.

In this new departure Sheriff Duson certainly deserves the encouragement and support of all the people of St. Landry who value the morals and safety of their children.

Tennessee Conference.

MURFREESBORO, Nov. 25.—The Tennessee Conference adjourned to-night. Bishop Hurst preached one of his grand sermons to the Conference this morning, and ordained as deacons, Felix Yeargin, S. B. Danley, Perry Woodson, John A. Moore, Felix Allen and John Coppage.

In the afternoon the new church was dedicated, Rev. L. M. Moore preaching, and the Bishop conducted the dedicatory ceremony. He ordained as Elders S T. Hickerson, B. Anderson, E. M. Manson, Miles Williams and D. Cook.

At night a memorial service was held, three of the members of the Conference having died—M. Morrison, W. Dewgans and Henry Moody.

The annual missionary sermon was preached at night by S. P. Bell, and after transacting some items of business and adopting strong resolutions on temperance and against the use of tobacco, the bishop addressed the Conference briefly, and read the appointments. The session has been harmonious, the ministers go out to new fields, or to old ones, to enter upon another year's work of endeavor to win men to Christ.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION.

The Christian education of the people has ever been the aim of the M. E. Church, as shown by the number of schools of different grades under her patronage. While the work is very important in every section of the country, and to all the people, there are special reasons for this educational work among the colored people of the South. Their past history, their present situation, and their future welfare, as well as the moral, religious and financial prosperity of the whole land, depends largely upon the intelligence of these rapidly increasing millions. We rejoice in the efforts of the Freedmen's Aid Society to meet this want. We recognize the vast work that has been already accomplished by this Society, in the number and efficiency of the schools supported; by the Church through this agency and though so much has been done, the crowded condition of these schools, and the increased interest among the people for more extended educational facilities, indicate the increasing need for means to meet this growing demand; therefore,

Resolved, That we recognize the work done by the M. E. Church for our people in the schools already established for them, and our grateful acknowledgements are due and are hereby tendered to the friends in the North who have so generously aided in this work.

Resolved, That the increasing interest among our people is an encouraging sign of progress, and that we will endeavor to foster this spirit among our people by urging our young people to attend these schools, and secure the best possible education, so that they may be prepared for the responsible duties of freemen in the various pursuits of life in the State, and in the Church of God.

Resolved, That we urge our people to send their children as regularly as possible to the public schools, and that we will endeavor to secure the employment of Christian teachers for these schools as far as possible.

Resolved, That the work of the Freedmen's Aid Society and the Educational Society of our Church demands our heartiest co-operation in making collections to aid in carrying on the work of this organization.

Central Tennessee College.—From the report of the trustees and visitors we learn that this institution had 360 students enrolled the past year. That the teachers were, in all the departments, faithful, laborious and persistent in their work; that the institution was visited with a gracious revival, and many students found peace in Jesus. The report speaks well for the advancement of the different classes in the studies pursued; and the increasing numbers who are endeavoring to pursue a more extended course of study. During the past year there were 7 in the college classes, 15 in the preparatory, 21 in the academic, 199 in the normal, 1 in law, 26 in the theological, and 30 in the medical departments. There were graduated in the classical course 1, academic 1, normal 4, law 1, theological 2, medical 5. The session opens this year with an increasing attendance, and at the present time the buildings are nearly full, and many others are seeking admission, indicating again the need of additional buildings to meet the demands for accommodation.

Resolved, That we rejoice in the increased prosperity of the Central Tennessee College, and in the religious interest that has been manifest from year to year, which gives us hope that the students educated there, will do good work for the moral and religious, as well as the intellectual elevation of the people.

Resolved, That we recognize the importance of theological training of young men for the ministry; we highly approve the more thorough organization of the theological department by the appointment of Rev. Prof. Birmingham as dean of this department, and we will endeavor to increase the attendance, by urging our young men who are candidates for the ministry to attend this school of theology whenever practicable.

Resolved, That we hear with gratification of the continued prosperity of the Meharry Medical Department, and we will endeavor to secure as large an attendance as possible so that our people may be supplied with competent physicians.

Resolved, That we hear with gratification of the success of Bro. O. Pickett in securing subscriptions and collecting funds for Seay Chapel and for the endowment fund of the Central Tennessee College, and we most cordially endorse his work in this field of effort, and recommend him to the confidence and favor of the friends of Christian education, upon whom he may call should he continue his labor in this direction.

Resolved, That the Bishop be requested to reappoint J. Braden, President, and West Patterson, professor in the College.

West Tennessee Seminary.—We are glad to learn that this school has been relieved from debt; that under the care of Rev. C. S. Alexander the attendance is steadily increasing, and that its usefulness for good is widening. We therefore recommend this school to the patronage of the people of West Tennessee, and especially to the membership of our own Church, as a school where the young people can secure the elements of a sound Christian education.

Lawrenceburg School.—Whereas, an effort has been made by our Church at Lawrenceburg to establish a school of academic grade; therefore,

Resolved, That we approve the action of our brethren at Lawrenceburg, and commend this effort to provide for the education of their children and young people of the community, and we wish them the highest success.

Resolved, That we recommend to our people, wherever practicable, to secure teachers of our own church, at any rate Christian teachers, and continue the school in their district as long as practicable each year.

REPORT ON TEMPERANCE.

Whereas, The use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is productive of the most disastrous results to body and soul of the drinker, sending the one early to the grave and the other to hell; and,

Whereas, This habit, is often formed by the use of the milder drinks at first, such as beer, wine and cider; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the members of this Conference, renew our pledge of total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors, including wine and cider.

Resolved, That we recommend temperance societies to be organized in all the congregations and Sunday-schools, and that a part or all of one session of the Sunday-school, each month, be devoted to the subject of temperance, and that we will preach on this subject and urge all our people to total abstinence.

Resolved, That we rejoice in the good effects of the "four mile" law in this State, and will pray and labor for the time to come when the liquor traffic may be entirely prohibited by law.

Resolved, That the use of tobacco is an evil which can not be passed in silence by the Christian ministry. That it is ruining the health of thousands of the boys of our State and tens of thousands in the country, creating an unnatural thirst, thus leading to the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and thus producing drunkards, and mental and moral imbecility.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to abstain from the use of tobacco in all its forms; that we will call the attention of our people to to this subject, and by precept and example endeavor to save our people and the entire Church from the [illegible] evils of the use of intoxicating liquors and tobacco.

PERIODICALS AND LITERATURE.

Whereas, The policy of the M. E. Church has been to supply her membership with a sound, literary, moral and religious literature, and for this purpose has established a publication department, called the "Book Concern," and has arranged so that the profits of said Book Concern shall be devoted to the support of the superannuated, worn out preachers, and the orphans and widows of the ministers of our Church; therefore,

Resolved, That fidelity to the aim of our Church to supply our people with a pure literature, and to furnish it as cheap as the literature of any other house, considering the character of the matter furnished, demands that we earnestly and persistently endeavor to secure the most extensive circulation of the publications of the M. E. Church.

Resolved, That duty to our superannuated worn-out preachers, and widows and orphans of our ministers, demands that we should guard against any influences that may interfere with the financial obligations of the Church to her recognized beneficiaries.

Resolved, That the duty of the Church to furnish a pure literature to her people is imperative, and while the press is pouring out a flood of that which is either profitless or terribly pernicious, it is the duty of each preacher to supply our books and periodicals as far as possible to all the members of our Church and congregations.

Resolved, That while we wish success to all private enterprises, in the publication of moral and religious periodicals and literature, our duty is first to circulate the official organ of the Church and the books of our own publication.

Resolved, That we approve the course of the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE in its stand against the spirit of caste, and especially its manifestation in the Christian Church.

Resolved, That we reaffirm our former action in making the SOUTHWESTERN the official organ of our Conference.

FREEDMEN'S AID SOCIETY.

Whereas, This Society has completed another year of successful work, and has, this year, raised a larger amount of money than ever before, for the benevolent objects which it proposes to accomplish, viz: providing for the education of the colored people especially, and aiding others in their educational enterprises; and,

Whereas, The schools of this Society are constantly improving in efficiency, and the good work they are doing is being felt throughout the whole country, and in our Conference we have the evidences of the benefit of the Central Tennessee College, located in our bounds, in the number and qualifications of the young men who are entering our ranks; and the work done by our members who have attended the College till they have completed some course of study, proves the value of these schools to the Church. We rejoice in the increased interest to acquire a thorough education, manifested on the part of our young folks, and we will endeavor to cherish this interest and send as many students as we can to college. While for the school which is located within our bounds we feel a special regard yet we rejoice in knowing that the M. E. Church does not confine itself to the work among our people, but makes it widespread, reaching all the people of the South. We regret that many of our preachers do not take more interest in the schools of this Society and urge the people to send their children, and the young people of their pastoral charges to save their money and attend school long enough to secure at least a good English education. We are glad that so many of these schools have provisions for the theological education of young men preparing for the work of the ministry, and we will urge all our candidates for the traveling ministry to secure as good an education as practical before entering our Conference. Recognizing as we do the necessity for better educated ministers, we are opposed to the admission of any more young men into the regular work of the ministry who have not at least a good education in the common English studies. In view of the great work done by the Freedmen's Aid Society we urge all the members of the Conference to make this a special collection, placing it second to none in its bearing on the interest of our people, and endeavor to meet the full amount of assessment to our respective charges.

ON BISHOP PECK.

Whereas, God, in His wise providence, has seen fit to call from his incessant labors to reward, our beloved and much revered Bishop, the sagacious watchman, the faithful pastor, the loving husband and the affectionate father, wise counselor, and judicious Bishop, Jesse T. Peck; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the members of the Tennessee Annual Conference, will strive to emulate his virtues, fall on his example of Christian purity and integrity, and hope to meet him on the other side of the river where the spirits of the just are made perfect.

Respectfully submitted,
L. M. HAGOOD.
BRAXTON JAMES.

AGAINST CHANGE OF PASTORIAL TERM.

Whereas, The question of change of pastoral term has been generally discussed; and,

Whereas, We are convinced that no change is advisable at this time; therefore,

Resolved, That we instruct our delegotes to vote against any change whatever at this time.

L. M. HAGOOD.

Right Hon. Mr. Chamberlain, President of the Board of Trade, contributed and article to the Fortnightly Review in which he advocates a law making it a grave offence to knowingly own an insanitary habitation. It might be well if such a law were enacted and enforced in America.—Catholic Examiner.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

A note from Rev. A. Luster, Eola, says: "I am glad to say that Sister Barksdale, our Home Missionary District superintendent, has paid us a visit, and has organized the Women's Home Missionary Society here. It is progressing finely."

Miss Julia Isabella, formerly connected with the Woman's Home Mission work, is now the teacher of a school in Avoyelles parish. The following is taken from the [illegible] Nov. 24: "An exhibition at the colored school of Moreauville, taught by Miss Isabelle, was given last week and, we are informed, it proved a complete success. This colored school is well conducted and the teacher spoken of in terms of praise."

Rev. A. E. P. Albert, Presiding Elder for this district and assistant editor of the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE was in Franklin, this week, and made this office a pleasant visit. Rev. Albert is a cultured and Christian gentleman. He preached for elder Williams on Thursday evening. His homily was very impressive. Come again Elder Albert.—St. Mary Herald.

Sabbath morning, Dec. 2, nine persons were received in full connection into Ames M. E. Church, New Orleans. Rev. J. A. Ivy, of the Methodist Church South, assisted in the services. In the evening the Childrens monthly meeting was held. The services were well attended, and the occasion an enjoyable one.

MISSISSIPPI.

Of our church at Aberdeen the [illegible] says: "The [illegible] exercises, in this city last [illegible] conducted, by the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church (colored), will be long and pleasantly remembered by all who [illegible] a part, as well as a large number of the white people [illegible] who were present. WAYSIDE NOTES AND ITEMS.

Thursday, November 15th, we left New Orleans for the fourth quarterly round upon the LaTeche district. Having previously planned to stop over at Franklin and Baldwin, Thursday and Friday, 15th and 16th insts., were spent at these points. Arriving at Franklin at about 1 o'clock p. m. we were met at the depot by Rev. Emperor Williams, our worthy and respected pastor there, who piloted the way to the parsonage, where we were welcomed by Sister Williams to the hospitalities of their sunshiney Christian home. To spend a day and a night with Bro. Williams, who had many times in years gone by, spent days and nights with us, when he was our presiding elder, was, to us, a source of blessed inspirations. To say our call was pleasant is to faintly express our gratification. At night, we met a goodly number of Bro. Williams' members and preached a short sermon to his appreciative congregation. Here we were pleased to meet Messrs. F. W. Liggins, and J. B. Verdun, friends and school mates of former days, and now respectively the talented editor and publisher of the St. Mary's Herald. Mr. Verdun is also the clerk of the court of the parish, and from the murmuring breezes we could hear that he is very apt to be his own successor at the next State election. Mr. Liggins is also popularly mentioned as a candidate for legislative honors. Upon invitation, we visited the office of the Herald, and Mr. Verdun's pleasant home and interesting family. The one is the picture of successful enterprise, the other of family happiness. We did not get to see Mrs. Liggins, who is also a former school mate, as she was then on a visit to the Crescent City. The St. Mary's Herald is one of our best country exchanges. Long may it live to do credit and command financial success [illegible] its editor and publisher. Here we [illegible] the pleasure of an introduction to Rev. Font Le Roy, the able and successful pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, who desired to be kindly remembered to Bro. Cushman, editor of the SOUTHWESTERN. [illegible] In fact, many of our people are doing exceedingly well in this [illegible]. Nearly all of them own their own homes in this town, and [illegible] hundreds [illegible] thousands of acres [illegible] [illegible] clerk of the court, [illegible] Friday 16th, after about fifteen minutes ride on the Morgan's La. & Texas R. R. train, we were at [illegible] which is about [illegible] miles above Franklin. Rev. [illegible] Lyon, our pastor here, and Prof. G. W. Wells, Principal of LaTeche Seminary, met and escorted us from the depot to the parsonage. Our reception here was most abundant. Bro. Lyon, Prof. Wells, and Dr. W. D. Godman, President of LaTeche Seminary, had each prepared for our entertainment. This was by far an excess over anything one experiences in the backwoods appointments on some of the backwoods districts. But why this comparison? It is inapplicable, for Baldwin is not a backwoods settlement, neither it is on such a district, but rather is one of the most picturesque, intelligent and lively little villages, stretching out along the banks of the classic Teche, and belongs to the South New Orleans district. As one gazes upon the enchanting sceneries that surround him here, he does not wonder at the inspiration with which Longfellow was overshadowed, in the production of his celebrated Evangeline which immortalizes this section. In this [illegible], overlooking the beautiful Teche are the La Teche Seminary, under Dr. Godman and Prof. Wells, and the Baldwin Seminary under Prof. Fitch. Both of these institutions, including over 500 acres of land, the gift of Father John Baldwin to the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, are engaged in the education of the two races. Dependent, however, almost entirely upon local support, their wonderful possibilities are as yet, scarcely in process of measurable development. The good work that has been accomplished, notwithstanding existing difficulties and embarrassments, however, is highly gratifying, and creditable to all concerned. There is much yet to be done for these schools, to derive from them the good that they were intended, and are calculated to do. No agency, in our opinion, is better prepared to secure these results than the Freedmen's Aid Society through its liberal support and supervision. The interests concerned certainly deserve its care. Arriving here on Friday, after school hours, we did not get to see the schools, but were informed that they are well attended, especially is this the case with LaTeche Seminary. We rather drifted away from what we meant to say of our entertainments here. What we wanted to say, was that they were so ample we could not do full justice to any of them. Suffice it to say, that the time of our short, but enjoyable visit, was divided as best we could in accepting the munificent hospitalities of Bro. Lyon, Prof. Wells and Dr. Godman. The first two brethren, having not long since married charming Christian ladies, we found still enjoying their happy honey moons. How could one fail to enjoy the hospitalities of such homes? Saturday noon 17th inst., dinner was provided for us at Dr. Godman's. His home is an attractive and pleasant one. His services and those of his devoted wife and daughter in the education of our people, commend them to their kindly considerations, and they are appreciated for their work's sake. A short visit was also made to Father Baldwin, who lay sick at his home. We listened to the story of his life and benevolences for the cause of Christian education with much interest. He assured us that he was not discouraged in his efforts for the education of our people. Baldwin and LaTeche Seminaries, he said he carried on his heart. He has contributed some of his resources toward them, and he assured us that he had some more resources which he yet intends to contribute toward their future development. He said with tears of earnestness in his eyes: "Bro. Albert, notwithstanding many discouragements, I intend by the help of the Lord, to build up a moral lighthouse in this place which shall lighten up this whole section. I shall stand by both the LaTeche and Baldwin Seminaries." The writer concluded this short conference with prayer, which was joined in by Bro. Lyon, Prof. Wells and Sister Baldwin. An hour pleasantly spent here and at Dr. Godman's, and we were off on the train for Alexandria the seat of our first quarterly conference on this round.

"There's No Place Like Home."

These words I have quoted from a short piece of poetry written by John Howard Payne, a native of New York, who died in Northern Africa 30 years ago, and whose remains were quite recently brought to the United States and re-buried, and a monument was erected to his memory. Great honors were paid to him just because he had written eight little lines of poetry that had touched the people's hearts, and because they were true. The poetry, which has been set to appropriate music, is a familiar song everywhere, and it will be sung as long as the world exists, and no doubt the glad refrain, "Home, Sweet Home," will be taken up in heaven, and its echoes will resound forever. The author of the beautiful song must have experienced what it was to have a happy home, though in after years he wandered far from it. "There's no place like home," refers to homes where there is order and neatness, where love exists and where God is worshiped. Home is a school where our faculties are first developed, and where we learn at our mother's knee to say "our Father." It is really the beginning and foundation of all that is good in life. Homes should be in a type of heaven. Happy homes do not come of themselves. They like everything else of much worth, are not obtained without being sought after. There is in them self-denial and forbearance to be practiced, and hard work to be done. In view of the importance of home life we ought to do all that we can to cherish it. There is where woman has a glorious field of usefulness. Great good can be done in the cause of missions and in the temperance cause, but woman's work in the home yields the richest harvest. We read in our religious papers much about building up churches and schools, and it is well, but too little attention is paid to building up homes. Perhaps it is because few of us appreciate the blessings already in our possession. The good nearest us seems commonplace, and we reach out for something not so familiar. If we did not so lightly esteem our privileges we would be thankful that God gives us work to do in which our heart can feel so deep an interest. I once heard a woman say that she could not do much for the Savior for she had so many children, and she had to work very hard. How little she realized the value of her work!

Homes, to be attractive, should be made cheerful, with plenty of pure air and sunshine in them. It is customary in some places for people to shut up their houses and keep them dark, to keep out dust and flies. They do not consider that dampness does more harm than dust, and as for the flies they love to revel in the pure air and bright sunshine, and will keep constantly flying in and out and around, but when the rooms are darkened they think it is night and they go to bed on gilt frames and lace curtains and the wall paper, and it is then they do their mischief. Bright sunshine keeps out disease and mental depression, and we need it. To make home cheerful it must be used, every part of it, and everything in it. Whenever any of our possessions are not made useful they cease to be a blessing. I knew a woman who had a nicely furnished house, but she kept her large parlors, that had in them beautiful pictures and ornaments, to be used only for guests, and she kept her own family in the dining room, which was dark and close. She thought it good enough for them, and it might have been if it had been the best she had. One would have thought that as she had made such provision for guests that she was very hospitable, but it was not so. I knew a home where they had a fine piano which was kept closed all of the time for fear that dust would get on the sounding board and injure the tone, and so it was scarcely ever used. It smelt mouldy and the wires were rusted and the tones were muffled. It needed to be used to gladden the home. I once saw in a home a large Bible in an oil silk bag, lying on a table. I thought I knew a better way than that to keep dust from the Bible. Many of us are just as unreasonable. We keep ourselves in a small enclosure, and how narrow we make our lives. If we do not fulfill the purpose of our being we mould and rust. There must be the freshness of activity about our homes, and good that will flow out of them to bless the world or they will become only imitations, with the life and warmth and brightness all gone. Happy homes are not made so by their surroundings.

"To the exile from home splendor dazzles in vain;
O, give me my lowly thatched cottage again,
If only the loved ones are there."

It is to them that our hearts turn though they may be in lowly cabins. Happiness may not be found where there is a great display of wealth. Such places, beautiful though they be, are often tombs where love is buried, and where pride and envy and hate are cherished, and where God does not dwell. It is not necessarily so, but special temptations always attend great possessions. Neatness and order should always be in a home, for dirty and disorderly people never respect themselves, and cannot well aspire to anything. I heard a woman say that she was trying to make her home pleasant for her children, and to keep everything neat and orderly, but living that way was not fashionable in her neighborhood and they called her "proud" and "stuck up." How true, that when people are determined not to do right, they try to make others like themselves. People often have wrong views of the duties of home life. There are those who think that to labor with one's hands is degrading, that to cook or wash or iron or to scrub a floor is menial, and no lady will do such things. That is a great mistake. It is a relic of slavery. It is a kind of slavery itself. There is nothing in this world degrading but sin, and there is nothing menial that we can do for the real good of others. Though a woman ought not to be ashamed of labor it is not her duty to do all the hard work for her family unless it is necessary. She may not be strong and there may be those around her whose duty it may be to bear some of the burdens for her. There must be common sense in a home as well as love to guide in such matters. If a woman is not able to go into her own kitchen and get an entire meal comfortably she lacks a great accomplishment. At all events she ought to know how to do it, for how can she guide her household without knowledge any more than a carpenter can build a house without knowing how to direct his workmen? I have lately read an article about the church having lost its power, and that it is not making headway against sin and crime as it ought. No doubt the church fails in much, but from whence come drunkards, and thieves, and murderers and ku klux? Not from the church, surely. If the homes of the good are types of heaven, their must be counterparts of that other place. It is in them that their evil passions are strengthened, and where little hearts are taught deceit, and infant lips are taught to lisp profane oaths. We cannot take up a daily paper without reading of robberies, and murders and hangings until our hearts are sick. What can stem the tide of evil? We who have happy homes, let us guard them well, and do our duty there. In the strength of the Lord let us bring up our children so that they may not swell the annals of crime. May the Lord keep us from making our homes merely places in which to eat, and sleep and exist. We may put our hand in God's and let Him guide and help us to raise the standard of home life so that better natures may be developed, and souls be saved, and sorrows lessened, and joys increased.

Our Foreign Letter.

England, in a religious sense, seems to be unable to get along without the aid of evangelists and temperance lecturers from the United States. We have no quarrel with this, but on the contrary consider that so long as these visitors are really needed and accomplish real and lasting good they should be cordially welcomed and encouraged. A colored member of the African Zion Church itinerated England in the interest of some college in your country, and the sum realized during his months of canvass was scarcely a fourth of the amount subscribed to sustain the meetings of Moody and Sankey in one of the districts of London. And this sum does not include the handsome boni that will be given to the men themselves. This expenditure is expected to be remunerative. These services are intended for those who never attend any place of worship, and who are outside the circle of all religions instruction; but in every city and town where they are held not one-fourth of those who attend them are of this class. The great majority are church and chapel goers. This may be questioned, but it is nevertheless true, proving clearly that the role of those two men, profitable to themselves and beneficial, no doubt, to thousands of Christians who attend their meetings, fails to reach and elevate those for whom it is professedly conducted.—Newman Hall gave much attention to the matter, and he expressed it as his opinion that the churches of London received no perceptible benefit from the first visit of these men to the metropolis, and Mr. Hall is himself an eminent and successful minister, and has for years done a vast amount of evangelistic work in London in addition to his regular labors as the pastor of an influential church. And he has well-known sympathy with such work, therefore his testimony is all the more reliable.

The Luther commemoration is exciting great and general interest. All the Protestant churches are uniting in it. Some Episcopalians condemn it, but they are ultra High and Ritualistic. The Presbyterians join in it con amore. Of all the churches organized in that great movement the Presbyterian was always the most Protestant. The Lutheran Church was, and is, virtually and practically Presbyterian; the Reformation Churches of Bohemia, France, Netherlands, are all distinctively Presbyterian. The only other great organization formed by the movement of the sixteenth century was the Episcopal or Prelatic Church of England. But this body and its dependencies in Ireland and America have first of all given up the doctrines of the Protestant Reformation, and then they discount and repudiate the name of Protestant itself. Methodism has part and lot in Luther. John Wesley owed something to [illegible] This is brought out into prominence now. Dr. Joseph W. McKay, President of the Methodist College, Belfast, read a paper at a public meeting in that town tracing the influence which Luther exerted over the mind of Wesley at a very important crisis in his history. Thus, did the influence of Wesley himself subsequently, Luther's influence was yet greater indirectly than directly. Indeed, this may be said of all truly great men who were born and called to originate and lead religious movements, either reformatory or revivalistic.

JUNIUS.

Boston Letter From "S. L. G."

Monday, Nov. 19, was a red-letter day for Boston Methodism. We had it in our hearts to give Bishop Foster the first and the most hearty welcome home that could be extended to him when he landed on these shores from his trip around the world, but official duties in connection with six fall conferences held by him called him at once to the West. Then the semi-annual meeting of the missionary board and the bishop's meeting held him in New York, until it really looked as though all enthusiasm in regard to the matter might stagnate before we could find any chance to give it expression. But on last Monday evening we secured his presence at the lower hall of Boston university building, where an elegant supper was spread and over 300 persons were seated, with the bishop in their midst, to enjoy a representative family reunion and express our joy in having him at home with us again. Mr. Thos. Green, president of the Boston Methodist Social union, introduced the post-prandial exercises in a neat speech, and then called upon Rev. V. A. Cooper, president of the Boston preacher's meeting, to make the formal address of welcome. Bro. Cooper expressed, in a very pleasant manner, the delight felt by the Methodist people of Boston and vicinity in welcoming home our bishop. We esteem him very highly for his wealth of character and for his work's sake. The bishop gave a very interesting sketch of his travels and excited in us a deep interest in the people of India, China, and the East, whose great needs he vividly portrayed. The reception was very enthusiastic, and must impress the bishop that he has a very warm place in the hearts of Boston Methodists. There is no bishop of the entire board who would be more welcome to us than he, and it is with special pleasure that we learn of his appointment to preside at the next session of our annual conference.

We are having a very lively [illegible] cussion in our [illegible] on the question of [illegible] and churches [illegible] states. The question [illegible] interest to us in the [illegible] conference [illegible] this subject. We believe [illegible] no time to compromise our long established principles on this subject. We insist that no part of the funds contributed for the support of schools in the south shall be appropriated to any institution which recognizes distinctions in its privileges on account of [illegible]. We regard any such distinction as anti-scriptural and anti-Methodistic. We can but regard it as a misappropriation of funds to take any part of the money raised for the support of Freedman's Aid society and appropriate it to the support of any school or schools from which Freedmen are excluded.

We will ask the General conference at its next session to withdraw the support of the church from any school which denies equality of manhood and equality of rights of all men to an education within its walls. The Methodist church has a record in her work of uplifting the despised race and the lowly class of the south of which we may well be proud, and why at this late day, after twenty years of struggle on that line, should we consent to do what we would not have thought of doing at the close of the war? I, with many other church members, went through the struggle and dangers of the three years of army life to secure equality for all men under the flag of our country. That country has guaranteed the colored man an equal chance; why then should the holy Methodist church now take a position below that occupied by the general government in relation to race privileges and distinctions? We protest, and believe that there are not white people enough in all the south, if they should come over to our church bodily, to compensate us for the disgrace of having it said truthfully that the Methodist Episcopal church owns a part even in any church, school, college or university in all the south to which a colored man or woman is not welcome. We are not yet willing to sell our principles in this matter at the demand of prejudice. We ought not to be a party to the establishment of exclusive schools where the colored man's skin shall admit or reject him, and we believe there are no circumstances which can make it right for us to submit to such anti-scriptural distinction. The narrowest line we can consent to have drawn about any institution established by the Methodist Episcopal church is that of the New Testament: "Whosoever will let him come." We are told that we must yield to circumstances and recognize the fact that the white people of the South will not come to our schools [illegible] colored people to [illegible] as though we were [illegible] bound [illegible] bey and say this [illegible] only [illegible] God [illegible]

Annual Meeting of the Board of Education.

The annual meeting of the Baord of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, held in New York Nov. 21, was an occasion of peculiar interest. From the reports of the Corresponding Secretary and the Treasurer the following facts appeared: The receipts of the financial year, just closed, from Church and Sunday school collections, legacies, special donations, and the repayment of loans, reached the handsome amount of $83,718. As compared with that class of receipts for the year ending in 1882, the advance was $14,091.86, and $30,639.18 as compared with [illegible] 1880. Of the receipts [illegible] $28,000 were credited to the Children's Day collections, as compared with $15,000 the previous year. [illegible] incident of special significance and interest was stated in the fact that a lady, during the current week, had paid in the sum of $1,000 to endow a fund in memory of a deceased son.

As a result of the growing liberality of the Church and its friends toward the objects of the Board, the Treasurer will be enabled to report to the coming General Conference an aggregate investment of more than $150,000 in the joint funds committed to his charge. It deserves to be remembered that the aggregate of these funds in 1868 was only $65,829, and that since 1873 the Board has disbursed in aid of students not less than $86,000.

Much encouragement was derived from the fact that nearly all of the Annual Conferences of the Church had recently passed favorable, and, in many instances, enthusiastic resolutions welcoming the Board to its proper place among the great connectional agencies of the Church.

On the recommendation of a committee appointed a year ago, it was resolved to request the General Conference to authorize such a modification of the Charter as will allow of the future direct appropriation of such a proportion of the annual offerings to the Children's Fund as may be necessary to provide suitably for the aid of all properly recommended students.

For that object during 1884, an appropriation was made of $10,000, together with all amounts that may be received from the repayment of loans, and from special donations or deposits for the purpose named.

The following officeres were appointed for the ensuing year, namely: President, Bishop Simpson; Recording Secretary, the Rev. J. W. Lindsay; Corresponding Secretary, the Rev. D. P. Kidder; Treasurer, O. Hoyt.

N. B.—Although the financial year has closed, any additional remittances sent in by the middle of December will be credited in the Report for 1884. Those arriving later will be officially receipted at once, but not sure to be acknowledged in the regular Children's Day Report before 1885.

Over-Worked Business Men.

As a restorer of exhausted nerve force, it has been largely shown during the past thirteen years that the new Vitalizing Treatment dispened, by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 Girard street Philadelphia, Pa. is the most prompt and efficient agent yet discovered by the medical profession. Its use by over-worked business and professional men would save many hundreds of lives every year, and give to thousands more the ability to work without the weariness, exhaustion, and peril which now attend them. A pamphlet containing full particulars in regard to the nature and action of this remarkable Treatment, will be mailed free. Write for it.

TRUST AND WAIT.

BY ANNA HOLYOKE HOWARD.

Art thou sore distressed and weary?
Trust and wait.
Does the way seem long and dreary?
Trust and wait.
Still unseen One's close beside thee,
Who will let no harm betide thee,
Through all ills still safely guide thee.
Trust and wait.

Is thy dearest treasure taken?
Trust and wait.
Sad thy heart but not forsaken,
Trust and wait.
All in love the blow was given
But to mould the heart thus riven
For a sweeter bliss in Heaven.
Trust and wait.

Do thy friends misapprehend thee?
Trust and wait.
Do thine enemies offend thee?
Trust and wait.
Give thou love for hate full measure,
Hearts are God's to mould at pleasure,
He will give thee richer treasure,
Trust and wait.

Two Foolish Quarrels.

Years ago there was published a little story about a man who found a horse-shoe. On being asked by a neighbor why he was so careful to save an old horse-shoe, he replied that he might find its three fellows, and then he might find the horse who cast them.

"And what will you do then?" inquired the neighbor.

"Why, I will build a stable for him," was the reply.

"No you won't," answered the curious neighbor. "Your horse might kick my children, and so I won't have a stable near my house."

"Yes, you will, if I choose to build one," came back the angry response. And they began to fight.

The story, which was published to show that quarrels frequently arise from imaginary trifles, has found its justification in a real occurrence, which is thus reported by a paper published in Alsace, Germany.

Two peasant farmers had been to a jolly country festival which lasted all day. One was about to walk home and the other the drive home, when the latter offered his neighbor a seat in his wagon.

It was somewhat late, and both had drunk pretty freely of a local wine more remarkable for its strength than for its flavor. The sky was intensely clear, and the two men sat silent for some time gazing at the stars, and apparently absorbed in their contemplation of nature.

At last one gave the other a thrust, and odserved, "Sepp, I will tell the all I want—just one meadow as big as the firmament over yonder."

"And I," returned Sepp, "will tell thee all I want—just as many cows and sheep as there are blinking stars up there."

"Thou stupid donkey!" observed his friend, "what could a man do with so many cows and sheep? The world would never grow fodder enough for them all."

"Ay, that may be," said the other, with a shrewd look, "but I should drive them into thy big meadow."

"That thou sholdst never do, Sepp; not a hoof of anybody else's cattle should tread upon it."

Sepp declared that he should contest the dog-in-the-manger claims of his neighbor, asserting that heaven belonged to everybody, and that a pasture as big as heaven would be a gigantic common.

The two men, who were usually the best of friends, passed from words to blows in their absurd vindication of the rights of property on the one side and the privilege of trespass on the other.

The conflict ended by the owner of the wagon being knocked out of his own vehicle. This led to a complaint before a local court; and the conversation in the cart at midnight was reproduced as part of the evidence.

When You are in Trouble

Don't be dismal! Your liver is torpid, perhaps, and you may be said to be bilious. The way to help you out of the difficulty is to take Brown's Iron Bitters, which sets disordered livers at work in good style.

Don't be cross and angry! Your digestion is bad, and that upsets your disposition. If you will try Brown's Iron Bitters, you will find the digestive difficulties driven away in short order.

Don't be despondent! You are weak because your blood is thin, and you cannot face trouble, or think you cannot. Brown's Iron Bitters will put iron into your circulation, enriching the blood, making it a royal red color, and giving you the strength you need.

The troubled, the weary, the despondent, the nervous, the debilitated and the bilious find rest, repose, refreshment, and reconstruction in the use of that prince of Tonics, Brown's Iron Bitters. The druggist charges a dollar a bottle for it. 10

Christianity is not a mere abstraction about which men theorize and speculate, but a system of divine and saving truth that comes home to men's hearts and transforms them by its power. While it enlightens the mind, it purifies the heart, and regulates the life of every one who sincerely embraces it.

Physicians Prescribe in Epilepsy.

"I prescribe it in my practice," is the expression used by Dr. J. A. Patmore, of Riley, Ind. He referred to Samaritan Nervine, and further along says: "It cures epileptic fits."

As the sun does not wait for prayers and incantations before he rises, but straightway shines forth, and is hailed of all: so do not wait to do good for applause and noise and praise, but do it of your own desire; and, like the sun, you will be loved.—Epictetus.

The N. Y. Medical Journal says: "The indorsements of numerous medical men of prominence also indicate that Liebig Co's Coca Beef Tonic has merits." Cures dyspepsia, biliousness, malaria, debility.

The Sun.
NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million of copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife, or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without the waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

L. P. CUSHMAN, Editor.
A. E. P. ALBERT, D. D., Assistant.

THURSDAY, DEC. 13, 1883.

1884. 1884.

Eight or Ten Thousand

Subscribers Wanted.

To all Pastors and Members of the M. E. Church in the Southern States:

It is clearly discerned by all active workers for the church that a strong, vigorous church paper is required, at a central point, to direct the way for success on the line of pure Christian and Wesleyan principles, and by recording the facts of current history, and giving attention to the wishes of the membership, to assist the Church and Christianity in general.

We are trying to make the Southwestern all that our friends have a right to expect, or that we could desire; but we must remind you that your diligent and steady co-operation is absolutely needed to increase our circulation, give us a living support, and to permit us to convey to you each week, in a convenient form, glad tidings from all the fields of labor.

The SOUTHWESTERN is the only official paper of the Methodist Episcopal Church South of the Ohio River, as it has been adopted by special vote in seven annual conferences, and circulates in all the Southern States. While the paper now visits thousands of homes each week, there are thousands of others in which it might be placed, as the pastor's assistant and advocate of the church, by a very little effort on the part of its friends.

Begin at once. Send in single subscriptions, lists of five, ten, fifteen, twenty-five, fifty and seventy-five. We rely upon pastors as our agents, but live Methodists everywhere should feel an interest, and send their money right on; and especially from points where pastor's visits are few and far between.

Only FOUR CENTS A WEEK, or TWO DOLLARS A YEAR, is an amount within the means of all. Let us hear from you. Specimen copies sent on application.

Address PHILLIPS & HUNT,
38 Natchez Street, New Orleans.

Our Conference statistics are improving every year. Let no backward step be taken this year. Prepare them now.

Next year, the Centennial of Methodism, will be an epoch in our church history. The General Conference [illegible] next May, and the presidential election takes place next Fall. If you want to keep well informed you had better subscribe for the SOUTHWESTERN.

An effort is being made to secure the pardon of the thirty-three colored men convicted in Howard County, Arkansas, for murder in the [illegible] degree, because of alleged participation in a riot. [illegible] in Arkansas say their [illegible] was an outrage, and a perversion of the forms of law to [illegible] unworthy ends. We [illegible] they will move discreetly in the matter, and place before the [illegible] all possible evidence in favor of the prisoners.

It is pleasing to read in connection with the various temperance [illegible] in South Carolina, [illegible] the local option law, the following extract from a press telegram: "In this crusade against [illegible] the colored people are arrayed on the side of temperance [illegible] rendered most efficient [illegible]. The colored churches and [illegible] societies are fighting [illegible] with a zeal that is remarkable, and in their efforts have the [illegible] support of the best people [illegible] State."

Notes.

One of the pleasant things in our visits to the Annual Conferences, is the meeting of old friends, and the formation of new acquaintances. At the Texas Conference we were pleased to meet Rev. W. B. Rankin, Agent of the American Bible Society, for the State of Texas. Dr. Rankin is a good Presbyterian, but a better Christian. He believes in the Bible, and is devoted to his work. You will never find the Dr. without David's lamp. During the last canvass that was made in the State 207,733 families were visited; of these 34,323 had no part of the Bible in their homes, 31,180 families were supplied, besides 16,501 destitute individuals. 24,564 copies of the Bible were donated to the poor. In his work Dr. Rankin is like Paul, who had not attained but was ever attaining. May God's blessing rest upon him in his work.

We also had the pleasure of meeting Rev. Bro. Elkins one of the presiding elders, in the Arkansas Conference. Bro. Elkins appears an honest, earnest, devoted Christian minister. He certainly occupies an important position in the church.

To certain brethren of the Texas Conference who hoped to be appointed presiding elders, but were not we can groan out but a little sympathy. Bishop Andrews doubtless felt the embarrassment. But the Bishop doubtless did the best he could, he did not have districts enough to accommodate all brethren who were anxious to serve the church as presiding elders.

While at the Texas Conference, we had a pleasant home with Taylor Mooore. We had for our genial companion F. O. Moore, presiding elder of the Houston District. Our host is an honored member of the Texas Conference, and has for his present field of labor Paris Circuit. He is one of the young men of the conference, but he has built more churches and received more persons into the church since he united with the conference, than any other member of the conference. In all of our conferences there are certain men who are so anxious to get into better places that they do absolutely nothing where they are. Bro. Moore does not belong to this generation of preachers. He gives his time, and energy to the present. During the past year he has built three nice churches on the Paris Circuit, and has fifty dollars in hand towards the erection of the fourth. His life is correct, he pays his debts, his preaching is such that wears, and few men draw larger congregations.

Intelligence from Cental Louisiana reports quite a general shortage in crops in that section. In consequence of this general failure many farmers and small planters have come out in debt this year; and now the Constables and Sheriffs are all kept busy seizing and selling for creditors, the cotton, corn, horses, cows, and in some cases even the hogs and fowls of unfortunate debtors. In some instances this seizing business looks almost like a judgment. What these poor people will do to feed themselves, on their rented land, and small farms for which they are paying, until the promise of another crop is assured, can scarcely be imagined. If crop failures and consequent executions for debts, many of which are often needless and extravagant, have the effect to induce our people to repudiate the credit system, save their earnings, live within their means, and adopt habits of temperance and economy, they shall after all prove to be blessings in disguise.

Members of Louisiana Conference, have you collected all of your subscription which you promised to raise for the Gilbert Haven School of Theology? Conference is coming on. Get to work. Delay is fatal.

Religious Papers and Politics.

The editor of the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is warming up to political discussion, in pretty fair order. Better leave that business where it belongs, and take an occasional tilt with his majesty, Beelzebub.—Central Methodist.

About once a year our church South contemporary in the benighted State of Kentucky, laboring under the hallucination that he is an unbiased critic, throws off a paragraph like the above. In this way he contributes the weight of his influence in behalf of dishonest election practices, lynching parties, and KuKlux raids, for it is our condemnation of those arts of Beelzebub, which he chooses to term "political discussion." Two or three centuries ago the practice of criminals seeking refuge within the pale of the church fell into disuse and the information ought to have reach the interior of Kentucky before this. But as a tender admonition to our weak and misguided brother, we refer him to the following extract from the St. Louis Christian Advocate, a paper of his own church:

But some men will say "a religious paper should have nothing to say, or do, with these things." That cry has grown stale. A religious paper has to do with all matters that involve the real and permanent interests of the people, whether they be questions of political economy, sociology, morality, or purely religious; and one reason why some professedly religious papers have such a meager support and eke out such a miserable existence is, they confine themselves to the narrow limits of their own sects and with a great deal of twaddle, substantially repeat the same things over and over again, without taking a broad, comprehensive view of any thing. With what is known as partisan politics a religious paper should have nothing to do, but, with those great principles that lie at the foundation of the civil government, and those sound principles of political economy on which the peace and prosperity of a nation of individuals depend, the religious press has much to do, and should always be prepared in the fear of God and the love of mankind, to do its part wisely and well.

The report of the statistical secretary showed an increase in members and benevolent collections, and a decrease in church debts. M. A. Daugherty was elected clerical, and W. D. Knowles lay delegate to General Conference. During the session a preacher's aid society was organized. A. M. Gillet, was present, and under his direction the conference was organized into a Sunday-school Union. On Sunday the Bishop preached with great power to a crowded house. On Monday the session closed. Proceedings of the Texas Conference.

The eighteenth annual session of the Texas Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church began Nov. 28th, in the Methodist Episcopal Church in the city of Paris.

The conference was called to order by Bishop E. G. Andrews, D.D., at nine a. m. Religious services were conducted by the Bishop who briefly addressed the conference congratulating the members upon their re-assembling once more. He was happy to meet the brethren who had done good work in the vineyard of the Master.

The Secretary of the last year's conference, called the roll, and nearly all the members were present to respond.

C. C. Minnegan was elected Secretary of this conference. W. Wesley assistant, and E. Lee, statistical secretary.

The usual committees were ordered. As the work had become so large and extended, a committee on the division of the conference was also ordered.

Various papers were presented and referred, and W. B. Pullam, presiding elder of Huntsville District, reported his work. Bro. Pullam had closed four years of hard and successful on the district. Under his administration, the church property and membership had increased over fifty per cent.

Various notices were given, and the conference adjourned with the benediction.

SECOND DAY.

Thursday, Nov. 29th. Conference resumed its session this morning at nine o'clock. Bishop Andrews in the chair.

Religious services were conducted by O. Watrous.

W. S. Molloy, presiding elder of Marshall district, reported a year of prosperity.

M. H. Nichols, presiding elder of the Navasota district reported that at certain points on his district, mob violence had prevailed, his own life had been threatened. At one time the house where he was stopping was surrounded by a mob. Every effort possible was made to induce him to come out of the house, they continued till long after midnight, when they retired. But with all of these unpleasant things the general interest of the church had improved.

Walter Ripetoe, presiding lder of Palestine District, had served on this district four years, under embarrassing circumstances. When he was appointed to the district, they had but few churches, and most of them were poor, but there had been good improvement in the number and quality of the churches, and a large increase in the membership. After the announcement of the various meetings connected with the conference, the body adjourned, Bishop Andrews pronouncing the benediction.

THIRD DAY.

Friday, Nov. 30th. Conference resumed its session at 9 o'clock, Bishop Andrews presiding.

Religious services were conducted by Walter Ripetoe.

F. O. Moore, presiding elder of the Houston district, reported the acquisition of twelve new pieces of property. St. Paul, Galveston had built a nice church. Pressing debts had been paid, church property improved, and a large increase in the membership. The outlook was full of promise.

FOURTH DAY.

Saturday, Dec. 1st. Conference assembled at 9 o'clock, Bishop Andrews presiding.

Religious services conducted by G. W. Smith.

Certain men noted for their inefficiency were granted a supernumerary relation, and respectfully requested to locate next year. This is a step in the right direction. The mere boss seems just now to be at a discount. The people begin to see through the veil of sham piety. Good men are coming to the front. Purity is mightier than impurity. The people are inclined to investigate the character of men. Nothing but ultimate defeat and disgrace awaits bad men, while honor places unfading laurels on the brows of the good.

The hour of ten was fixed for the election of delegates to the General Conference. On the first bellow, W. B. Pullam was elected; on the fourth, W. Wesley was elected; and M. H. Nichols, and F. O. Moore reserve delegates.

W. B. Rankin, D.D., agent of the American Bible Society, was introduced and addressed the conference, making special reference to David's lamp as the one great need of men in this world of sin and darkness.

Conference adjourned with the benediction to meet at half past two.

Conference assembled according to adjournment, Bishop Andrew presiding. L. P. Cushman offered prayer. Dr. Webb presented the report on Periodicals, strongly endorsing the SOUTHWESTERN, and pledging the hearty co-operation in increasing its circulation among the people.

I. B. Scott, conference treasurer submitted his report, which showed exactness and care.

Various reports were presented eliciting more or less discussion.

Announcement of the various meetings for the Sabbath were made and the conference adjourned until eight o'clock Monday morning.

Sabbath morning the weather was unexceptionably pleasant. The crowds attending church could not find a standing place. The conference love feast was a golden hour for the children of God.

Bishop Andrews preached at 11 a. m., and ordained the deacons. Few men excell the Bishop in the pulpit; he is rated as one of the most effective preachers in the church; the sermon on this occasion was exact, terse and powerful. Monday morning when conference assembled, tenderness seemed to linger in the tones of all the preachers who heard him.

At half past two o'clock B. F Williams preached an excellent sermon. after which elders were ordained.

At seven o'clock, P. Morgan preached a sermon full of Gospel truth.

Fifth day, Monday December 3d, conference assembled at eight o'clock, Bishop Andrews presiding

The Statistical Committees presented their report. One or two other committees reported. After which the Bishop briefly addressed the conference and read the appointments, as follows:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PERIODICALS.

Having examined the annual exhibit of the Book Concern we are glad to report that the footing indicates progress, and gives evidence of good management, while the aggregate circulation of the periodicals, as exhibited in the report, is very gratifying. The intellectual and moral influence of our Periodical literature in the homes of our people is beyond estimate. We think that every pastor ought to take and read at least two of our weekly papers, one Eastern and one Southern, and as many as are able would do a wise thing to take and read the Quarterly Review. The local preachers and official members of the Church should not be without at least one of our Church papers, it is indispensable to their success and usefulness; and every family should have the weekly visitation of one of our Church papers. We are satisfied that the SOUTHWESTERN is the best of all our papers for our people, and would earnestly recommend the pastors to give it as extensive circulation as possible. We are also satisfied that the greater service of the paper, and its better adaptability to the growing needs of our people demand an editor to give his entire time to its management. We are highly pleased with its present tone, vigor and loyalty as manifest in its editorial department and management, and wonder how the editors can make such a paper with the other work required at their hands. We pledge to it our hearty support and co-operation, and ask the General Conference to elect the present editors to its management. We are highly pleased with the visitation of Rev. L. P. Cushman, editor of the SOUTHWESTERN, and Dr. Gillett, agent of the Sunday-school Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South and West, and pledge ourselves to use all our influence to introduce into all of our Sabbath.schools our Sunday-school literature.

There are about seven male and twelve female Indians of the Biloxi tribe, living near the Spring Creek settlement in the parish of Rapides. Only one of their number can read and write. They speak the Biloxi and Choctaw languages, together with English in broken accents. A few of them also speak the Spanish and French languages. They nominally profess the Roman Catholic faith, but never attend any church, and their children are growing up innocent of the right of baptism and the knowledge of Christian worship. From our informant, who is an Indian of this tribe, we learned that this remnant is now the only surviving colony of the once powerful tribe of Biloxi Indians.

Keep away from grog shops and drinking saloons. They are the antechamber, to the prisons' poorhouse, the penitentiaries; and hell and destruction.

Col. Fredrick T. Dent has retired from the army at his own request. First Lieutenant John M. Porter was dropped for desertion.

Nobody can duly measure the social and financial sacrifice by Dr. Fuller when he went into the the south to do the work in which he finally fell. The entire church and the nation owe him a debt, and thousands, we trust, will see that it is paid. This general obligation should be specifically met, and we look to see the present committee gladdened by early success. —John Griffin Carlisle, Speaker to the House of Representatives, was born in Campbell (now Kenton) County, Ky., Sept. 5, 1835. He resides at Covington. At an early age he became a public school teacher. His leisure time was employed in reading law, and when an opportunity favored, he entered an office at Covington and thoroughly qualified himself for admission to the bar. He was admitted in 1858, when 23 years of age, and has ever since devoted that portion of his time not given to public services, to the practice of his profession. In 1859 he was elected to the Kentucky House of Representatives. Nominated in 1864 as Presidential elector on the Democratic ticket, he declined the honor. In 1866 he was elected to the State Senate and again in 1869. He was present as a delegate at large at the National Democratic Convention held in New York City in 1868. His nomination for Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky in in 1871 caused him to resign his seat in the State Senate. He was elected in Aug. 1871, and served until September, 1875. He was Presidential elector at-large in 1876; was subsequently elected to Congress. Mr. Carlisle's "record" in Congress is that of an able and diligent man. He has traveled considerable of late as a member of the Congressional committee appointed to investigate the Mississippi River, with a view to the advancement of commerce.

A Great Day in Aberdeen.

DEAR EDITOR:—On Sunday morning, 25th inst., at 8.30 o'clock, the bell in the new church at Aberdeen began to ring for the first time. Great preparations had been made for the first services in the new church, and at the usual hour a large number of the Sabbath-school scholars had assembled. The Superintendent, F. G. Bumpass, read the lesson; the school then sang the song commencing, "Hark, the Voice of Jesus Calling," after which Rev. L. L. Pratt, of West Point, offered an earnest prayer. At the close of the school Elder J. M. Shumpert, of the Okolona district, introduced Rev. H. R. Revels, D.D., late President of Alcorn University. The Doctor then addressed the Sabbath-school in a most pleasing and instructive manner. At 11 o'clock Rev. W. H. H. Gallion, of Corinth, preached a very interesting sermon, which made a good impression upon the congregation. At 2 o'clock p. m. the large church was filled to overflowing with a large and intelligent congregation of the very best people of Aberdeen, colored and white, among whom we noticed was Mayor Love, Col. Reynols, Capt. Lee; and Mr. S. H. Berg, the architect who, having been invited, came forward and read the dimensions of the church. Dr. Revels then preached the dedication sermon from Revelation, 12th chapter 1st verse: "And there appeared a great woman in heaven, a woman clothed with the sun and the moon under her feet, and a crown of twelve stars upon her head." For about an hour the congregation was held completely spell-bound. The sermon was most eloquent, enlightening beautiful, and very appropriate for the occasion. It made an excellent impression upon the people. The Doctor, being in good health, it is said that he excelled himself upon this occasion. Elder J. M. Shumpert then read a part of the dedication ceremony, then the trustees presented the building to be dedicated to the service of Almighty God. Dr. Revels then read the declaration. After taking up a good collection the benediction was pronounced. At night a very large congregation again assembled, filling the church. The presiding elder of the district, J. M. Shumpert, preached the sacramental sermon, and being assisted by Revs. Revels, Gallion, Jamison and R. Williams, administered the Lord's Supper to 200 communicants. It certainly was a great day of rejoicing and giving praise to the Lord. Methodism is well founded in Aberdeen.

The following is a description of the church, built by the well-known contractor and builder, S. H. Berg: The audience room is 40 feet wide and 70 feet long; tower 12x12, recess 12x21; making the church in all 88 feet long. The walls are 20 feet high; the ceiling is 29 feet and 6 inches from the floor to the gatick; the tower is 83 feet high from first floor to top of spire; the main entrance door is 6x10; the two doors from the vestibule leading to the audience room are 5x10; the ten windows are 4 feet 2 inches wide by 13 feet and 2 inches high. Three windows in the rector's chamber are 2 feet, 11 inches by 8 feet 9 inches high. All the windows have outside blinds. There is one large blind in front of the tower in second story, giving light and ventilation to belfrey. The building cost $2,950, and the lot $450, making in all $3,400 besides the furniture. Rev. P. Jamison, the faithful pastor, has done his work well. Fraternally yours

Sojourner Truth

Sojourner Truth, the well-known colored lecturer, died at Battle Creek Mich., Nov 26th aged 108 years. For almost three-quarters of a century she delivered lectures from the East to the West upon temperance, politics, and the woman's rights question. She was born a slave, in the State of New-York, and spent the early part of her life—until 1817, when slavery was abolished in that —in hard work in the fields of her many masters. Her parents were brought from the coast of Guinea, and sold as slaves on arriving in the United States. Her real name—or that which had been given to her by her first master—was Isabella Hardenburg, but, becoming dissatisfied with it, it is said that she went out into a wilderness and prayed to the Lord to give her an appropriate name. After praying for some time she heard, she said, the name "Sojourner" whispered to her, as she was to travel "up and down," and afterward "Truth" was added to it to signify that she could preach nothing but truth to all men. Sojourner had a tall, masculine-looking figure—she was almost 6 feet high—and talked in a deep, guttural, powerful voice that made many people who heard her think that she was a man, and was imposing upon them by masquerading as a woman. She could neither read nor write, but on her lecturing tours took with her her grandson, who attended to her business affairs. Sojourner knew many prominent men—her favorite statesman being Abraham Lincoln—and her narratives and descriptions of those whom she had known showed that she had judged their characters exceedingly well. During her later life, or for the past 10 years, her avowed object in traveling around was to obtain names to a petition which she intended presenting to the Government, asking that a portion of the public lands in the West be set apart for the establishment of a negro colony, where she proposed that the negro youth should be educated.

Sojourner undoubtedly did a great deal of good work during her lifetime, for she was instrumental in reclaiming hundreds of men and women from a bad life, and by her own life set a splendid example to the colored population.

A special correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean writes:

She was born in Ulster County, N. Y., and her own date of that event was between the years 1797 and 1800. Her original name was Isabella, but, as she herself explained, when she left the house of bondage, she left everything connected with that life behind. She said she wanted to keep nothing of Egypt about her, and so asked the Lord to give her a new name. She believed her prayer was answered and that the Lord told her to take the name of Sojourner, because it should be her mission to travel up and down the land, showing the people their sins and being a "sign" to them.

She afterward wanted another name, because everybody had two names, and the Lord, she says, gave her that of Truth, because she was to declare the truth to the people.

Whatever we may believe of the revelation, certainly Sojourner Truth has fairly won the right to the name she chose for herself years ago, and none who ever heard her will doubt that she was a "sign" to the people, often encouraging the slaves and afterward the poor and oppressed freedmen to look for better times which would follow as they made themselves worthy of the confidence and help of the white people of the North.

Several years ago Sojourner visited Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe and gave her a history of her early days and conversion. She said her father, mother, and herself were brought over from Africa along with a lot more Negroes, and were sold "up and down, and hither and yon," and she could remember when a little child of seeing her "old mammy" sit out of doors in the evening and looking at the stars as she groaned over the thought of her children all being taken from her.

She grew up strong and could row a boat or ride a horse or work at almost anything. And at last she was sold to a hard master and mistress of whom she said:

"Oh, I tell you, they was hard! 'Peared like I couldn't please 'em, now how. An' then I thought o' what my old mammy told me about God; an' I wanted to find God, an' I heard some one tell a story about a man that met God on a threshin floor, an' I thought, 'Well an' good, I'll have a threshin' floor, too." So I went down in the lot, an' I threshes down a place real hard, an' I used to go down there every day an' pray an' cry with all my might, a-prayin' to the Lord to make my massa an' missis better, but it didn't seem to do no good; an' so says I, one day:

"O God, I been a askin' ye, an' askin' ye, for all this long time ,to make massa an' missis better, an' you don't do it, an' what can be the reason? Why, maybe you can't. Well, I shouldn't wonder of you couldn't. Well, now, I tell you, I'll make a bargain with you. Ef you'll help me to get away from my massa and missis I'll agree to be good; but ef you don't help me I really don't think I can be. Now,' says I. 'I want to get away but the trouble's jest here; ef I try to get away in the night I can't see, an' ef I try to get away in the daytime they'll see me an' be after me.'

'Then the Lord said to me, 'Git up two or three hours before daylight an' start off.'

"An' says I, 'Think'ee, Lord! that's a good thought.'

"So up I got, about 3 o'clock in the mornin' an' I started an' traveled pretty fast, till when the sun rose I was clear away from our place an' our folks, an' out o' sight. An' then I begun to think I didn't know nothin' where to go. So I kneeled down, and says I:

"Well Lord, you've starved me out, an' now please to show me where to go."

"Then the Lord made a house appear to me, an' He said to me that I was to walk on till I saw that house, an' then go in an' ask the people to take me. An' I traveled all day, an' didn't come to the house till late at night; but when I saw it, sure enough, I went in, an' told the folks that the Lord sent me, an' they was Quakers, an' real kind they was to me. They jes' took me in, an' did for me as kind as ef I'd been one of 'em; an' after they'd giv' me supper, they took me into a room where there was a great tall, white bed; an' they told me to sleep there. Well, honey, I was kind o' skeered when they left me alone with that great white bed; 'cause I never had been in a bed in my life. It never came into my mind they could mean me to sleep in it. An' so I jes' camped down under it, on the floor, an' then I slep' pretty well. In the mornin' when they came in, they asked me ef I hadn't been asleep; an' I said, Yes, I never slep' better.' An' they, said, 'Why, you haven't been in bed!' An' says I, 'Laws, you didn't think o' sech a thing as my sleepin' in dat 'ar bed, did you? I never heerd o' sech a thing in my life.

The sixty addresses are arranged topically, as follows:

COMFORT, NOT DISPLAY.—More plans for comfort and less expense for mere display is the reform needed in many of our American homes. BAKED BEEF'S HEART.—Wash a beef's heart in plenty of cold water, cut out the ventricles, and stuff the heart with the following forcemeat: Grate a cupful of stale bread, put it into a frying-pan containing two tablespoonfuls of butter made smoking hot, and stir it until it is brown; and then add a tablespoonful of grated onion, a level teaspoonful of salt a saltspoonful each of [illegible] and powdered thyme, as much boiling water as the [illegible] the yelk of [illegible] forcemeat well and stuff the heart with it; [illegible] a [illegible] enough to hold it, pour around it a cupful of cold gravy, broth, or water containing a tablespoonful of butter, season it highly with salt and pepper, and bake it for two hours in a moderate oven, basting it four or five times. CORN BREAD.—Corn bread without yeast or soda is sometimes desired as an article of food. Sift three quarts of meal, add a tablespoonful of salt, and mix with just enough water to make a thin batter. The Precious Tokens.

I have something Jesus gave me
For my own
It is something which He sent me
From His throne.

I do not seek for hidden gold
In earth's ground,
Nor give my wealth to gain the pearl
Which I found.

It is something which I carry
Near my heart;
It is safe till Jesus bids me
From it part.

In itself it has no value
More than tears,
Though I'm weary as I bear it,
I've no fears.

It is precious as a token
From my Lord,
That His heart-thought is as loving
As His word!

Like His presence, it doth bring me
Peace divine;
'Tis His sweet and tender whisper,
"Thou art Mine."

What is the gift I clasp so closely,
Wouldst thou see?
'Tis a cross, which Christ, my Master,
Sent to me.

If my human hand had found it,
I should grieve,
But my Jesus laid it on me,
I believe!

Oh, how sweet it is to bear it
As His gift,
While the burden of my treasure
Christ doth lift!

A Monsignor Not Ours.

At this time a distinguished Briton and a vigorous Romanist, Monsignor Capel, is visiting this country. He is fond of telling of his success in leading into the papal faith a large number of dukes, marquises, lords, baronets, chevaliers, and M. P.'s. Indeed, if his [de]tails are correct, he has in his fold the finest-wooled sheep of the kingdom, and he seems to be successful, generally, when he sets out on an expedition for a golden fleece. He is now in a land where titles and trappings count but little; but he dreams here, as at home, of the value of blue blood. In a recent lecture in New York city he is reported to have suggested that what the Roman Catholic church wants in this country is "a little higher social standing." It seems to be one of the objects of his visit to tone up Catholic society, and to fill with unaccustomed blood its clean, pure moral channels. Whether he will first address himself to the conversion of President Arthur, or begin with the surviving ex-presidents, or content himself with our more numerous brood of would-be presidents, does not yet appear. But as his efforts at home have chiefly been confined to those who were already great, either by rank or money, or by both, and as far as we know by nothing else, he may, most likely, look after our millionaires, whose wealth is ancestral. It is certain that money as well as rank is an element in the social standing aimed at, for even in the old country itself there is not a hundredth part as many of the decendants of Irish kings as can be found in America. Mgr. Capel does not recognize the nobility in them which serves when it can no longer rule, and which, like the insect commended by Solomon, counts its force by the numbers of its insignificant individuals.

Our illustrious visitor is right. His coreligionists ought to have "a higher social standing." Along our railways they "pick" their way and "wheel" in columns, but the standing of their "shovelry" is not high. Rome, which is the focus of the papacy, is probably the model after which he would reconstruct our rising cities. We should then have loyal dukes and nobles, palaces, cardinals, and unvisited libraries, but like the city of the seven hills we should also have its seven curses, viz; the poverty of the masses, their general ignorance, their systematic and shameless beggary, the low estimate of life which makes murder more common than anywhere else in Europe, forms without worship, government without representation, and a city with a history, but without a future. We fail to read of any of the converts of high standing achieved by Mgr. Capel who have employed themselves in opening the doors of distinction to the unlettered, littered, lower ten thousand. His system lacks in the wisdom that makes princes of beggars by moral elevation.

After all, in our monsignor's own church in this country, it is those of low social standing, or of none, who have made the chief potency and progress of their church. It is the weekly savings of Pat and Mike and Bridget that have built the churches, and fattened the priests, and carried up the cathedrals, and filled the treasuries of the bishops, and made monasteries rich. The leaders of the church have kept their people well in line, but they have reared in their cloisters the wolves that feed upon them; and few others than the wolves in woolen garments ever reach among them "a high moral standing."—Northwestern.

The defeat of Senator Mahone and his Readjuster party in Virginia would, among all honest men, be a matter for profound and unmingled satisfaction if it could be contemplated independently of the victory of the Bourbon Democrats in the same state. The simple truth is that Mahoneism in Virginia, notwithstanding its pretentions, regard for Negro rights, and notwithstanding all that from political motives it has done to protect these rights, was simply a scheme of ambitions and unscrupulous rascality, mainly under the inspiration and direction of one man. The repudiating law of 1882, enacted by a Readjuster legislature, settled the moral character of the party represented and controlled by the counsels of Senator Mahone. The political methods of the party were corrupt and corrupting to the last degree. The colored people who were drawn into it were injured and demoralized by their contact with it. Though pretending to be their friend, it did them vastly more harm than good, and used them to serve its own base purposes. The stupendous iniquities of the party find no offset in any incidental benefits. We have never supposed that a party so essentially corrupt could maintain its ascendancy for any considerable length of time, and are not at all disappointed at its downfall, or regretful over its fate. The defeat of Mahoneism in Virginia is, in itself considered, certainly one good thing done, and we wish we could add that the success of the Bourbon Democrats in that state is another good thing gained. The victorious party may, perhaps, learn something from the discipline of the past few years, and make for itself a better record, especially in its treatment of the colored people. Such we hope will be the fact. Political wisdom dictates that Bourbon Democracy, now that it has succeeded in the overthrow of Senator Mahone, should commend itself to the colored people by a proper regard for their rights; and that it should wipe out the foul stain upon the statute-book of the stat, by at once repealing the repudiating acts of 1882. If it shall do this, it will act wisely and deserve the respect of mankind. It now has the future in its own hands.—New York Independent.

"I move," said a delegate in a Virginia convention, "that our chairman take a dose of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, he is so hoarse that I cannot understand him." That gentleman had no doubt tried this wonderful medicine.

Slavery was a great evil, and was entrenched in defenses which had been building through the ages, and were thought to be impregnable. But it perished. Intemperance also has its bulwarks, and it is thought by many that it can not be extirpated. But it must and shall be overthrown by the efforts of true men, and the blessing of God.

Who has not seen the fair, fresh young girl transformed in a few months into the pale, haggard, dispirited woman? The sparkling eyes are dimmed, and the ringing laugh no more. Too often the cause are disorders of the system which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" would remedy in a short time. Remember, that the "Favorite Prescription" will unfailingly cure all "female weaknesses," and restore health and beauty. By all druggists. Delicate and Feeble Ladies.

Those languid, tiresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its former elasticity, driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain are permanently removed. None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women.

Feels Young Again.

"My mother was afflicted a long time with neuralgia and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system; headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters with such good effect that she seems, and feels young again, although over 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A lady, in Providence.

BRADFORD, PA., May 8, 1875.

It has cured me of several diseases, such as nervousness, sickness at the stomach, monthly troubles, etc. I have not seen a sick day in a year, since I took Hop Bitters. All my neighbors use them.

MRS. FANNIE GREEN.

$3,000 Lost.—"A tour of Europe that cost me $3,000, done me less good than one bottle of Hop Bitters; they also cured my wife of 15 years' nervous weakness, sleeplessness, and dyspepsia."

R. M., Auburn, N. Y.

High Authority.

Hop Bitters is not, in any sense, an alcoholic beverage or liquor, and could not be sold for use except to persons desirous of obtaining a medical bitters.

Green B. Raum, U. S. Com. Inter'l Rev.

So. Bloomingville, O., May 1, 1879.

SIRS.—I have been suffering ten years, and I tried your Hop Bitters, and it done me more good than all the doctors.

MRS. S. S. BOONE.

Baby Saved!

We are so thankful to say that our nursing baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted constipation and irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength.—The Parents, Rochester, N. Y.

A Friend's Advice To The Democrats.

The objectionable feature of the civil rights decision is that it reopens a question that was settling itself without the least friction. The decision, being in accord with the strict construction of the Constitution, is gratifying to all citizens who believe in the doctrine of State rights. The States, however, can re-enact the vital principles of the Civil Rights bill, and it is to be hoped they will do so as speedily as possible. Let the Democratic Legislature of Ohio lead off. The people have already approved the spirit of the Civil Rights bill by acquiescing in its provisions. Let the color question be finally and forever disposed of, so far as it can be by legislation, and let Ohio and other Democratic States lead off in the the work. The country does not desire a revival of race issues. The colored people do not desire it. There are larger questions to be disposed of. Let the Democratic Legislatures of the country take the lead in putting upon the statute-books of their respective States the just features of the Civil Rights law that has just been declared unconstitutional by a Republican supreme bench. The principles involved in the law are just and right. The country has already made vast strides toward adjusting the race question upon the basis of those principles. Whether the law is re-enacted as a State law or not, the pocket interest will continue to break down the barriers erected by blind and ignorant prejudices. It is unwise, therefore, to leave open a question that public opinion desires to be taken out of politics finally and forever.—Evansville (Ind.) Courier, Oct. 19.

MR. EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my mother's relatives whom she left in Perry county, Alabama, about 1841. Her father's name was Simon Clark and was owned by a Mr. Clark. Her father was a first-class blacksmith and a fiddler. It was said that he could read and write. Her mother's name was Patient. Her sisters and brothers were Harriet, Leanda, Epsie, Creasie, Frank, William, Taylor, and Albert. Albert was sold to a Mr. Daniel Owens and carried to Texas. Mother was taken away from her parents when four years old and carried to Neshoba county, Miss. She was then carried to Enterprise, Miss., where I now reside. Any information in regard to any of their whereabouts will be gladly and thankfully received by me.

DEAR EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my uncle Pharah, who belonged to Michael Gilbert; also Plato. We are from Barnwell county, South Carolina. My father is here with me; his name is Sam Thickland; he used to go by the name of Sanko Gilbert. Plato used to live 15 miles below Alexandria, La., where he was sold to John McGee. TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

HE FEELS LIKE A NEW MAN.

"I have had Dyspepsia, with Constipation, two years, and have tried ten different kinds of pills, and TUTT'S are the first that have done me any good. They have cleaned me out nicely. My appetite is splendid, food digests readily, and I now have natural passages. I feel like a new man." W. D. EDWARDS, Palmyra, O.

Plantation Melodies
—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed and are now given for the first time, with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved, and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand, I like it."—Dr. B. S. Hunt. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. R. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER. LESSON XI. Dec. 16th. DAVID SPARING HIS ENEMY. (Sam xxiv, 1—17.)

After David and Jonathan parted from each other, David's life was full of trouble. He lived in caves and among the rocks, on the mountains, but Saul came after him and he to had fly from one spot to another. One day, while he was hunting him, Saul went into a cave to sleep. He did not dream that David was there, but David was in that very spot. David's friends wanted him to kill Saul while he slept. but David would not touch him. Saul wanted to kill David, but David would not do him any wrong, so he cut off the lower part of Saul's robe to let him know he had been near him, but did not hurt him. Then David crept away, and when Saul left the cave he went after him, and Saul heard his voice and saw him, knew how kind he had been to spare his life. Then David spoke to Saul and asked the Lord to judge between them. Saul heard it and his heart was touched. He knew David had done a good act as he said, "Thou art more righteous than I." Saul could see how David had saved his life when he was trying to find him to kill him. David acted on the command, "Love your enemies; bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you." Boys and girls who can do this are God's own true children. He sees all, watches all, and will reward you.—Western.

They say "a word to the wise is sufficient," but we think it takes about five, "Use Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup." You can get this article in any drug store for twenty five cents. Physicians recommend it.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Season for January 1884 may now be found on sale. The International News Co., New York, are the publishers. It is a profusely illustrated fashion magazine. Single copies 30c. Yearly subscription $3.50.

The English Illustrated Magazine for December has a portrait and paper on Martin Luther; "Some Forgotten Etchers," with illustrations, by Walter Armstrong; "Corn Cockles" by Grant Allen; "The Story of a Courtship," etc. Price 15c.

The Confederate Knapsack, is a monthly, issued by A. Meynier, 25 Exchange Alley, New Orleans, and devoted to war sketches and reminiscences. The No. 1 makes a neat typographical appearance, and shows skillful editorial supervision.

Haus und Herd, for December, our German Methodist magazine, edited by Rev. Dr. H. Leibhart, contains as an attractive feature a steel plate portrait of Bishop Wiley.

Golden Days for Dec 8 is accompanied by a statuette "Oh!" A boy winces under the process of getting his hair cut. Purchase at the news stands, or address James Elverson, Philadelphia.

The Pulpit Treasury, for December, is on our table. The leading sermon is by Dr. W. M Taylor, the celebrated pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle, N. Y. There is also a finely executed portrait of the same divine, a view of his church and a well written sketch of his life. There is a Christmas Sermon by Dr. Hepworth, a New Year's Sermon by Rev. D. Moore, the London "Golden Lectures," an Address by Prof. Dr. Prentiss, delivered at Dr. Hatfield's Funeral, and a sketch of Dr. Hatfield by the Editor. Yearly, $2.50; Clergy, $2; Single copies, 25 cents. E. B. Treat, Publisher, 757 Broadway, New York.

The Popular Science Monthly for December gives a portrait of Alexander von Humboldt, and an eloquent address by Professor Emil du Bois Reymond, delivered at the anniversary of the University of Berlin, in which the work and merits of the illustrious student of the Kosmos are estimated with [illegible]. A paper by M. E. [illegible], on "The Habitation and the Atmosphere," is of general interest, and presents a number of useful suggestions regarding the construction of houses. As bearing on health, Dr. Oswald's paper in "The Remedies of Nature" series on "Enteric Disorders", is one of his best. Mr. Thomas Foster presents a discussion of the "Morality of Happiness," from the stand-point of scientific ethics. M. E. Caro, of the Institute of France, in "Genius and Heredity," shows that, with all our theorizing, there is something unaccountable in the sporadic appearances of genius with which the world is from time to time astonished. A remarkable phenomenon is graphically described in Mr. Garrett P. Serviss's paper on "A Belt of Sun-Spots." Dr. T. S. Clouston, of Edinburgh, considers "Female Education from a Medical Point of View." "Surface Conditions of the Planet Mars" gives the results of Shiaparelli's latest observations. There is also the usual installment of Mr. Mattieu Williams's series on "The Chemistry of Cookery." New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

What Shall I Speak?

This question is fully met by the popular series of "One Hundred Selections," to meet the incessant demand of Recitationists and Reading Clubs for something new, the successive numbers abound in rich variety of bright pertinent, thrilling and touching extracts. No. 22 of the series is just issued. Price, only 30 cents. Published by P. GARRETT & Co., Philadelphia.

Democratic Testimony.

We have preferred, in dealing with the Copiah County murder, to give Democratic testimony, whenever it could be had. We have printed the resolutions of the Democratic mass-meeting after the murder, the "verdict" of the Coroner and the proclamation of the Mayor. We supplement these with the following remarks from a Democratic paper—the Vicksburg Post: "A free ballot and a fair count does not seem to be the motto of the Copiah County Democracy. In an attempt to cast his vote at Hazelhurst, 'Prent' Matthews received a charge of twenty-four buckshot in the face, killing him instantly. He went to the polls single-handed and alone, and in the attempt to exercise his privilege of American citizenship was shot down like a dog. This is the worst murder that has occurred in Mississippi since the Chisolm killing. It will injure the good name and prosperity of the State. Every bullet that was shot into Matthews will be worth thousands of votes to the Republicans, because it will be said, and it cannot be denied, that he was killed on account of his politics by intolerant Democrats." Those who deprecate "the bloody shirt" will please observe that this Democratic paper says "It cannot be denied" that this was a political murder.—New York Tribune.

Littell's Living Age For 1884.

For forty years The Living Age has been published with uninterrupted success, and has enabled its readers, at small expense of time and money, to keep pace with the literary progress of the age. Frequent in issue, and unequalled among periodicals in amount of matter, it furnishes an unrivalled compilation of a great and growing literature which embraces the productions of the most eminent living writers in all departments of literary and scientific work. And as this literature grows year by year in extent and importance, The Living Age becomes more valuable. Filling the place of many periodicals, it can hardly be dispensed with by any American reader who desires a thorough compendium of the best literature and thought of the time. Its prospectus for 1884 is commended to the attention of all who are selecting their reading-matter for the new year. Reduced clubbing rates with other periodicals are given, and to new subscribers remitting now for the year 1884 the intervening weekly numbers are sent gratis Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers. What a comment on the unsatisfactoriness of worldly pleasure was given by the German poet, Goethe, who, at the age of eighty-three, after having drunk his fill of all the wells of sensual enjoyment, said that he had not had three weeks of real happiness in his whole lifetime!

SCIPIO, N. Y. Dec. 1, 1879

I am the Pastor of the Baptist Church here, and an educated physician. I am not in practice, but am my sole family physician, and advise in many chronic cases. Over a year ago I recommended your Hop Bitters to my invalid wife, who has been under medical treatment of Albany's best physicians several years. She has become thoroughly cured of her various complicated disease by their use. We both recommend them to our friends, many of whom have also been cured of their various ailments by them.

REV. E. R. WARREN.

Surely there is nothing in a name. Think of a good-looking young man christened John Wesley being found with teaspoons in his hat, sugar tongs and napkin rings in his boots, table spoons by the dozen up his sleeves, and a fur-trimmed cloak over his arm, and arrested for burglary! The early influences that the name hints at ought to have done more for its bearer.—N. Y. Sun.

This Herb also cures Night Sweats, Nausea at the Stomach and will break up a fresh Cold in 24 hours. Address Craddock & Co. 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, naming this paper. n44-14t

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. jal4-1y

Fifteen glasses of whisky in fifteen minutes. A German made a wager to perform that feat in Cleveland recently. The exhibition took place on the Sabbath and quite as appropriately in a saloon. Our brethren of the A. M. E. Church have organized on the plan of our Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle, the Zawawa [illegible] Scientific and Literary [illegible] Rev. T. G. Steward, D. D. [illegible] Pine street, Philadelphia is the Dean of the faculty.

These are all [illegible] names from which to [illegible] our neighbor, why not in[illegible] the names of Drs. [illegible] [illegible] M. W. Taylor, [illegible] and others? Has not the time come to extend the selection?

An Iowa man has figured out that the hogs of that State [illegible] enough annually to feed [illegible] [illegible], and cost $6,000,000, counting the sheep they kill. The education of the children of the State costs $4,000,000. What is true of Iowa in this respect is no less true of Louisiana. Our people keep too many worthless curs. Why not raise hogs and chickens instead?

Those of our brethren whose creed is to ignore the conference notice column of the SOUTHWESTERN, will do well to refer to it, and thereby gain the information that the time of holding the Spring conferences has been arranged. The Louisiana Conference meets in New Orleans, Jan. 30th, Bishop Wiley presiding. Mississippi, at Jackson, Jan. 16th; Little Rock, at Little Rock, Feb. 13th. These will all be held by Bishop Wiley. Prepare for conference brethren; and let no back step be taken.

A man recently convicted and executed for the crime of murder said on the scaffold: "It was myself, John Herbert Smith, that did it, and had it not been for liquor the blood of that man would not be upon my hands. I trust that God has forgiven me, and also my fellow man. Good-bye, and God bless you all! It's all for the best. I hope that if any persons here have any money to spare they will give it for the support of my little children." Strong drink did it. Young men be warned.

The special correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean, in Japan, says of the Japanese: "They are learning to like the railroad, the telegraph, the telephone, and other fruits of civilization. They are being educated by schools. They are being converted by missionaries. They are being fitted for citizenship by good newspapers, and many who cannot speak or understand English are able to read our books." Schools, churches, missionaries, and newspaper are the mighty levers lifting up the Japanese empire to the marvelous light of the Gospel and Christian civilization. They are God's approved means of promoting the welfare and civilization of Nations. Let us utilize them faithfully and persistently.

"God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself." Man never sought it, it never once entered into his depraved mind. God formed the plan, just when we do not know; but when the fullness of time had come, Christ, the great manifestor of God, came and accomplished it. Now God in Christ holds out the greatest inducement to sinners to return to Him. He warns, He expostulates because He is unwilling to punish. He sets before us the example of great sinners whom He has pardoned and restored to His kingdom and favor, that we may be persuaded to return to Him.

A Washington dispatch reports [illegible] Senator Kellogg to have said, that at the proper time he might show the origin and prosecution in [illegible] in such a way as to place [illegible] his personal and political [illegible] connected with it in an [illegible] light. He had con[illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] is so complete and [illegible] he would be willing to submit the question of any wrong [illegible] to any un[illegible] prejudiced [illegible] Democrat or Republican. The continued de[illegible] lay, repeated postponements, and [illegible] on the basis of technicali[illegible] ties or prescription, have tended to injure Mr. Kellogg's cause. It is not assertion but evidence that is required to dispel reasonable inferences from the expressions of several persons against Mr. Kellogg; and a proper tribunal should be found to declare his guilt or innocence. The failure of witnesses for the prosecution to appear, which caused the postponement of trial without day, is regretted, but it does not make Mr. Kellogg's position any clearer. Let him join with the government in compelling attendance of witnesses, or in prosecuting Messrs. Walsh, Price and others for defamation or libel. This would demonstrate that Mr. Kellogg really desired to meet the issue in a more satisfactory way than anything said or done in the past in regard to the matter.

The General Conference is drawing near, and delegates thereto are being elected; those who have formulated and matured measures for its consideration had better begin to bring them out and make them public. Thus far nothing of importance has been advanced for consideration, except the question of the pastoral time limit. This does not indicate a scarcity of vital interests for consideration however. They will crop out as the time approaches. Now out with them, brethren. Give the church the benefit of your thought.

Following Jesus.

BY W. D. GODMAN.

To follow Jesus is the same as to follow Christ, is it not? And to follow Christ is to be a Christian. Why, then, do we say "follow Jesus," and not rather "follow Christ?" Because in the Gospel we read, "Jesus said unto them," as in Matt. xvi, 24: "Then said Jesus unto them, If any man will come after me let him deny himself and and take up his cross and follow me." Jesus is the human name of God's Son, who is our exampler. We feel attracted to Jesus as to a brother, while we are overawed by the Christ as a world's Redeemer and Judge. Our admiration of Jesus and our gratitude to Christ make it pleasant to think of following Him. But the actual treading in the path is so rough that we sometimes shrink from it. It does not appear to be all pleasure to follow Jesus. Thus have the saints found it always. God casts up "a highway" for his people, but it leads through "the desert." We must find happiness in hardship if we follow Jesus. This is as it should be. It is not an unfairness of a father toward his children. The reward is worthy the sacrifice. Thus it is in all the matters of this life. No one becomes rich, beginning poor, without sacrificing every comfort and pleasure for years. None becomes a scholar without complete sacrifice, for many years, of society, the pleasures of appetite, and even health.

If the company of Jesus demand the relinquishment of worldly company, it is worth the price. If we can enjoy the love of God only by forsaking all carnal love it will pay us well. We shall be like the merchantman who sold all he had in order to buy the goodly pearl. The man who would be truly rich should invest his all in the love of God. No danger here of depreciated market nor of watered stock. Let us observe that there is a rigid necessity of following, not a mere permissiveness, if we would be Christ's, if we would be Christians. "Whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after Me cannot be My disciple," Luke xiv, 27. The Christian is a crucified man. Such is, historically, the significance of the name. No godly manners, no varnished phrases, no pretentious public deeds, no professions, no charities, no heroism, none of these things decorating the natural man can make a Christian. The man who seeks himself is not a Christian though he preach the most effective sermons, write popular books, lead great social movements, hold high offices, and have great reputation. It is easy to preach Christian sermons with a heathenish heart. Every man does it who preaches to please. May it not be we are generally, preachers and people, living for ourselves? not following Jesus? Who loves the cross?—I mean His own cross—who does not shun the cross and despise it? How many that read of the cross and of the patience of the saints and respond thereto with sympathetic tears, go straightway into the paths of their own life, seeking with a matchless endeavor to get rid of the cross, and to get for themselves the decorations and delusive flatteries of the same world that has slain all our martyrs, What is the worth of their sympathetic tears? Everything which we accept and honor in the Church and in the closet, that we abjure spit upon and slaughter in business, in politics and in society. We despise consistency, that is a cheap jewel; the sisters may wear it. Business is business. He is a fool who consults conscience on 'change.

"Jesus hath now many lovers of His heavenly kingdom, but few bearers of His cross. Many follow Jesus into the breaking of bread, but few to the drinking of the cup of His passion." These are the words of a holy man, and just as true now as when they were written. Do we not serve Jesus for gain? Do we not enter the fellowship of His people for worldly advantage? Do we not attend the means of grace for the pleasure that comes of it? Perhaps it seems to us, that in other parts of our country, where there is more wealth, and where society is more advanced in some things, that there the Lord's people follow the world more than they follow Christ. It may be. But how is it with us at home? in Louisiana? Do we profess to follow Jesus, and yet spend our time in political intrigue? Do we take more delight in an office than in salvation? Does it make us happier to have our names in a newspaper than in "a Book of Life?" We are poor, it may be. Perhaps we think the wealthy spend a great deal of money in dress and appearance—much more than Christians should. True, no doubt. But let us question ourselves. Do we find fully as much pleasure in our cheaper finery? Do we not spend as much time upon it? What better are we then? Some go to the theatre and the opera. Perhaps we think it unbecoming to Christians, and in our humble judgment it is hoped we all do thus think. But what should be said about excursions, especially church excursions on the Lord's day? What about a circus which nearly everybody visits? What of collations, wakes, etc., etc., when there is no end of eating, drinking, noise and disorder? Do you ask with astonishment, what? Do the Lord's people frequent such things? We can only answer that some who call themselves the Lord's, do go to such places, to the scandal of the Church and to the injury of their own souls.

To be Christians we must be deaf to the syren voice of worldly pleasure. We must be; must begin now, this instant, and stop listening to it. It matters not how many friends we lose. Better lose them than Jesus. It matters not how many votes be lost. Better lose them all than lose the love of God. It matters not how much money be sacrificed. The heavenly treasure of Jesus' love is worth more than all the money of the United States. Let us remember that to seek pleasure belongs to the heathen. To the Christian belongs righteousness, not pleasure.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union has issued a call to each State, asking every local society—about 5000—to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the "Woman's crusade" on the 23d of December. Pastors of churches are invited to preach temperance sermons in the morning, and childrens' meetings are to be held in the afternoon, and in the evening there will be mass meetings at which collections will be taken up for the Temperance Union.

Notes from South Carolina.

BY J. WOFFORD WHITE.

DEAR SOUTHWESTERN—I am glad to make your acquaintance, and hope ere long you will have many readers in South Carolina. I have become attached to you in some way and mean to be your staunch friend. You will please tell your readers that although we have no paper in our immediate territory, we are alive as ever and and stirring most energetically to retain our position as the banner Southern Conference. There are many news items which could be given, but I forbear and will only name a few.

The South Carolina Conference is composed of about 100 preachers, representing about 36,000 members and probationers. Within its bounds is one chartered college, Claflin University, Dr. E. Cook president. Connected with it is an industrial department, and boys are taught various trades, their hands are educated, useful mechanical knowledge is imparted, thus enabling them to perform skilled labor. Girls are taught dressmaking, model housekeeping and other useful information is imparted to them other than that gained in the recitation rooms. There are now in this flourishing institution over three hundred students.

This State has no prohibitory amendment to its constitution, but the Legislature has wisely enacted a local option law. There cannot be licensed whisky save only in incorporated towns and cities, and in them only at the option of the people. One-third of the voting population, by petition, causes the council to submit the question "license or no license" annually. Under this law in the months of November and December 16 towns held elections, 12 voting no license. Some of the most important towns in this State have no barrooms and the results prove that prohibition does prohibit. The sentiment against whisky is growing stronger every day. Not many years hence South Carolina will be a prohibition State.

It is gratifying to mention that our Church leads in this great temperance movement in this State. Our preachers address joint assemblies of white and colored, and receive as favorable notice as white preachers. The session of our Conference begins Wednesday, January 16, Bishop Bowman presiding. This, in many respects, has been a prosperous year in our Zion. Gracious revivals, wonderful in effect, have been poured over and into the entire work. There has been a precious season of refreshing in every circuit and station with good results. All along the line there has been a grand upward movement, and we anticipate a most worthy showing in results for our year's hard toil.

The Portuguese Government has appointed the explorers, Capello and Ivens, to proceed again on an expedition to West Africa, for the purpose of completing their map of the province of Angola, and of exploring the Congo.

At the Democratic primary election in New Orleans, seventh ward, on the 14th, Capt. M. J. Fortier and two others were killed and seven wounded. Difficulty arose from the assault of a prisoner in charge of police.

Edmunds' Bill for the Protection of Colored Citizens.

Senator Edmunds' bill provides for the further protection of the colored citizens. It begins with a preamble, stating that a doubt has arisen as to whether the laws of the United States now in force are in all respects adequate to the protection of citizens of any race, color or previous condition of servitude. The bill provides that whenever, in any case now pending, or which may hereafter be pending in any court of any State, an issue shall exist or be made, or any material question shall arise concerning any civil right of persons or rights of property, which shall be assailed or maintained, or assailed or denied in any such issue or question, on the ground that such issue or question depends upon or is affected by race, color or previous condition of servitude, any person or persons concerned in and a party to such issue or question, against whom such issue or question shall be made, asserted or maintained, or against whom any such denial shall be made on the ground aforesaid, shall be thereupon entitled to remove such cause to the Circuit Court of the United States for the district within the territorial limits of which such case shall be pending, for proceedings, trial and judgment in such a manner and with like proceedings as near as may be provided by section 639 of the Revised Statutes.

When a ruling or decision, interlocutory or other order shall be made adversely to any civil right or claim of any person on the ground of race, color or previous condition of servitude, any witness or juror in such cause, or person being a party to said cause against whom such ruling or decision shall be made, is thereupon entitled to remove such cause to the Circuit Court of the United States.

Whenever a decision or judgment of the State court in which such case shall be pending shall proceed upon or be affected by any matter on the ground of race, color or previous condition of servitude, any person being a party to, or witness or juror in such case, and the decision of such court shall be adverse to such person by reason of his race, color, or previous condition of servitude, the person being a party to such cause or against whom any such decision shall be made, shall be entitled to have a review of such decision by the Supreme Court of the United States, upon his writ of error, to be sued out and prosecuted in the same manner as now provided by law for writs of error to the highest court of any State, and such writ of error may be sued out and prosecuted as of right and without giving any new bail or other security, unless the justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, allowing such writ of error, or said court itself, be of the opinion that public interest or safety requires it. No law, usage or custom and no practice, decision or rule of any department of the government, or of any State, which may now or hereafter exist, and which shall in any manner discriminate between the rights of persons or property upon the ground of race, color or previous condition of servitude, shall be deemed valid.

The Virginia Legislature, Democratic in both branches, approves the Riddleberger settlement of State debt.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

MISSISSIPPI.

P. R. Crump, Lauderdale: "I have read in your paper of brethren complaining of hard places. If they referred to people with no church to worship in and very poor, that's the kind of place I came into. It is often said "where there's a will there's a way." I put this to the people who have been worshipping in plain pole churches for 15 or 18 years: 1. Though the people complain of us asking us for money so often, when they have the will to do evil they find the way; whenever they will to go to shows, circuses and other amusements, costing $2 or $3, they can find a way. 2. So if church members have the will to build a church there is a way; and so also with benevolences and taking the SOUTHWESTERN. We started the lists and now have two beautiful frame churches. It required hard labor, one day after another. If we do our whole duty we can make many a hard place soft. Elder Campbell's visits gave life to the work and instruction where needed. We will not forget him. Souls have been converted and mourners are coming forward."

John Mayo, Central Grove: "The labors of our pastor, Rev. W. Jones, have not been in vain, and he is much beloved by the people. Elder Shumpert held quarterly conference and preached a good sermon. Collection $17. Sacrament was administered to 70 persons."

N. Cannon, Pass Christian: "The fourth quarterly conference was held by Elder McDonald. Pastor reported this quarter 16 conversions, 1 death, 9 baptisms. Stewards paid pastor $129.35; presiding elder $17.50. The trustees had raised some cash, improved church-yard and bought property this year. Sunday-schools were reported in a growing condition. Pass Christian school, J. H. Dale superintendent, purchased a library of 100 volumes for $22.50. The Elder preached Sunday, and sacrament was administered to 90 persons."

R. Snell, Aberdeen: "We had a protracted meeting. There were 115 conversions and 146 additions. The work is in good condition."

TEXAS.

Mrs. Alice Elaine Fairfield, "Our Sabbath-school is in growing condition. It numbers 44. Children's day was observed, collection was $2.20. This is well for a place where whisky reigns, as almost the sole master. If the people would give as much for the church as they do for whisky all would have comfortable homes, a decent church and a flourishing Sabbath-school. God speed the day when this evil in the church will be cast out."

Rev. I. B. Scott, Houston: "I wrote you a day or two ago, and I trust you will pardon me for further trespassing on your already crowded columns. I have on several occasions mentioned the Ladies Sewing Circle, connected with Trinity charge. I wish to give the names of officers: Mrs. Hannah Foster, President; Mrs. H. A. Jones, Vice President; Mrs. Alice Johnson, Treasurer; Mrs. M. J. Scott, Secretary; Miss M. A. Jackson, Directress, and Mrs. Annie Cotton, Assistant. I should be glad to give the name of each member, but as there are so many I do not dare undertake it. They have done so much to make it pleasant for me and my family I feel under many obligations to them. For want of space I cannot mention the names of many not in the Circle who have labored to the same end."

ARKANSAS.

H. H. McAllister, Centre Point: "It has been many days since your many readers heard from here, therefore I thought it proper to give a few lines from this part of the Lord's vineyard. We have had our bitters and sweets. We are happy to say that many have been converted, and over a hundred received in the church. Our Sunday school is succeeding grandly. Our people generally own land of their own, so we might say they are doing well. I have been laboring in Arkansas four years, the first as teacher and three as preacher, and I do not regret the time spent for humanity, though when I left the walls of Rust University I only aimed to stay three months. Time well spent. I have received several letters from Prof. Hooper, whom I love as a father, asking me to return to Rust University, the best school in Mississippi according to my humble judgment for the colored people. But being in the Little Rock Conference that needs young men so very badly, I have not gone. Portions of Arkansas are well adapted to the happiness of human beings, while the other portions are swampy. These parts are very healthy. Our work here is 140 miles west of Little Rock. Centre Point is a beautiful little town, and the county seat of Howard county. Our church here, if it were finished; would be as good as any in the country. Two bad crop years threw the brethren back in this respect. Just had a gracious revival here in which many were born again, and backsliders reclaimed. I love the SOUTHWESTERN because it is no caste paper. I ask the prayers of all."

Editorial Correspondence.

NOTES AND ITEMS.

The first point visited on this round was Alexandria. Here, I found pastor and people closing up a grand year's work. $250 had been collected during the quarter, and nearly $1200 during the year. Among the recruits were 51 probationers, 11 who were reclaimed, and 30 converts, fresh from the fountain. The local preachers had nearly all been at work, and reported prospering mission works with flourishing Sunday-schools. The Sunday-school report was highly gratifying. The Alexandria school had enrolled 150 scholars; and 10 classes, taught by intelligent and exemplary teachers, with a library consisting of 4 dozen catechisms, 4 dozen testaments, 4 dozen sacred songs, 3 dozen spellers and readers, 300 infant cards, and 18 Sunday-school Advocates taken weekly. Nearly $150 had been collected by the school during the year, with prospects of collecting much more before conference. Sister Barksdale, the district superintendent of our Women's Home Missionary Society, reported some good work done in her special field, and as a successful class leader in the church here. She had visited every appointment on the LaTeche district during the quarter, and had organized or inspired to greater activity Home Mission Societies at every point. Sister Susan Barksdale is devoted to her work, and with the help of our pastors on this district will doubtless succeed in accomplishing much needed good. This year's work closes Rev. S. E. H. Morant's pastorate here. He leaves regretted by all classes of the citizens of Alexandria. A more successful pastorate can scarcely be recalled. It was satisfactory all around. Our beloved brother's time is out however, and the pleasant relations which he sustains to this good people must soon be severed. Another must take his place, and he must wend his way to other fields of labor. May the Lord provide the proper shepherd for the one, and flock for the other. The lay delegates elected was Bro. James Madison, with Bro. Alto Mitchell as alternate. The benevolent collections had nearly all been collected, and additional plans for addition thereto, including a Sunday-school concert, were in course of execution. Agreeably entertained at our friend John Parker's, that stout friend of our church, with many hospitalities extended and enjoyed with Rev. Henry Johnson, Bro. Alto Mitchell, Rev. S. E. H. Morant and others, contributed toward making this fourth quarterly visit to Alexandria a source of real pleasure to me. Across the river from Alexandria, pleasantly nestled among the pines, on a beautiful elevation, is found our church, under the successful pastorate of Rev. Henry Johnson. The spirit manifested throughout was so different from that shown in the two preceding quarters that it was most agreeably surprising. The family jars and confusions had all been amicably adjusted and peace reigned in Warsaw. Indeed Bro. Johnson seemed to be enjoying a genuine honey moon with his people. Five backsliders had been reclaimed, four had been converted and taken in full membership, and fifteen had been taken on probation. The church and Sunday-school were doing well spiritually, financially and otherwise. Now that the $100 donation from the Church Extension Society has come to hand it will not be long before the church is completed. Every interest, and all the benevolences are being looked after, and this year's work may on the whole be considered a marked success.

From here the run to Avoca was made; not as handily as it can be related however. It was a task to get there, and another task to get away. I got up at 11 o'clock at night to take the train which was to pass going up there at midnight, but as is quite usual for the trains on the T. P. R. R., it had run off the track at the Atchafalaya, and we had to wait all night and then all next day till about 3 o'clock p. m. before it came in sight. Aboard train for about fifteen minutes, and I had arrived at Rapides Station, where I got off, made my way to Red river nearly two miles away, and then gave the regular river country cry for the skiffman on the opposite side to come over for me. He came, I crossed; and I found a home for the night at Mrs. Frisbie's, on Capt. Jeffrie's plantation. Here I was well cared for. Mrs. Frisbie is an intelligent and interesting personage. She used to belong to old Capt. Meades, who freed her while on a trip in the North in 1853. Although then freed she has found it both pleasant and profitable to continue to live with the widow and married daughter of her former owner, Mrs. Jeffries, until this writing. In consequence of unavoidable delay by the train, I failed to meet our people at Rigolet, but met Bro. Hampton and his congregation on this place, Avoca, in due time. Here we were assisted in our quarterly meeting by Rev. J. W. Richardson, of Bayou Sale. We had a good time. Four backsliders had been converted, and the church had been spiritually revived. A new church had been built, but not upon our plan of settlement. It was the best that could be done under existing circumstances, however. After waiting in the lonely station for the train which was eight hours late, nearly all night, next morning I reached Alexandria. There are some men who, as they grow in age, grow in grace. They carry with them, as Father Green has aptly put it, "a flask of honey." They ripen into sweetness, while others become sour, irritable, feeble, but belligerent and repulsive. No better words could be found to describe these than those of Bro. Hays, when he says that they "grow sullen, complain, find fault with everybody and everything, and growl at their own shadow." Everybody, church, Presiding Elder, Bishops, and all else are wrong, excepting themselves. Saul was never possessed of a more evil spirit. The Lord save us from such a calamity! Bro. John Sparks, of the Spring Creek and Stuart Chapel Circuit, though ripening into maturer age, is not in the graduating or preparatory classes of the vinegar school of theology. He has never read the "vinegar Bible." His Bible abounds with honey and the honey comb. It is always a source of pleasure to meet such a sweet-tempered Christian minister. He has had a hard time this year. Sometimes hardly knew where his bread was to come from, but he is, and has been laboring cheerfully all the year; and has succeeded in accomplishing some good. When it is remembered that Brother Sparks has received less than $70 this year, including his missionary appropriation, with which to provide for himself and wife; what man in the world can possibly fail to admire the smile of Christian sunshine which beams ever now from his countenance? His Christian heroism is worthy of commendation. His record is on high. The work at Spring Creek, languishes for want of a house of worship. Ever since the church was burnt down there last year, services have been held under the shadow of the pines, or in private houses, but three thousand feet of lumber are now on the ground and paid for, and hopes are now entertained that the church will be rebuilt in a short time.

Here we have forty members, but no church. At Stuart Chapel we have a splendid church, but have only three members. With this prospect of rebuilding at Spring Creek, our work there will doubtless revive. Brother Sparks failing to get his mail in time, did not meet me at Lamourie Station. Reaching Lamourie, on the train, two hours before daylight, raining, dark and muddy, with the road full of water, and not a living soul around to guide me in the way; I took the road and traveled two miles and reached Mr. Hector Turner's house, where Friday and following night was spent without seeing or hearing anything of Brother Sparks. Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 24th and 25th were divided between Eola and Cheneyville. Brother Sparks met me on my return to Alexandria, however, and reported his work as described above. To these, and to all who faithfully labor in the Lord's vineyard, the heart reviving promise is that "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." More anon.

Chattanooga District Conference.

The Chattanooga District Conference convened for its first session in the First M. E. Church in Spring City, Nov. 29, 1883, at 10 o'clock a. m., Rev. H. Provine, presiding elder, in the chair, who opened the conference by reading appropriate passages of Scripture, singing and prayer. As this was Thanksgiving Day, it was found that after the time for meeting and adjourning was fixed and the usual committees appointed, we observe the same. The writer was elected Secretary, and also appointed by acclamation to preach the thanksgiving sermon. After enjoying ourselves at the church we returned to our places, and then came the turkeys, chickens, cakes, in short, everything that would make a Methodist minister feel thankful for having been present. The conference was well represented from the first. The written reports handed in by nearly every member present, and sent by those absent, show an improvement in this direction. The pastors all report a warm reception by their respective charges to which they have just gone. The reports of the pastors and district stewards indicate a steady growth in church work nearly all over the district. There are several new churches expected to be built this year on this district. The district stewards were called together, the second day, by the presiding elder and held their meeting and gave each charge its portion to raise for the presiding elder and bishop, which proves that Bro. Provine has won the affections of his people. A resolution discouraging the use of tobacco, by precept and example, was offered by Rev. James Yarnell, which was adopted, also one on temperance, both of which were very strong and timely. The session was a pleasant one. On Sabbath we had a glorious time indeed, The elder preached from the words "My kingdom is not of this world," which lifted our souls from things below. The conference learned with joy that Bishop Hurst had transferred from the Tennessee Conference to ours (East Tennessee) Bros. Moores and Brooks, and we assure them that they have a warm place in all of our hearts and homes. May the time soon come when others will come over in Macedonia and help us, for our demands for ministerial help have been almost imperative, but thank the Lord the day star has began to rise in East Tennessee. We have a grand country, and grand people, grand resources, and we need more strong men and more money to develop this field. Our fathers in the gospel have done well, and they have done about what they can, but the work must go forward. We anticipate the time when this part of our beloved Zion will be an inviting field.

Sojourner Truth

"Well ye see, honey, I stayed an lived with 'em. An' now jes' look here; instead o' keepin' my promise an' bein' good, as I told the Lord I would, jest as soon as everything got a-goin' easy I forgot all about God."

SILENT AND SUBTILE POWER.

Sojourner was a tall, spare form, and possessed of "a silent and subtile power," given only to her race. She had no education, no culture to guide her. She knew by experience what were the sufferings of her people, and she thought she had seen God. Uniting in her mission the liberation of the former with the service of the latter, she went out among the people, speaking at meetings and anniversaries of various kinds. Her power was wonderful, as was her faith. Frederick Douglas was, once speaking in Faneuil Hall, Boston, of the wrongs of the Negro race. He was ready to despair, and said he had no hope in the whites; the hope of the slaves now was in their own right arm, and blood must be their redeemer. As he sat down Sojourner asked, in her deep, peculiar voice, "Frederick, is God dead?" The effect was electrical, changing the feelings of the audience from despair to hope and enthusiasm.

After the laws of New York had freed the slaves, she visited her old "missus," hoping to get back her son, whom she had left in bondage. When she arrived she found that her son had been given to a daughter of her mistress, who had removed to Alabama. Sojourner then went to Alabama to demand her son, and when they told her she must get the Grand Jury, to take up the case she marched up to the talest of the twelve and asked him if he was a "Grand Jury." The man heard her story and promised to help her if she would give him $10. She collected $20, saying that if $10 would get him, $20 would get him sure, and gave it all to the juror. They tried to get the boy not to recognize the mother but failed, and she carried him off to freedom.

SOLD WITH THE SHEEP.

The notoriety and fame which this grand old women obtained were not of her own seeking. She ever sought to work conscientiously and do her duty and not to seek the applause of her fellow beings. About one of the first things which she remembered, prominently connected with her early life, was the time when she was 9 years old, and was sold on a block at auction, together with a flock of sheep. She and the sheep together brought the sum of $104, which, she remembers, was a good price. All her hardships, she says, date from the day of this sale. She was compelled to labor hard in the fields all day, and upon returning to the house at night, had to work the greater part of the night, doing washing and ironing for the master's house.

After obtaining her freedom, and "experiencing religion," she attended camp-meetings, and at one of these near Northampton, where only white people were in attendance, she hesitated at first, but determined to go. A gang of roughs attacked the camp, and raised a great disturbance. At first Sojourner was afraid, and hid herself for fear that the roughs would wreck their mischief on her, she being the only colored person present. She afterward reasoned that God would protect her, and the quotation,

"ONE SHALL CHASE A THOUSAND, and two shall put ten thousand to flight," she offered to go out and quell the riot. She invited others to go with her, but they refused, and told her she was a fool to go. The noise and confusion were terrific, but Sojourner left the tent, and going to a rise of ground began to sing in her most fervid manner one of the camp-meeting songs beginning:

It was early in the morning—it was early in the morning.
Just at the break of day,
When He rose—when He rose—when He rose,
And went up to Heaven in a cloud.

All who ever heard her sing will remember her peculiar tunes and style, which once heard can hardly be forgotten. As she commenced to sing with the utmost strength of her powerful voice, the roughs made a rush for her, and she was immediately surrounded by a dense body of the rioters, many of them armed with sticks or clubs. Her singing still continued and seemed to thrill the young men, as they quieted down very much in their demonstrations. After a pause she inquired, in her mildest tones. "Why do you come about me with clubs and sticks? I am not doing harm to any one." "We ain't a goin' to hurt you, old woman," they cried simultaneously. "Keep on singing and talking!" The leaders of the crowd cried out for her to mount an old wagon near by and preach to them. She declined fearing they would overthrow it. But, they continued to clamor for her to do so, promising not to touch her; and at last she acceded to their request. They assisted her to mount the wagon, from which she spoke to them for an hour and a half. Of all she said to them on that occasion, she remembers only the following:

THE SHEEP AND THE GOATS.

"Well, chillen, dar are two congregations on dis groun.' De Bible says dat dar shall be a separation of de sheep from de goats. De other preacher has got de sheep an' I have got de goats. I have a few sheep among my goats, but my is very ragged."

When she became wearied of talking, she began to think how she could get them to disperse quietly. Whenever she paused they would loudly cry, "More!" and "Sing to us!" She motioned to them to keep quiet, and called out to them. "Chillen," (she always calls every one child) "I've talked to you and sung to you; now will you do one thing for me?" "Yes! yes!" responded from every corner. "Well, it is this; I will sing to you once more, and then you must go way and leave the camp in peace for to-night." A few answered, "We will." "I repeat it," she said, and I want an answer from you all." "Yes! yes!" answered many more voices.

"I repeat again," said Sojourner, "and I want an answer from every one. I will sing to you once more, and you must go away and leave us in peace this night. "This time a long "Yes! yes! yes!" came from every mouth in the multitudinous mob. "Amen! it is sealed!" replied Sojourner, in the deepest and most solemn tone of her voice. Its effect ran through the multitude like an electric shock and they all considered themselves bound by their promise. Some even began to leave instantly; others said, "Are we not to have one more song?" "Yes," she answered, and then she commenced to sing:

I bless de Lord I'se got my seal—to-day an' to-day.—
To slay Goliah in de field—to-day an, today.
De good old way is a righteous way,
An' I mean to take de Kingdom in de good old way.

Before she had finished her singing they began quietly to disperse, and in the course of a few moments she was left alone.

THE WEEVIL IN THE WHEAT.

Once while at a religious meeting one of the speakers alluded to the Government of the United States, and spoke in warm terms of the constitution. Sojourner heard, and in a low voice said:

"Chillen, I talks to God, and God talks to me. I goes out and talks to God and in the fields and de woods. [The weevil had destroyed thousands of acres of wheat in the West that year.] Dis morning I was walking out, and I got over de fence. I saw de wheat a-holding up its head looking very big. I goes up and takes hold of it. You believe it, dere was no wheat dar. I says, 'God (speaking the name in a voice of reverence peculiar to herself), what is de matter wid dis wheat?' 'Su' He says to me, Sojourner, dere is a little weevil in it.' Now I hears talking about de constitution. It looks mighty big, and I feels for my rights; but dar ain't any dar. Den I says, 'God, what ails dis constitution?' And He says, 'Sojourner, dere's a little weevil in it!' The effect of this comparison on the multitude was irresistible.

Without culture she had a quick sense of justice, and was able to uncover a mask in much plainer manner, if not better style, than those blessed with education.

VISIT TO LINCOLN.

In October of 1864 Sojourner conceived the idea that she must visit President Lincoln. A lady accompanied her to the White House and introduced her to the President as Sojourner Truth, who had come all the way from Michigan to see him. Lincoln rose, gave her his hand, and made a bow, as he said:

"I am pleased to see you." The rest of the story is best told in Sojourner's own words, as nearly as possible:

"I went to him, Mr. President, with you first took your seat I heard you would be torn to pieces, for I heard you to Daniel, who was thrown into the lions' den, and if the lions did not tear you to pieces I knew it would be said that would with you. And I said to myself, if he dare to look upon you and see you myself before you sit down of office humble, and he has done so and here I am to see you. Mr. President congratulate on my having been spared to see this time. I thought he was the best President that had ever been, and calculated he would be President to free the slaves, and I was glad when I heard he was President again. I was in Michigan when I heard he was President the second time. I was glad when I heard he was President the third time. I was glad when I heard he was President the fourth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the fifth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the sixth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the seventh time. I was glad when I heard he was President the eighth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the ninth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the tenth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the eleventh time. I was glad when I heard he was President the twelfth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the thirteenth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the fourteenth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the fifteenth time. I was glad when I heard he was President the sixteen

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

L. P. CUSHMAN, Editor.
A. E. P. ALBERT, D. D., Assistant.

THURSDAY, DEC. 20, 1883.

1884. 1884.

Eight or Ten Thousand Subscribers Wanted.

To all Pastors and Members of the M. E. Church in the Southern States:

It is clearly discerned by all active workers for the church that a strong, vigorous church paper is required, at a central point, to direct the way for success on the line of pure Christian and Wesleyan principles; and by recording the facts of current history, and giving utterance to the wishes of the membership, to assist the Church and Christianity in general.

We are trying to make the SOUTHWESTERN all that our friends have a right to expect, or that we could desire; but we must remind you that your diligent and steady co-operation is absolutely needed to increase our circulation, give us a living support, and to permit us to convey to you each week, in a convenient form, glad tidings from all the fields of labor.

The SOUTHWESTERN is the only official organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church South of the Ohio River; it has been adopted by special vote in seven annual conferences, and circulates in all the Southern States. While the paper now visits thousands of homes each week, there are thousands of others in which it might be placed, as the pastor's assistant and advocate of his church, by a very little effort on the part of its friends.

Begin at once. Send in single subscriptions, lists of five, ten, fifteen, twenty-five, fifty and seventy-five. We rely upon pastors as our agents, but live Methodists everywhere should feel an interest, and send their money right on; and especially from points where pastor's visits are few and far between.

Only FOUR CENTS A WEEK, or TWO DOLLARS A YEAR, is an amount within the means of all. Let us hear from you. Specimen copies sent on application.

Address: PHILLIPS & HUNT, 59 Natchez Street, New Orleans.

The Louisville Courier-Journal discharged all Republicans employed on its staff at Bourbon demand. All quiet on the Ohio.

The New York Times has donned a new dress of bold-faced type, which is pleasing to the eyesight of numerous readers.

The Christmas numbers of the Christian Advocate, the Northwestern and Chicago Interior, are delightful to the eye and full of appropriate holiday thoughts.

A new desk tool, for special use in advertising measurement and check cutting, has been presented us by Messrs. Lord and Thomas, advertising agents at Chicago. It will be forwarded to merchants on receipt of ten cents in postage.

Says the Catholic Examiner of Brooklyn, New York: "It is encouraging to note the progress that is being made by Catholic missions in Africa. In an item published elsewhere, the success of the Society of Missions of the Notre Dame d'Afrique in Algiers is recorded. More than one hundred priests, forty-four brothers and thirty-seven nuns are working there, and the fruits of their labors are most gratifying. In Northern and Central Africa especial progress is being made, and schools, missionary stations and institutions where the little Negroes are cared for, have multiplied. An especial blessing seems to accompany the work."

Our Schools in Texas.

The interest of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the cause of education has been from the beginning pronounced and healthful. The careful student of our church history will not fail to see that a large proportion of the truly developed and trained in mind and heart of our ministry have come from our schools. The object of our church schools is so far as possible to educate ministers for our pulpits, and teachers for the masses. The chief educational force of the church here in the Southern States since the war has been the Freedman's Aid Society. The first school this society established in Texas was at Marshall, one of the oldest towns in Eastern Texas, the county seat of Harrison county, and has at present a population of about 7000, and is noted for its beauty and healthfulness. It is quite a railroad center. The general office, machine shops, car factory, and foundry of the Texas and Pacific Railroads are located here. It is in the midst of a rich farming country and is one of the flourishing towns of the State. The Wiley University is located on a beautiful elevation in this city. Two plain edifices forty feet [illegible], as wings of the main University buildings are to be built as soon as the funds for that purpose can be secured, to furnish accommodation for the students. There is just now a loud call for funds [illegible] university building. Not far from our school the Baptists have established their school and have erected much nicer buildings than ours, making it necessary that we proceed at once to complete ours. President Davis and his corps of teachers are doing a noble work, but are laboring under great embarrassment for the want of suitable accomodations for the students. A large number of those who have been pupils of this school are now employed in preaching the Gospel or as teachers in the public schools.

Houston Seminary occupies one of the most desirable sites in the city of Houston. Including the environs, this city has a population of not less than 25,000. It is the great railroad pivotal point where the great Southern continental highways link the remotest sections of our country. Nine railroads cross its portals. This city has large substantial buildings, and is said to have more private wealth than any city in Texas. Its graded schools are the best in the State. Its cotton compresses, foundries, flouring and cotton seed oil mills, machine shops and many other industries, afford employment to its inhabitants. The Texas Conference has stationed in this city and its environs four preachers. About a year ago the Houston Seminary was established and C. W. Campbell was elected as principal. A more favorable location for an educational institution could not be found. Thus far it has been a great success. It is sure to become a great power in the upbuilding of our Southern people. Already they begin to feel the need of more room. Something decided should be done immediately towards enlarging this school. Ethiopian and Caucasian received from the hand of God certain characteristics of color and form but neither are excluded from this, or our school at Marshall.

The report of the Freedmen's Aid Society makes mention of a school at Austin, the county seat of Travis county, and the seat of government for Texas, but the school has died the death, died for the want of care. It was really starved to death. The American Missionary Association have the Tillotson school in this city, their site is delightful, their buildings are after the most approved modern plan, combining every requisite for a first class school. Our people have secured a good site including something more than five acres, and hope in the future to erect suitable buildings and open this school. In the meantime the young men and women who are to be the standard bearers of Methodism in the West Texas Conference must be educated in other schools, if educated at all. It is not expected that there will be any separation of the pupils who shall attend this school on account of race as color. Nothing will be tolerated here in violation of the "royal law" "Thou shalt love thy neighbors as thyself."

The Texas Wesleyan College is located at Fort Worth, one of the most important railroad centers in North Texas, and is in the very heart of the richest agricultural lands of Texas, producing abundantly all the cereals common to the State. It has an energetic population drawn from everywhere, and has sprung from a mere stripling to a young giant within six years. The stream of immigration is immense. In no city in Texas have we seen better public school buildings, but the churches of all denominations that we saw are small. There are in the city over three hundred of artesian wells that afford an abundant supply of pure and wholesome water. The college is exclusively for the whites, children born with Negro blood in them, no matter how much Caucasian blood may also flow in their veins are to be excluded. No member of Ethiopia's blameless race need apply to the Texas Wesleyan College for admittance.

Rev. A. A. Johnson, Presiding Elder of Dallas District, Austin Conference, and Secretary of the board of Trustees of the college, gave us a cordial welcome to his Texas home. Bro. Johnson believes that the Methodist Episcopal Church has a mission in Texas. The work in his district is advancing in all the elements of real Christian strength. Some of the churches are small, but from all that we could learn they are in a healthy spiritual condition, and are exercising an influence for good. We hail as a brother any man who like brother Johnson is engaged in the work of seeking the "lost sheep of the house of Israel." This is doing sterling and superior work for the church in this great State. "May his bow abide in strength."

The Austin Conference passed resolutions to request the General Conference to fix an episcopal residence in Texas; also to change the name of the Freedmen's Aid Society to "Southern Educational Society," and to place the white work on an equal basis with educational work among the freedmen. The next session will be held in Austin. The statistics, as given by the Methodist Advocate, are: Probationers, 145; members, 1,052; number of churches, 21; value, $87,200; number of parsonages, 11; value, $9,250; paid for building and improving churches and parsonages, $14,059.50; paid on indebtedness of church property, $5,758.90; number of Sunday-schools, 19; number of teachers, 189; number of scholars, 1,692. The benevolent collections were as follows: Missions $545.40; Church Extension, $127.40; Sunday-school Union, $38.20; Freedmen's Aid Society, $97.05; education, $73.20."

We have observed that Den Christelige Talsmand has taken the eight page form, but whether it has improved in its editorial departments we are not prepared to say, as we cannot spare the time to give it a candid examination. We can say, however, that it is the Christian Advocate, published by the M. E. Church in Chicago, for the benefit of the Scandinavian membership; its editor is Rev. A. Haugensen; terms $1.60 per annum; and we wish it all prosperity.

It required four companies of militia and considerable talking to persuade the people of Birmingham to allow a Negro to have a trial under the forms of law. He was convicted of the crime charged, sentenced to be hung in January, and sent to Montgomery under military guard. The Governor of Alabama was equal to the emergency, and Birmingham breathes freer.

Protestants in Italy.

Few missionaries have a stronger claim upon the Christian churches of America than those now struggling in Italy. If this country is ever brought under the power of the gospel it must be largely through the labors of home missionaries, sustained at present by the Christian churches of Great Britain and the United States. These home missionaries are familiar with the different languages dialects, and customs of the people, have qualifications, and advantages superior to those who go there from abroad. The Free Church of Italy—Congregational in its polity, has just celebrated its tenth anniversary. It is under the leadership of Gavazzi and an efficient committee, Rev. J. R. McDougall, the pastor of the Scotch Presbyterian Church in Florance, is the treasurer and has raised more than $100,000 for their work. They have ten ordained ministers, sixteen evangelists and 1,666 members, and thirty-two churches.

The Waldenses whose history is surrounded with glory have, including teachers, one hundred and thirty-nine agents at work there. Last year they received on confessions of faith 550 members, nearly all of whom were converts from Romanism. Their stronghold is in the mountains of the North. The growth of this church has exceeded any other Protestant church in Italy. In five years their contributions have increased five fold. They, like the people of New England, keep the church and school house side by side. The Waldenses and the Free Church of Italy have each during the year built new houses of worship in Rome.

The American and English Methodists with their peculiar energy and zeal are at work there. Rev. Dr. Vernon has the superintendence of the work that is under the supervision of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and is pushing the work with good results. The English and American Baptists are also in Italy from one end to the other doing good work; under the direction of these agencies there are nearly five hundred pastors, evangelists, and teachers, engaged in religious work that means freedom from the tyranny of the Pope and Romish landlords. The Waldensains have a school of theology at Florance, and the Free Church of Italy one at Rome, where their workers are educated and trained. May the Holy Spirit give efficiency to the word as preached by these earnest laborers.

The Danville jury labored under the impression that they were in duty bound to vindicate the Democratic party, and hence proceeded to stab the character of the remainder of their colored fellow-citizens who were not shot down in the streets. Nobody was indicted for shooting Negroes. It was not for that purpose the jury "investigated." Gov. Cameron is right when he says: "A judicial investigation should be had. Witnesses should be allowed to testify, should be made to testify, and the truth should be made apparent so that the Commonwealth of Virginia should be placed before the world as one of the States which tries crime, no matter who may be the criminal."

—Rev. J. M. Brown, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at Washington, La., preached an excellent sermon to our people there. It was eloquent, instructive, and impressive. He also visited the quarterly conference, and congratulated the brethren upon their success, and their intelligence in dispatching the work of the session. His visits were appreciated with hearty amens which plainly said, "come again." Rev. Brown has been in the Louisiana Conference ten years. He was formerly from the Alabama Conference, where he came ten years ago with Dr. John Matthew, who is now in Kansas City, Mo., and who has left so many friends in this State among both races. Elder Brown is a kind, courteous and able Christian minister. His countenance and his sentiments tell that he is neither fogyish or antebellum in his ideas. He belongs to the school of Drs. Haygood, Galloway etc. Long may he live to do the Master's work.

—Among the visitors to the quarterly conference at Washington, La., was Dr. B. T. Moseley, one of the best physicians in the parish of St. Landry. Dr. Moseley is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and though not an old resident of this parish, has already established an extensive practice. This is due largely to his eminent ability, and his affable and gentlemanly qualities. The Doctor was elected, and kindly acted as secretary of the conference. The benevolent society in our church in Washington could scarcely do better than to elect Dr. Moseley as their society physician. Bishop Holsey, of the Colored M. E. Church, it may be of interest to know, was born and reared in Dr. Moseley's father's family. The Bishop and the Doctor were boys together. The boy doctor instructed the boy bishop, and now both stand deservedly high in their respective professions.

The pastor preached at 3 p. m., and sacrament was administered at night. On Monday the closing sermon was preached by Elder Dale. The meeting was a good spiritual feast, and I think it has accomplished much good."

On Friday night last a magic lantern entertainment, accompanied by refreshments, assisted in preparing for the visit of Santa Claus to the Sabbath school of Ames M. E. Church, New Orleans. The pastor reports several conversions and additions recently.

T. Gates, Opelousas: "A fair was given and $8.90 realized, of which $4.45 is for the Gilbert Haven school. This was the children's fair. May the Lord bless the workers. Thanks are especially due to Mr. E. Williams, Mrs. H. McPherson and Miss H. Wilkinson."

A. Henderson, Darrow: "We are moving onward at this charge. Although encountering some hardships, our pastor, T. E. Robinson, has done his duty this year. He has visited all points on the circuit and brought the scattered flock together."

H. Richardson, Trinity: "I have $65 subscribed to buy lumber and land; added 3 members, 10 on probation. [illegible] a church, and promise to help me all they can. There are seven Baptist churches within eight miles."

TEXAS.

G. Pleasant, Cedar Creek: "I have closed a very hard year. I am now hauling wood to get money to go to conference. Have raised for missions 90c; raised for pastoral support 25c. The relations between the races is not pleasant, and I am sad at the prospect."

J. S. Whitaker, Hempstead: "In sorrow I write this note. On returning from conference I entered the car and there I found a dear brother. He was disappointed that he had not met me at conference, and asked me why I wanted to locate and ride. I told him that I had bought a piece of property, and wanted to get it out of danger, and then nothing could hold me down. This was on Wednesday, and on Thursday the soul had departed. None was more loved. Spencer Hardwell was an instrument in the hands of God in more conversions, I believe, than any minister in the Texas conference. He will be greatly missed. No more can we send for him to help us in our revival meetings, and hear him sing sweet songs. Thousands he has left behind join with his loved one in mourning his loss. We must erect a suitable memorial."

GEORGIA.

From the Western's report of the Georgia Conference: "When the report on education was presented, certain resolutions proposed by Col. J. E. Bryant designed to indorse the Southern Advance Association, an institution organized for political purposes originally, were introduced, discussed and withdrawn, after Bishop Foss and J. Mitchell, the chairman of the committee, had stated the impropriety of introducing such things into our conferences."

MISSISSIPPI.

H. Woolfolk, Green Hill: "Our work moves slowly. Elder Barney held third conference and administered sacrament to 45."

Notes From Chattanooga.

DEAR EDITOR—If not too much pressed for space, please say a few words by way of commending Mr. John L. Divine, an old resident of this city who has just executed a deed which gives to our church two and a half acres of land lying south-east of the city just outside the corporate limits, worth in the market now $250. The large number of new buildings going up in the city suburb near by indicate that the value will rapidly increase. The property is nicely located, and the donor's wish is that it shall be used for church and school purposes; also that a camp meeting be kept up if practicable. He is willing to assist liberally in the erection of a building, which he hopes will be one creditable to the community. Other white citizens have promised to assist. With some help from the Church Extension Society a house can be put up at an early day. This is certainly a valuable gift, and coming as it does from a Southern man not identified with our Church, gives to it an added worth. He desires very much to see our people advanced intellectually, morally and religiously.

A card received to-day from Rev. B. H. Johnson, Knoxville, Tenn., informs me that he has been conducting a very successful revival for two weeks. 19 have professed faith in Christ, and 12 have joined the Church, and still the work goes on. Yours, truly,

D. W. HAYS.

Fell Asleep in Jesus.

Bro. Spencer Hardwell was very sick at Texas Conference. The brethren saw that he had medical attendance. Feeling that his disease was fatal he expressed to Bros. V. M. and Thos. Cole a desire to die at home near his beloved wife. Bro. Thos. Cole left with him on the train, and on arriving at Sherman, Brother and Sister Marshall provided for him comfortably, but he was so anxious to get home we could not prevail on him to stay. We took the 1 a. m. train and started for Houston. I soon saw something must be done or he would die on the train, but the conductor could not stop long enough at Corsicana to get a doctor, on account of his limited time. Bro. Hardwell was suffering greatly, and I visited each coach to find a doctor and failed. His frequent pleadings were to see his wife. At Hammond death was approaching, his hand did not change its chilly appearance, I wanted to get a doctor, but he refused. Between Hearne and Bryan one was found who said Bro. Hardwell could not hold out much longer. At Bryan, a conductor whom I knew, waited until I got a doctor, who prescribed a strong opiate; two doses seemed to revive Bro. Hardwell; at Heckley however the prescription, could not be filled because the druggists clerk was unqualified, and all hope was lost. Bro. Hardwell failed as rapidly as the effect of the opium passed away. He was very thankful for my efforts, and at Houston would not let me leave him to get a doctor, for fear I would not be able to bear his last message to his wife. He wanted to see Aunt Barbara. We arrived at Richmond at 9 p. m.; and ten minutes later at home he exclaimed: "Thank God; Bless the Lord! I have got here to see you (his wife) and all once more. Glory all the house!" He received all attention, but lost the power of speech, and as he promised his brethren he would do, he moved his hands upward as a sign that the end was near. He breathed his last at 6:16 a. m. The church buried him in the church yard, and asks each pastor of Texas, and West Texas Conference to take a collection to place a tomb over the spot, and let his work be remembered always.

Yours in Christ— THOS. COLE.

A Correction.

DEAR EDITOR:—I desire to correct a mistake in the ADVOCATE of recent date. In a communication over the signature of H. R. Revels, in laudation of my successor, Bro. Eckles, is the statement that "Rev. L. Bradford resigned because of ill health." I quote from memory, but think the words above form a part of a sentence. I remember that in a notice to the preachers of the Holly Springs District which was published in the SOUTHWESTERN, I stated that I was going North for a while, to take much needed rest, but I was then, had been, and am still in good health. In fact my health had nothing to do with my leaving the Mississippi Conference. Although I had the matter of being transferred under consideration all the year, I was not aware that I was transferred and that Bro. Eckles had been transferred to take my place until I reached Waterloo, Iowa, when a telegram from Bishop Hurst announced the fact.

Fraternally yours,

L. BRADFORD.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The next issue of Popular Science Monthly will contain an elaborate article on "The Classics in Germany," giving an effective answer to President Porter and others who have appealed to the celebrated "Berlin Report" against Charles Francis Adams on the Greek question. The article is by Professor E. J. James, of the University of Pennsylvania, who has recently returned from Germany, where he carefully investigated the whole subject. He shows that it has been greatly misunderstood here, and that the inferences drawn from German experience of classical and scientific studies are of not the slightest value for the dead-language party in this country.

THE BEAUTIFUL LAND.

From the shores of the sunny sea
To the home where I fain would be,
I lift mine eyes when the moon is bright,
And dream of its glory of golden light,
Till I long for the call to come,
The call to my own dear home.

I think how the glad hosts sing
In the land of the gracious King.
And wave their palms in the sunny air,
And rest by the rivers that sparkle there,
And never shed bitter tears
Through the whole of the blessed years.

O home of the good and free,
There is room in thy walls for me!
I catch a view of the distant spires,
And my soul leaps up in strong desires
To be in the land above,
The beautiful land I love.

Views of a Protectionist Democrat.

To the Editor of the Sun—SIR: The defeat of Mr. Randall for the Speakership seems to be seized upon by the free trade sentiment of the country as a triumph. At last they seem to think they have forced the Democratic party to take an open stand against protection. They have interpreted the tidal wave of last year to mean a change in public opinion on this vital question.

Nothing could be more unfair or further from the truth and if the free traders in the present House begin a crusade against the industries of the country the year 1884 will see them buried under such an avalanche of defeat that Mr. Greeley's campaign will be as nothing to it.

When the Democratic success in [illegible], in 1880, gave us an almost positive assurance of success in the national contest, our Republican antagonists, driven to despair, concentrated all their strength on that weak spot in our armor, "A tariff for revenue only." They pointed to our magnificent prosperity, and demanded of the people if they wanted a change. They contrasted our workingmen's position with those of free trade England, and the response our work[men] sent back was felt in Ohio and Indiana.

Our position as a first-class nation has been built up on the principle of protection. Without it we would be merely an agricultural people. And now, when England [illegible] of all Europe is a free trade [illegible] which even her colonies [illegible] against her [illegible] when even [illegible] is agitating for [illegible] only protection, [illegible] it is absurd to be asking [illegible] the Democratic party [illegible] exploded [illegible] as an intelligent nation of workingmen and ask their support [illegible] of monopoly, as [illegible] our manufacturers, [illegible]. How can there be [illegible] in the manufacture of iron or steel or glass or silk? The field is an open one, and if capital is so richly rewarded in the manufacture of any or all of them, there is nothing to prevent any [illegible] sharing it. Let us once open our ports to the manufacturers of England and Germany, and [illegible] will stop, prices will [illegible], property will depreciate. Of [illegible] many things will be cheaper, but who ever knew cheap prices and prosperity to go hand in hand?

No, no! The Democratic party must keep its hands off the industry of the country. Debased or cheap labor is not desired here.

We are a nation of producers and consumers. You cannot legislate for one at the expense of another; they are not distinct; they are one. Every one produces something; every one consumes something. The farmer gets a good figure for his produce from the well-paid mechanic or laborer. You cannot strike one without injuring the other. Free trade has brought England to the verge of ruin, and now, when her statesmen are seeking means to alleviate the distress of her people, we are not foolish enough to adopt the system which is mainly responsible for that distress. Let the imported luxuries of the country pay the taxes of the country. Let our rich people spend their money in the country where they made it. We had slavery; we want no more debased labor. It paralyzed the South; it will paralyze the whole country.

The tidal wave of 1880 meant the desire of the people to purify national politics from the peculation of politicians.

But it did not mean free trade; it did not mean the prostration of our industries; and if the Democratic party interprets it in this way, Belshazzar's fate awaits it as surely as the issues of 1884 are joined.

BARTLEY CAMPBELL.

The General Executive Committee of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, held its fourteenth annual meeting at Des Moines, Iowa, commencing Nov. 2, and adjourned on the 11th. Mrs. L. G. Murphy was elected President and Mrs. J. T. Gracey, Secretary; Mrs. Hauser and Miss Gatch, Assistant Secretaries. The interest of the occasion was heightened by the presence of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Craven, Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Johnson, of India, Miss Spencer, of Japan, and Rev. Mr. Harris and Mrs. Rev. Davisson, who contributed valuble information relative to their work. The reports from the different branches showed encouraging results and a general advancement of the work. The Heathen Woman's Friend, has helped the Society by its surplus gains and usefulness in the work. The aggregate collections for the year amounted to $124,823.33. It was decided to raise $25,000 as an endowment fund next year, as a special centennial offering, and to give aid in supporting the appeal of Rev. Mr. Craven to publish an illustrated Christian paper. The report of the home work shows the number of auxiliaries to be 36,653—an increase of 7,593. The use of 11,000 mite boxes added several thousand dollars to the treasury. The summary of foreign work shows about 45 American missionaries, with about 20 assistants. The following ladies were accepted as missionaries: Miss Hattel Mansell of Ohio; Miss Correy, of Michigan; Miss Rebecca Grew, Miss Lizzie Fisher, of Ohio, Miss Dee Hurey, of New Jersey. The appropriations for the different fields were as follows: India, $59,200; China, $37,504; Mexico, $17,630; Japan, $25,153; South America, $3,510; Italy, $3,325; Bulgaria, $6,550—total, $159,182. The committee adjourned to meet in Baltimore in November, 1884.

The King of [illegible] is truly a paternal monarch. Finding that during the [illegible] severe weather the royal [illegible] were suffering greatly from Colds and Coughs, this good old gentleman ordered a supply of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for them and now the sentries are happy.

The only weapon which the saloon fears is prohibition.

Brinley is an eccentric chap, and often does strange things—eminently philosophical, but queer, you know. And so it was that, upon becoming engaged to be married, he presented to the young lady a ring, on the inside of which was engraved the motto, "In time of peace prepare for war."

There is hardly an adult person living but is sometimes troubled with kidney difficulty, which is the most prolific and dangerous cause of all disease. There is no sort of need to have any form of kidney or urinary trouble if Hop Bitters is taken occasionally.

On the subject of choirs, Mark Trafton says in Zion's Herald: "Give me bass a drum or a Chinese gong, rather than our quartettes of two youngsters with their hair parted exactly in the middle, and a pair of young girls with their wool gathered over their eyes like a merino sheep or a scotch poodle, who troll out something which noboy can understand, and call it 'the praise of God.'"

Tennyson's "May Queen."

Who knows that if the beautiful girl who died so young had been blessed with Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" she might have reigned on many another bright Mayday. The "Favorite Prescription" is a certain cure for all those disorders to which females are liable. By druggists.

From a Clergyman Seventy one Years of Age.

A clergyman in Cleveland, Ohio, seventy one years of age, who had preached regularly nearly every Sunday for over fifteen years, says in a letter dated February 8th, 1882, a few weeks after commencing the use of Compound Oxygen:

"My strength was equal to the work until about a year ago, when I began to fail, and had come to the conclusion that my work, if not my life, was nearly at an end. But now I am quite a new man; yes, the revitalizer has introduced new life into my almost dead organs. I can say that I am well, with the exception of a little soreness in my throat. Allow me to give thanks, first to God, and then to you, for these blessed hours of health."

Our "Treatise on Compound Oxygen," containing a history of the discovery and mode of action of this remarkable curative agent, and a large record of surprising cures in Consumption, Catarrh, Neuralgia, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., and a wide range of chronic diseases, will be sent free. Address Starkey & Palen, 1109 and 1111 Girard St., Philadelphia.

The blessings to which the Saviour invites us are noble, exquisite, enduring, beyond the conception of finite minds. They extend alike to the soul and the body; they fill time; they spread through eternity. They include the best provisions for our wants, the best conduct for our lives, and the perfect security of our well-being.

It is granted by every one that liquor-drinking puts lots of sin and crime and unhappiness in the world. There come from it the things that ministers and churches and good men and women must try to put down if they are faithful to their duty and conviction.

Mr Timothy Cole, the most widely known of American wood-engravers, was a passenger by the Canada, which recently sailed for Havre. He goes abroad in the interest of The Century Co., to engrave for publication in The Century the masterpieces of Europe. He expects to work in the galleries of Holland, Belgium, France, Spain, Italy, Germany, and perhaps Russia (St. Petersburg), and will remain abroad about three years.

Eight Years' Scrofula Cured.

A valued correspondent, Albert Simpson, Esq., writing from Peoria, Ill., says: "Samaritan Nervine cured me of scrofula, after having suffered for 8 years with the disease." Mr. Simpson lives in Peoria. Ask him. Your druggist keeps it. $1.50.

"Oh, my dear sir," said a poor sufferer to a dentist, "that is the second wrong tooth you have pulled out." "Very sorry, sir," said the blundering operator, "but as there were only three when I began I'm sure to be right the next time."

The largest single donation to education which Canada has yet known is that which Mr. Gooderham, of Toronto, announced on Friday last at the opening of the Methodist Theological College of Montreal, of one million dollars for the foundation of a Methodist university in Toronto.

Down in Kentucky, in the good old Bourbon district, Democrats have a hard time in the spring of the year, when flowers are late in blooming, in protecting their rosy noses from the busy bees, which mistake them for full-blown roses.—Inter-Ocean.

TUTT'S PILLS
TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.
From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect
ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
HE FEELS LIKE A NEW MAN.
"I have had Dyspepsia, with Constipation, two years, and have tried ten different kinds of pills, and TUTT'S are the first that have done me any good. They have cleaned me out nicely. My appetite is splendid, food digests readily, and I now have natural passages. I feel like a new man." W. D. EDWARDS, Palmyra, O.

Plantation Melodies
—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. E. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

FOURTH QUARTER. LESSON XII. Dec. 23d. DEATH OF SAUL AND JONATHAN. (I Sam. xxxi, 1—13.)

When God called Saul to be king, he was tall and grand looking, and his heart was right in God's sight. For a time Saul obeyed and honored God; then he allowed sin to enter his heart. Little by little he grew wicked, until he even became a murderer in his heart. God wanted him to be good, gave him every chance, but Saul would not obey. So Saul [illegible] the crown and the [illegible] king a long time after [illegible] David was to be king and Samuel had anointed him. [illegible] and King Saul had to go [illegible] to battle, but he went alone. [illegible] not with him. This [illegible] was on Mount Gilboa [illegible] of them was Jonathan. He knew his father was not obeying the [illegible] he knew David was appointed to be king instead of Saul. When [illegible] the battle had gone against him, the heart was full of grief [illegible] trouble. Then the archers of the enemy would kill him, so he killed himself. The crown was gone. Sin had taken all. Can't we learn a lesson from Saul. Don't let hate and jealousy into your hearts. They will take your crown away. Just open the door a little and sin creeps in and will rob you of your crown and home in heaven. —Western.

Van Buren, Ark.

Mrs. Emma J. Pickett, wife of Rev. Calvin Pickett, of Tennessee Conference departed this life, at her home in West Nashville, Nov. 20, 1883. Sister Pickett was born in Shelbyville, Tenn., Nov. 26, 1859. When young her desire for education was apparent to all, and the foundation, upon which she afterwards built was laid by Messrs. Dunlap and the Rev. Winter C. Woods. In 1874 she gave heart and hand in marriage to her now bereaved husband. Moving to this city after marriage, she professed hope in Christ, was baptized under the administration of Rev. James Pickett, joined Clark Chapel M. E. Church. She graduated from Central Tennessee College in 1880, and successfully taught in the public schools of the State for some time. She remained a faithful member of Clark Chapel until her death. She was, during the pastorate of the undersigned, always ready and willing to do what she could for the Church. Her husband and relatives have the sympathy of the entire community. Her funeral sermon was preached by the writer, assisted by Dr. J. Braden and Rev. Wm. Sinclair, to a crowded house of mourners. She died trusting in Jesus who freed her from her sins and whose love and comfort she expressed as precious during her last hours. We hope to meet her beyond the flood. L. M. HAGOOD.

On Oct. 8, 1883, in this city, a woman whose fame is unsung, whose virtues were known but by few, but another such mother in Israel will be hard to find. Sister Biglow was 70 years old and to her more than any woman of her age I have known were the words of Solomon applicable, viz: "The hoary head is a crown of glory." Her funeral was preached by the writer to a large and sympathetic audience. She died as she had lived, a faithful, energetic and consistent member of Clark Chapel, this city. L. M. HAGOOD.

There is no affinity between cheap and valueless beef wine, and iron tonics and the Leibig Co's Coca Beef Tonic, a real conservant of strength and restorative of health. "It is the best tonic there is. Every physician to whom I have recommended it has found it so," says Professor H. C. Drake, M. D., Detroit, Mich. It imparts new tone to the liver, stomach, kidneys and bowels, and by its regulative action affords relief from headaches, neuralgia, constipation and languor. Beware of imitations.

The king of Burmah is drinking himself to death through disappointment at the birth of a princess instead of a prince. He blames the unfortunate queen, whose life is in jeopardy, while she in turn blames the astrologers.

King Hipemah of Anam has been poisoned. The new King is Trephon. The revolutionary party is paramount and war against France has been proclaimed. The French force in Hue is insufficient to meet the danger.

AN ONLY DAUGHTER CURED OF CONSUMPTION.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidently made a preparation which cured his only child of Consumption. His child is now in this country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that Consumption can be positively and permanently cured. The Doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two 2 cent stamps to pay expenses. This Herb also cures Night Sweats, Nausea at the Stomach and will break up a fresh Cold in 24 hours. Address Craddock & Co. 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, naming this paper. n44-14t

Littell's Living Age For 1884.

For forty years The Living Age has been published with uninterrupted success, and has enabled its readers, at small expense of time and money, to keep pace with the literary progress of the age. Frequent in issue, and unequalled among periodicals in amount of matter, it furnishes an unrivalled compilation of a great and growing literature which embraces the productions of the most eminent living writers in all departments of literary and scientific work. And as this literature grows year by year in extent and importance, The Living Age becomes more valuable. Filling the place of many periodicals, it can hardly be dispensed with by any American reader who desires a thorough compendium of the best literature and thought of the time. Its prospectus for 1884 is commended to the attention of all who are selecting their reading-matter for the new year. Reduced clubbing rates with other periodicals are given, and to new subscribers remitting now for the year 1884 the intervening weekly numbers are sent gratis. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers. In the New Madison Avenue Methodist Church, New York, $92,000 was raised at one collection to pay a debt upon the house, and in the evening of the same day $20,770 more was raised to wipe the debt clean out. The entire cost of the property is $262,770.

Our Progress.

As stages are quickly abandoned with the completion of railroads, so the huge, drastic, cathartic pills, composed of crude and bulky medicines, are quickly abandoned with the introduction of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are sugar-coated, and little larger than mustard seeds, but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts. ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Editorial Notes.

Dr. C. C. McCabe announced Dec. 12th, that the debt on the Metropolitan church had been fully provided for.

Now you have gathered your crop, and have a few dollars in hand, why not buy a home? Small though it be, get a home.

There was an increase in the Sunday-school scholars of the North Georgia Conference, M. E. Church South, during the past year, of [illegible], and a net increase in the church membership of over 2000.

The holiday number of the Northern Christian Advocate, was printed on heavy paper, and devoted to articles and illustrations on the subject of education, and Methodist enterprises.

The colored people of the United States [illegible] President Arthur, Justice Harlan, and [illegible] for [illegible]

A [illegible] was held [illegible] it, to [illegible] a revival of the old time [illegible] camp-meeting. Bishop Wiley presided. Such gatherings ought to hold at many other points.

In pursuance of [illegible] of Congress, adopted [illegible], the President [illegible] the [illegible] by [illegible], at Annapolis, of the [illegible] as Commander-in-Chief of the army.

The Democratic State convention at Baton Rouge, after a spirited preliminary contest in settling the credentials of numerous contestants, made the following nominations: For Governor, S. D. McEnery, of Ouachita; Lieutenant Governor, Clay Knobloch, of Lafourche; treasurer, E. A. Burke, of Orleans; attorney-general, M. J. Cunningham, of Natchitoches; secretary of State, Oscar Arroyo, of Plaquemines; auditor, O. B. Steele, of Union; superintendent of public education, Warren Easton, of Orleans. Two commendable resolutions appear in the platform, declaring that a great deal more must be done to make the public schools more efficient, pledging [illegible] of land sales to education and immigration; and declaring hostility to lottery dealing "as demoralizing society, corrupting politics and impeding legislation."

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, M. E. Church South, makes special mention of a certain member of the North Georgia Conference, who was called upon to answer complaints by his people against him for playing croquet. We would like to have Zion's Herald note this fact for the benefit of certain New England preachers, whom we used to know in the days of yore.

According to the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, M. E. Church South, the North Georgia Conference gave a "most substantial endorsement" of the Paine Institute by contributing at its last session the sum of $610 to that worthy enterprise, about which so much has been said and written. The Louisiana Conference Methodist Episcopal Church, gave its endorsement of the Gilbert Haven School of Theology by subscribing toward the enterprise over $5,500, and up to date have paid over $3000 of that subscription.

According to some of our cotemporaries nearly all men and women who have been convicted of the crime of murder go straight from the gallows to heaven. We want it distinctly understood that we have no faith in these gallows conversions. Men cannot make a mere flippant jaunt into the kingdom of God. Heaven is not being populated with thieves, cut-throats, robbers and murderers. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap". Men may cheat themselves but never God, and seldom the Devil.

A meeting to endorse a petition to Congress, for the establishment of a line of mail steamers between a port in the United States and Monrovia, Liberia, was held on the evening of the 18th, in the Austerlitz Street Baptist Church. Mr. J. W. Pierce called the meeting to order. Rev. J. H. Hall was president. R. J. Davis and E. Bentley secretaries. President Alexander, of Straight University, President Reeves, of Leland University, and Hon. Wm. M. Burwell, were the speakers. The petition was unanimously endorsed, and a resolution suggested by Mr. Burwell, that New Orleans be nominated as the point of departure of the proposed line of steamers, and requesting our Senators and Representatives in Congress to support the same.

It is thought to be the intention of the friends of General Grant to present his name again for the presidency. It is quite evident that General Grant has no idea of going into retiracy. On the recent Northern Pacific excursion he was never invisable when a crowd collected; was always ready to speak when called upon, and on several occasions made two or three speeches in one day, and good ones at that. General Sherman, a short time since, was reported as saying that Grant had ruined himself by going into politics, but Grant does not look upon it in that light, and is not loth to take a little more ruin of the same sort if he can get it.—Pittsburg Advocate.

We know of no name that could possibly do more to electrify and bring out the rank and file of the Republican vote of both races in the South, than that of General Grant. Beside these, many Democrats who admire pluck and greatness would doubtless vote for him. He deserves all the honor that can be bestowed upon him, and should not be slain upon the altar of the third term heresy.

Observations in the South.

BY E. K. YOUNG, D.D.

Two facts become apparent to the observant traveler in the South. Whatever his previous opinions or prejudices, and whatever reluctance to believe what he sees, he is not long in discovering, and is forced to admit, that in the lower ranks of the white population there is very little evidence of advancement; on the other hand, the colored people are everywhere seizing their new opportunities with intense eagerness and making rapid progress in every department of education and industry. Sitting by my side, during the session of the Mississippi Conference (colored) at Meridian, was a pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He had watched the proceedings with great interest and manifest amazement at the intelligence and business-like conduct of the conference, and turning to me said, "These colored men are getting ahead of us; they are going faster in all respects than we are." Substantially the same statement was made to me repeatedly in different portions of the South by intelligent Southern gentlemen who were prompted to say it by no love for the negro. In all our colored Conferences are young men who have taken a full college course, read Greek and Latin, and speak as correct and elegant English as educated white preachers, while in the other learned professions educated colored men are taking high rank. It will require but a single visit to our educational institutions in the South, and such observation as attendance upon the sessions of our colored Conferences affords, to settle all doubts as to the utility and productiveness of our work among the Freedmen. No investment of time, talent and money that our Church has made has returned larger dividends, and gives promise of greater results in the future.

And toward this work there is a growing cordiality on the part of the South. Major Breckenridge, a son of John C. Breckenridge, and Congressman from Arkansas, said to me, "Your Church is doing a grand work. It is bringing to these people what they most need—the spelling book and the Bible. We are in full sympathy with you." A kindlier spirit prevails and little of the former hostility toward the "nigger teacher" manifests itself anywhere save in the decaying debris of old Southern aristocracy.

A strong desire to know the actual facts and ascertain the real status of our Southern work was gratified in a recent visit to the Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas Conferences, and a later one to the Conferences and educational institutions of Tennessee and Georgia, and basing our opinion on personal observations in these fields we have no hesitation in saying that abandonment of this work, crippling it by retrenchment, would be an act of unwisdom, of which we believe, the Methodist Church will not be guilty. It cannot be denied that some phases of our white work in the South gave occasion for the gloomy deliverances and strong declarations that reached the public ear from the recent session of our Missionary Committee. On the surface there is a seeming of failure. Results in the past have not been commensurate with the investments made. Expectation has been disappointed. Churches built to meet a supposed want have been sold under mortgage, and schools, established by Northern money, in localities that seemed to demand them, are seen to be unfortunate ventures and fast going to decay. Churches that were strong and flourishing ten years ago are utterly disintegrated now and valuable property has been sacrificed in consequence. These are facts that stand against our white work in the South and seem to justify the strong words of Bishop Foster and others. And the explanation is at hand:

1. The work has been conducted on an un Methodistic basis. The dominant desire has been to secure social rank and distinction. Effort has been mainly directed on that line. The doors have been wide open to men who by virtue of wealth, social rank, or political position, would give the Church respectability and standing, and only slightly ajar to those destitute of these qualifications. Ostracted itself, it has sought by ostracising others to win its way back to social influence and favor. The color line has been distinctly drawn, and the black man has received no cordial welcome at the threshold of these white folds.

2. Unworthy men have been in high official positions—men neither intellectually nor morally qualified for leadership; where there was need of wise management there been gross mismanagement. Instead of unselfish devotion there has been in many instances selfish greed. A work requiring sagacious counsels and leaders with clear heads and pure hearts has been largely in the hands of men who have made their opportunities subserve their [illegible] ends and brought injury upon the Church by culpable blundering.

3. A spirit of [illegible] of the Conferences—notably the Central Tennessee where it amounts almost to proscription. The "native" preachers who fancy that their accident of birth within the boundary lines of the Conference entitled them to special rights and privileges, regard with open disfavor the coming of any into their field who are so unfortunate as to have been born outside these limits. No transfers are wanted and if any come they are coldly received and deliberately frozen out. This effort to build a Chinese wall of exclusiveness around themselves has been measurably successful and partially accounts for barren fields and fruitless labors.

Looking only at this discouraging phase of the subject and with only these facts in mind it is not surprising that some of the wisest men of the Church should advocate the abandonment of the field. But there is another side and other facts that should have due consideration before the final judgment is rendered.

1. The character of the work is undergoing a marked change. Effort is turning into different channels. Experience has taught our brethren of the South valuable lessons which will not be unheeded. The folly of trying to secure social standing by the questionable methods of the past is now fully demonstrated. The old Methodist ideas of aggressive spirituality is asserting itself. Direct and persistent endeavor to save men by the power of the Gospel is bringing back something of the old time success.

2. Earnest, educated and thoroughly consecrated young men are coming to the front. Leadership is passing into better hands. Vigorous administration on the part of some of the bishops and fearless dealing with incompetent and untrustworthy men, who have perverted their official position, is having a salutary effect.

3. Our membership in the South is composed largely of men who were loyal to the Government—when loyalty meant the loss of property and the peril of life. They were staunch Unionists—some of them fighting in the ranks of the Union army—all of them true to the old flag. The current notion that our Church in the South is made up of 'poor white trash' is an error. It has drawn its membership mainly from the middle class—the class that furnishes the Nation with its best material. These men are as loyal to the old Church as they were faithful to the Government in its hour of need. To desert them now would be the basest ingratitude.

Looking over the entire field and giving due weight to all the facts, we are persuaded that our forces must not be withdrawn from the Southern field, but strengthened by larger supplies and reinforced by new recruits.—Central.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Hot Springs District.

I began the work of the fourth quarter on this district at Baber's Chapel, on Paraclifta circuit, Nov. 10-11. The quarterly conference was held at the conclusion of the business of the district conference, which was held at the same place. There was a full attendance of the official members. The pastor, Rev. G. W. Baber, made a good report showing advance all along the line. He has labored hard this year, and the Lord has blessed him with about one hundred conversions and about one hundred accessions to the church this year. The Sunday services were well attended; eighty-five partook of the communion of the Lord's Supper. The people at this place love our church, and give better collections according to their ability than anywhere else in the district. The revival influence that was awakened during the quarterly meeting ran on for some time, resulting in about fifteen conversions and accessions to our church. This society was organized one year ago by Bro. Baber, and now they are about one hundred strong, have built a church, and hope to get a deed to the land soon.

Fulton circuit, Rev. Ed. Spencer pastor, has had a small increase in her membership, and has two churches in process of erection. The fourth quarterly conference for this work was held at Fulton, in the C. M. E. Church, Nov. 12. Our little band at this place loves our church and her ministry, and they know how to show their appreciation. Bro. Spencer, the pastor, is a young man and is in the second year on trial in the conference. He loves his books and his preaching shows that he studies them. He will make his mark in the world if he keeps up his habits of study. I believe in giving such young men all the encouragement we can, for they will be heard from in the years to come.

Texarkana Station, Rev. M. Lockman pastor, is not having the success that ought to attend the faithful labors he has given this work. Soon after I was appointed on the district, and before I visited Texarkana, I learned of their internal difficulties. The change of pastors did not bring harmony as some thought it would. It is to be feared that some of the members are not as pious as they ought to be. The pastor is trying to build a parsonage but gets little help from the society. Where church members go to theatres and dances from two to four nights each week, they are not likely to attend class and prayer meetings regularly. There are some good people in Texarkana, and there are some in the church who are none too pious. We hope Texarkana will do better, as we will soon get our new church finished. The fourth quarterly meeting for this charge was held Nov. 17-18. Texarkana is a new charge, organized since last annual conference. Bro. Lockman has charge and is assisted by Rev. W. Lee, a young local preacher. There has been some success on this work. A few Sundays ago, on this work, a Baptist pastor joined our church and turned over to us a house of worship which he owned, but did not own the land. We hope to get a tract of land near by and move the house upon it.

Garland City, Rev. G. W. Thompson pastor. This is a new circuit recently organized. We have a good Sunday-school on this work, and a few members, with a good future prospect. Bro. Thompson, the pastor, is a candidate for admission to the traveling connection. He is a good, conscientious Christian, and will be a valuable addition to our conference.

Bright Star is a new point down near the Louisiana State line, west of Red River. Bro. Lee was employed as supply but owing to protracted illness did not do anything on the work, and I gave him work with Bro. Lockman, and attached Bright Star to Garland City circuit. We have a fews members there and hope to build up a good society in this neglected place.

Brethren, take all your benevolent collections and bring up good reports to the annual conference. May God bless you abundantly.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

TEXAS.

A. M. Mason, Lone Oak: "The fourth conference was held by Rev. W. Goodwin, pastors' report showed some increase in membership. Trustees reported $553.41 paid out on building; to pastor $156,50; for missions $20. There was no church when I came here, but we have secured an acre of ground, paid for it, and built a parsonage and church. Rev. E. Coggswell, of Alleyton, was among us and rendered good service."

E. Henderson, Georgetown: "Elder Madison is beloved by the people, and is a wise instructor and able preacher. Fourth quarter reports showed the work to be in a prosperous condition. Paid elder last year $45.60; pastor $221.09; on improvements $72.50."

G. W. Townsend, Columbus: "We gained 32 members last year; 3 have died. We built a church at Smithville Point, where there is a faithful little band of 18. It is 6 miles west of Columbus. Nearly all own their own homes. At Alexander, 20 miles south, we have 32 members who meet in a school house. Mrs. J. Tanner, the teacher, works in the Sunday-school. At Thompsonville, 4 miles south, we have [illegible] members, 15 have moved off. The people work on large plantations, and make little if anything. At Wrights Point, 8 miles southeast of Columbus, we have 94 members, good workers for Christ. There is a good school here, taught by Mrs. M. E. Townsend, which has given satisfaction. I visited Oakland Circuit and found Rev. Cooper and family enjoying health. I preached at Independence and met many of my old friends."

P. M. Carmichael, Victoria: "On the eve of my taking leave for the annual conference, I want to give to the public my work here at this place. When I came to this charge three years ago I found 130 members. Since that time it has increased to 215 full members and 5 probationers. I feel that I am bringing to a close three years of successful labor. The church during the three years has raised for all purposes up to date, the sum of $1,823.90, in addition to that they have built for themselves a fine two-story frame building for school purposes, costing $1,755, of which amount they raised and paid since April $1,431. All amounts to $3,254.90, every dollar of which was raised by the people. Having to build for themselves a school house this year, and being strained to the very [illegible] me to fail to raise all my benevolent money, but I think I will get every cent apportioned. Presiding Elder M. Henson held our fourth quarterly conference Nov. 24-25. Almost every time before when the elder came it would be a time of rejoicing, but this time it was joy and grief for many felt as though they would never see him again, but they sorrow not as those that have no hope for they expect to meet him in glory. On Saturday morning at 9 o'clock the conference met, nearly all the brethren were present, and the business of the conference passed off nicely. Sunday morning the elder gave the children a nice lecture; at 3 o'clock he preached and baptized 6 children; at 7 a large congregation met to listen to him preach from the text, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." After which the sacrament was administered and a collection of $28.20 was taken up. He that succeeds me will find the people at this charge a good people, but there is room for some improvement."

TENNESSEE.

J. L. Massey, Martin: "On return from conference we held a committee meeting to gather up the benevolent money. Rev. John Gaston spoke on the advancement of the Church in this section; and Prof. L. W. Rogers made a grand speech on the sad condition of men without education. Other addresses were made by Miss Samantha Martin, Miss Belle Silverthouth, Mrs. Martha Loveless. Sister Rena Martin could not be present on account of sickness in her family, but sent $10 collected for the cause. Sister Caldwell, who was sick, sent in $2.25."

The Four Great Crimes of Spain.

The rise of the Spanish power was not less remarkable and rapid than has been its decline. As late as 1478 Spain was of as small account in the sum total of European affairs as she is to-day. Two monarchs divided between them the sovereignty of the Northern provinces, while in the South still remained an apparently firm foundation of an imposing fragment of that Mahommedan empire which was so noble in its original splendor, so majestic even in its decay. It did not seem possible that this isolated peninsula, hidden away behind the then practically impassable barrier of the Pyrenees, torn with domestic feuds, and not yet free from the foreign yoke fastened upon it eight centuries before, could ever assume the proportions and the authority of a first-class nationality, much less that such a vast and momentous change could be wrought in a little more than a hundred years. Yet, in 1590, the whole of this peninsula, including Portugal, was thoroughly consolidated under one government; Grenada had fallen, and with it the last vestige of Moorish rule; while beyond the Pyrenees Spain had acqured Artois, Franche Comte, the Netherlands, the Milanese, Naples, Sicily, Sardinia and the Balearic islands. Looking westward she had the Canaries, and in the then newly discovered hemisphere her possessions covered sixty degrees of latitude, and included both the tropics. Mexico, all of what is now California, a large portion of the Mississippi Valley, Central America, Venezuela, Peru, Chili, Cuba, San Domingo and Jamaica were hers. In Africa she held Ceuta, Menilla, Bougiah and Tunis, and overawed all Barbary. In Asia she had planted colonies on each side of the Deccan, owned part of Malacca, all of the Spice islands, and shadowed with her flag the whole of the magnificent Philippine archipelago. It might then have been said of Spain, more truly than is now said of England, that "her morning drum-beat echoed round the globe." Yet only a century later Spanish dominion was destroyed in Europe, Asia and Africa, and so completely undermined in America that, except in the mere form, it was virtually dead. To-day, the feeble remnant of the mighty power which once threatened the liberties of the old world and invaded the treasures of the new, is struggling for the ownership of the single island which is almost all that is left of the grandest colonial domain ever ruled by one crown.

Why has Spain fallen so fast and so far? This is a question much too complicated and too extensive for discussion in the columns of a newspaper. To treat it properly and exhaustively would require a dozen volumes and the combined genius of a Gibbon and a Buckle. Our present purpose is to very briefly sketch four gigantic crimes which Spain has committed, and which undoubtedly have had a profound effect upon her destinies. To what extent these crimes take away the sympathy we might otherwise feel for the victims of such overwhelming national disaster, the reader may determine.

No sooner was the brass placed above the crescent on the walls of the Alhambra, than the conquerors commenced the great work of exterminating heresy by the persecution of that wonderful race which, without a country and without a government, has retained its individuality and its vigor unimpaired amid the vicissitudes of nearly two thousands years. A similarity of belief in the fundamental principles of religion had drawn the Jews and the Mahommedans together in friendly alliance. The doctrine of the unity of God, cherished alike by the children of Abraham and the disciples of Islam, gave them a common rallying point, which was materially strengthened by that taste for literature and science which formed such a marked characteristic of both. And as they had risen and flourished together on Spanish soil, it was not strange, perhaps, that the blow which crushed the one should cripple the other. On the 30th of March, 1492, the edict of expulsion was signed, by which all unbaptized Jews, irrespective of age, sex, or condition, were required to leave Spain by the end of the following July. Those found in the country after that date must suffer death. They were permitted to sell such property as could not be carried with them, but this privilege was valueless, because nobody cared to buy what at the expiration four months would be confiscated and given away. It is estimated that at least four hundred thousand people were driven forth from their ancestral home, for no other reason than that their creed differed from the creed of the majority, and because they were weak and their oppressors strong. Of the pecuniary loss and personal suffering involved in this exodus, the chronicles of the period furnish a fearful account; but it is enough for us to say that by the expulsion of the Jews, Spain was stripped of the most intelligent, energetic, and thrifty of her population. The best merchants, financiers, physicians, and scholars which that age could boast, were among the crowd of fugitives who then crossed the boundaries of that inhospitable land never to return. The ancestors of the present premier of England fled with the melancholy company, and carried to a foreign shore the germ of those literary and political abilities which have since stamped their impress upon British history.

Following close upon the heels of this atrocious and suicidal act, came another of the same kind. Granada had surrendered under a solemn guarantee of civil and religious liberty to all Moors who chose to remain in Spain; but in February, 1502, in direct violation of this pledge, a pragmatica was issued from Seville commanding all unbaptized Moors in the Kingdoms of Castile and Leon above the age of infancy, to leave the country by the end of April. Rather than abandon their faith, all but a comparatively small number gave up the home they had occupied for eight hundred years, and wandered desolate and friendless into the regions of Northern Africa. They, like the Jews were allowed to sell their property if they could; but unlike the Jews, they were not permitted to take any gold or silver with them. Banishment was thus supplemented by beggary.

The Moors who preferred to sacrifice their religion were thenceforth known as Moriscoes, but conversion did not save them from continuous and grievous persecution. They were always objects of suspicion, and the ecclesiastical authorities plied the axe, the halter and the faggot among them until in 1526 it was said there was not a single heretic in all Spain—the leaven of Moorish infidelity having been at last effectually purged out. Nevertheless in 1566 an edict of Phillip II. obliged them to give up everything which even remainded them of their ancient religion. They must learn Spanish, and use it exclusively in speaking and writing; they must destroy all their Arabic books; they must dispense with all Arabic ceremonies and games, and cease to wear Arabic costumes; the women were forced to go unveiled, and bathing being heathenish, all public and private baths were abolished: Stung to madness by these insults and outrages, the Moriscoes, in 1568, rose in revolt, but after three year's desperate fighting they were finally subdued, and then came the climax of their woe. In 1602 the archbishop of Valencia presented a memorial to Philip III. demanding the expulsion of the Moriscoes from the kingdom, on the ground that toleration was an unpardonable sin against God, and, as such, had been the cause of the destruction of the Armada and the failure of the expedition sent to attack Algiers. He insisted that the whole race should be expelled, except such as might be wanted to work in the galleys and toil as slaves in American mines. The worthy prelate, however, suggested that the children under seven years of age might be spared; but his holy brother, the archbishop of Toledo, opposed this leniency, saying that sooner than have one Morisco heretic left to contaminate Christian blood, he would favor the slaughter of men, women and children. Bleda, another celebrated ecclesiastic, thought that, for example's sake, every Morisco should have his throat cut, and if there were any Christians among them God would take care of His own in the next world. In 1609 the necessary order was promulgated, and a million human beinings were hunted like beasts through the length and breath of the land. Thousands died of starvation; thousands were murdered; thousands perished by shipwreck; and the remainder scattered far and wide along the African coast, disappeared so completely that not a trace of them is left. The effects of this heaven-defying crime were speedily visible.

The Moriscoes had been the most skillful agriculturists and mechanics in Spain. They had monopolized the culture of silk, sugar and cotton, and the manufacture of cloths, gloves, tools and weapons. When they went, the industry and the wealth of Spain went with them. Vast areas of territory were left totally desolate. Madrid, which at the beginning of the seventeenth century had a population of 400,000, at the beginning of the eighteenth had less than 200,000. Seville, which in the sixteenth century had 16,000 looms, employing 130,000 persons in the reign of Philip V. had only 300 looms and only a fourth of its former population. Toledo, which in the middle of the sixteenth century had fifty woolen factories, in 1665 had only thirteen. The art of manufacturing silk, for which the city was once famous, was lost, and 40,000 people were thrown out of employment thereby. The glove business, formerly prosecuted in all parts of Spain, was entirely at an end by the middle of the sixteenth century. The southern provinces, once so fruitful and rich, had sunk so low by 1640 that it was impossible to collect even the smallest taxes. Thus did surefooted vengeance overtake the unhappy country whose rulers trampled justice and humanity in the dust at the bidding of ignorance and bigotry. Spain found in Mexico and Peru a civilization higher, purer, in every way better than her own. She not only tore that civilization up by the roots but she literally annihilated the inoffensive people who had been fostered by it. The pages upon which the records of Spanish policy in the new world are written, are steeped in blood and tears. The world never, before or since, has witnessed such awful cruelty, such terrible misery. A distinguished American author says:

"The Spaniards, with an appalling atrocity, proceeded to act towards these unfortunates as though they did not belong to the human race. Already their lands and goods had been taken from them by apostolic authority. Their persons were next seized under the text that the heathen are given as an inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession." It was one unspeakable outrage, one unutterable ruin, without discrimination of age or sex. They who died not under the lash in a tropical sun, died in the darkness of the mine. From sequestered sandbanks, where the red flamingo fishes in the gray dawn of the morning; from fever-stricken mangrove thickets, and the gloom of impenetrable forests, from hiding-places in the clefts of rocks, and the solitude of invisible caves; from the eternal snows of the Andes, where there was no witness but the all-seeing sun, there went up to God a cry of human despair. By millions upon millions, whole races and nations were cut off. The bishop of Chiapa affirms that more than 15,000,000 were exterminated in his time."

If Spain is drinking the cup of sorrow and humiliation to the dregs, in the name of a just and righteous God does she not deserve to drink it?

Hot Springs District Conference.

The Hot Springs District Conference convened at Baber's Chapel on Paraclifta Circuit, Nov. 8, at 2:30 p. m., Rev. L. W. Elkins, P. E., in the chair. W. O. Emory was elected Secretary and G. B. Donelly assistant Secretary and also Recording Secretary. Inasmuch as Bro. Emory's report contained so little information about the business and work of the District Conference I deem it well to make another report.

Rev. L. W. Elkins, in his opening address, said that notwithstanding our many besetments in the work this year the Lord had blessed us and we had cause to thank the Lord that matters were as quiet as they are, and that our success in the future depends greatly on our action in this district conference, and he hoped that peace and harmony would prevail during the conference session; and referring to a difficulty that we had since our last annual conference, and that as the cause of the difficulty was now removed, he hoped that the past might be forgotten and never come up again to cause disturbance; he also said he hoped the spirit of forgiveness, love and union might abound, and that God would help us all to keep the Golden Rule. The conference responded a hearty amen. Bro. Emory re-echoed the same sentiment in reporting his charge; he said that as the fountain source of all our difficulties was now gone, no more to send out its streams of bitterness, he hoped the spirit of forgiveness would be exercised, and that in all the future we would have peace, harmony and brotherly love. The reports of the pastors showed quite a favorable increase in membership and affair progress in church work. Two were licensed to preach, and four were recommended for admission on trial in the conference, and one was recommended for local deacon's orders. The characters of local preachers were examined and passed without exceptions, as was also that of exhorters with two exceptions. There were two candidates for licenses to preach who were rejected although they had both held licenses under a previous administration. The conference was noted for the peace and harmony that prevailed throughout the session, and all who attended it felt that it was good to be there. A resolution was offered by the writer sympathizing with Bro. Emory in the serious difficulties he had to contend with in Little Rock this year, and praying that God would give him grace, wisdom and strength to manage the difficult questions so as to bring honor to the cause and good to the church. This was passed by a unanimous vote. Rev. J. T. Thompson, of Camden Circuit, offered a resolution which was passed by a unanimous vote commending the labors and endorsing the course of Rev. L. W. Elkins, presiding elder, and requesting the Bishop who may hold our next conference to reappoint him to this district next year; and also that a copy of this resolution be presented to the Bishop holding the next conference. A resolution of thanks was offered by M. Lockman tendering the thanks of the conference to the good people of Baber's Chapel for the hospitable manner in which they entertained the conference. Bros. Emory, Donelly and M. Lockman were appointed a committee to prepare a programme of literary exercises for next session of the district conference. Preaching during the session was as follows: Thursday evening, 7:30 p. m., M. Lockman, of Texarkana; Friday at 7:30 p. m., O. Wheeler, of Louisville; Saturday, at 7:30 p. m., Ed. Spencer, of Fulton; Sunday, 11 a. m., L. W. Elkins, presiding elder Hot Springs District; Sunday, 3 p. m., G. B. Donnelly, of Washington; Sunday, 7:30 p. m., Rev. W. O. Emory, of Little Rock. Hot Springs was chosen as the place of holding our next district conference.

American Bible Society.

The meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, New York Dec. 6th, S. Wells Williams, LL. D., in the chair.

A report was presented, showing the results of the Society's work of colportage for one year, ending Oct. 31st, 1883. In the prosecution of this work over 500 different men have been employed. They rendered 46,674 days of service, travelled 555,364 miles, visited 650,940 families, and found 87,080 families which had no Bible in their homes, and supplied 66,546 of these families, besides 37,556 individuals. They put in circulation 349,010 copies of the Scriptures. Of these 276,585 of the value of $105,710,84, were sold, and 71,425, of the value of $17,688,09, were donated.

Grants of books were made by the Board for sale and distribution to the value of about $14,000, and funds to the amount of $250.

In Mantauzas, large numbers of Cubans have manifested a desire for evangelical instruction.

Report was made of Mr. Milne's tour across South America from Buenos Ayres to Arica, the results of his sales being everywhere highly encouraging.

A letter presented from Rev. W. W. Newell, Jr., of the Mac All Mission in France, asked for a grant of funds and mentioned several cases where the circulation of the printed Scriptures had borne fruit in the conversion of men.

Rev. Edwin M. Bliss, of Constantinople, reported the removal of the restriction which retarded the printing of the Scriptures in Turkish with the Arabic character.

One Bible society was recognized as auxiliary in Alabama, Arkansas, and Kansas.

The total receipts for November were $77,903 12, and 134,214 volumes were issued from the Bible House during the month.

There is a story told of an old Indian who was welcome wherever he was known, who lived a miserable life by begging. A kind settler, who knew him well, asked him what it was that he carried about his neck. He said that it was a charm to keep away evil spirits and disease. On opening the old leather cover of the charm, the settler found a regular discharge for the Indian from the revolutionary army, and a certificate in the writing of George Washington, that would entitle him to a pension every year, and to many years of back pay. He supposed himself to be a poor, miserable beggar, and here was a fortune for him. So we go on. The promises and engagements of God's word are worthy of princes. They would make of us kings and priests and sons of God. And yet we live in pinching spiritual poverty. Let us look up our unclaimed possessions, and inherit the promises.

For the first time in many years the Republicans have elected a Mayor in Boston. The result was brought about by a revival of interest in municipal affairs among the wealthy and aristocratic classes who have thought it vulgar to vote. Such a revival would redeem Chicago if it should ever occur here.—Inter-Ocean.

Home Life.

Homes were ordained by God. It was when He placed our first parents in the garden of Eden. Sin came into the world and human life was blighted. Before that, earth was heaven; but from that time it was not to be so. God knew our needs and home was continued, and man, by obedience to His laws, might regain his His favor, and still be happy. Ever since, happy homes, and right living, have been attended by temporal and spiritual prosperity. Where there is love and contentment God's blessing always rests. Notwithstanding the provisions that God made for man, sin has made sad havoc with home life. Intemperance has made wrecks of men and women, and unfitted them for the care and teaching of their families, and it has desolated many homes.

Ill temper is also a great sin, and it has severed many tender ties. Anger fretting and grumbling, is a disease down deep in the soul. The least symptoms of it are alarming, for it grows, and often affects the whole family, until it makes home like no place on earth, for cheerlessness. It is sure to drive children out to seek more congenial associations, only to rush into temptation.

Familiarity with home, makes people unbend, and be themselves, and it is well, when they are able to show their better natures; but when they act themselves at their worst, the effect is unpleasant. No matter, how beautiful a home may look, how orderly and neat, it is not a happy one, where the inmates indulge in fretting and scolding. Tears are there and not heartfelt smiles. Where brothers and sisters are unkind to each other and to their parents, they go out into the world with bad manners and with selfish natures, to do harm, instead of good.

Ingratitude is a great sin; for it makes people undervalue the blessings of God, and causes discontent and weakens one's power for usefulness. Perhaps, on account of our own short-comings, we feel discomfort, and forgetting the blessings of the present, we look into the future for fancied perfection. It is like chasing a bubble, which bursts as we grasp it, and we find that we have nothing. The great boon, for which we seek, is at our own firesides, and among our loved ones. How often we defer being happy, in the same way we defer being good!

We housekeepers, need some intellectual pursuit, to raise us above the daily routine of our lives; then there would be less cause for fretfulness and discontent. For the mind to run always in the same channel is weariness, and change is rest.

Not very many years ago, in New England, women who aspired to much knowledge of books were derisively called "blue stockings." It was thought particularly unfortunate for a man to have one of them for a wife. She was supposed to be spoiled for housekeeping. People's views, in that respect, have changed. Ignorance is not now thought ever to be a blessing. Very likely, it was then thought that a woman could train boys to become noble and intelligent men, able to occupy responsible positions, and not know anything herself. The world is full of inconsistencies, and it has put obstacles in the way of much that is now a blessing to us. We are under great obligations to Dr. J. H. Vincent, for arranging the Chautauqua readings. I have heard women say who belong to C. L. S. C. circle, that their housekeeping has in no way suffered. They even have found that they can preform more labor, because they are made happier, by having something new, every day, to think about. Dr. Vincent believes that there is a glorious field of usefulness for woman in the home, and he has done much to enlarge her sphere there.

Home is made more attractive by the addition of books and papers; and to have them is a real necessity. Children must have proper food for their minds as they expand, and if parents do not furnish it, some one else will provide for them the kind, that can only lead to ruin. They need to read those things that will teach them that there is something higher in life than mere selfish gratification; that happiness does not come in that way.

In a home, the inmates should all be taught that they have a work to do. Not only is it the father's and mother's duty to make it pleasant for their children, but the children should try to make the parents happy by appreciating their kindness and love, and by helping to bear their burdens. Children, with all their activity, are naturally averse to labor unless they have a motive for which to work. I knew a little boy who would not go to church, no kind of persuasion affected him in the least, until his mother told him that she needed his company. That settled the matter. He would go anywhere, as an escort to his mother. And so at home, children who are rightly trained, love to work for a kind mother, and they enjoy doing good, when very young. They like to be thought good for something. "O, get away, you are a bother," has deeply wounded many little hearts that were full of good intentions. Every mother knows how much they do, to brighten home; and what nobler work can women do, than to keep their feet from going astray? As we go upon the streets, we realize that there is a great deal of that work, that has not been done.

Each happy home is a great power for good, in the world. Let us set the example of making our own so, and let us encourage others to do the same.

The great secret of happy home life, is to "abide under the shadow of the Almighty."

We cannot too earnestly urge the necessity of using the new Vitalizing Treatment of Drs. Too many of the cases which come to them are of long standing, and the chances for a radcial and permanent cure just so far removed. That their Treatment benefits or cures so large a proportion of these cases is often as much a surprise to themselves as to the patients. If your cough is becoming troublesome, if you are beginning to lose flesh and strength, and have night-sweats, don't wait a day before sending to Drs. The Creator's Care of the Tongue.

The tongue the Creator was pleased to place in a beautiful arched room; in a horizontal position, that it might be kept quiet and steady; and that it might be kept within its natural bounds he has encompassed it with two walls, one with the finest of ivory; outside of this is a wall of softer substance, but no less protective, and to allay its intense ardor, he has surrounded it with an overwhelming rivulet. And not omitting special directions how and when to use it. Yet, notwithstanding all this divine care, what mischief does it do, and what destruction does it raise! How many conflagrations does it cause! But it can be tamed and controlled that it will never do mischief, and this can only be done by believing and asking Him who commanded the wind and the raging sea to be still, and they obeyed him. He alone can make our tongue pure, peaceable and gentle, for He has said, "If you shall ask anything in my name, I will do it."

A Prize Essay on the Flea.

The "Flea" is incontestaby beyond all other animals, the bosom friend of man. In all climes from Arctic frost to the melting heat of the tropics, in storm and calm, and all other weathers, in wealth or poverty, health or sickness, in jail or palace, cellar or attic, in mountain or valley, in peace or war, at sea or on shore, in good or evil report, in the Democratic or Republican party, under free trade or high tariff, republic, or monarchy, prohibition or high license, the flea has always been true to man as the needle to the pole.

When a family has emigrated from Russia, Germany, Norway, or Ireland, to Canada, Brazil, or Boston, the family flea has unselfishly sacrificed home and native land, to share the fortunes and bed clothes of its hereditary friends. Does a Catholic family turn Protestant or a Protestant turn Catholic, the flea stands by the family every time just the same. Its motto is, First my friends, afterward patriotism and religion.

[illegible] to stocks and have to remove from a marble or brownstone palace to a tenement attic—when cousins and aunts, the dearest of friends, servants, coachmen, grocerymen, milkmen and even the deputy assessor have forsaken them, did any one ever hear of the fleas of the family throwing off their fealty? Never.

When a human family undertakes to be churlish and selfish and to sever their natural relations with their faithful adherents, the flea never relaxes his fidelity. If thrown out, swept out, or drowned out, the flea is ever ready to forgive and forget; he returns good naturedly to his duties in the domestic circle, even if he is obliged to enter by the keyhole, the window, the chimney, in the fur of the family cat or on the back of a neighbor's dog. His affection is unfaltering. He never sulks.

A great amount of nonsense has been written about the affection and fidelity of the dog, and his willing service to his master man. In his way, of course, the dog is friendly to his own particular owner, but when he comes into competition with the flea as a philanthropist, a friend of the race, an unpurchasable lover of humanity, he must be pronounced an ignominious failure.

Had the dog for the past four thousand years been obliged to capture all his food at the point of the bayonet, had we swept him into the fire whenever we could, had we scalded him with hot water and washed him out with cold, stifled him with dog powder, poisoned him with dogbane, chased and worried and hunted and cursed him everywhere, and mounted his legs and mandibles on glass as objects for a microscope, does any one believe the dog's friendship for man would prompt him to volunteer to do the barking for the family, and in the family name and interest, shake the pig by the ear, kill sheep and put the tramps and cats to hasty flight? No.

In place of the dog being the first and fast friend of man, there is no evidence to disprove the hypothesis that the dog's true mission, in his companionship with man, was to preserve the domestic flea from extermination, to afford man's nearest and most confidential friend a sure and safe retreat and a base of operations available in all weathers; a field for recreation, drill, practice; to enable him, under the competent, skillful instruction of his experienced seniors, to guard against all surprises and be equal to all emergencies.

We have no reliable history of the flea previous to the flood; whether he could in antediluvian days jump two hundred times his own length—how many times his own weight he could shoulder and carry, must ever be shrouded in mysterious uncertainty. In the narrative of Job's afflictions, friends and comforters, the flea was not once mentioned. But as the dog was not noticed, we may infer the flea was present and engaged in his customary domestic and business pursuits.

Few people are aware of the affectionate regard which, the world over, fleas manifest for man and their kind solicitous attention to the stranger. Arriving at Melbourne or Sydney by ship, you find a delegation of them have come off with the boarding and health officers to welcome you, and they stay with you while there; when you retire to rest you find they have arranged with a numerous colony of their relatives to serenade you till sunrise. When you come to Callao or Valparaiso or any Spanish port, you are introduced by the first boat that comes from shore to the most active business fleas in the world, save of course those of California and Mexico.

While you shake hands with the Captain of the port, who is the first man on board, a company of pioneers in two divisions are climbing up both your stockings and [illegible] When you reach the shore those in sight will suspend all business on hand to pay their cheerful respects to the newcomer. The flea never permits one to feel lonely or neglected. But it would take a volume to describe all the obligations under which that cruelly maligned and unappreciated acrobat has laid us.—Sel.

WOMAN'S SECRET.

She is over-worked, poor thing Proud, honorable, faithful, womanly, she determined to keep expenses down, and do the work herself. Right nobly has she done it, but at terrible cost. The sparkle that was in her eye when she was a bride is gone. Her once plump and rosy cheeks are now hollow and colorless. She used to step lightly and gracefully, but now she drags one foot after the other with painful weariness.

For the sake of the family she does not mention her aching back, her acutely-painful nerves, her rheumatic twinges, her dyspeptic troubles, or the heavy weight she feels in her right side, that tells her her liver is going wrong. She thinks nobody knows about all that, and she will suffer on in quiet and unrepining patience. Alas! her secret is an open one, for it tells its own tale.

Whisper this in her ear, she ought to know it: Madam, Brown's Iron Bitters will heal your back, calm your nerves, kill your rheumatism, drive out your dyspepsia, and correct your liver. Dollar a bottle. Nearest druggist.

CHEAPEST

Newspaper in the United States.

FOR 1884.

REDUCTION IN PRICE.

The price of The New York Times was reduced on the 18th of September from 4 cents per copy to 2 cents, with a corresponding reduction in the subscription rates. Within three days the circulation of the paper had doubled, and its daily sales are rapidly increasing. Facts like these give plain and positive proof of the excellence and completeness of The Times as a newspaper for the people. But the step that has brought it within reach of every class of readers involves no cheapening of its quality or lowering of its standard. It is, and will continue to be, an able, lively and complete newspaper. Whatever is of human interest in the chronicle of passing events at home or abroad will be found in its columns. It prints more telegraphic matter from all parts of the United States than any other Metropolitan journal. Its special cable dispatches promptly supply its readers with all important European news. While it neglects nothing of general interest, it has gained a recognized pre-eminence for the accuracy and fullness of its political reports and of its news concerning railroads, banks and banking, insurance matters, real estate interests, important legal decisions, military and naval affairs educational progress, and social, religious, and scientific thought and discussion. It gives early announcements of new publications, American and foreign, and it reviews with fairness and critical ability the best books of the day. Its dramatic and musical criticisms are a notable feature of its well-filled pages. Faithful to Republican principles, it is wholly unfettered by considerations of party or faction in expressing its opinions. Its criticisms of parties and of public men and measures are independent, fearless, and honest. [illegible] hobbies, but is in [illegible] with all progressive and reform movements, and amid its graver duties it finds time and the mood now and then to be merry over the foibles of mankind.

The Sunday Times, in addition to the news of the day, contains bright and readable selections from the latest English reviews and magazines, selected and original poetry, and extracts from the newest books.

The Weekly Times gives a compact and complete summary of the news of the week, with editorial note and comment upon topics of national and general interest. It is an admirably complete weekly newspaper and has a large circulation in every State in the Union and in foreign countries. During the Presidential year of 1884 the Weekly Times will furnish its readers with prompt and full information of the progress of the canvass.

THE NEW SHORT ROUTE TO
Kansas and the West.

Attention is called to the new Kansas City railroad line now completed and in operation between Memphis, Tenn. and Kansas City, Mo. By this new route the south and west is brought into close relation. Saving several hundred miles and many hours travel between the two sections. It is in fact now the only practical route from the south to all points in Kansas, Missouri, Colorado and all western states. A through train with Pullman Palace Sleeping car and elegant day coaches leave Memphis daily, running through to Kansas City without change of cars, where it arrives in time to make connection in the Grand Union Depot with all trains leaving Kansas City. For emigrants to the Pacific coast and the Northwest, or for home seekers in Kansas and Missouri, time and money is saved by this short route as against the circuitous routes via St. Louis, heretofore the only outlet. Special low rates are made for this class of business and all are carried through to Kansas City in first class cars on first class trains. Round trip, Land Explorers' tickets on sale at low rates. Send for the Emigrants' Guide, an eight page paper, giving full and reliable information in regard to Kansas and Missouri—mailed Free.

SOILED-PRINT BLEEDS THROUGH

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

L. P. CUSHMAN, Editor.
A. E. P. ALBERT, B. D., Assistant.

THURSDAY, DEC. 27, 1883.

1884. 1884.

Eight or Ten Thousand

Subscribers Wanted.

To all Pastors and Members of the M. E. Church in the Southern States:

It is clearly discerned by all active workers for the church that a strong, vigorous church paper is required, at a central point, to direct the way for success on the line of pure Christian and Wesleyan principles; and by recording the facts of current history, and giving utterance to the wishes of the membership, to assist the Church and Christianity in general.

We are trying to make the SOUTHWESTERN all that our friends have a right to expect, or that we could desire; but we must remind you that your diligent and steady co-operation is absolutely needed to increase our circulation, give us a living support, and to permit us to convey to you each week, in a convenient form, glad tidings from all the fields of labor.

The SOUTHWESTERN is the only official paper of the Methodist Episcopal Church South of the Ohio River; it has been adopted by special vote in seven annual conferences, and circulates in all the Southern States. While the paper now visits thousands of homes each week, there are thousands of others in which it might be placed, as the pastor's assistant and advocate of the church, by a very little effort on the part of its friends.

Begin at once. Send in single subscriptions, lists of five, ten, fifteen, twenty-five, fifty and seventy-five. We rely upon pastors as our agents, but live Methodists everywhere should feel an interest, and send their money right on; and especially from points where pastor's visits are few and far between.

Only FOUR CENTS A WEEK, or TWO DOLLARS A YEAR, is an amount within the means of all. Let us hear from you. Specimen copies sent on application.

Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, 32 Natchez Street, New Orleans.

The reports submitted to the Central Tennessee Conference indicated prosperity.

Send in your orders for Dr. Hartzell's "Christian Educators in Council." A supply on hand. It is the best educational encyclopedia ever issued for practical use in this country.

As papers will be promptly stopped on the expiration of the time of subscription, renewals should be made a week or two in advance, either through a pastor or by forwarding the subscription money direct to this office.

The Colored M. E. Church of America, including the States of Louisiana and Mississippi, recently held their annual conference in this city. Rev. A. K. Hawkins, one of the presiding elders, with a number of his brethren, gave us a pleasant call.

Rev. Dr. Orr, State School Commissoner of Georgia, in a recent speech before the North Georgia Conference stated that the colored people of Georgia pay into the Treasury of the State all that is appropriated to their education except about $20,000. This is what we call splendid for a people who have had only about fifteen years of opportunity to do for themselves. It shows that in this battle with the powers of ignorance and darkness, only give the colored people a chance and they are sure to take it.

Texas.

It is a curious fact that Texas increased in population by a greater per centage than any other State in the Union but one in the last ten years, almost doubling her numbers from 1870 to 1880. The cause of this increase is the favorable climate, cheapness of land and fertility of soil. There are now 226 organized counties in the State, averaging from 225 to 8,188 square miles, while the Texas and Pacific, International and Great Northern railroads, in their progress westward are rapidly opening up to settlement sections of Texas which equal any portion of the United States as a desirable farming country, where good farms and homes can be easily secured. From 1870 to 1880 the farming interests in the several States increased at the rate of 51 per cent., while in Texas the increase was 185 per cent. This marked growth of farming in Texas is obviously due to the rapid settlement of the State by immigrants, who are still coming into it by hundreds every week; hardly a train goes into the State that is not loaded with immigrants, coming largely from Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Europe; but few go to Texas from north of the Ohio. Here is a great field for the Methodist Episcopal Church. She must not stand off or move slowly. She should have an "understanding of the times to know what Israel ought to do," and with a thoroughly organized, united, intelligent spiritual force proceed to the conquest of this State. New church enterprises should be organized, new churches built, and the existing ones greatly strengthened We believe that the whole of our church work should be pushed at every possible point. Anything like neglect or indifference just now would be a misfortune. It may be true that in some respects our church work in the past has not been the most satisfactory, but that is no reason why it should be abandoned. The church made no mistake when she resolved to occupy this field, but she has suffered more than we can tell from the flabbyness and secularity of some of the men she has employed there. We know of men who have occupied prominent positions in some of the conferences who have been a disgrace to our work and Church. And we have been too much in the position of Daniel in the first year of Darius, confessing our sins and the sins of our people, and have been made to say, "Sackcloth and ashes. O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto Thee, but unto us confusion of face as at this day." The records of these bad men are their greatest shame and dishonor. The great cause of the want of the largest measure of success in our church work has been chiefly with the men who have stood before the people as the Church's agents or representatives. But a better day has come, and these men who were so pestiferous in their moral character and influence have gone to their own place. To-day our conferences in Texas are led by an earnest, active, devout and aggressive class of men, who are worthy of the confidence the Church reposes in them. They have a strong claim upon her sympathies.

West Texas Conference.

The West Texas Conference assembled in San Antonio, Dec. 12, 1883, in St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church. The Conference was called to order at 9 o'clock by Bishop Andrews, who conducted the opening exercises; after which the Secretary of the last Conference was requested to call the roll. Most of the preachers were present to respond to their names. Some will respond no more on earth, they have answered to the roll-call in the skies. Rev. B. F. Smith was elected Secretary with the privelege of nominating his assistants. The presiding elders seemed to have arranged all the standing committees, and were ready for an immediate report. Too much care cannot be exercised in selecting conference committees. S. Gates, presiding elder of Waco District, reported a year of prosperity; new churches had been erected and one parsonage. Here the Bishop asked Bro. Gates, "How long after Conference before the men on your district get to their appointments?" Bro. Gates replied, "Most of them within two weeks, a few in the course of four or eight weeks." The Bishop seemed to be of the opinion that such loiterers were out of their place in the Methodist ministry. He spoke some plain and loving words that those slow men ought to heed. M. Henson, presiding elder of San Antonio District, gave a clear and intelligent report of his district and of the work that had been done. Bro. Henson spares no man who neglects his work. In open conference he faces every one who seems to care more for cotton than for the Church of the Lord Jesus. Idleness, frivolity and inefficiency are not commendable traits in the ministers. Starved living for the soul uniformly produces dwarfishness, and dwarfs are apt to be petulant. At the close of this morning session a large amount of work had been done, and yet without hurry or flurry. Bishop Andrews has a genius not only for presiding but for saying suggestive things that must be remembered. A. H. Gillett and the writer were introduced and addressed the Conference. Bro. Gillett never orates, his talks are always appropriate, and full of suggestions that should be regarded.

Second day, Thursday, Dec. 13. The Conference resumed its work this morning at 9 o'clock; Bishop Andrews presiding. George W. Richardson, presiding elder of Columbus district, gave an excellent report of his district. There had been a number of new churches erected, and others improved, with an increase in the membership of nearly two hundred, while the most perfect harmony existed between the presiding elder and the pastors and people, mere personal feeling had never been allowed to contravene the church in her work. C. L. Madison, presiding elder of the Austin district, reported a year of manifest improvement in every department of Church work. The preachers had faithfully attended to their work, and the Lord had given prosperity to the Church. The report of these four presiding elders as to the work on their districts was very encouraging. They are strong men, selected with the greatest care; they have been faithful leaders of their brethren. It was prominent in their reports that no neglect of duty was winked at, and no sins condoned. Most of the preachers gave cheering reports of their work. Throughout a portion of the territory of this conference a severe drought had prevailed, and the people had not raised their own bread, but the preachers came with good reports. The number of the supernumerary and superannuated in this conference seems to us quite large. The characters of these passed, some were referred to the committee on conference relations, and will doubtless be requested to ask a location next year.

Third day, Friday, Dec. 14. Conference resumed its work at 9 o'clock, Bishop Andrews presiding. After reading the minutes took up the third question. Who remain on trial? Under the discussion of this question the presiding elders had the fear of God before their eyes. Men who had not attended to their work, or were noted for their love of ease, and chickens, were discontinued.

When the question—Who are admitted into full connection? was taken up, eleven young men who had been favorably recommended were called to the altar when the usual Disciplinery questions were asked, and the Bishop gave an address on the work and qualifications of the Christian minister that we never heard surpassed. The church was crowded; we hope that the seed sown may spring up bearing fruit an hundred fold. To the question, "Will you wholly abstain from the use of tobacco?" all but one answered, "Yes," he said he would "try;" "try," said the Bishop, "that is not the word. Men who merely try never succeed. The church does not call for men to try to preach, she wants men to preach." Things were evidently growing warm, and this lone brother said, "yes," while all who love clean mouths said, Amen.

The hour had come for the election of delegates to the General Conference. The Bishop gave a few words of instruction and the conference proceeded to ballot when C. L. Madison and S. Gates receiving a majority of all the votes were declared elected, and G. W. Richardson and M. Henson reserve delegates.

Fourth Day, Saturday, Dec. 15th, conference assembled at the usual hour. Bishop Andrews in the chair. The conference Treasurer made his report showing the amount that had been raised for the various benevolent enterprises of the Church: Austin District $303.20; Waco District $270.05; San Antonio District $237,95; Columbus District $172,60. Eight years ago Bishop Andrews held this conference. Columbus District then contributed for the same causes $59.95, and San Antonio $39.75. The Bishop had no record of the other districts. While the collections this year are small, they show a commendable increase as compared with those of eight years ago. We certainly desire to be charitable, but it does seem to us that this conference ought to contribute more then for all the benevolent objects of the church. The American Bible Society is doing the best it can to supply the poor with the word of God, and yet for this grand cause the West Texas Conference in the year of 1883 contributed the meagre sum of $7.90. After the Treasurer made his report Bro. Madison, presiding elder of the Austin District, made stirring remarks putting the responsibility upon the preachers. "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth, and there is that with holdeth more than is mete, and tendeth to poverty."

There was also quite a discussion as to the course to pursue with reference to their conference Seminary. They have a beautiful site in Austin, but no buildings, and no school, and their hearts grow sick at the idea of waiting. If there is any place in the world where the church needs giants, moral and intellectual giants, that place is Texas. Men with starved, barren and dwarfish intellect and sickly moral natures are utterly worthless. We hope that our brethren of the West Texas Conference will not sleep over this school question. Stepping out of the ranks. This morning four men were granted a location at their own request. We would not be captious, but if God ever called these men to preach, location is not the way to happiness and prosperity. It is nothing but supreme folly to suppose we can have God's blessing unless we act in harmony with his will.

Fifth Day, Monday Dec. 17th, conference assembled this morning at half past eight. Bishop Andrews presiding. Religious services were conducted by G. W. Richardson. This is to be the last session. Every man is axious to have the book of fate opened. The reports of the committee were discussed but little. The committee on periodicals strongly endorsed the SOUTHWESTERN, and its editors; and Bishop Andrews made the best speech of the conference, urging the members to see that a copy of the SOUTHWESTERN was placed in all the homes of this people. This editor is especially indebted to the Bishop for that speech. We cannot tell all the work that was done this morning. The preachers had made up their minds to go home, and they rushed the work through, when the Bishop arose and made a few remarks, which we most earnestly hope will be remembered, and announced the appointments as follows:

Notes.

Bishop Andrews, who presided over the four Texas Conferences, was elected Bishop from the pastorate by the Brooklyn General Conference in 1872. He is a great favorite with our brethren in Texas, by his Christian bearing he won all of their hearts. And yet there was no mistaken leniency toward any gross or willful offender. He is pleasant in address—fluent in speech, and clear in thought. No man among his colleagues is more highly esteemed.

San Antonia, the seat of the West Texas Conference, is a charming city. In its general aspects it presents a harmonious blending of old Spain with young America. The older streets are narrow and crooked and bear the impress of their Spanish origin. The modern, which constitutes far the larger portion of the town, are marked by handsome parks, broad avenues and substantial mercantile houses. It is believed that the population now exceeds 25,000 over 10,000 being Germans. We have three substantial churches, one colored, one white English speaking, and one German. We hope that these Methodist preachers will be able to walk abreast. The city has four ward schools, one for the colored children. The St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church entertained the conference grandly.

While attending the West Texas Conference at San Antonio, the Bishop and this editor found a warm welcome to the home of Mr. William Logwood. The days spent in this pleasant home in company with the Bishop will be remembered as among the sweetest expressions of Christian friendship and fellowship.

Though boarding with the Bishop and spending no small part of our time in the room where he and his cabinet held their sessions, and fixed the destiny of so many preachers, we were never once consulted. We make this statement for the benefit of those brethren who were so anxious to have us speak a word to the Bishop as to their appointments.

Conference Sabbath at San Antonio was a delightful day. The Love feast opened in the morning at 9 o'clock. Brother C. D. Madison and J. W. Robinson having charge. Most of the testimonies were short, and to the point. A wonderful baptism of the Holy Ghost came upon the people, and men and women, young and old, seemed to speak as if moved by the Holy Spirit. The sermon of Bishop Andrews at 11 o'clock was characterized by clearness, terseness, and strength. It was a wonderful setting forth of the ability of God to create in men clean hearts, and thus make them good and strong. Before the sermon nine young men were ordained Deacons, after two as elders. At three o'clock five children were baptized, and this editor preached as good a Gospel as the Bishop, but not so good a sermon. Few men can preach like Bishop Andrews. At 7 o'clock Bro. Carmichael preached a sermon that gave great satisfaction to the people.

Rev. W. B. Rankin, Agent of the American Bible Society for Texas says the most ungracious reception he has received during the seven years he has been acting as agent of the Society, was from Rev. Mr. Johnson, pastor of the Congregationalist Church, Paris, Texas. Recently while at Paris Mr. Rankin called upon him, introduced himself and stated his desire to have his co-operation in the work of circulating the Scriptures. Whereupon Mr. Johnson in strong and vigorous style delivered this little speech: "Mr. Rankin, I am from Missouri, and up there we have come to regard the American Bible Society as a nuisance, and Bible agents as bores, and we pastors do not care to be troubled with either." And many others such like things did this man say. By and by there came a lull, and Mr. Rankin replied, "I do not know how you regard the Bible in Missouri, but here in Texas the people believe in it, and treat its agents respectfully." Bidding that preacher good day he left the house. This man evidently belongs to the "sore heads," or "jack snappers;" let him alone and he will soon wear himself out.

Recently we had the pleasure of meeting with Revs. H. Dietz and G. Dosdall the, presiding elders of our German work in Texas and Louisiana. These brethren report a year of religious prosperity in every department of church work. There had been an increase of over one hundred in their membership. During the year they have erected two schools at a cost of over three thousand dollars. Beside they have contributed one thousand dollars for the chapel work in Germany. But the year has been one of great affliction. Rev. W. Felsing had lost his wife; during the session of their conference the wife of Rev. C. Schular now stationed at San Antonio, died. A little before conference the wife of Rev. F. Bahmfak broke her limb and has since died of blood poison. While on his way home from conference, Rev. F. Mumme with his family had to cross a creek, there had been a heavy fall of rain, the water was deeper than Bro. Mumme expected, his horses became entangled and one of his children were drowned, and his wife so chilled and exhausted that it was feared that she would not recover. We stood appalled as these dear brethren related to us the sufferings and sorrows of their brethren, but were thankful that there was light and rest on the other side. May they realize that beneath them and around them are the Everlasting Arms.

Austin, the capital of Texas, is situated on a commanding eminence on the north bank of the Colorado river. And by common consent is regarded as among the most healthful and beastiful towns in in the State. Its present population is estimated at 15,000. It has eighteen church edifices, some of them spacious and handsome. We have six, one Swedish, one German, and one white English speaking, and three colored. Wesley chapel when complete will be one of the most spacious and substantial churches in the city. Sabbath, 9th inst. we spent in this city, attending the Central Methodist Episcopal Church in the morning. It was a union service. The Germans and Swedes uniting with the brethren of the Central to hear Bro. Gillett, who preached an excellent sermon full of gospel truth. We were surprised at the smallness of the congregation, only eighty were present including five preachers.

No church in the city has a more favorable location, but its architect must have been a mere boy, there is neither sense nor taste displayed in its internal arrangement. When the plans already inaugurated are perfected the educational facilities this city can hardly be surpassed. The first of a number of buildings for the State University is now nearly complete, male and female students are to be admitted on equal terms. The only charge will be an initiation fee limited to thirty dollars. Its endowement consists of 1,219,900 acres of the public domain valued at $2.00 per acre, beside notes and State bonds now amounting to $503,364,30. The Tillittson school for the higher education of the colored people is located here. The Freedman's Aid Society have a beautiful site and are planning for the erection of buildings as soon as the funds can be secured. In this last our brethren of the West Texas Conference have a special interest, and at their last conference reported over $2000 cash in hand towards this object.

Misdirected Education.

Deficient as is the state of education among our people, it presents some deplorable features which should carefully be looked after. In our exultation over gratifying results already obtained, we are apt to overlook serious evils connected therewith which should be well guarded. Startling as it may seem, it is a fact, that even education has some connecting evils. Education is nothing more than an increase of power, for weal or woe. The uneducated peasant may be acquainted with but few of the elements of destruction in the world, and has little influence to utilize them to the hurt of his neighbors; but the scholar is familiar with all the known forces of nature and secures there by an influence which he may use disastrously to the injury of individuals, of communities and of generations. To prove a blessing to the world, education must include that of the head, the hand and the heart. It must be sanctified by rays of Divine light from the cross, and from the throne of grace and power. Secular education divorced from the Holy Bible is that from which the church and the nation has most to fear at this time. This is the most unwholesome feature of our present public school system. The State and the nation can commit no greater folly than to exclude the Bible from the schools. It was the efficient and sufficient cause that moved our fathers to seek the then barren waster of North America to find a clime wherein to establish, and a soil wherein to plant, the seeds of political and religious liberty. It is the magna charta of our free institutions. Shall it now be torn and trampled upon at the bidding of bigoted Romanists and scoffing infidels? Too many of our bright test and most promising youths, educated to look upon the Bible as a legendary narrative of a dark and corrupt age of the world, are graduating from, or otherwise leaving the higher institutions of learning, secret or openly avowed deists, atheists and infidels. Too many of them become forgers, ward bummers, gamblers, drunkards, lazey and worthless tramps and vagabonds. Too many of these, who might be faithful servants of their age and generation, are the vicious criminals against all laws. Well directed education, hedged in by the Word of God, never before gave such results. There must be some thing rotten in Denmark. Now what is it? These unfavorable results are due to misdirected efforts in education. It is not sufficiently comprehensive. To be wholesome, it must train the head to think, the hand to work and the heart to embrace righteousness. It must be scientific, industrial and biblical. Anything short of this is putting dynamite in the hands of a child: Many whom we have seen leaving school, as a ship sailing out under a clear sky and an unruffled sea, have made terrible shipwreck, all for the lack of a properly directed education. Another source of much evil is found in a corrupt class of teachers who are too often found teaching in our public schools. Teachers who too often secure positions as teachers as rewards for political services. Such prostitution of a sacred trust by any school board is a crime against nature. While this is true, it is no disparagement to the worthy and selfsacrificing class of our poorly paid and half starved teachers, who labor so faithfully in their chosen calling; verily they shall have their reward; neither are those sympathizing and honest hearted members of school boards, that faithfully exercise their trust, herein criticised. They are honored for their work's sake. The protest is against quite another clan. It is against those whose profession is to gamble upon the education and eternal destino of our children, and the welfare of the nation. Those who value religious and political liberty, and the perpetuity of our institutions, should not be slow in defending our schools against the murderous attacks of Romanism, infidelity, corruption, and the boastful spirit of an arrogant self-constituted Liberalism.

That ye might be filled with all the fullness of God." A full house will give signs of being inhabited. There may sometimes be a single room in a house occupied and the house seem closed and empty, but if every room has a dweller the signs of life will appear to an outsider, though he be a stranger. There will not only be voices within that will be heard outside, but there will be living farmers seen going out and going in. And when all is dark outside the light will stream through the windows. These dwellers may be very cautious and desire to remain secluded, but they cannot be hid, nor can they conceal their real character; in a thousand ways they will show their taste, spirit and aims so that soon the outside world are soon able to judge of the insiders. Now if the soul "be filled with all the fullness of God" we cannot conceal that fact from others. God, filling the whole soul, will shine through the windows. We shall in some way show what is in us, what we really are. The expressions on the face, the tones of voice, the words spoken, the act performed will give proof to all as to the charroter of the inside dwellers.

Rev. G. W. Richardson, of the West Texas Conference, relates the following as to the manner of enforcing church discipline in that State. Years ago, in the early organization of our Church in Texas, two women were accused of immorality. A committee was called and the women were summoned to appear. The trial was opened and proceeded in due form, the evidence was clear and conclusive, and the committee found them both guilty. Whereupon two of the strongest brethren were called upon to take the women by the arm and lead them to the door, and thus turn them out of the church. The brothers came as ordered, and taking one of the women by the arms, requested the people to "Sing a hime suitable to the solum occasion," proceeded to conduct the woman to the door, and thrust her out of the church, the people singing, "Hark from the tomb a doleful sound." The other one, observing the process of expulsion, took advantage of a little lull and ran out of the church, when she turned around and with an air of trinmph shouted back, two or three times, "You did not turn me out."

NOTES AND ITEMS.

Our fourth quarterly conference and meeting were held at Eola, Nov. 25. In consequence of short crop many of the members and friends of our church here had gone into the sugar belt to work, and had not returned, hence it was that but a very small congregation met on this occasion. Those present, however, seemed to be in good cheer, and gave evidences of a well-grounded hope. This had been a comparatively hard year, but notwithstanding that fact doubtless some good had been accomplished. Bro. Luster seemed a little low-spirited, but cheered up by Sister Luster, who is a valuable "help-meet," he is planning to close up his year's work in a creditable way. Bro. Luster has secured from Mr. Hayes, a leading merchant in the parish of Avoyelles, the promise of a building site for our church at Bunkie, on the Texas & Pacific railroad. The location is splendid, and hopes are entertained that a church can and will be erected on that spot next year by whomsoever the Bishop sends. At Cotton Port, in this parish, Bro. S. Green continues his untiring efforts to build up Methodism. He finds it a hard work, but is willing to persevere. The future prospects inspire him. At Cheneyville, Bro. Austin Jones, the pastor, also confesses that he has had a hard time. It is a confession on his part, however, not a complaint. It does not enter in Bro. Jones' constitution and by-laws to be eternally complaining because he is not at what some call "a fat appointment." He considers it an honor to go and do the best he can wherever sent. This he has been doing at Cheneyville ever since last conference. His quarterly conference and meeting, were seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Bro. Henry Tippet, our district steward, showed some favors for which we feel thankful. The next point visited was Booneville. Here we found the church in good spirits. A glorious protracted meeting had just been closed, which had resulted in 46 conversions. This whole section was alive with cheerful reports of this revival. This is one of the best points on the LaTeche district, and affords some worthy examples of liberal and effective Chaistian workers. Bro. William Murrell, our pastor here, can justly congratulate himself in having some of the best workers on the district. Bro. Murrell was one of the original twelve men whom Bishop Thomson organized into the Mississippi Mission Conference in 1865, and has continued to do faithful, effective work ever since. He, Rev. Emperor Williams and Father Ross are now the only three in effective work. Seven have gone home to glory triumphantly, and two, Father Green and Rev. Samuel Osborne, are honored in the superannuated ranks of the Louisiana Conference. Long may he live to do the Master's work on earth. We had a splendid time in Booneville, and had a pleasant home with Bro. and Sister Bahan, to whom too much credit can scarcely be given for unreserved liberality and faithfulness. At Washington we have a good work, and a good preacher in the person of Rev. Wm. Davis. The number of urgent requests that he be re turned for another year, which we have received, plainly indicate his popularity. He is closing up a good year's work, spiritually and financially. The benevolences have been carefully attended to, and nearly all the amounts have been collected. This, we consider an admirable type of connectional Methodism. No Methodist church is true to itself that neglects any of its connectional interests. The SOUTHWESTERN'S interest and all the temporal and spiritual wants of the church, both local and connectional have been carefully looked after by Bro. Davis and his people. At Opelousas Bro. Gates manages to hold his own, and is doing about as well as can be expected. Sister Gates was away, sick in New Orleans. Latest reports indicate her early recovery. She had but recently sustained the loss of her infant soon, aged ten days. We extend our sympathy. Bro. Larkins, at Waxia, is closing up a good year's work. We have an excellent people on Bayou Waxia. Taking the proportion of members, and the location of our church on Bayou Waxia as criterons, we have no church on the district that does more for the local and general work than our people there. This certainly must be largely due to the generous and unselfish disposition of the pastor, Rev. T. Larkins, as well as to the great liberality of our membership there. Flat Town, the next point visited, continues to languish for want of a church. Bro. J. August is exerting every nerve to secure the lot on which to build before conference. We know of no portion of the parish of St. Landry where a Methodist church is more needed than right here. Intemperance and gambling is cursing and sending too many of our people here to the jails, to the penitentiary and to death, hell and destruction. Four murders had been committed in that neighborhood in so many months. In each of these it is reported that either the whiskey bottle or deck of cards, or both, had had something to do in precipitating the difficulties. A day or two previous to our visit here, a promising young colored man was stabbed to death. It was on the Sabbath. Against the protestations of his wife he went to a grog shop and gambling den where he drank whiskey, played cards and quarreled over a game of cards. The stake in dispute was twenty-five cents; result, a fight ensued, weapons were drawn and used, and he was stabbed in the heart, dying almost instantly. The Lord save our people from whiskey and the devil! It is the curse of the age, the monster without a conscience. There are many churches among these people but they give fairs, entertainments, etc., wherein are sold wines, cordials and other mild or stronger drinks. Their ministers drink gin, whiskies, etc., with members and sinners, bringing condemnation to themselves and ruin to their surrounding. The Lord have mercy upon such churches and ministers. The crying necessity for the salvation of the masses is more Methodism, with its pronounced hostility to all that can intoxicate. The Lord help our churches and ministry to be true to their heavenly calling in this matter. From here we go to Vermillionnille.

Washington, La.

It is with pleasure that we announce the transfer of Rev. W. P. Thirkield, the Dean of the Gammon School of Theology, Clark University, Atlanta, Georgia, from the Cincinnati to the Savannah Conference. At the time Brother Thirkield was elected to his present position, the Cincinnati Conference, recognizing his eminent fitness for the position, adopted the the following report by a rising vote:

Whereas, Rev. W. P. Thirkield, of the Cincinnati Conference, has been elected Dean of the Gammon School of Theology, Clark University, at Atlanta, Georgia, a position for which we recognize his eminent fitness; therefore, Resolved, 1. That we request Bishop Foster to appoint Brother Thirkield to the above named position.

Resolved, 2. That while we would be glad to have Brother Thirkield continue in the pastoral work in which he has been uniformily successful, yet being called into the educational work of the Church, we congratulate the institution in which he is to hold so important a position; and we cordially commend him to the confidence of our brethren among whom he is to labor.

Resolved, 3. That we request Brother Thirkield to remain a member of our Conference, and we assure him a hearty welcome should he return to the pastoral work among us.

After having entered upon his work he became satisfied that he could accomplish more good by casting his name and lot entirely among our people here in the South. We hail him as a good worker in the southern field.

The emigrants who are now peopling Texas will not compare with those who are going to the Northwest. Very few of them come from the educated and industrious classes of the East and North. They are mostly from the poor and ignorant classes of Georgia, Tennessee and Alabama, with no clear appreciation of life or its responsibilities. Stepping into the depot at Fort Worth recently we saw about a hundred of these emmigrants, we held conversation with a number of them, and all that we talked with were from Georgia or Tennessee. But few of the people now living in Texas came from North of the Ohio, according to the best authority not one seventh per cent. of the white population. tion. While the immigrants coming from Europe consist chiefly of Germans, Englishmen, and Swedes, who are generally prosperous, and are of a class that add wealth and strength to the State.

They certainly do things with a vengeance in over California. According to the California Christian Advocate of the 5th inst., three man made a plan to rob an old men named Renwood. In attempting the robbery, Renwood and a man named McIntyre were killed. One of the three who were engaged in the robbery turned States, evidence, and was sent to penitentiary for life, another was sentenced to be hanged, and the third to the penitentiary for life and also to be hanged. We think that it would have been eminently Christian to have sent this man to the penitentiary for life or to have hung him, but we do think that inflicting both sentences a little too much of vengeance.

A brother reciting some of his religions experiences, not long since, among other things said; that the Lord hailed him while out plowing in his field, on a Thursday, in the month of June, and told him, "to caution all his brethren and sisters against giving any money to preachers, for the reason that He was going to pay them at the coming day." Poor deluded man; we pity him. He, like many others, mistook the voice of his own selfishness, for the voice of God.

DOUGHNUTS.—One cup of sugar, two eggs, one cup sweet milk, two large spoonfuls melted butter, and two tablespoonfuls bakingpowder; knead just as little as will enable you to get them to the kettle. By the way, make your own baking-powder, then you will be sure that it is pure.

HOT MILK AS A RESTORATIVE.—Milk that is heated to much above 100 F. loses, for the time a degree, of its sweetness and density; but no one fatigued by over exertion of body and mind, who has ever experienced the reviving influence of a tumbler of this beverage, heated as hot as it can be sipped, will willingly forego a resort to it because of its having been rendered somewhat less acceptable to the palate. The promptness with which its cordial influence is felt is indeed surprising. Some portions of it seem to be digested and appropriated almost immediately; and many who fancy they need alcoholic stimulants when exhausted by labor of brain or body will find in this simple draught an equivalent that shall be abundantly satisfying, and more enduring in its effects.

In a recent sermon Rev. Dr. Deems, of New York, denounced the purely American habit of kissing, stating that "while it is bad enough for adults to kiss, it is criminal for a lot of dirty mouthed people to kiss an innocent baby."

SALT WITH NUTS.—A correspondent of the Germantown Telegraph writes that journal as follows: "One time, while enjoying a visit from an Englishman, hickorynuts were served in the evening, when my English friend called for salt, stating that he knew a case of a woman who was taken violently ill by eating freely of nuts in the evening. The celebrated Dr. Abernethy was sent for, but it was after he [illegible] condition to go. He muttered, 'Salt, salt' of which no notice was taken. Next morning he went to the place and she was a corpse. He said that, had they given her, salt, it would have relieved her, and, if they would allow him to make an examination, he would convince them. On opening the stomach the nuts were found in a mass. He sprinkled salt on this, and it immediately dissolved. I have known of a sudden death which appears to have been due to the same cause. I generally eat salt with nuts, and think it improves them."

FRUIT IN TIN CANS.—The fruit put up in tin cans should be taken out when the can is opened for use. If allowed to remain after the can is [illegible] the acids or juices upon the tin when exposed to the air may form acetate of tin, which is poisonous. Pour the fruit out into glass or earthenware dishes, and the danger of poisoning is avoided.

NEW BOOKS.

THE EXODUS, and other Poems. By Rev. T. C. Reade. Cincinnati; Walden & Stowe. Price 75c.

A very handsome cloth bound, gilt stamped volume of religious poems of fair merit, printed for the author. "The Exodus" poem embodies the reflections of an old Christian philosopher, as he walks in the valleys and shadows of death, and describes the emigration of a sojourner to country where perpetual citizenship is expected.

THE PRINCESS. A Medley. By Alfred Tennyson. Illustrated. Octavo. pp. 223. Boston; James R. Osgood & Co. Price $6.

We thought a few years ago, when Messrs Osgood & Co., issued their magnificent Fine Art edition of "The Lady of the Lake" that the very perfection of book-making had been reached, and that its beauty of design and exquisiteness of finish could be hardly equaled, certainly not excelled. But, on examination of Tennyson's "Princess," we are forced to acknowledge that we did not do full justice to the book maker's art, nor to the almost infinite resources of this enterprising house. "The Princess," as a poem, needs no introduction to our readers. Its well-known charm lent added lustre to the author's honored name, and surely no rarer setting could be found for so brilliant a gem. We had been promised a "superb edition," and our expectations have been more than realized. It is a veritable livre de luxe and quite worthy the noble Princess whose fair fame it chronicles. Besides the richness of binding, the faultlessness relating to all matters of paper and typography, there are one hundred and twenty illustrations by our best American artists, who have most happily conceived and expressed the spirit of the poem. The frontispiece is one of Dielman's charming drawings—a "portrait" of the Princess, sketch from the poet's lines,

"There at a board by tome and paper sat,
With two tame leopards crouched beside her throne,
All beauty compassed in a female form.
The Princess;"

From this rare combination of high poetic and artistic merit there results one of the most beautiful gift-books ever published. It is a brilliant avant courier of the numerous holiday books. "Harpers Magazine" says: "The rich pictorial suggestiveness of Tennyson's Princess, has prompted Messrs. James R. Osgood & Co., to produce an edition of the poem, interpreted by American artists, which is unrivalled by any other for the perfection of its typography, and the wealth, beauty and infinite variety of its illustrations. These are thoroughly in harmony with the finely poetical, semi-mediæval, semi-modern spirit of the poem, and enable us to discover new beauties that were latent in it, and to arrive at a more perfect conception of it as a work of art, by causing all its exquisite imagery and subtle machinery, all its moving situations, picturesque scenes and piquant characters, to take a definite shape, as they are made to pass in panoramic procession before the eye, robed in the thousand and [illegible] dainty accessories with which the poet lends a softened grace or imparts a heighted beauty to the genuine flesh-and blood actors in his half real, half legendary tale." The illustrations prepared for this elegant volume, a hundred and twenty in number, have been executed by the best American artists.

"Special Providence Illustrated," a sermon by Rev. J. O. Peck, D.D., in Hanson Place M. E. Church, Brooklyn, N Y., has been printed in pamphlet. This sermon was preached by request on the 25th, anniversary of Dr. Peck's entrance into the ministry, and is a review of his own work.

The January Popular Science Monthly will have an article from Herbert Spencer on "The Past and Future of Religion." His point of view is that religion has been developed in past times and is to be still further evolved in the coming ages, and his problem has been to find the fundamental law of this progress. This is stated with great clearness and power in the forthcoming paper, which will probably be claimed as the final scientific position on the subject. The ground taken is that religion is not destined to pass away, but that it will be purified and exalted with the further evolution of human nature, of which it is an indestructible element.

Dio Lewis's Monthly for December has an inviting arrary of contents. Scientific thoughts are presented in a popular form, and the health notes are more than worth the price, which is 25c per single number on $2.50 a year. The December Choice Literature contains "On Being Pilled," a spicy anonymous sketch, "The 'Why' and 'How' of Land Nationalization," by A. R. Arbuthnot Wilson, "Inequality in Punishment," by Lord Justice Fry, one of the most difficult problems with which statesman and jurists have to deal, discussed with great ability; "The Towers of Silence,"—a funeral custom of India; "Wordsworth and the Duddon," a sketch of a great poet and the scenes of which he wrote; "Canadian Home Rule," by Lord Lorne; "The Future Prospects of Madagascar," by Rev. Geo. A. Shaw, the missionary whose name was so prominent in the recent complication between France and England; "The New Birth of Christian Philosophy," an able theological study, by Rev. Mr. E. V. Smalley's sketch of General Sherman in the January Century has been inspected and revised by General Grant, whose suggestions have been of great value in assisting the writer to give an authentic and trustworthy account of the important events of General Sherman's career. A paper on General Sheridan will follow in the February number.

As in nature, as in art, so in grace—it is rough treatment that gives souls, as well as stones, their luster. The more a diamond is cut, the brighter it sparkles; and, in what seems hard dealing, there God has no end in view but to perfect his people.—Dr. Guthrie.

DEAR EDITOR—I desire to inquire for my sister whom I left in Tennessee. She was named Manervia Ann. I left her three miles from Moscow with a man by the name of Arthur Pool, a son-in-law of Solomon Williams who owned us at that time. My mother, three sisters, one brother and myself were sold by Solomon Williams to a Dr. Curtis, a negro trader, and also a son-in-law, Solomon Williams, and he brought another, three sisters and two brothers of us to Mississippi, and sold us to a man by the name of J. C. Hallery, who brought us to Texas. Mother was named Easter Williams, my brother Jack was the oldest child, and I was next. Manerva, Eveline, Mariah, and Harriet. Please address me at Marshall, Texas, in care of the M. E. Church. JORDAN DANIEL.

MR. EDITOR—I desire to know the whereabouts of my sister, Fannie Pate, who was separated from us in Union county, Arkansas, by one Tandy Pate. It was during the war that we were separated. She was carried to or near Shreveport, La., or, as I have learned, to Jefferson, Texas. Our mother was Thennia Pate; there were four children, three boys and one girl, Fannie. Boys were Jake, George and Andy. We all belonged to Bill Tate, but my sister fell to Tandy Tate who carried her away. We all formerly belonged to Bill Tate but all were sold to a Mr. Bill Neel, Union county, Ark., near Eldorado. Sister Fannie was very young when separated from us. We were sold on account of Bill Tate killing a man named Kazzie. Our old mistress got burned up, and myself and sister Fannie were standing near. I hope all friends and ministers near Shreveport, La., and Jefferson, Texas, will inquire diligently for my sister. Readers of this will please assist me in finding my sister. Read this letter in and out of church until it reaches every cabin, and I will ever pray. Address me at Patterson, Waller county, Texas, care Rev. W. H. Jackson. ANDY PATE.

Delicate and Feeble Ladies.

Those languid, tiresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its former elasticity, driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain are permanently removed. None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women.

Feels Young Again.

"My mother was afflicted a long time with neuralgia and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system; headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters with such good effect that she seems, and feels young again, although over 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A lady, in Providence.

BRADFORD, PA., May 8, 1875.

It has cured me of several diseases, such as nervousness, sickness at the stomach, monthly troubles, etc. I have not seen a sick day in a year, since I took Hop Bitters. All my neighbors use them.

MRS. FANNIE GREEN.

$3,000 Lost.—"A tour of Europe that cost me $3,000 done me less good than one bottle of Hop Bitters; they also cured my wife of 15 years' nervous weakness, sleeplessness, and dyspepsia."

R. M., Auburn, N. Y.

High Authority.

Hop Bitters is not, in any sense, an alcoholic beverage or liquor, and could not be sold for use except to persons desirous of obtaining a medical bitters.

Green B. Raum, U. S. Com. Inter'l Rev.

So. Bloomingville, O., May 1, 1879.

SIRS.—I have been suffering ten years, and I tried your Hop Bitters, and it done me more good than all the doctors.

MRS. S. S. BOONE.

Baby Saved!

We are so thankful to say that our nursing baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted constipation and irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength—The Parents, Rochester, N. Y.

A graceful writer one day wrote a beautiful and sublime article showing how easy 'twas to die. But when the cholera morbus struck him that night he had four doctors called in, and the druggist at the corner took his family on an excursion with money paid for the beautiful article.—The Judge.

Dr. Guthrie, preaching on Christ as the foundation, said: "He is a tried foundation. He has been tried by God and by devils; by many who are now in glory, and by others who are on the way there, and He has never failed. All the stones founded on Him become living stones, and they are all cemented together by the blood of Jesus."

TUTT'S PILLS
TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.
From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect
ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
HE FEELS LIKE A NEW MAN.
"I have had Dyspepsia, with Constipation, two years, and have tried ten different kinds of pills, and TUTT'S are the first that have done me any good. They have cleaned me out nicely. My appetite is splendid, food digests readily, and I now have natural passages. I feel like a new man." W. D. EDWARDS, Palmyra, O.

Plantation Melodies
—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.
By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D.D.
WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. E. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

Rev. W. O. Lynch, the colored preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who went out to Kansas with the great exodus of negroes from the South five years ago, has spent the past few days at Louisville and Jeffersonville. He gives an excellent account of the colored people in Kansas. They are thrifty, getting homes and farms, building churches, and the children are getting good educations. When it came to the vote on prohibition they were nearly all on that side. He reports the future of the colored man in Kansas as bright.—Western.

Woman's Home Missionary Society.

The second annual meeting of the Board of Managers was held in St. Paul's Church, Cincinnati, Nov. 20–23. The business before the convention was of a highly important nature. Great regret was felt at the enforced absence of the President, Mrs. Lucy Hayes. Mrs. John Davis presided in her stead. The Woman's Home Missionary Societies of the Baptists, Friends, and other denominations were represented. The reports of the Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. R. S. Rust, and of the Treasurer, Mrs. A. R. Clark, were received with profound interest.

Mrs. Rust, in the course of the year, visited 27 conferences, many cities, towns and summer resorts, to present the cause of the Woman's Home Missionary Society. Mrs. Dunton accompanied Mrs. Rust through most of her tours.

Mrs. Clark reported the total amount received the past year to be $15,430 76, and no debts—almost double the amount received last year.

We make the following extracts from the report of the Corresponding Secretary:

Many Conference organizations and auxiliary societies have been gained, indicating an increased interest in Home Mission, and reasonable expectation for an enlarged revenue. Many friends have been won to sympathy with the work whose pledges of aid in legacies and donations are assured for the future. The debt which had been incurred in the prosecution of our work has been liquidated. Our missionaries have been sustained in the field, our beneficiaries kept in the schools, and the building enterprises which have been inaugurated have been successfully prosecuted. * * * The society has been greatly encouraged in its work by the cordial approval of the general officers of the Church, and by their kindly offices in its behalf.

The following teachers have been in the field the past year: Miss J. Cowgill, Mrs. J. Bentley, Mrs. E. C. Williams, New Orleans; Mrs. S. M. Lewis and Miss V. Baldwin, Savannah, Ga.; Miss F. Mitchell, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss L. J. Betts, Orangeburgh, S. C.; Mrs. Button, Greenville District, S. C.; Mrs. M. C. Bristol, Nashville; Miss Daily, Ogden, Utah; Miss Wheelock, Salt Lake City, Texas; Mrs. G. A. Richardson at Austin, and Mrs. Isabella Howells in Houston, without compensation, have labored faithfully and successfully during the year.

The following were elected officers for ensuing year: President, Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. John Davis, Mrs. F. S. Hoyt, Mrs. Amos Shinkle, Mrs. L. H. Bugbee, Mrs. John M. Walden; Recording Secretary, Mrs. James Dale; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. R. S. Rust; Treasurer Mrs. A. R. Clark; Resident Managers, Mrs. Bishop Wiley, Mrs. R. Dymond, Mrs. J. L. Whetstone, Mrs. M'Clellan Brown, Mrs. J. H. Bayliss, Mrs. W. F. Thorne, Mrs. J. B. Foraker, Mrs. W. W. Peabody, Mrs. A. Wessel, Mrs. E. House, Mrs. W. M. Ampt, Mrs. John Simpkinson.

The Society calls for $20,000 to carry on the work of the coming year.

NEW BOOKS.

To have achieved marked business success in any honorable business pursuit, is a cause for congratulation; but to have done this in the single line of publishing good literature, is especially deserving of favorable notice. As the result of patient, persistent adherence to a worthy policy, success of the character indicated has been won by the house of D. Lothrop & Co., which from modest beginnings has grown to become one of the most important publishing houses in the United States. The magnitude of their undertakings is suggested by the fact that more than $30,000 was expended upon the illustrations of their holiday books for the present season. Our readers will be interested in the following notes relating to some of their recent publications, culled from the American Bookseller, and other sources.

A History of the American People, by Arthur Gilman, M. A. Concise, authentic, philosophical, impartial, and thoroughly interesting, this is pronounced by competent reviewers the best one volume history of the United States yet published. Profusely illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1,50.

Life of Washington, by E. E. Brown, author of "Life of James A. Garfield," "Life of Oliver Wendell Holmes," etc. This is far more than a compilation from previous works. Beside containing much new matter, essential facts are presented in new lights, and valuable information is given in a terse and graphic style. It is a model of biographical writing. 12mo, illustrated, $1,50.

Self Giving, by Wm. F. Bainbridge, under the veil of fiction, presents chapters in the real life of some of the most honored of our American missionaries. The story is as interesting as any romance, and will deserve the attention it is sure to receive. 12mo, $1,50.

How the Rain-Sprites were Freed is a story of two little children in search of 'the store house of the rain.' The conceit is prettily wrought out, and the book is worthy of comparison with some of the tales of Andersen and Grimm. With its lithographic illustrations and illuminated covers, it is a choice gift book for young readers. 4to, $1,00.

Child Lore: its Classics, Traditions, and Jingles, by Clara Doty Bates, will prove a mine of treasures to the boys and girls fortunate enough to possess it. German, Italian, Norse, as well as English folk-lore have furnished its material, and choice illustrations by the best artists, give it added value. 4to, elegantly bound, $4,00.

Field, Wood, and Meadow Rambles: and Wild Flowers, and where they Grow, by Amanda B. Harris, are two books whose pages are full of interest, and whose illustrations are admirable in design and execution. Mothers, in reading them to or with their little ones, will repeat the unalloyed happiness which came to them in the midst of field and woodland flowers, in days which will not return. Wild Flowers, 8vo., extra cloth, gilt edges, $3; Field, Wood, &c., 4to, $2,00.

From the Hudson to the Neva, by David Ker, is a narrative unusually true to nature, in which the author recounts for the benefit of the boys the story of travels and adventures in Northern Europe and the Malay Islands. 12mo, $1,25.

Their Club and Ours, a story by John Preston True, was received with great enthusiasm while running through the pages of Wide Awake, and will find equal favor with a wider public as presented in attractive book form. 12mo, $1,25.

The Cincinati Hebrews are raising $50,000 for a Home for the Aged and Indigent.

NEW PUBLICATIO[NS]

With remarkable unanimit[y] press notices award the h[...] rank, among juvenile perio[dicals] to the several magazines pub[lished] by D. Lothrop & Co. App[recia]ting the difficulty of adapting [...] magazine to all ages, they have [pro]vided for older youth their sp[len]didly illustrated Wide Awa[ke] which well deserves its title "king among juveniles;" for those little younger, the remarkably useful and successful magazine, "The Pansy," which is all and more than is suggested by its name in the way of attractiveness, and which is edited by Mrs. G. R. Alden (Pansy); for readers still younger, that delight of the of the nursey, Our Little Men and Women and for the delectation of the "bib-and-tucker-folk," the wide-eyed youngsters who do more seeing than thinking, the pictorial wonder book, Babyland. The publishers, who promise to make these magazines more attractive than ever the coming year, will send specimen copies of all to any of our readers upon receipt of twenty-five cents.

The North American Review for January present a table of contents possessing in the higher degree the character of contemporary human interest. First, the opposite sides of the question of "Ecclesiastical Control in Utah" are set forth by two representative men, viz: President John Taylor, the official head of the Mormon Church, and the Hon. Eli H. Murray, Governor of Utah. Senator John I. Mitchell writes of the "Tribulations of the American Dollar," recounting the strenuous efforts of the people of the United States to extinguish the national debt, and contending that it is our imperative duty to-day to settle definitely the question, whether we shall have dollars of unequal commercial value in circulation. In an article entitled "Theological Re-adjustments" the Rev. Dr. J. H. Rylance insists upon the necessity of eliminating from the formularies of belief and the current teachings of the churches, all doctrines and statements of supposed facts discredited by exegetical scholarship, and the progress of natural science. Senator H. W. Blair, in "Alcohol in Politics," declares his belief that another irrespressible conflict is at hand, and advocates the submission of an amendment to the United States Constitution prohibiting the manufacture, sale and importation of intoxicating liquors. No one who read in the December Review the first half of "The Day of Judgment," Gail Hamilton's incisive review of the domestic life of Thomas Carlyle, will forego the pleasure of perusing the latter half in this number. "Evils Incident to Immigration," by Edward Self, is a forcible statement of the mischiefs wrought by the importation into our social and political life of an enormous annual contingent from the lowest stratum of the population of Europe. Finally, "Bribery by Railway Passes" is discussed by Charles Aldrich and Judge N. M. Hubbard. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

Harper's Magazine for January is a worthy sequel to the brilliant Christmas number. The opening paper is a personal sketch of the poet Whittier by Harriet Prescott Spofford, illustrated. A fine portrait of Whittier is the frontispiece. The new novel by William Black, "Judith Shakespear," is the literary event of the season. The second part of E. P. Roe's new novel, "Nature's Serial Story," has beautiful illustrations. Miss Constance Fenimore Woolson contributes a paper on "Mentone," Mr. G. W. Sheldon has an admirable paper on "The Old Packet and Clipper Service," of which New York will always be proud. Colonel Higginson resumes his "American History" series with a paper entitled "The Birth of a Nation," Thomas A. Janvier gives us a Mexican ghost story, "What was seen by [...] in Saltillo;" and "Miss Cassy's Christmas box," is contributed by "A Working-Girl." William C. Prime gives a personal sketch of James Buchanan, apropos of the recent publication of Judge Curtis's biography. A full-page portrait illustrates the article. In the Easy Chair Mr. George William Curtis discusses Italian opera, "The Theory and Practice of Popular Government," and other timely subjects. Charles Dudley Warner opens a very entertaining Drawer with a humorous dissertation on the division of time.

"I would not live always, I ask not to stay." We do not wonder, with such a cold as yours, but there is a bright side to every thing, and sunshine even for those racked with pain. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup never fails to cure the most stubborn cough.

"A Drop of Joy in Every World".

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.: Three months ago I was broken out with large ulcers and sores on my body, limbs and face. I procured your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Purgative Pellets," and have taken six bottles, and to-day I am in good health, all those ugly ulcers having healed and left my skin in a natural, healthy condition. I thought at one time that I could not be cured. Although I can but poorly express my gratitude to you, yet there is a drop of joy in evrey word I write.

Yours truly, JAMES O. BELLIS, Flemington, N. J. "Discovery" sold by all druggists.

The Methodist preachers of Cleveland and their wives held their quarterly social, December 12th, at the Forest City House. Four conferences were represented. After a bountiful repast some time was spent in social greetings, music, and song, and short addresses.

AN ONLY DAUGHTER CURED OF CONSUMPTION.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidently made a prepation which cured his only child of Consumption. His child is now in this country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that Consumption can be positively and permanently cured. The Doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two 2 cent stamps to pay expenses. This Herb also cures Night Sweats, Nausea at the Stomach and will break up a fresh Cold in 24 hours. Address Craddock & Co. 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, naming this pader. n44-14t

The suggostion to place Ceneral John C. Fremont on the retired list of the army is a good one, and should be at once adopted. Few men have done more for their country than he; his life from boyhood almost has been one of toilsome service, not for his own personal profit, but for the public welfare. The Western States and Territories owe him a debt, as but for Fremont's enterprise no one knows how long the Rocky Mountain region would have remained unexplored and uninhabited. It was he who gave the impetus to Western immigration, and to him the country owes California. He is now an old man; poor, and compelled to accept a small salary for his services as an engineer in New York. If he had been born under a monarchy instead of a republic he would now be wearing a title and living in a palace—Inter Ocean.

Pianos for the Governor General of Canada.

We see by the Ottawa Citizen that two pianos, of the Celebrated Factory of Wm. Knabe & Co., havd just been selected for his Excellency, the Marquis of Landsdowne. One was a magnificent Grand "Knabe," in elegant Rosewood Case, and the other one of their Upright Cabinet Grands. The Tone, Touch, and Workmanship of these Instruments are described as being perfect. The most thorough Judges were employed to make the selection, one of them being Mr E. Harris, who previous to leaving England, held the high appointment of Local Examiner to the Royal Academy of Music, London.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. jel4-1y
